But they haven't stopped yet because now they must really rush it up. That's the whole point. What did they teach you in school, you know? Oh, you had some kind of ancient past where folk had just hardly any brain at all, so they just kind of wandered around and their bottom lip would drag on the ground, you know, and stuff like that. But eventually somebody got the idea of living in a cave, so you had the Stone Age. They would sit there and scratch their heads and think – this is what they tell you, you know – what can I do with the stone that's not just a hole to live in, you know? Then they start to build gradually, and very slowly, etc. So they go through that. Then you're going through the Bronze Age, in came bronze tools, you see, from the flint and stuff and then in comes bronze. Then you got iron and steel. Then you go all the way up through them and then you have agricultural, eventually you become civilized when you've got agriculture.

They admit now, well agriculture, most folk don't like farming and stuff. So they had to force slaves, get slaves to make the farming happen. That's how. So they praise that as civilized, you see. So eventually you get to a stage where you've got all these non-, what you would call, important jobs, initially. And in would come the money guys. Oh money, well, you don't have to keep exchanging bags of rice for bags of this and bags of oats and spuds. No, now of course you can just trade it with this instead. What's that? Well it... and they try to bite the metal and you break your teeth. I can't eat it. Well, yeah but hey, we've got authorities now that say this is value and is equivalent to 10 of those sacks there. Then you fall for it, and you end up getting ruled by them. Forever, ‘eh.

But that's progress. That's progress again. So, you work all the way up from agricultural, you know, into a production phase into a revolutionary phase of production, and you're Industrial Revolution, and you're into industry, making things. Not what you need, but surpluses you can sell it abroad even, you see. So they have it all worked out. And this is what the WEF are on about, you know, this is now the FOURTH Industrial Revolution, you see. You went from an Industrial Revolution, to postindustrial, to electronic, then into the merging of the two kinds of digital electronics into, you know, to where we are now, and etc.

So they plan the whole future out. Did you get asked about it? No, you didn't get asked about it. Do you have any say in the WEF? No. Nope. And they only bring in what they call actors, participants, in the system. You're not an actor, you're just a recipient of their plays [Alan chuckles.] you might say, and their goals. They have all the top NGOs on board with them. Because you must always have these NGOs to go and protest governments. It's all worked out in advance. The governments are waiting for them to protest or make demands and say, okay, we'll think about it, okay, we'll pass this law for you.

It's all a con game, the whole lot of it, it's all rigged with all participants on all sides managing it. But it keeps the rest of the public thinking, I have rights, well, these people went and demanded this happen, and government passed a law and… Or they give some of the group special rights. I was reading that today about selective groups that have special, other, more rights than other peoples, you see. And you can't say anything about different groups, under umpteen different new hate laws which they've brought into even politics, you know. Just complain about something, oh, that's terrible you can’t say that. Before it was just a political point of view. Not anymore. I said years ago, you'd have to belong to a privileged special group to get any rights at all. And you're actually there. You really are there. Definitely are there. Yep.

Some groups are untouchable, and the shame of police to allow the grooming of children, for instance, because it's just a political hot topic of who's doing it, so the crime can continue and continue... It's just disgusting! It tells you your whole system is finished. Because it's not there to protect ordinary folk at all, or definitely not children. But we're taught this is all quite normal.

So all these NGOs and charitable groups lot, yeah, we just protest and advise and demand from governments to pass certain rules, which take all their… Which is exactly what the elite want, you see, until you're legislated into complete oblivion because you have no rights whatsoever at all.

And again, as it all happens other things are just rubberstamped by governments, like the climate agenda and austerity programs are just rubberstamped and... you have no say in the matter. You don't belong to any of these particular groups and the so-called pressure groups and organized groups that get millions thrown at them. And they claim that they're just charitable institutions [Alan chuckles.] or social movements, ‘eh?

Now remember folks too, hopefully you can send a few dollars my direction. Go into my website @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. As always, I say list all the sites that are mentioned on the .com site, all my other sites. These are my official sites. You can order books and discs or donate to me on the site, it tells you how to do it if you go in there. There's a lot to learn. It's widely used by lots and lots and lots of people. You'll find a lot of information there on the system and how we got to where we are and where it's supposed to go. Because the elite literally will publish things, it's a legality. Often when they pull something off, they'll even go overboard and boast about it. Which is 'revelation of the method', how they got the public to accept this, or how they GOT you, how they cleverly steered you all with different techniques to accept this, that or things you shouldn't have accepted.

The very things that Aldous Huxley talked about, the author of Brave New World, where he said in the interviews with George Wallace in the 1950s, he said, his concern was that with the techniques that could be used today... He's talking about the incredible arts of persuasion, where you don't even know you're being persuaded. You're being prompted, you're being nudged, you're being… Most folk are recipients of opinions, that's what I say, you're a recipient. You're not someone who literally analyzes opinions, your own either, you simply adopt them. They are given to you, and it's almost preordained you will adopt a particular point of view according to your upbringing, or your class, or who you vote for, left or right or whatever. Whatever class or group you belong to or political party, they've got ready-made opinions for you. Which will always guide you into the one road eventually, that they're all on, which is the right opinion, you see.

They're using techniques that were well understood back in Huxley's days and before. He mentioned that too, the techniques of manipulating your thoughts, the Bernays techniques, where subconscious, or even unconscious motivations, these instincts you're born with can be manipulated, you won't consciously work your way through it, but you can use them against the person to bring them to the opinions or conclusions and behavior that you want them to have. That's very obvious today. Incredible ongoing multiple, thousands of experiments on psychology and behaviorism, every day done on populations. Every day! If you had 10,000 lifetimes to live and study all their papers on it, it's just incredible what gets churned out all the time on how to manipulate you for this, that or whatever. It's just absolutely astonishing. You can't live long enough to read it all. And they won't stop, you know.

There are countless surveys right now on getting the people to comply with the Covid lockdowns, comply with wearing facemasks, even getting other segments of society to turn on the folk who won't comply. They can do that too. And the folk who will turn on them don't even know they’re getting manipulated. They think they're coming to these decisions and this behavior of shouting at folk by themselves. Nothing is further from the truth.

So Aldous Huxley said that. He says that he was worried that the techniques, the scientific methods that were understood back in his day, back then, would get the public to accept things that perhaps it was not in their best interest to accept. That's how perfected that he knew that they were, and that they would get a lot more perfected, in a very short few years in fact.

So let's just see where you stand, or sit, or lay down, on the whole idea that you're not essential, or if you've got some self-worth. And if you haven't, it's about time you regained some self-worth again. Because they really are training the people to accept that you're useless, a useless eater. Obviously. This is not paranoia. It comes from their own publications over many, many years basically. It's amazing how you can quote their publications and actually read from their books from the big institutions, but you're deemed as a nutcase if you just say what they are saying when you read it verbatim. This is how bad it is now with deception, and how, again, there's no weapon that they've got that's not unleashed at the moment. Well, almost no weapon. There's a few left yet, that they've probably got to come out yet. Nothing is dirty enough for them.

Here's one here, again, bioethics…

COVID-19 patients will be ‘sent home to die’ if deemed too sick, Texas county says - star-telegram.com / 23 July 2020

Fort Worth Star-Telegram news. It goes on to say, it’s almost a repetition of the same handout that was given out in Canada months before by the bioethicists, ‘eh. And the bioethicists take their orders again from the same groups that do all the tests on pandemics, the Johns Hopkins groups, and again, the unelected Rockefeller Foundation group that had their exercise in 2010. Now they’re out there with all their different ideas on how to manage this pandemic, and it’s all written by bioethics committees from Harvard, etc. Very impressive, ‘eh? [Alan chuckles.] They know better what ethics are, rather than you.

Isn't it amazing, with using psychology again, in the old days, or even in World War II, if they didn't like you, they would just take you to the back and shoot you. The Bolsheviks would do the same, they would take you into basements, and they had a kind of almost mechanized system of hauling the bodies out of the coal chutes and into trucks. So yeah, they like efficiency indeed. But here you have it where they've got to convince you first, you should just, just go along with it. It's that amazing psychological warfare, isn't it, ‘eh? And you pay for this psychological warfare. It's all from your... And these characters who do it, the psychopaths, these are the real psychopaths, who try to convince you that it's all in the best interest just to go and give yourself up and die. Ahhhhhh. They get paid enormous amounts of money, and it's your tax money that pays them.

And then ahhhh, why do folk vote? So here they are, so the patients will be sent home to die...

COVID-19 patients will be ‘sent home to die’ if deemed too sick, Texas county says

star-telegram.com / 23 July 2020

“A model for the country,” Starr County Judge Eloy Vera said Tuesday — as he shared an update that now appears gloomy.

(A: Ah dear, ‘eh. It's just sad.)

In April, its aggressive and successful approach to beating the coronavirus was spotlighted by NBC News.

(A: Enough to decide now on the cost of it all, you see. I mean, how much are you really worth? What should they spend on you? It sounds like again, getting back to George Bernard Shaw, how much they can spend on you to keep you alive ‘eh. Well, you're not worth it, you know, you're not essential.)

The county has been forced to form what is being compared to a so-called “death panel.”

(A: I remember doing the articles years ago on this when it came out, that all the Western societies had adopted this idea of bioethics to decide who would live and die in hospitals. For cost-effectiveness’s sake, then, that was the reason they gave then. But they were nicknamed death panels because that's what it's about, who should live and die.)

A county health board – which governs Starr Memorial – is set to authorize critical care guidelines Thursday that will help medical workers determine ways to allocate scarce medical resources on patients with the best chance to survive.

There you go, ‘eh. N-n-n. There's efficiency for you. Yeah, no, are you essential? No. No. It's like again The Life of Brian that the Monty Python group did, the movie. At the end the joker, and there's always a joker in them, where they are lining up to decide if they're going to go for crucifixion, for death, or to be set free. So they could go two different directions. And the joker comes along and he's skipping and jumping, and he says, so I think it was Palin says to him, he says, freedom or crucifixion? And he says, freedom. He says, okay, he says, go veer to the left and just follow the railings there, then you'll be free. Then the guys says, the joker says, I'm just kidding, it's crucifixion! You see.

Well, that's where we are today. We're getting trained, yeah, I'm really worthless, you know, I should really just go for it and let them kill me here, I'm not essential to the system.

Isn't that AMAZING EVIL, eh? What EVIL!

And these folks have got degrees in manipulation techniques.   There you go. So I'll put this up. So they've got critical care guidelines so's that all the medical staff can feel better. Well, it's new guidelines, I just follow the rules, you know, I just follow the rules.

What it... You understand that the studies that were done on people to see how they will inflict pain on other people, with experiments in universities for instance, behavioral experiments in universities. I've mentioned it before too, the one where you think you're electrocuting someone in a different room, and you're in vocal contact with them. Vocal contact and you could hear them squeal and so on. But this guy in the white coat says to you, another 20 volts. But he's already screaming. Another 20 volts. As long as someone else takes authority, someone in command, like an officer in a military takes command, then most folk will obey and will do it. On their own, if they had the decision, they'll say, no, no I'm not taking this one's... But as long as someone else is taking responsibility, they'll actually take it, they'll actually do it. Well, it's the same thing.

So for the hospital staff it says in this article, the link is there for it too, that critical care guidelines, right...

A county health board – which governs Starr Memorial – is set to authorize critical care guidelines that will help medical workers determine ways to allocate scarce medical resources on patients with the best chance to survive.

Texas hospital forced to set up 'death panel' as Covid-19 cases surge - theguardian.com / 26 July 2020

So they'll say, well yeah, we know we killed that person really by denying them food and water and even basic medical care, but you know, that's what we are advised to do by the official guidelines. Right. That's the Milgram experiment, it's the Milgram experiment all over again, isn't it? The Milgram experiment. And folk don't know, even the nurses, they don't know, and the doctors.

As I say, most folk don't know that their thoughts are never their own, really. You can be trained to do the most terrific things to other people. Always with a nice, oh, we're trying to do it for the best, you know. N-n-n. What was it Bertrand Russell said? We'll have to get religion out of the way, you see. Eeh, it's all here, ‘eh.

EXPOSED: World Bank Coronavirus Aid Comes With Conditions For Imposing Extreme Lockdown, Reveals Belarus President

greatgameindia.com / 27 July 2020

(A: That's from the Belarus President. He says…)

Huge foreign loans are given to sovereign nations by the World Bank, IMF and the likes.

(A: Set up, again, by the Royal Institute of International Affairs, the private group that runs the world, right. The CFR is the American branch. They have a branch that runs the European Parliament. They have a branch that runs the Asia-Pacific region. A private club. They brought in the World Bank. They gave you the United Nations. They give you the IMF, the Bank for International Settlements. They're all private companies that are part of this big group.)

But the conditions that come attached to these loans are seldom told by governments to their citizens. A recent case in Belarus has exposed the conditions laid by these agencies for loans being provided for COVID-19. The President of Belarus has exposed that the World Bank coronavirus aid comes with conditions for imposing extreme lockdown measures, to model their coronavirus response on that of Italy and even changes in the economic policies which he refused as being “unacceptable”.

Additional conditions which do not apply to the financial part are unacceptable for Belarus, Belarus President Aleksandr Lukashenko said when speaking about external lending during a meeting to discuss support measures for the real economic sector on the part of the banking system, reported Belarusian Telegraph Agency, BelTA.

“What are our partners' requirements? It was announced that they can provide Belarus with $940 million (A: This is what they offered, right.) in so-called rapid financing. How are things here?” the head of state inquired.

At the same time, he stressed that additional conditions which do not apply to the financial part are unacceptable for the country.

“We hear the demands, for example, to model our coronavirus response on that of Italy. I do not want to see the Italian situation to repeat in Belarus. We have our own country and our own situation,” the president said.

(A: You see, the big bright part though, we can give you $940 million, just wiiisked out of thin air, because that’s what they make it out of.)

“It is ready to fund us ten times more than it offered initially as a token of commendation for our efficient fight against this virus. The World Bank has even asked the Healthcare Ministry to share the experience. Meanwhile, the IMF continues to demand from us quarantine measures, isolation, a curfew.

(A: Now, don’t forget, the IMF is literally like the collector for the money you borrow. The IMF comes in with its own policies, from the World Bank, right, and you have to comply. And they slash and burn all social programs by the way. So this is what they’re trying to do to Belarus. Here’s a big bribe, and then the IMF comes in, you know, and says, you’ve got to lockdown and quarantine, total quarantines and isolations and curfews, this, that and the other.)

Belarus is one of the only European countries that has not implemented strict coronavirus containment measures. The no-restriction situation is such that even the non-essential services remain open. The football league of Belarus is still being played. The only restriction kind-of step that Belarus took till now is that the school holidays have been extended.

Lukashenko is of the opinion that a complete lockdown was completely unnecessary.

(A: Well, here's a sensible guy. If you lockdown everything, everybody's going to be borrowing from the World Bank because you can't support yourselves anymore. Nobody will be able to do it. That's, that's the reason for it, that's what they want. That's why you're locked down. It's not for coronavirus. The lockdown is to bring in a whole new system after a massive, massive crisis caused BY the lockdown itself. That's it.)

(A: It's interesting too in this article because they also give you links to the Great Game India, very important stuff in it too.)

Tweet

GreatGameIndia @GreatGameIndia

Indian doctor with contrary view on #coronavirus prefers not to wear mask while examining patients. Wearing mask for over 20 min in temp above 18 degree Celsius can lead to an increase in carbon dioxide load on human body resulting in breathing difficulty.

(A: Then it's also got...)

Tweet

J Gopikrishnan @jgopikrishnan70

Bill Gates Offered $10 Million Bribe (A: This is what he offered...) For Forced Vaccination In Nigeria

(A: You wouldn't believe what goes on with these characters, really, ‘eh. Yep. So back to Belarus he says…)

The President of Belarus is not the first one to have exposed the pressure exerted by global agencies amidst the coronavirus crisis to further their agenda. Earlier, in a shocking development the President of Madagascar made a sensational claim that the WHO offered him $20m bribe to poison COVID-19 cure (A: [Alan chuckles.] …meaning, to literally write it off.) called COVID-19 Organics made from Artemisia.

(A: Of course you know…)

The Tanzanian President kicked out WHO from the country after

(A: He sent samples of goat and fruit and different things as samples for Covid to the World Health Organization agencies that were doing the testing in his country. Everything came back positive including the goat, including the fruit, including used motor oil. [Alan laughing.] And that’s true. He was on his own TV station doing it, talking about this.)

Goat and Papaya samples came COVID-19 positive. Days after the Tanzanian move, Burundi also kicked out WHO Coronavirus Team from the country for interference in internal matters.

(A: All these links are on this one article and I’ll put it up. It’s called…)

World Bank Coronavirus Aid Comes With Conditions For Imposing Extreme Lockdown, Reveals Belarus President - greatgameindia.com / 27 July 2020

A lot of good links to other articles.

Belarus president unwilling to accept additional terms to get foreign loans - eng.belta.by / 19 June 2020

But of course you're not allowed any other, it's verboten to have any other opinion except that of the one, you know, the totalitarian regime that's deciding who's going to be able to say anything at all. All you're allowed to say is what they tell you, you can say. This is your new freedom. Again, another article is...

Coronavirus deaths 'may be less than half official toll - as docs wrongly mark certificates', says ex-WHO chief - thesun.co.uk / 11 June 2020

Well, no kidding. I won't bother reading this one because that's a vast understatement to the whole thing. Because anybody who, whether you test positive or not after, or after death, it makes no difference, it doesn't matter if your heart literally blew itself up and was ready to pack in before you got the coronavirus, it makes no difference, they're using everything, including flu deaths, as Covid. We all know this, there's just too many articles out there and exposés on it.

Of course another YouTube, I'll put it up if we can still do it. It's been pulled from YouTube, I should say, and other areas. It says…

'America's Frontline Doctors' may be real doctors, but experts say they don't know what they're talking about - usatoday.com / 30 July 2020

The complete... aaaa, this is incredible tyranny we're going through, when nobody's opinion, including those who are all qualified in their spheres of medicine are getting banned from saying anything…

Frontline Doctors Storm D.C. - "Thousands Of Doctors" Are Being Silenced - bitchute.com / 27 July 2020

The New Viral Video of Doctors Talking About Coronavirus that Facebook, YouTube, and Twitter Have Removed - ronpaulinstitute.org / 28 July 2020

And these are people, they're dealing with patients. ‘Eh? They're not the Faucians… I almost said the Faustians [Alan laughing.] Faustican pact, Fauci. But the real doctors are getting hammered just for speaking their mind and speaking about what they've come up with and what they're noticing and so on. It's forbidden. Np.

What a time to watch this happening, tyranny, totalitarianism. Because a whole new agenda, a whole new way of living is to get forced upon us. The complete global reset, a completely new way of living from birth to death all hinges on this con. And they admit that in some of their articles, their whole agenda hinges on using Covid as the excuse. So I'll put this article up too.

Another one is... Here's your typical psychopath. Listen to this, ‘eh, as I mentioned how they turned different sections of society against each other, the ones who comply, the ones who won’t comply, right. That's actually in their suggestions with SAGE, how they could create different groups and use them like a mob against those who won't go along with the agenda. Yep. So here's what he, listen to this...

Narcissists and Psychopaths Are More Likely to Refuse to Wear Masks, Says New Research

newsweek.com / 22 July 2020

(A: ...says new research. Hhhhhhhhhhh, well, my goodness, we are always learning, ‘eh?)

Two recent studies looked at the relationship between personality traits and reactions to restrictions put in place to slow the spread of the coronavirus COVID-19. Researchers found that people possessing so-called "Dark Triad" traits

(A: [Alan whispering] Hhhhhhh, Dark Triad traits.)

—narcissism, psychopathy and Machiavellianism—were less likely to comply with restrictions or engage in preventative measures against the pandemic.

Well, the folk who wrote this are psychopath because the point of it is to turn folk against folk who won't go along with the nonsense. So yeah, these are the manipulative psychopaths, the ones that work with the prompt units, they are prompting you all the time, nudging units, you see, the BIT units, the SAGE units, etc. that the government employ, psychologists, etc. These are the psychopaths because they're getting paid to lie to you, to brutalize you. So this article itself, whoever really wrote it, is written by psychopaths and put out by psychopaths. Yep. There ya go. And believe you me, that's the whole point of this article, it's by psychopaths to get you to comply. I love how they project what they are doing to you onto the folks that won't comply. So I'll put these articles up.

Then another article too, getting back to what's definitely going to come, and we all know it, right. You can't close down the planet and then say, oh my, what, there's starvation going to happen, well, who could have foreseen that? ...if no one's allowed to move or work, or even get money and earn money to buy the darn stuff even if you could get it. In Britain, they're still on about Brexit, right.

'Disorderly Brexit' and coronavirus threaten UK's food security, MPs claim

lbcnews.co.uk / 30 July 2020

A new report by a cross-party group of MPs (A: Members of Parliament.) has warned the Government "cannot be complacent" with the threat of possible future crises triggered by climate change (A: So they’ve pulled that one out of the bag again too.) or a disorderly end to the Brexit transition period which could impact on food supplies.

The Commons Environment, Food and Rural Affairs Select Committee said despite the easing of the coronavirus lockdown, "problems with food security are far from over".

(A: Right.)

Millions of people have struggled to access food as a result of the coronavirus pandemic, with the number of food bank users doubling during lockdown.

(A: Well, they're all locked down, in Africa they're locked down too, they can't get the darn food now. And yeah, there's folk who are starving. There's food banks all over the Western world dishing out what they can get to the public. And it's doubling all the time, they say here, the numbers who go into them. Russia has got them too. I was looking at an article recently, in parts of Russia they've got food banks just working overtime like crazy. Yep. So here's the outcome of this big committee, this big, this, this group of politicians that just get together, you see.)

"It is therefore essential that the Government appoints a new Minister for Food Security who will stop this issue falling between the cracks.

Well, isn't that what the UN wants? Isn't that what the WEF wants, the World Economic Forum? It's just astonishing. It's just coincidence of course, ‘eh, it's just coincidence it all falls into the same organizations, ‘eh. Yep. There ya go.

Vaccine Execs Rake In $1 Billion In Stock Sales As Positive Headlines Boost Shares

zerohedge.com / 27 July 2020

(A: No kidding.)

With the race to find a vaccine for COVID-19 in full effect, biotech executives and other insiders from at least 11 companies have made hand over fist - raking in over $1 billion in stock sales after announcing positive developments, according to the New York Times.

(A: That's what they do. What they do, when they, oh, we just tested this vaccine or that vaccine, and, the reviews are just fantastic, that's what they'll say, you see. And that's a fast, a fast boom, you know, there's a name they actually have for it in investment.)

In some cases, company insiders are profiting from regularly scheduled compensation or automatic stock trades. But in other situations, senior officials appear to be pouncing on opportunities to cash out while their stock prices are sky high. And some companies have awarded stock options to executives shortly before market-moving announcements about their vaccine progress. -NYT (A: That’s the New York Times.)

In May, we noted that insiders at Moderna cashed out on some $30 million in options - while CEO Stephane Bancel has become a billionaire.

(A: A company that had not sold anything before, right, or produce vaccines before, before they're even given out the company's market value was now…)

The company's market value is now nearly $30 billion thanks to a stream of positive press releases, while insiders have sold around $248 million altogether since January - most of it coming following an April announcement that the company had been selected to receive federal funding to support their efforts.

(A: There's fascism at work, folks, business, big, big, big business working with big governments. It's interesting to see who he's friendly with too, Stephane Bancel. It's interesting to see who his big pal at college was too. And he gets the big, huge grants, ‘eh. Another one too, it says…)

The Times highlights another case; South San Francisco-based Vaxart, which was selected by the US government to participate in a federal initiative to quickly produce COVID-19 treatments known as Operation Warp Speed.

(A: So as soon as the government starts putting money into it, they sell shares.)

Vaxart’s shares soared. Company insiders, who weeks earlier had received stock options worth a few million dollars, saw the value of those awards increase sixfold. And a hedge fund that partly controlled the company walked away with more than $200 million in instant profits.

(A: FASCISM, you see. You can't lose when the government's going to be giving the contracts, ‘eh, and everybody invests, oh, get-rich-quick, you know.)

Michael R. Caputo, the US Department of Health and Human Services' assistant secretary for public affairs said the agency "has entered into funding agreements with certain vaccine manufacturers, and we are negotiating with others," but added "Neither is the case with Vaxart."

"Vaxart’s vaccine candidate was selected to participate in preliminary U.S. government studies to determine potential areas for possible Operation Warp Speed partnership and support. At this time, those studies are ongoing, and no determinations have been made," he added.

CEO Andrei Floroiu - who received stock options worth approximately $4.3 million in June (and worth $28 million weeks later) - defended his company, saying in a Friday statement "Vaxart abides by good corporate governance guidelines and policies and makes decisions in accordance with the best interests of the company and its shareholders,"

(A: It's fascism, you know. Of course it's fascism. Yep. Would he have $20 million if it wasn't for getting the contracts and so on, millions thrown at him of taxpayers' money?)

Mind you, when you really read the articles from years ago that Fauci was involved in too with the big vaccine companies, they talked about the fact they'd have to get laws on the books that would mandate, the government must put out much more money for vaccines for future pandemics. The whole thing flopped before with the 2009 flu that came out, folk didn't want it, the swine flu one. People in New Zealand and other places got partial paralysis with some of it, temporary, and sleeping diseases they call it, narcolepsy. So everybody stopped taking the vaccines. They had millions and millions of doses that the folk didn't want, so they had to dispose of them. But they want to mandate that you must take the vaccines, you see. Well, that's real corporate fascism, you must take what they produce, regardless of, and there's a, and you have NO say if it kills you? [Alan chuckles.] Well, you won't if you're dead, right? But no one can get sued? I mean, no, no, no. No. No way. No. No way. No way at all. Np.

Another article here is interesting. It's…

Abortion figures are a serious cause for concern - despite what BPAS says

christian.org.uk / 24 July 2020

(A: Now, this ties in in a different way. It's not so much about the abortion issue, here. This is about the Daily Telegraph's opinion piece, a recent opinion.)

In a recent opinion piece for The Daily Telegraph, the head of one of the UK's largest abortionists

(A: This is someone who is a big advocate at the top. All these big names that come out in the newspaper who advocate, advocate, they're really paid advocates, really, highly paid advocates on behalf of what I read earlier, what Bertrand Russell said about how they're going to bring down populations and so on. So…)

…the head of one of the UK's largest abortionists highlighted that more abortions happened in England and Wales in 2019 than ever before.

(A: Right. And this is what's interesting to me, it ties into what I'm talking about with the bioethics and value of the patient's lives and so on. It says…)

This is "no cause for concern", says BPAS CEO Ann Furedi, because we live "in a society where women are making their own…

(A: …the usual stuff they parrot off. Here's what it says too…)

She goes on. Abortion "must be available in any civilized society", and that we must all rally behind a woman's 'right to choose'…

(A: Now, listen to the statement that she said before, and the link is here of when she actually made it and so on.)

She has previously said that life only matters if it's wanted, and sees abortion as nothing more than 'backup' contraception. Furedi has also said an abortion procedure should be viewed as if it were a minor medical operation akin to removing a mole.

So getting back to, life only matters if it's wanted. Does that, isn't this tying into the much bigger movement in bioethics, who should live and who should die? Not just with babies now, or fetuses as they want to call it, but then with the elderly, and then with, oh let's, well you know, we better put the medical, what's left of medicine to better use for better people, because you might just die anyway. But then again, you might live, you see. So here ya go, you see. This all ties in together.

I hope you understand, everything is interconnected. EVERYTHING is interconnected here. Not by chance. It's SET UP that way. Hm? Life only matters if it's wanted. Are you essential? Are you? for the lockdown, or do you go to work? No, you're not essential. No. Do you understand, everything is interconnected. Don't forget that. So when I read these articles, it's not because they're all just bad news. No, no, they are interconnected. Deliberately so. Because that's the system that you're living in. It's all, it's total warfare on the general population. On everybody, I don't care what gender you are. Another offbeat article too is…

Catholic bishops fear Scotland's hate crime law (A: They've got a new hate crime, every country must get it, you see.) could criminalize Bible and Catechism

catholicnewsagency.com / 29 July 2020

…the Scottish Government's new Hate Crime and Public Order Bill could lead to censorship of Catholic teaching.

Well, I think the whole society has been under censorship for a long time. And with electronic media [Alan chuckles.] it's really on the warpath now, isn't it, 'eh. Yep. Another article too, I've mentioned before from The Guardian about Texas as well, which I've said before from a different newspaper...

Texas hospital forced to set up 'death panel' as Covid-19 cases surge

theguardian.com / 26 July 2020

(A: Now, the Guardian is so left-wing I'm sure it's not against much of what's going on.)

Doctors at Starr County Memorial hospital, the only hospital in Starr county, have been issued with critical care guidelines to decide which Covid-19 patients it will treat, and which ones will be sent home because they are likely to die.

(A: Well, they're definitely going to die, or most likely to die if they get sent home and not get treated. You see how it's worded, 'eh? The ones that will be sent home because they are likely to die, because they're not going to treat them. And the excuses given…)

…to alleviate the hospital's limited medical resources…

There ya go. M-hm. And again, I don't even put any credence in what they say are their confirmed cases. Confirmed cases are not illnesses. I hope you understand that. That's their trick. The more that they test, that will come up positive and say, oh, we've got more, thousands of more cases in that area. Well, they just gave an extra so many thousand more tests out. But the tests that they're giving out anyway, they're pretty well guaranteed to get positive cases. But these are not illnesses. The tricks they're playing are disgusting!

Again, it's because it's an essential, this is a war they're at, that's a war to change society into a whole new system. And you better accept the fact that those who do such things, whether they're using bullets, bombs or massive force and terror campaigns on you, it's all the same techniques really in the end to get the effects done on the general public. Because they are at war with YOU. That's what it is.

Now another article is this one here…

These four coronavirus vaccines are the closest to becoming reality

wired.co.uk / 26 July 2020

(A: [Alan laughing.] I love how they word it...)

As the world waits eagerly for a Covid-19 vaccine, several candidates are starting to be put through their paces in clinical trials. More than 100 vaccine candidates are being developed by teams around the world, with more than 20 now in or about to enter clinical evaluation, meaning they are being tested in humans.

On July 20, two vaccine candidates published preliminary results from phase one and two trials showing they induced

(A: Now, here's the trick again folks, you've got to understand this. Because I've read articles over the years, many years, that always put out these promotions in the same way.)

two vaccine candidates published preliminary results from phase one and two trials showing they induced an immune response and didn't trigger any major safety concerns,

(A: …like a big promise, right.)

(A: …or major, right.)

marking a positive step forward. But there's still a way to go: inducing an immune response doesn't necessarily mean that the vaccine will actually protect people from Covid-19.

(A: [Alan laughing.] Do you understand the doublespeak here? So the first part of it says that…)

…showing that they induced an immune response…

That's generally always what happens. Now, with the Spanish flu one, right, and other flus that they put out before by the flu vaccinations, and I've read the articles, I've still got them, from our own government agencies and health agencies, they have admitted that, yeah, you can get a good immune response from the vaccine, when they test for antibodies. But when you hit the actual real virus in real life after you get the vaccination, you get a massive cytokine storm response, and your lungs get filled up with the response and you suffocate, you DIE. So, the initial immune response is pointless. Meaning, did it create a few antibodies? What you have to show too, another trick that is often done, they haven't tested for antibodies first that have been caused by natural immunity, because most folk don't know they've had it. So there's a lot of tricks at work here.

As they say, when you get an initial response, this is all to get big, more money thrown at that them so they can sell more stocks off. That's how these companies make their monies, you know, through terror and horror. Oh, we showed that there was some antibodies produced after the first dose. But they don't tell you, because what they have to do next is, like you do animals, that's what they do, they eventually let the animal lose into a little containment with, there's wild virus there, the actual virus, and you get an OVER, a massive reaction, vaccine enhanced respiratory response. Meaning, it's going to kill you.

So you can't go with that. This is all to sell shares. And they're raking in the billions. This is what this is for, this article. This is the type of, that's what these articles are FOR, folks. This one goes through a bunch of companies that are doing the same kind of things with their positive responses to... Apart from all the millions that are just getting thrown by your tax money, but also, it's a great, great business to be in, isn't it, ‘eh. Isn't this? Where governments, if they can't sell it, the government are guaranteed to buy them anyway.

Oh, fascism, fascism, fascism.

Another article is to do with Al Gore. You know, I call him allegory, because that's what he is, he is an allegory for many different things. But Al Gore, ‘eh, the guy who came out with the big terrifying things in An Inconvenient Truth, or was it Spoof. Because it definitely, his whole big speech at that time, his big presentation was shot down by people who knew the facts and figures and statistics and all the rest of it. But that didn't matter because his agenda, it's the same thing that's getting fulfilled right now with the global, you know, the great reset and all that kind of stuff. Using the climate. That was the excuse that, that's what they said at the WEF, we’ll managed to achieve all the things that we couldn't achieve, because the public we’re ignoring the whole climate argument and terror that they were giving us for years. But they can do it with Covid.

So allegory, Allegory I call him, don't forget he was in business with, Al Gore was in business with Blood for a carbon exchange system where they'd bump up the price of carbon and sell it, and the companies traded between each other and all the rest of it. The big companies too were given so many free credits for carbon, before they started to gamble it. This is incredible what's been happening, and the public haven't got a clue. To get it kicked off, this whole carbon trading idea, which is a moneymaking scheme for big international corporations, they gave the companies millions and millions of dollars, each, free, to try to start it off.

Al Gore, his company, he had the one I think was in Chicago that he set up. It was called, his partner was called Blood, Blood and Gore was the name of the company. I'm not kidding you. This is amazing stuff. This is stuff right out of a movie, ‘eh, [Alan chuckles.] Blood and Gore, [Alan chuckles.] and how they could make money off you from carbon. Something that naturally exists in the planet. We're carbon-based organisms, that's what humans are and life on the planet here is. We're not silicone, that's in sci-fi movies. We’re carbon-based, right. And we need carbon, you know. The plants need carbon dioxide to take in and to give out oxygen for goodness’ sake.

Conology is everywhere you look. And it's always to do with power and getting the majority of the public so brainwashed they give up all power to these cons, these con artists. Who make, who get awfully rich off the scams. Incredibly rich. And they trade fictitious nothings, ‘eh. Oh, how much carbon credits have you? I've got so many, 10,000 tons, you know. Well, where do you keep it all? Well, I don't keep it anywhere, it's just on paper. But it's worth, you know, a few million bucks right off the bat. You know, this is how they do it. Absolute rubbish. Absolute rubbish. I-yi-yi. N-n-n. I'll put these articles up remember too. Another part too, virus pandemic, the same, they're all running with the same articles. So Al Gore by the way right now, it says...

Al Gore, UN Secretary-General, others now demanding 'Great Reset' of global capitalism - foxbusiness.com / 25 June 2020

These are truly dangerous times for those who support individual liberty and free markets

(A: No kidding. So, the WEF and Al Gore and the whole UN group and Secretary-General are all demanding a great reset. So those who own everything and who are the real capitalists at the top are going to talk about redistributing wealth amongst the peasant class. [Alan chuckles.] But not from their own coffers, believe you me. No, we make their lives comfortable by what they tax off of us.)

US ECONOMIC RECOVERY FROM CORONAVIRUS PANDEMIC WILL TAKE 'SOME TIME,' FED'S EVANS SAYS

(A: No kidding, ‘eh.)

At a meeting hosted by the highly influential World Economic Forum earlier in June, powerful officials from nonprofits,

(A: ...’eh, that's the big, big nonprofit organizations that are the armies for the big foundations, ‘eh...)

government, business, academia, labor unions

(A: Well, they are for, on board, they are well paid off too, the leaders of labor unions, oh my God, ‘eh...)

and activist groups announced their plan for a “Great Reset” of global capitalism.

(A: It's astonishing they don't ask the general population about their opinions. So you have...)

...powerful officials from nonprofits, government, business, academia, labor unions and activist groups announced their plan for a “Great Reset” of global capitalism.

It’s a proposal they acknowledged has only been made possible because of the “opportunity” provided by the economic destruction caused by the novel coronavirus.

(A: [Alan chuckles.]   This is it, folks. M-hm.)

Supporters and attendees of the meeting included Prince Charles;

(A: And of course Prince Charles is there, the guy who literally was a dunce at school. They called him a dunce. I mean, his teachers called him a dunce. He's not bright, y'know. And he hasn't gotten any wiser with age either. But anyway, he's on board with it all. But mainly because his father is a eugenicists who talked about the need to really reduce the world population in big world meetings he attended. His father was head of the different wildlife organizations, the World Wildlife Fund and different groups like that.)

(A: He was quite open about it at the big meetings, there was just too many people, and sometimes he says, you know, people like we, he says, we have big estates and we know that when a certain species takes over, too many deer or whatever, you need a good cull, he says, you know. And it's no different with people. So Charlie there, who doesn't have the brains for it, but he's still compared to his daddy I should say, you know, his daddy, Prince Philip, and here you go. These are the big, these are the characters who are announcing the great reset, distributing wealth across the planet as they talk about austerity, hm! Doublespeak. Doublespeak, doublespeak. So...)

António Guterres, the secretary-general of the United Nations;

(A: Guterres, again, the secretary-general of the United Nations he was also a Maoist Communist. And...)

Ajay Banga, CEO of MasterCard;

(A: I've mentioned before, all the top oil company guys are there...)

Bernard Looney, CEO of BP; and Gina Gopinath, the chief economist at the International Monetary Fund, among many others.

(A: So all the important folk, you know. Yeah.)

It's to give you more fairness and promote greater equality within societies and among nations. Ohhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhgggggggggggghhh. Can you believe this pig swill! That's what it is, pig swill. No doubt about it. Evil folk on the planet that's wants to make it more equal for everybody. Equal poverty, that's what they, and I really mean that, this is what they're after, total austerity, for YOU all. And they've pretty well eradicated much of the middle classes. Which they always wanted to do.

Another article I want to mention here, I've had it for quite a while but I haven't touched on it in any depth. It was this one to do with comparing countries, how you, they always hit different countries, or corporations in your country will hit out at other countries, you know. It says…

Chinese Melamine and American Vioxx: A Comparison

unz.com / 17 April 2012

In contrasting China and America, pundits often cite our free and independent media as one of our greatest strengths, together with the tremendous importance which our society places upon individual American lives.

(A: And that’s true. Even through all this nonsense of being censored hey.)

(A: Well, it used to.)

For us, a single wrongful death can sometimes provoke weeks of massive media coverage and galvanize the nation into corrective action, while life remains cheap in China, a far poorer land of over a billion people, ruled by a ruthless Communist Party eager to bury its mistakes. But an examination of two of the greatest public-health scandals of the last few years casts serious doubt on this widespread belief.

(A: …this is what we’re always told...)

(A: And they give examples of it.)

First, consider the details of the Chinese infant formula scandal of 2008. Unscrupulous businessmen (A: …in China.) had discovered they could save money by greatly diluting their milk products, then adding a plastic chemical compound called melamine to raise the apparent protein content back to normal levels.

(A: I did the articles at the time on that. Some of the biggest well-known names actually in the West were, had their companies over there doing this. They paid scientists to look at this, the actual chemical makeup of melamine, and in order for them to come to the preferred conclusion, I would say, that it could almost be classed as a protein, you see. Now, melamine is what they make your plastic countertops out of. That's what they are, melamine. M-hm. So when you powder it, you see, well, could that be a bit similar to maybe some kind of protein? I don't know, says the scientists. The money exchanges hands and, well, I don't quite know.   More money is dished out, well, it's beginning to look like it might be. And a bigger pile of money goes there, yeah, I'll put money on that, that's a protein. So they started to raise the protein back to normal levels, that's what apparently it would give them if they added it to milk, after taking the proteins out.)

Nearly 300,000 babies throughout China had suffered urinary problems, with many hundreds requiring lengthy hospitalization for kidney stones. Six died.

(A: There was a lot more than six. And a lot more after it died of kidney, the kidneys just packed in.)

A wave of popular outrage swept past the controlled media roadblocks and initial government excuses, and soon put enormous pressure on Chinese officials to take forceful action against the wrongdoers.

China's leaders may not be democratically elected, but they pay close attention to strong popular sentiment.

(A: So it's true, in China they get into action. They will do it, and they will throw people to the wolves.)

Once pressed, they quickly launched a national police investigation which led to a series of arrests and uncovered evidence that this widespread system of food adulteration had been protected by bribe-taking government officials. Long prison sentences were freely handed out and a couple of the guiltiest culprits were eventually tried and executed for their role, measures that gradually assuaged popular anger. Indeed, the former head of the Chinese FDA had been executed for corruption in late 2007 under similar circumstances.

(A: That's what they did in China. Yep.)

Throughout these events, American media coverage was extensive, with numerous front-page stories in our leading newspapers. Journalists discovered that similar methods of dangerous chemical adulteration had been used to produce Chinese pet food for export,

(A: …and that was in the papers, remember too, a lot of dogs and cats in the West, their kidneys again packed in from the food. There were warnings in all the papers not to buy it. I remember doing the talks on it.)

However, the American media reaction had been quite different during an earlier health scandal much closer to home.

(A: This is one example, there's many to choose from.)

In September 2004, Merck, one of America's largest pharmaceutical companies, suddenly announced that it was voluntarily recalling Vioxx, its popular anti-pain medication widely used to treat arthritis-related ailments.

(A: It wasn't actually anti-pain. You get less pain if you can reduce the inflammation and it was supposed to reduce inflammation.)

This abrupt recall came just days after Merck discovered that a top medical journal was about to publish a massive study by an FDA investigator indicating that the drug in question greatly increased the risk of fatal heart attacks and strokes and had probably been responsible for at least 55,000 American deaths during the five years it had been on the market.

(A: This happens all the time by the way with medications.)

Within weeks of the recall, journalists discovered that Merck had found strong evidence of the potentially fatal side-effects of this drug even before its initial 1999 introduction, but had ignored these worrisome indicators and avoided additional testing, while suppressing the concerns of its own scientists. Boosted by a television advertising budget averaging a hundred million dollars per year, Vioxx soon became one of Merck's most lucrative products, generating over $2 billion in yearly revenue.

(A: …onto the market. So they knew what it was going to do.)

Merck had also secretly ghostwritten dozens

(A: And this is a big normal thing unfortunately in the write ups for medications.)

Merck had also secretly ghostwritten dozens of the published research studies emphasizing the beneficial aspects of the drug and encouraging doctors to widely prescribe it,

(A: I remember they have done some exposés on people who write these wonderful writeups for the companies. They keep their identity hidden, in the dark and so on, on some of the big mainstream television shows that did it years ago, but they do it all the time. Whatever you want, they'll write it for you, you know, and sign it.)

thus transforming science into marketing support. Twenty-five million Americans were eventually prescribed Vioxx as an aspirin-substitute thought to produce fewer complications.

Although the Vioxx scandal certainly did generate several days of newspaper headlines and intermittently returned to the front pages as the resulting lawsuits gradually moved through our judicial system, the coverage still seemed scanty relative to the number of estimated fatalities, which matched America's total losses in the Vietnam War. In fact, the media coverage often seemed considerably less than that later accorded to the Chinese infant food scandal, which had caused just a handful of deaths on the other side of the world.

The circumstances of this case were exceptionally egregious, with many tens of thousands of American deaths due to the sale of a highly lucrative but sometimes fatal drug, whose harmful effects had long been known to its manufacturer. But there is no sign that criminal charges were ever considered.

(A: …in the West, 'eh. Now, they executed them in China [Alan chuckles.] for what they did to the milk.)

A massive class-action lawsuit dragged its way through the courts for years, eventually being settled for $4.85 billion in 2007, with almost half the money going to the trial lawyers. Merck shareholders also paid large sums to settle various other lawsuits and government penalties and cover the heavy legal costs of fighting all of these cases. But the loss of continuing Vioxx sales represented the greatest financial penalty of all, which provides a disturbing insight into the cost-benefit calculations behind the company's original cover-up.

(A: Then they did the studies, that once they stopped it, that's when you got the numbers of how many folk it would have killed. Because suddenly the death rate has plummeted, the annual death rate plummeted over the next few years. This article continues to go into all of that too and what happened. It's just astonishing what happened really. It says…)

The headline of the short article that ran in the April 19, 2005 edition of USA Today was typical: "USA Records Largest Drop in Annual Deaths in at Least 60 Years." During that one year, American deaths had fallen by 50,000 despite the growth in both the size and the age of the nation's population. Government health experts were quoted as being greatly "surprised" and "scratching [their] heads" over this strange anomaly, which was led by a sharp drop in fatal heart attacks.

Then they started to realize, this drug had killed way more than they ever thought. Again, they've got it just tacked into the death rate and give you an exaggerated death rate, then it became normal.

I can remember when years and years ago you'll see children going about on electronic wheelchairs and so on without arms and legs. That was the thalidomide scandal where they prescribed a particular drug to women who were pregnant and the children were born literally missing arms and legs. And my goodness, all these incredible scandals that they tried to hush up and...

Again, millions and billions out there to propagandize their companies, again, get them back into the good books. These are the same companies, all these big companies that are getting all the contracts for vaccinations, that are not even trialing them out [Alan chuckles.] on their usual test subjects for years and then… No, they want to get the whole planet to take it. Come on here! Come on. Come on here. And they all have glowing reports too, as I say, they pay all these wonderful people to rubberstamp things for them and give them their own writeups. It's just wonderful.

Everything is so corrupt, folks. Incredible, I don't care what expert they mention for any particular thing, I don't trust them. Because we live in an awfully corrupt society. Incredible. China, that does have a tremendous cultural corruption problem, where Chinese, they haven't got the religious things that even we've lost too, but they never went through a phase there of feeling the guilt for it. No, they can be a bit more direct to try to get what they want. So they have a kind of, so because of that they have executions and so on to it as a way to keep them in check.

But in the West, we don't even arrest the folk that kill folk here through drugs and all the rest of it and scams and lies and cheating. Who got arrested with the 2007/8 bank crashes? How many folk lost their homes and ended up on the big tent cities? Remember that one? Hm? I don't think anybody did. They willingly did the incredible scams with the whole mortgage system of America, and the other countries too. Canada had to get bailed out too by the Federal Reserve. N-n-n. Flipping, flipping, flipping. The big banks were literally taking hundreds of mortgages a day and flipping them all as though it was cash. It got so bad at the end they said it would take years to find out who originally, really owns, legally owned these houses today. Millions of them. It was a free-for-all. Greed. Anyway, I'll put these articles up remember for those that want to read them.

Another thing too, I've mentioned before how you always higher, for the real anarchists for instance, as opposed to the Communists, the true communists, there's always a bit of both, a kind of crossover there. But it is amazing to watch the same techniques using the same types of groups, with the same mentalities, to do specific parts of the revolution, you see, on behalf of those at the top. I haven't heard any of them demanding that the World Economic Forum should be abolished, for instance. Why not? If you're truly a radical anarchist and communist, or communist, and/or communist, because you can be both, why aren't they demanding the total takedown of the richest folk on the planet that own everything that we need to survive? They're not doing it. They're burning down mom-and-pop stores and so on and restaurants and things. Doesn't that seem a bit suspicious? Ahhhhhhhhhhhhhhh. Anyway, as I say, they always end up recruiting what they call the nihilists and the atheists, the ones on the fringes, you know, the most militant types. Some of them with records actually. And that's encouraged. This article here is...

Antifa militant arrested for stabbing black Trump supporter in Portland

thepostmillennial.com / 25 July 2020

Antifa militant and convicted pedophile Blake David Hampe was arrested in the early hours of Saturday following his alleged stabbing of a black Trump supporter in Portland.

The Trump supporter and conservative, who goes by the name Black Rebel on social media, posted several updates to his condition from the ambulance and hospital. In the Periscope livestream (A: I guess that a social media thing.), he alleged that Hampe had stalked him and his group of friends for several blocks in Portland before stabbing him.

(A: So this is premeditated. You know, the guy didn’t, it wasn’t a spontaneous thing, the guy literally followed him. In order to hopefully, probably he was trying to kill him, you know.)

Black Rebel stated that Antifa militants doxed his identity and posted his location on social media and advised each other to “watch out” for him.

“That knife was long enough. He stabbed me to kill me,” said Black Rebel, who says that he spotted Hampe, who was part of a group of Antifa following his group of friends for several blocks before he approached Hampe to ask why he was following them.

“We were all out there, four friends, trying to keep each other safe in the best way possible. I figured I’d try to de-escalate and just have a conversation,” he said. “I went over there, said ‘what’s up buddy?’ and that (A: I wonder where they get, I guess it was Hollywood that came out with all the mother-you-know-what’s…) motherker went around and shanked me in the fking kidney.”

Footage of Hampe’s arrest was captured by several photojournalists, including Garrison Davis, who posted video of the Portland Police Bureau taking him into custody.

(A: It's quite something, isn't it, ‘eh.)

Tweet

ELIJAH @ElijahSchaffer

While police respond to an alleged stabbing situation

A BLM rioters yells at the responding officers, follows him to his vehicle

Then proceeds to kick it after the door closes

A further investigation into Hampe’s identity reveals that he was previously indicted on charges of knowingly possessing child pornography in 2007 by the US District Court in Maine.

During the 2007 arrest, the court document states that officers from the U.S. Customs and Border Protection who performed a search of his vehicle discovered “a lot of merchandise for children” including sleeping bags, children’s stickers, children’s underwear, children’s towels with superhero prints, and packages of trading cards—alongside 12-15 condoms, lubricant, a camera, a cellphone, and a laptop.

Hampe, who incriminated himself during the search, stated that he was kicked out of his uncle’s home on account of a discovery of child pornography, and that he had also stored the illicit material on his mother’s home computer.

So you know, there's all kinds out there and some are beyond radical, there's other things wrong as well. The folk don't know there are dangerous folk out there right now. But they're all being allowed to do what they’re doing. I mean, there's no doubt about it. When you have mayors and all that from different cities all on board with them, and still calling it a protest, as this kind of thing is happening. It's just astonishing ‘eh. N-n. But the elite want this. As I say, out of the chaos will come the new system... of fairness and equality for the world. Says the multibillionaires and trillionaires. And yeah, they are multi trillionaires a lot of them at the WEF. Yeah. There ya go.

Now, this is an interesting article too ‘eh. It says how you get your thoughts just given to you, if you're not aware of that. You should have thoughts of your own, they should be your own thoughts, ‘eh.

Your DNA is not your destiny

bbc.com / 27 July 2020

(A: It's called...)

Beyond Human

How technology is augmenting human abilities.

Your DNA is not your destiny

Now playing

(A: So these are links for things that are coming. It's from the BBC by the way. And the BBC is tremendous for what you think is... It's a government run institution that would appear to be socialistic to the general public, but it's really working on behalf of the ultra-elite. It always has been. So your DNA is not your destiny. And…)

Is this a new phase in human evolution?

Watch now

…another video here. So there's a bunch of videos there and they're trying to convince you of, you know, it might not be too bad to tamper with your DNA and so on. Isn't that right along the path of this particular RNA type vaccine they want to give you that will change the makeup, it's going to alter permanently the epithelial tissues in your body and your lungs. Every offspring that you're going to have, for every generation, will also be the same way from then on, you can't go back. Sounds wonderful, 'eh? Doesn't it, hm? Ftt. Isn't it wonderful?

Another thing too I mentioned, I don't know if I mentioned it last week or if it came in late. It was actually an Ontario Court of Justice plaintiff put out this order against Trudeau the Prime Minister of Canada, Teresa Tam the Chief Medical Officer, Mark Garneau Canadian Transport Minister, Doug Ford Premier of Ontario, a whole list of people basically on doing away... It says...

> A legal proceeding has been commenced against you by the plaintiff.

It's really for basically closing down the economy and everything else that's happened in every other country, same kind of thing, and bring in a kind of martial law type scenario instead of sticking to democracy. I think that's basically what it's about. It's quite a long complaint. I don't know what you call it here, a charge I guess you call it. It's a long, long one indeed.

But again all these legal things are way too long, that's what's wrong with them [Alan chuckles.] apparently. There's too many lawyers making up this stuff. They should be straightforward like it was in the old Viking days, I think. You had your Uppsala and then you had your different statements made by representatives of the clans or the chiefs and so on. You didn't have all these lawyers coming out with points on this and points on that, that would drag it on for months.

I think it's 191 pages here according to this thing here. It's got the statement of the claims and how they must respond within 20 days, etc. I don't know what else is happening from it. So there you go. We'll see how it turns out.

What's interesting again, 'eh, so much is interesting as you watch, you're living through history. I keep saying this. Folk don't really realize it, you're truly living through an amazing histories. You look back, if you live long enough and if you don't starve to death, but you look back and you'll say, I remember all that well and what they did to make it all happen. How they unleashed the nihilists and the atheists during a pandemic to augment the terror, etc. And the confusion that would be within the public, the general public. And you would hold back the police to an extent as well in response to it. And give the impression that it's truly, a true revolution.

But as I say, if it was a true revolution, why don't they go after the World Economic Forum? Why don't they go after the Bank for International settlements? And the World Bank? Hm? And the International Monetary Fund, that literally runs your country with an iron fist when it comes in to get the payments back? They slash all your social programs, the IMF. It doesn't matter who dies in the process. But they don't say that, do they. Nope.

Convicted Terrorist Funding Marxist BLM

americanfreepress.net / 27 July 2020

(A: That was from July 27. You've probably heard already but...)

One of the leading fundraisers for the Black Lives Matter movement is a radical communist terrorist who was convicted in 1985 and sentenced to 58 years in prison, retired NYPD Commissioner Bernard Kerik recently asserted in a powerful interview with a local San Diego-based news outlet.

Susan Rosenberg, who is a vice chair of Thousand Currents, a radical left-wing 501(c)(3) charity (A: [Alan laughing.] Tax-free, ‘eh.) that fundraises for and sponsors a variety of leftist causes—including the Black Lives Matter movement—was formerly convicted of “possessing hundreds of pounds of explosives,” according to KUSI, a San Diego-based local news outlet. The organizations with which Rosenberg was involved in the 1970s and 1980s, which included the radical May 19th communist organization, Black Liberation Army, and the infamous Weather Underground, were also “involved in multiple robberies, police officer assassinations, and bombings.”

After serving 16 years in federal prison, Rosenberg’s sentence was commuted on Jan. 20, 2001 by President Bill Clinton on his last day in office.

(A: Interesting too that Hillary constantly praised the Weather Underground – and name too, the Weather Underground, ‘eh – and even had lectures by the heads of it, she said, as a student in fact.)

Following her commutation, Rosenberg served as communications director for the American Jewish World Service and later became a professor at John Jay College of Criminal Justice, which is part of the City University of New York. (A: [Alan laughing.]) In 2020, she became involved with Thousand Currents and began assisting the Black Lives Matter movement with fundraising.

(A: It's just, you know... Do you realize how many millions all these big corporations I mentioned last week, each corporation, all the biggies, all the Walmart's, all of them and all the big tech are just throwing money out there. So this is going through this woman's hands and she's a convicted terrorist. Yep. I tell ya. [Alan chuckles.] It's just amazing. But again, I mean, you read this and it's so Orwellian, 'eh. This is what Kerik, this NYPD guy says. He says…)

"The problem I have with this is nobody is really paying attention to the organization Black Lives Matter in a much broader and bigger picture," (A: …you know.) Kerik explained in the interview. "So you have a terrorist—a convicted terrorist, somebody that wanted the overthrow of the United States government, somebody that was anti-capitalism, anti-American back in the 60s, 70s, and early 80s—she's now working for Black Lives Matter."

...managing the funding and so on. But it's all getting flown in from all the different sources by the millions, and this woman supposedly was anti-capitalist. Well, how come all the top capitalists are funding it? It doesn't… Don't folk figure this out? Don't they get it? [Alan chuckles.] I tell ya. But the article goes on about how the BLM, and of course the two heads of that came out, and everybody knows it too, and spoke about it and it's up there on video, where they actually admit they're communists, well basically they're trained Marxists organizers, they're trained in communism and Marxism.

But yeah, the top capitalists, this is their revolution, the top capitalists' revolution to get into the next phase, you know, the Fourth Industrial Revolution as they want to call it, into the new system of the Global Reset and beyond.

Another article too…

Covid Vaccine UK signs deal with GSK (A: GlaxoSmithKline) for early access to 60million doses

thesun.co.uk / 29 July 2020

(A: Mmmm. There ya go.)

THE Government has secured early access to 60 million doses of a potential Covid-19 vaccine after signing a deal with pharmaceutical giants and Sanofi Pasteur.

If the vaccine candidate is proven effective in human studies, the UK could be able to vaccinate priority groups - such as frontline health and social care workers and the vulnerable

(A: Well, it might be safer not to be included in the vulnerable, right now, to be honest with you. [Alan chuckles.] I really mean that too. Yep.)

As I say, unless you, unless you hit the test subjects with the live virus maybe a week or two after they've had the vaccination, the actual wild virus, I don't care if they're showing antibodies from the virus, I want to see the tests. Like I said last week too, one of the top people who just left one of these big organizations said that he would not take it until he saw the total tests. When you hit them with the real wild virus, what are you, are you going to get a cytokine storm reaction, overreaction to it, which kills? That often happens, you see. So they give you the rah-rah stories of how wonderful these vaccines are, we got four or five, you know, antibodies in somebody's blood there, you know. Well, there's an awful lot for [Alan chuckles.] a few cc's. Hm. They praise it to the highest heavens, 'eh. I'll put that up too.

Also I want to put up, back to what I mentioned before, the inventor, this is about the inventor of the tests, the swab test and so on they're putting out there all the time. It says…

COVID19 PCR Tests are Scientifically Meaningless

off-guardian.org / 27 June 2020

Though the whole world relies on RT-PCR to "diagnose" Sars-Cov-2 infection, the science is clear: they are not fit for purpose

(A: Well, facts don't matter. They are meaningless as a diagnostic tool; they're meant to be used in the lab for other reasons.)

It is well known that religions are about faith and not about scientific facts.

(A: …talking about this total belief in testing that's getting pushed out there.)

And as Walter Lippmann, the two-time Pulitzer Prize winner and perhaps the most influential journalist of the 20th century said: “Where all think alike, no one thinks very much.”

(A: It’s true enough, you take the opinions that are dished out for you, and then you will think alike. So they go on to talk about Kary Mullis…)

So to start, it is very remarkable that Kary Mullis himself, the inventor of the Polymerase Chain Reaction (PCR) technology, did not think alike. His invention got him the Nobel prize in chemistry in 1993.

Unfortunately, Mullis passed away last year at the age of 74, but there is no doubt that the biochemist regarded the PCR as inappropriate to detect a viral infection.

(A: That’s the one they’re still using everywhere to diagnose folk. Oh, you’re positive, oh, you’re negative. So this is the inventor, Mullis. He says…)

The reason is that the intended use of the PCR was, and still is, to apply it as a manufacturing technique, being able to replicate DNA sequences millions and billions of times, and not as a diagnostic tool to detect viruses.

Facts don’t matter though. But the guy did have massive arguments about it before he died because they were using that before to try and detect viruses and so on. He says it's not a diagnostic tool.

And don’t forget, it was like coronaviruses, you know, a cold or flu, there's many other coronaviruses out there too. Again, most of them will go through you and you won't even know you had them as well. They've always been there. Don't think suddenly you got this big fearful thing you've got right now is brand, brand spanking new, you know. Or your body's reaction to it. Most folk don't know they've had it. Oh, 10,000 more folk have... or cases, they'll say, cases that have tested positive. No, no, you're not a case. You're not ill. It's all in the wording, ‘eh, and the way they push it across.

I also want to put up some stuff that's been pulled already. I'm going to try to put up one that was Dr. Stella Immanuel...

Dr Stella Immanuel V Dr. Fauci-TKO.

wattsupwiththat.com / 28 July 2020

(A: It was already pulled from YouTube when it was sent to me. I'll see if they've got it elsewhere. IberyTV [?] Geek For Truth it says here. And it's true, there's a lot of folk trying to put things right back up again, somewhere, before they're completely lost down the memory hole, George Orwell's memory hole. It's happening and it's at a tremendous rate now. Anything, anything that contradicts the official dogma, the holy dogma by the cabal at the top, they're hammering professionals that have more qualifications than often the ones at the top have got. I'll put the article up. It says…)

The five minutes clip of the angry Houston woman doctor who also is black, comes from Nigeria, whose speech will change America.

The most important nonpolitical speech ever made by a doctor, to save lives at the time of a pandemic. She and her staff used the hydroxychloroquine cocktail as a prophylactic in addition to treating 350 Covid sick high-risk patients who had diabetes, asthma, who are obese, who are elderly, the oldest patient was 92. Her patients all got better and her staff did not get Covid.

Didn't get sick, you know, didn't get sick. But it doesn't matter, you see, because you must take the vaccine. This is the whole point of it all. Fauci said at the beginning, before supposedly we knew anything about the vaccine, he says, oh, we're gonna keep you locked down right through into next year until we get a vaccine. He said that right off the bat, it was all prearranged. But you find that from the old World Health Organization agendas on tests, like having pandemic tests, which they ran, we're going through a test. Even Pompeo said that, he says, this is a live test. Well, why would he say this is a live test? Until you look at the 2005 report from the World Health Organization where they laid it all on the line, the format they would take. We're following it to the letter, including squashing all contradictory information regardless of how valid it was.

But everything is safe these days, you know, everything is very safe to take…

Four Ukrainian army servicemen die in COVID-19 vaccine trial

en.lug-info.com / 17 July 2020

(A: If that was in the West that would be, oh, some were mildly sick. But four died anyway. I don't know how many got sick. This is from the LPR People's Militia press service, the military press service.)

LUGANSK, July 17 (Lugansk Media Centre) – Four Ukrainian service members died after COVID-19 vaccine trials, said LPR People's Militia press service officer Alexander Mazeikin.

The total of 15 volunteers were exposed to the vaccine and medication produced by American virologists in the Kharkov region. Eight of the volunteers were soon transferred to intensive care units, (A: These are young guys, ‘eh.) three were put on ventilation.

"The IC unit could not treat them adequately as the components of the vaccine were not known to them. As a result, five patients, four of them Ukrainian army service members, died."

The World Health Organization announced COVID-19 a pandemic caused by novel coronavirus. The first cases were reported in China in late 2019.

The LPR went on high alert and introduced lockdown measures changing the mode of operation of government bodies, industrial companies, organizations and transport. A majority of restrictions have been eased by now as the epidemiological situation improved.

Well, hopefully they won’t test and kill more folk. It's interesting what's going on in the world, isn't it though, isn't it really. Getting back to South Africa as I mentioned already, some of these countries, and I have to be honest with you. A lot of the countries, they're the same across the world, it's just more money to get robbed from the public in the Western world before you get into a really dire straight. But in South Africa the general population don't have much to steal from anyway. The corruption is rampant throughout Africa and South Africa is no different. It's rampant all through the structure of society. When you've got nothing to start with, then you're going to be the first ones to suffer when something like a pandemic, or even the controls of the pandemic, where they can't get food. There's one article I've got here...

Gauteng’s Waterworks

(A: It’s a company, or, it’s not a company, it’s a community that’s set up, and it’s tin shacks really. It says…)

Gauteng’s Waterworks community reeling after resident starves to death

dailymaverick.co.za / 29 July 2020

(A: One of the residents there starved to death because he couldn’t get any food parcels. What you've got in some parts of Africa, a lot of the people will move to wherever money is coming in, or either work or money or aid or whatever, they'll move. Anybody would, if you had the same situation you'd do the same thing. So South Africa has its restrictions on the people coming in, because they can't cope with often feeding the bulk of the population themselves in certain areas or communities. So unless they've got their proper ID for South Africa for that region, that area, they won't get food parcel or aid. So they starve to death, you know. It says…)

According to residents, Thabiso Mokhele, who allegedly died from starvation, was not the first Lesotho national to meet a dire end in Waterworks near Lenasia during the lockdown. His death came as the community battles poverty, hunger and unemployment.

(A: It mentions some of the friends that he had in the area...)

Thabo Matalingoane, 41, a friend of deceased Thabiso Mokhele, said he was distraught. Matalingoane said he tried to share whatever he could with his friend (A: …foodwise.), but voiced his despair that his efforts had not been enough to keep his friend alive.

The community of Waterworks began with about 800 households. (A: I think they were dishing land out at one point and folk flooded in.) Over the past few years, the community has grown significantly as people took advantage of the EFF-sanctioned land grabs that have plagued the south of Johannesburg.

“Life is unbearable here. Things are out of control. (A: And this is how bad it is…) When the train services resume (A: …even the train services, you know, that’s it, when that stops, everything stops.) no train will be able to travel because the cables are stolen daily. (A: The cables.) Now they have started to dig even the underground cables because they have removed almost all the overhead cables,” Fisusiko Mavundla, a community leader said.

This reporter came face to face with the theft and vandalism as he left the area. Five men were waist-deep in holes dug along the train line leading to Westonaria. They were digging up rail cables. The men looked very relaxed despite their illegal actions. It was not clear whether they were also from the area or from neighbouring Lenasia and Soweto.

The overhead cables had been completely removed and replaced with illegally connected bare wires.

(A: That's what you get when you get this kind of situation, you know.)

The community uses paraffin and (A: …if they can find it…) wood for cooking. But many have nothing to [eat].

(A: Even for those who've got the IDs so they can qualify for food parcels said…)

Residents, even those who qualify for food parcels, said they don't know what a food parcel looked like.

(A: In other words, they're not getting them. The corruption is just horrific, I'm sure. I know that in different parts of Africa that's it's endemic, the corruption, unfortunately.)

Another foreigner, Puleng Punane, who does not qualify for food parcels because she is not documented, said the only food item she'd received was a 2kg bag of mealie meal, donated by an NGO from Lenasia.

"During my conversation with the councillor I found that he does not feel like he is obliged to help bring development in the area because his wish seemed to be to dump all our ills on the previous councillor," said community leader Mavundla.

He said: "I don't remember the councillor helping us with food parcels since these were announced by the government. We received vegetables from a Soweto NGO once and the Lenasia Indian community also once helped with items such as mealie meal."

Used to be at one point if you went to Africa, in different parts of Africa you would take things that, for checkpoints, you had to bribe your way through, to get through from one little country to the next one at times. You would take, you could buy a whole bunch of cheap watches and things that would maybe be sold in like street stalls and things like that, cheapos and things that they'd want for tokens, for bribes for the customs guys, so's you get into the country, or they don't let you in. That was just the natural way that it was years ago. I don't know if it's changed now. I don't think so. But that's just the way it is. You won't know what corruption is until you live in a country... In parts of Mexico it's the same kind of thing where the police will stop you, and it's not that you've done anything wrong, they just wait for you to give them a little, a couple of bucks and continue on your way, that's it. It's like an agreement that everybody understands, and that's how you get through.

In the West, we're, hhhch, we've had a different culture, and evolution of culture, so people just don't quite grasp how bad it is in a lot of other countries. But it'll come here if you have enough poverty, and you'll see the crime escalate and so on. One of the articles I was reading from Russia to do with the folk getting so ticked off with all the aid that was promised to Russians, but they've been closed down by Putin. The families and all that were complaining. But there's guys in the article who literally say that they'll just have to steal for food, wouldn't you, he says.

You're going to get faced with these things in the West too as this continues. Because you go through the chaos, order out of chaos. You must create the massive chaos so the public will think it's all real, and the conditions imposed upon them with all of what they're told they must follow to survive will go through. It's order out of chaos. Always the same technique that used. The sky is falling, 'eh?

Now, I want to mention again, go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Buy books or discs that are listed there for sale. Or donate to me. Because I certainly do need it, I've got a whole bunch of sites to keep up. It cost me money too. And I've got satellite Internet to pay for, which is a ridiculous price for what I get, including the slow speed as well. Things like that, so yeah, I've got payments and high telephone bills and things like that. So it helps me to go along here if you can send bucks my way.

It's really important because the folk who really understand what's happening are dying off. Other ones have come up replacing them, some really don't know the whole score. Some are in it for their own reasons. It's a shame too. Because really it should be a cause. This was a cause, you see, what I'm doing, it's a real, real cause. It's not because I'm getting paid to tell you who to vote for. I don't believe in the political systems, it's totally corrupt too. Everyone in America knows damn well that in the last election, and I said at the time, I says, the Americans don't have anybody to vote for in either party, because you've got one system of the same folk, and the neocons, etc., running the whole show.

So what I came out with was a cause. Because long before that I realized it was time the public knew that big international organizations are running the world. And folk didn't know it. The old Patriot Movement didn't talk so much about it. They were concentrating mainly on what was happening with bill this and bill that within the US itself. It was time to fill in all the blanks for them and that's what I did. But it's a cause. If I was to promote a party, I would guarantee you I be getting paid for it. Because they are, the ones that are promoting that are getting paid for it, folks.

The same characters who have run the last few different houses of government, put it that way, want the wars, and you're not supposed to notice them very often, you know. But it's the same crooks, of course it is, the same agenda, and, I wouldn't lie to the people.

We're living through an old plan. Anybody who's anybody is bought and paid for before you even hear their names generally in politics. As I say, Quigley said it's in the 1960s for goodness' sake, that every president for the last 60 years I think he said, or 80 years, has been a member of OUR organization, a very secretive organization. That's in his own book, check it out for yourself. So that's the way it's been, you see. It doesn't matter what party they are. The top members are all members of their organization. It's the dialectic. You get one group running both sides of everything. It's rather evident. And they all continue the same agendas, it doesn't matter when they change houses. One group was out, and another group comes in, it doesn't matter, they still sign the same agreements of integration with the World Health Organization, the United Nations, and NAFTA, and the USMCA which is the same thing as NAFTA.

Don't forget that the whole idea of that NAFTA deal was to unify the whole of the Americas eventually under one system. It hasn't changed. So you get literally ministers, or politicians, appointed as chiefs over food, for the WEF for the world, any kind of industry that's left for the whole world, you know. All appointees of course, new positions. Right down to food distributors in your areas, as they keep this thing going. Because they don't plan to ever really, really unleash the system back into any semblance of normal.

Again, Fauci said at the beginning, before they supposedly had the data on this Covid. He said, life would never be the same again. Oh no, it's never going to be the same again, he said. How would he know that? Well, he's part of the whole agenda, folks. [Alan chuckles.] That part he does know, he knows what the agenda is and his role in it is too. Of course it is.

So yeah, buy the books and discs @cuttingthroughthematrix.com, or donate to me. Because the donations are really, really necessary and welcome as we go through some of the worst parts of this war.

This is a war. It's a total outright war on the public. And massive psychological war, massive threats and coercion coming out now, and incredible censorship. Incredible. In so-called democratic societies. Woah, ho, ho, ho, I think we can toss that whole farce out the window too, of democracy, can't we. You're being told plainly, you're essential or you're nonessential. The hospitals have already planned through their different agreements from bioethics committees, like the Rockefellers, of who to treat and who not to treat depending on your value or necessity to society. I was giving these talks long before Covid came along, this would happen, in this way. And folk thought you were nuts then, some of them, others a bit wiser who knew you weren't.

So yep, sent a few bucks my way @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. But I'm not finished just yet for tonight. I remember giving talks years ago on how authorities, and you're seeing it now, but this goes back to the old Soviet system in Russia. Where they didn't need much of an excuse to arrest you anyway in Russia, under the communist regime, or in eastern Germany either. Or the Soviet bloc countries. But if you spoke out against injustices, you could, especially if you complain about the system, they could arrest you as insane. Not under criminal charge, you see, this is the beauty of again the same characters that run legal systems that figure all this out, the same guys, the real psychopaths, ‘eh. Different kinds of lawyers, well we'll just reword this to get what we want.

So, nuisances in the Soviet system, you couldn't arrest them for just being a nuisance, right. So you'd just say they were insane. Because they had to be insane because they were complaining about the most perfect system the world had ever seen, which was communism, you see, world socialism. So that would you get locked up, no trial, anything, that's the beauty of it. They did the same thing with the Unabomber, remember? They avoided a trial by declaring him insane. Because they didn't want the public to find out what he was on about. [Alan laughing.] It's just astonishing. That's a big story in itself.

So here we have, and in the West, the same techniques, you see, if you're a nuisance.

German Lawyer Sent to Psychiatric Ward for Organizing Protest Against COVID-19 Lockdown

globalresearch.ca / 2 May 2020

(A: So resistance to what is now mass house arrest, right, lockdown, is now classified as mental illness. Well, here you go. I've said it already, you're using the same communist tactics. Because what works is what is implemented for efficiency's sake by the elites. They don't care what it's called or who came out with it first. So…)

In the Soviet Union, activists were sent to state psychiatric wards. According to the state, any and all opposition to government policy was considered a form of mental illness.

Stephanie Buck writes about the treatment of the "social parasite" Joseph Brodsky.

In 1963, Russian poet Joseph Brodsky was seized and sent to a mental institution… Hospital workers pumped him with tranquilizers and repeatedly woke him during the night. He was given cold baths and wrapped in wet canvas that shrank and cut his skin while drying.

It is not likely German lawyer Beate Bahner will be tortured like Brodsky. However, that does not make her arrest and forced confinement in a mental institution any less egregious.

"Bahner had become known in the past few days with a call for nationwide demonstrations and an urgent application for the abolition of all corona protective measures," reports Welt. "The [medical specialist] lawyer from Heidelberg considers the corona rules to be excessive and advocates for them to be abolished."

(A: There ya go.)

In the actual Soviet system, as I said, they bring you in, you see, it's like your sensitivity trainers, it's the same kind of thing. Some of the advocates for the Antifa groups too talked about this, and some of the left-wing groups behind the scenes that were caught talking about the communist overthrow of the system in the last election, before the last election, they actually, one of them actually said that, that they'd have to send folk off for reeducation. It's like sensitivity training. Sensitivity training as part of this, I hope you understand this. It sounds more benign, sensitivity training, but really it leads to the whole system. And the guy, it was actually videotaped, remember, when Trump was running the last time. It said that, what was it? He says, what happens if you can change their opinions and their ways? He said, well you have to literally eliminate them. That never changes, folks.

So they start off by bringing you in for little talks, you see. It's like that cop in Britain who, the police came to the door, he was an ex cop himself, I think. The cop came to his door, or phoned him and said we're not, we don't really like your thinking. That's it, they said to him, we don't like your thinking. Because he had certain opinions about certain things. It wasn't a crime to have certain thinking but they really tried to get him to lose his job and everything, I believe. It isn't just complaining to you, they can cut you off from your work or whatever by putting out false rumors or whatever it takes to do it. This is all Soviet techniques, you understand. This is totalitarian system techniques. And it’s in the West here.

So yeah, if they can persuade you, like, let's have a little talk, try to see it our way, won't you just go along with this and stop being a nuisance to society and see it our way? Well, if you can’t see their way, what are they going to do with you? I hope you understand you're in, you're under tyranny RIGHT NOW. In the Soviet system I think they called it 'inflexibility of opinion'. That was the charge. That was called, that was a mental illness supposedly, 'inflexibility of opinion'. Well, it's here, folks. Oh, ho, yeah, and it's just getting warmed up.

And also…

Coronavirus: Thousands protest in Germany against restrictions

bbc.com / 1 Aug 2020

Thousands of people in the German capital Berlin have taken part in a protest against the country's coronavirus restrictions.

So I hope there's more folks backing up this woman and get her out of the looney bin, you know.

Coronavirus: Russia plans mass vaccination campaign in October

When it hit me, I thought, you know, Russia, I was thinking that too that, the country where they literally went through all that before with the big, big revolution, and all the socialist anarchist groups, there was a couple of dozen of them all vying to be leaders at one point until literally the Bolsheviks used them all to get the revolution going. Once they went to sleep one night they literally, in A night, just jumped over you might say and took it over for themselves. That's how it's always planned. You know, they always use the masses first. Then I thought, that was in October, you see, 1917. That's the big month for revolution, ‘eh, new revolution, Red October, October surprise, October, October. So it's... Russia plans mass vaccination campaign in October.

I hope they don't have terrible reactions to it. I really, especially come November when regular flus and that. Because if they get cytokine storms because they've had a coronavirus type vaccination, then massive catastrophe, you know. N-n-n. We just don't know. This could happen everywhere if you don't do all the testing first, like long-term tests. You don't just, oh, it will take a month. No, no, no. This has never been done. Especially when you're getting into the RNA type, the modifiers, ‘eh.

Coronavirus: Russia plans mass vaccination campaign in October

bbc.com / 1 Aug 2020

However, some experts are concerned at Russia's fast-track approach.

On Friday, the leading infectious disease expert in the US, Dr Anthony Fauci (A: [Alan chuckles.] Foxy Fauci.) Said he hoped that Russia - and China - were "actually testing the vaccine" before administering them to anyone.

(A: Well, you don’t test just for a few months, it takes years, folks. So Fauci said in this article here about Russia…)

Dr Fauci has said that the US should have a "safe and effective" vaccine by the end of this year.

[Alan chuckles.] So yep, there ya go. Another article too says…

Pompeo: I Lied About Soleimani 'Imminent Attacks'

ronpaulinstitute.org / 10 Jan 2020

Trump's neoconservative Secretary of State, Mike Pompeo, is a man unafraid to admit to being a liar. In fact he seems to revel in his ability to lie to the American people.

Remember just a week ago when Pompeo told us that the US absolutely HAD to send in a drone to assassinate Iran's top general, Qassim Soleimani, while he was in Iraq on a peace mission because he was planning "imminent attacks" on US personnel and interests in the Middle East.

These claims were crafted to blunt any criticism of the blatantly illegal act of killing a top military officer of a country with which you are not at war in a third country (which forbade the attack on its soil) with which you are allied. Americans raising concerns about the murder of Soleimani were to be made to look unpatriotic if they objected: (A: They were shouted down saying...) "you mean you WANT Americans die??"

That's how propaganda works.

Then when the smoke clears, you laugh it all off and admit it was all a lie. As Pompeo did last night.

That's what I've said before, it's the same with the invasion of Iraq. Afterwards during the inquiry into it, I don't know if it's still up there anywhere on YouTube or anywhere, but Bush Junior was televised apparently at the time. He did say that, oh I never said that Saddam Hussein had anything to do with 9/11, he was just a bad man and the world is better off without him. So that was the excuse for the massive invasion of Iraq. Yep. But the media for a whole yeear had been harping on, they changed the gun sites of propaganda from Afghanistan, very cleverly, onto Iraq and try to make them think, through innuendos, that somehow Saddam Hussein had caused the attack. It was just amazing to watch it all happen. At least some other newspapers at the time did note that and admit that they were obviously manipulating the data to get the public ready for an invasion on Iraq. That's what they did. But that's what Bush said afterwards, well, I never said that, he says, you know, I just thought he was a bad man.

I remember too the whole neocon idea strategy was first strike on everything. They passed a law in the States, which they adopted from Israel in fact because Israel under their laws if they thought you could be a problem or you could pose a threat/strike down the road, they would strike first instead to eliminate that possibility. Then we went into all the projections of the intelligence agencies that worked with Bush Junior at the time, and they said, we could use it in America too. And they did pass some kind of law or something to give themselves the right to hit the people that they thought could be possible, possible agitators or problems down the road, rather than wait for it happening, get rid of them first, you see. That was in the papers at the time. I could look back and find it all if I wanted to, I'm sure.

But it was the neocons, and the neocons are still... Pompeo is a neocon. And here, this article here is talking about he revels in his ability to lie and actually laughs about it after the fact. After the fact they all do that. From Bush, ah, I never said Saddam Hussein was behind it, ha, ha, ha. Which he did at the time, afterwards, after Afghanistan he did certainly say that, or give innuendos. Also, Pompeo, yeah, he was, oh yeah, there was going to be in imminent attack by this general. No, there wasn't. It doesn't matter. You see, truth doesn't matter once they've done the dirty deed. It doesn't matter. The public don't care, it seems, that they were lied to. If they really cared even when they were lied to, I don't know. It's quite something.

Also, this is an interesting article. You see some of the people that were at these riots, and it says…

Two Women Arrested for Assaulting a Wisconsin State Senator amid Protests

breitbart.com / 28 July 2020

Two women — including a school social worker (A: …right.) — were arrested Monday by police for assaulting a Wisconsin state senator after he attempted to take photos of protesters tearing down statues, according to reports.

(A: Now, he was a Democrat senator, right. He was on their side. But they didn’t know it, I suppose. I guess he was a white guy with a suit on. These two women, and they show the photographs of them, were part of a group that attacked him when they saw him taking photographs.)

The two women are Samantha Hamer, 26, a social worker for the Mount Horeb school district, and Kerida O’Reilly, 33, Channel 3000 reported.

The assault took place on June 24, but both women turned themselves in on Monday. (A: Because they were on camera, right.) Hamer is on administrative leave, according to a school superintendent.

During the assault, the mob rushed the state senator, Democrat Sen. Tim Carpenter, after he was allegedly trying to take photos as they toppled two statues. He said he fell to the ground (A: …because they jumped him, right.) and was repeatedly punched and kicked in the head, and later required surgery.

(A: These are females that are attacking him. Well, why? Because he's a white guy? Everybody's been so enraged, they've been, the hate has been built up to be beyond toxic levels. I don't think you can help these folk, you know. They see a guy, they didn't even bother finding out who he is, and just go for him. And he's getting kicked in the head until he's unconscious and the whole thing, you know, and he had to get surgery.)

Journalist from local channel WKOW tweeted that Carpenter had told him he was assaulted, then collapsed minutes later (A: …after he got beaten up…) as he walked towards the state Capitol building.

"We called paramedics. An ambulance is here now," he tweeted.

Hamer and O'Reilly are expected to make their initial appearances in Dane County Circuit Court on Wednesday. They are facing charges of substantial battery as a party to a crime and robbery (A: …as well.) with use of force as a party to a crime.

(A: I don't know if they stole a camera or what they did, you know. That's what you get to deal with these days. Because there's a lot of fostered and indoctrinated insanity in some people now, I hope you understand that. Very dangerous times.)

…Carpenter, as he "tried to explain" that he was an ally to the demonstrators, according to the New York Post.

(A: He said he was on their side, you see. And I guess they knew their photograph was taken so they had to turn themselves in, because the charges go up higher if you don't and they come for you.)

I'll also put up the article by Peter Hitchens. It says…

PETER HITCHENS: The Government's National Panic Service is being used to keep us in a condition of perpetual alarm about coronavirus hitchensblog.mailonsunday.co.uk / 2 Aug 2020

(A: He talks about the absurd demands that are getting placed on people now.)

A huge number of those now being absurdly listed as ‘infected’ with this bogeyman disease are perfectly healthy.

(A: He also talks about being forced to use, he calls it, a nappy now. A nappy in Britain is a diaper, the facemask is a nappy, you see, and how you're forced to use this nappy, etc. etc. And how in certain circumstances it's dangerous. Nevermind the fact it interferes with your breathing for goodness’ sake, you know. If nature wanted you to breathe through a special filter you would have been born with it. The fact that you're getting forced to wear these masks, ah, um, forget it. Facts don't matter, you know, facts don't matter.)

(A: It's a huge agenda of conformity. And also to turn other folk on the ones who won't comply. That's what they're trying to do, calling you psychopaths now, ‘eh, oh my goodness, you're a psychopath, oooo, you won't comply, ‘eh, hmmmmmmm.)

(A: It's a good article. He mentions how ridiculous it is and how they even, and he says, I've been accused he says for daring to stay calm about certain nonsense and so on…)

For daring to stay calm, I am then accused of being a collaborator with the wicked Nazi virus.

(A: And it’s true, they use Nazi for everything, don’t they?)

The played-out, once-independent magazine Private Eye, now a boring mouthpiece of wokeness, actually did this to me last week.

The truth is that the number of deaths from Covid, even the fiddled and inflated version which the Government clings to, is falling closer and closer to zero.

So, even more significantly, are hospital admissions, which would be rising steeply if these ‘infection’ figures actually represented large numbers of seriously ill people.

These things are true both of Britain and of Spain, whose supposed spike in Covid was used to destroy the holiday plans of more than a million people last week…

(A: They're destroying the economy. This is chaos, planned chaos to bring in a whole new system. N-n-n. I tell ya.)

According to the Coronavirus Worldometer, the daily Covid deaths in Spain for the past few weeks have rarely risen above five a day, and have often been fewer than that.

(A: Now remember too, if you die, there are folk dying every day of everything, always have done through history. Every day folk die. But they're putting them all down as Covid today, 'eh, even if they suspect it might have been, even if you test negative etc. etc., yada, yada, ya. I'll put this article up. He did make a statement in a different article; I don't think it was in the same article here. Oh, he did, it's further down. It says…)

I'll happily give blood, but not in a muzzle.

Last Monday I tried to give a pint of blood, something I do reasonably regularly – though not as often as I should. I was prevented from even entering the Donor Centre by a senior functionary of the English Blood Service, because I declined to wear a muzzle.

Oh, how selfish and pompous of me, to deprive someone in need of my blood, because I wouldn't don a strip of cloth for a few minutes! Well, I don't agree. And if you do you can easily nip along to your nearest blood bank and replace the pint I didn't give with one of your own.

In other words, he won't give in. And that's how, he's trying to tell you, if you really are a self-motivated and independent person using your own brains and everything, in all of this incredible chaos, then he says, you can't just buckle in and conform to what they're demanding you do even though it's all ridiculous nonsense. And he also gives a good reason for it too. He says, you know, some of the other blood banks that are taking blood and so on ask you to take the masks off in some other places. He says, they tell you to remove the mask because they can't tell if you're going to faint, or if you have fainted. [Alan laughing.] That's common sense, isn't it. [Alan laughing.]

What's the first thing you see in the old, old movies when the women were fainting, old black and white movies, you know? Oh, quick, quick, give her air, giver air, you know. But here they want you to wear a facemask and suffocate to death. Yep. Because it's nothing to do with what they're telling you. It's total conformity into ABSURDITY.

Because without the masks, folk go back to normal. They see, they get closer to each other. They already knew this would happen and it did happen for about a month in the summer. Folks started to just go back, and they wouldn't care so much about distancing and all that. Which means they'll forget about the nonsense to do with the vaccine coming. They want you to be concentrated with nothing else except the vaccine. The only way it will remind you is, oh, you know, everybody around you could be infected, so wear masks. It's all psychology. That's what it is, folks.

Well, I hate to prattle on, and I hope, I really… I really am getting a lot of good information actually from folk who are emailing me from across the planet about what they're seeing and what they're experiencing. And how even small shopkeepers having to close down, you know, they're so terrified of being killed. I'm talking about little, very little stores, you know, small stores, because of what's going on, all the chaos that's going on right now. The elite are using all these agencies around them of factions of angry youth you might say who are already fanaticized by the schooling system and indoctrination system.

Oh, by the way, just before I go, it ties in with what I'm just saying right now. The European group talk, and I'll put up the video link to it, where you hear all the specialists talking about how they're going to really mandate. And again, the guy comes in from Facebook to help censor people, yeah, we'll be censoring folk who put out disinformation. And then Mozilla, I don't know if, I hope they don't get public funding [Alan chuckles.] because they're supposed to be a self thing. Mozilla also has a representative there too, so they'll steer them off into the wrong directions, and they'll decide what you're going to look for instead of what you think you were going to look for, they'll decide for you.

NewsBreak 81: CONFIRMED: COVID-19 Plandemic a Known, Live “Training and Simulation Exercise” under WHO - youtube.com / 6 July 2020

It's just disgusting what you're seeing happening. But that's what you're left with. Everything is so manipulated. I said years ago, eventually they'll do away with the radio. And they did, they brought the Internet in. I says, you know, you'll regret it. They used to have worldwide shortwave radio, and everybody went digital, you see, oh it's much easier. A lot of folk had their small, small printing machines and they could print up like newspapers and stuff. I says, hold onto them, eventually you'll have so much censorship... This is the 90s, I says, here’s how they're going to unroll it, and that's exactly what they've done. I says, and this is in the 90s, I says, eventually you'll need all this stuff again to be able to pass messages or just basic information to each other on any scale at all. And here we are, ‘eh. M-hm. Quite something. Sad times isn't it.

So anyway, remember folks, go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com, send a few bucks my way. Hopefully you will and I'll keep at it as long as I can breathe, ‘eh. We'll see what happens there. So thanks for the folk, as I say, they keep sending emails in to let me know what you're seeing personally in different countries. Because it does get, it shows you the scope of this and how everything is lockstep together, you know. Occasional little tweaks for different cultures, that was all planned that way, but the same goals.

For myself Alan Watt from Ontario, Canada, it's good night and may your God or gods go with you.

Topics of show covered in following links:

Dr. Fauci: Wear goggles or eye shields to prevent spread of COVID-19; flu vaccine a must abcnew.go.com / 29 July 2020

COVID-19 patients will be ‘sent home to die’ if deemed too sick, Texas county says

star-telegram.com / 23 July 2020

Texas hospital forced to set up 'death panel' as Covid-19 cases surge

theguardian.com / 26 July 2020

EXPOSED: World Bank Coronavirus Aid Comes With Conditions For Imposing Extreme Lockdown, Reveals Belarus President

greatgameindia.com / 27 July 2020

Belarus president unwilling to accept additional terms to get foreign loans

eng.belta.by / 19 June 2020

Coronavirus deaths 'may be less than half official toll - as docs wrongly mark certificates', says ex-WHO chief

thesun.co.uk / 11 June 2020

'America's Frontline Doctors' may be real doctors, but experts say they don't know what they're talking about

usatoday.com / 30 July 2020

Frontline Doctors Storm D.C. - "Thousands Of Doctors" Are Being Silenced

bitchute.com / 27 July 2020

The New Viral Video of Doctors Talking About Coronavirus that Facebook, YouTube, and Twitter Have Removed

ronpaulinstitute.org / 28 July 2020

Narcissists and Psychopaths Are More Likely to Refuse to Wear Masks, Says New Research

newsweek.com / 22 July 2020

'Disorderly Brexit' and coronavirus threaten UK's food security, MPs claim

lbcnews.co.uk / 30 July 2020

Vaccine Execs Rake In $1 Billion In Stock Sales As Positive Headlines Boost Shares

zerohedge.com / 27 July 2020

Abortion figures are a serious cause for concern - despite what BPAS says

christian.org.uk / 24 July 2020

Catholic bishops fear Scotland's hate crime law could criminalize Bible and Catechism

catholicnewsagency.com / 29 July 2020

These four coronavirus vaccines are the closest to becoming reality

wired.co.uk / 26 July 2020

Al Gore, UN Secretary-General, others now demanding 'Great Reset' of global capitalism

foxbusiness.com / 25 June 2020

Chinese Melamine and American Vioxx: A Comparison

unz.com / 17 April 2012

Antifa militant arrested for stabbing black Trump supporter in Portland

thepostmillennial.com / 25 July 2020

Convicted Terrorist Funding Marxist BLM

americanfreepress.net / 27 July 2020

Your DNA is not your destiny

bbc.com / 27 July 2020

Covid Vaccine UK signs deal with GSK for early access to 60million doses

thesun.co.uk / 29 July 2020

COVID19 PCR Tests are Scientifically Meaningless

off-guardian.org / 27 June 2020

Dr Stella Immanuel V Dr. Fauci-TKO.

wattsupwiththat.com / 28 July 2020

Four Ukrainian army servicemen die in COVID-19 vaccine trial

en.lug-info.com / 17 July 2020

Gauteng’s Waterworks community reeling after resident starves to death

dailymaverick.co.za / 29 July 2020

German Lawyer Sent to Psychiatric Ward for Organizing Protest Against COVID-19 Lockdown

globalresearch.ca / 2 May 2020

Coronavirus: Thousands protest in Germany against restrictions

bbc.com / 1 Aug 2020

Coronavirus: Russia plans mass vaccination campaign in October

bbc.com / 1 Aug 2020

Pompeo: I Lied About Soleimani 'Imminent Attacks'

ronpaulinstitute.org / 10 Jan 2020

Two Women Arrested for Assaulting a Wisconsin State Senator amid Protests

breitbart.com / 28 July 2020

PETER HITCHENS: The Government’s National Panic Service is being used to keep us in a condition of perpetual alarm about coronavirus

hitchensblog.mailonsunday.co.uk / 2 Aug 2020

In vaccines we trust: stepping up action to increase vaccine confidence

youtube.com / 12 Sept 2019

NewsBreak 81: CONFIRMED: COVID-19 Plandemic a Known, Live “Training and Simulation Exercise” under WHO youtube.com / 6 July 2020

Aug. 9, 2020 (#1787)

"Cutting Through the Matrix" with Alan Watt

Hi folks, I'm Alan Watt and this is Cutting Through The Matrix on August 9, 2020. I hope you're all doing, hhhch, I can't say okay... well, as best as you can through all the nonsense we're going through, and the planned chaos. Everything is tying into everything else for those who haven't quite figured it out yet. It's not separate things that are happening on a big scale just by chance.

Not when you have the richest people on the planet and all the corporations that run our lives financing what seems to be the, which it doesn't even seem to be, they announce it to be, a communist revolution inside America and across the world. It's no mystery at all as to who funds them, they published it of course and I've mentioned that last week and the week before as well, the big, big corporations that are so...

You really have to just scratch your head and say, this is a Bolshevik revolution, for those who don't know what really is going on. The Bolsheviks really used all the other existing social organizations for socialism, there were different shades of them back then in the old days in Russia. They use them all. The Bolsheviks always use the majority, and they agitate to make sure the majority do all their fighting for them, then they jump in and take it over towards the end. That's the strategy of it.

It's well documented before, about the funding for the old Bolshevik revolution. You had Trotsky caught at Nova Scotia on his way over to Germany then to Russia, with suitcases full of cash, literally, American dollars, he was caught by customs at Nova Scotia Harbor. They put him in the clanger for a little while, you know in prison, in jail awaiting information from the States as to what they were going to do with this guy with all this cash, etc. heading off...

This is in wartime. Don't forget that Russia at that time was actually fighting against Germany, hm. These are all important little facts. So the Bolsheviks of course were, had help from Western allies as well. We know this. But they had it too from the big top bankers in America, Baruch and his guys helped to fund the Bolshevik revolution. But anyway it came out eventually. As I say, it's well documented and it's in the archives of Canada what happened there with Trotsky. Apparently, a passport, American passport was rushed up to Canada by train, for Trotsky, by insiders, and it was literally advocated that he be let go by President Wilson of the US at the time. So he went off on his merry way and of course we know what happens. It wasn't just to do with the money, they had been preparing it for years this whole revolution and who was going to take it over, etc. Geopolitics.

So as I say, you go through the same kind of thing here. Now instead of just having, just having the bankers, you have that too... Well you see, the bankers who put money towards the communist groups, the ones who openly said that they are Marxist agitators for revolution. Now, you don't have Marxist revolutionaries that want a little bit of Marxism. For those that think, well they don't want to go all the way. No. It's a doctrine that does go all the way, that's the whole point of it, is to completely overthrow the current system and put themselves in charge. Then to eradicate stacks of people, maybe into the millions, in order for themselves to survive. Because they know that the public won't be happy, especially those who can communicate and who know what's going on, so they must be eliminated altogether. Because they might contaminate the population with their ideas of, do you know that you're getting used and you're being conned, you know, that's just, you can't have that going on, so you've got to get rid of these people. And that's what they do.

So what you're seeing in the States right now is the biggest example of it really... It's happening across the world in different stages… And it's also advocated by the United Nations departments as well... So you know, there's no mystery to me about this, I've talked about communism running the United Nations for years and years and years. Communism is run by an elite of the world, and it's the same elite runs both sides of everything pretty well. This is the dialectical technique that they use.

You've got to remember too, UNESCO was helped set up by Julian Huxley, a member of the British aristocracy, and a descendent too who's also related to Darwin, they're all related to Darwin and eugenics, etc. So yeah, at the top of the tree you have this organization setting up all different factions for different sides and funding them of course to the hilt. Because as I say, if you, and they want to, they'll rule the world, that's the whole point is ruling the world and being Gods, you know, taking their place as the gods running the earth.

These are the major brands donating to the Black Lives Matter movement - cnet.com / 16 June 2020

Apple, Google, Amazon, Walmart back BLM cause with multi-million dollar donations - lifesitenews.com / 22 July 2020

I think Bill Gates is a good example. [Alan chuckles.] But I don't think, I know of anybody that's praised him, not yet anyway. This is the farce they give you, characters like that. But these are front people too. The ones at the top, I've said before, you generally never see or even get a whiff of. Because they're the real bosses. They're not workers.

Again, I've mentioned before how the Royal Society was set up and why it was set up. It was an occultic organization initially, you had to be a member, and a Freemason to join eventually. But when they set it up, the first so-called, it was an experiment, they put in their garden behind their building, it was a glass beehive to really symbolize the perfect management of the perfect world with its ordered society from the top right down to the bottom and the drones. Again, so eugenics, a smattering of eugenics there too. And also to guide society, people don't realize it was meant to guide society by bringing in members of different, and even creating members of different sciences and orders. And publicizing, again, making them celebrities.

Today we call it making them superstars, like it was mentioned before in the investigations into the Unabomber too. Some of the people that he was after, some of his targets were professors in universities that also ran, and one of them mentioned it too, that he ran an organization like a public relations campaign organization that created stars for scientists. So they made scientists into stars knowing the people would follow them.

Everything out there is really fake. I mean, there's very little out there that really is exactly what it says it is. It doesn't mean that all the information that these organizations they put out are completely untrue. But if you've been deceived at all, then you can take the whole lot with a pinch of salt, obviously. How much deception do you want to swallow?

Again, so they make scientists into stars. They did it with Einstein, who was a nobody really until he was picked up, and to be this… the voice of modern society for the 20th century. He was put forward as a front man really to advocate certain, and most of his talks were about world government and even world Zionism and its place in it all. Politics. He seldom ever gave a talk on science, and when he did it was from other scientists' papers that he read all the time. Nevertheless, he became, he's still pushed today as some genius. That's what they give you.

So back to the Royal Society, that was their goal, you see. So even in the early days they were promoting the well-known names you know today that helped to guide the world in evolution, and evolution of humanity, leading to eugenics, you see, and the purpose of eugenics. Very important that.

We know too that they brought in other members that ran the Royal Mint in Britain. Very important to get the Royal Mint in there. Because it's a science, counting money in a magical formula is definitely a science. And it's very secretive. It must take years to study because you and I can be given the same kind of figures, in debt, you know, and monies coming in, things like that, and we can work it out and would never get the same numbers as the specialists get. It's impossible. So yeah, they're geniuses in that, obviously, because we can't figure it out.

They brought everybody on board too. I think Newton was a member of them too. Everybody who was anybody was a member. They even brought Marx at one point too, Karl Marx. Why would they bring Karl Marx in? Well, you see, social domination requires social studies, and social studies, if you want to alter society, need doctrines. So you bring in these doctrines to advocate change and you guide the change into what you want it to be.

I used to be puzzled about that too. Why would Britain, during the 19th century, had really amazing agitations which were going on at the time. And Britain was very important in causing a lot of these dissatisfactions across the world. Because they sent agitators, who were trained specialists in agitation into different countries to take them down. And a lot of the Catholic countries too they wanted to take down. They've been doing that since of course the days of Francis Drake and Walter Riley who, they plundered the Spanish galleons. They really had it in for, of course, any Catholic countries because they couldn't get a firm grip on their banking system. They couldn't steal it in other words. So you've got to get rid of the religion to make that happen.

So you had Newton and a whole bunch different people on board with them to shape society and guide society by putting out the versions of science which would influence our behavior and our beliefs, you see. It hasn't changed to this day.

It's interesting too when you look at a lot of the members in fact, not just Charles Darwin. And Darwin himself of course was, they actually backed Darwin on his voyage across parts of the world to do with evolution. So they backed him. It's been admitted too since by them that they tried to stifle the reports that were coming in from another guy who did the real work that Darwin was stealing from. [Alan chuckles.] That was a guy called Wallace, I think he was a Scotsman too. He was living the life in these countries and doing all the writing and sending it back to Charles. Not to publish under Darwin's name but just to have as references and so on. And Darwin published it. It was a big scandal eventually, but it was hushed up by those in-the-know in the Royal Society.

Because you see, they had to go through, along this route to evolution, that man is really descended from apes, etc. If they could convince the public of that, then they could then convince you that that would explain and validate the necessity of having the class system. The superior types, middle, and then inferior types, or the workers. Very much along the lines of Brave New World where they would perfect that system by breeding the different strata of workers. Again, very Marxist too, where you had the distribution of labor, you know, they would work out who would do what kind of tasks, you see. Then, everyone according to his means, or his needs.

Then they would reward those at the top much better in a communist system, naturally. Because it was a class system, and it believes that science rules. So the brightest folk should rule the rest, rule the rest, and there should be no, no such thing as debating that, just get on with it and do what you're told and obey the experts and scientists. That's really what Marxism brought you in the Soviet system.

Therefore science is always used by the far left, and the right too of course, when they're playing the game to manage the public, to make the public believe that experts should be obeyed basically, no dispute. And under the guise that they present you with true facts, you see. And there's nothing, as we can see today, further from the truth in most things at all. Everything is utterly politicized, and corruption is rampant through the scientific communities. As it is with pretty well everything else in this day and age.

But yeah, getting back to the idea of communism. I used to wonder why on earth would Britain, a country that had sent stacks of different infiltrators across Europe into Holland and places to overthrow governments there, and religions as well, in order to rule these different countries, you know. And this is under really the City of London. The average person in England probably wouldn't have a clue either what was going on anymore than they did in Scotland or anywhere else. But the City of London is where they had this high education to train agitators, and true spies, etc., those who deal with what they call the black arts of manipulation and assassinations and coercion's and so on, overthrowing nations. Britain definitely, or London definitely was the capital for a long, long time, still is to an extent too.

It doesn't matter about the economy being shattered across the rest of the country, long before Covid came along. But the City of London is really a nation unto itself in so many different ways. But London, remember, put up Karl Marx. Why would you put up an agitator? Who was really, he ran out of Germany, a lot of them run out of Germany and start up in Britain. So why would a monarchy and a monarchical government, or democracy as they called Britain, with all of its... You just don't argue with that kind of government, you see, they're very good at what they do in Britain. They're very calm. They might give you rope for a while, but they'll come after you eventually and get you and you won't even see it coming. They have no rush, you see. They do things very efficiently when it comes to removing problems. Of all kinds.

Well, they brought in Karl Marx knowing exactly what he was. Who, was putting out a doctrine to overthrow all established governments, including the monarchy, etc. But Britain puts him up and allows him to stay there? And sure enough, you know, they didn't really have a terrible revolution in Britain, because of Karl Marx, in that kind of fashion, at the time. They had one, the docklands I think it was, near the docklands around the Thames at one point in the early 20th century. But that was quickly sort of, that was just about a few dozen of them tried that, to hold themselves up in some of the buildings there, and they were quickly outed by just police in fact with shotguns, I think. Regardless, they didn't have the massive revolutionary movement going on inside Britain itself. Not openly. They gave you a tamer version. And there's no such thing as I've said before, of a tamer Marxism. It's either complete or not at all. But they gave you a Fabian style, a slow takeover.

Now, for those who think that, again, this incredible establishment inside the City of London, where the whole, I mean an empire was run from there. They had intelligence agencies running all of these countries across the world, and all of their economic systems, and trade, commerce and banking and all the rest of it, military, all, nothing was missed back then. Nothing at all was missed. Even before the age of computers. So for anyone who thinks that Britain just didn't notice Karl Marx, who literally was given the right to give speeches in some of the biggest theaters in London, don't think they didn't just quite hear him properly when he talked about overthrowing established governments. They heard him perfectly fine. [Alan chuckles.] But, you can use a guy like that, you see. Because down the road, you can use Marxism.

You see, the elites don't think as you do. They're not trained to be naïve their whole lives long from birth to death. You are. But the elite who run the world, and in their certain bases that they've lived in for a while, they're nomadic to an extent but they can settle for a century here, a couple of centuries there and so on. They also have homes across the planet. They know that they can use all types of sides, sides, the creation of sides, to their own advantage down the road. It might suit them to have a fast bout of communism for a little while, bring in an austerity, and eradicating a lot of bright people.

Because communism does that, you see, it eradicates the brighter folk. Often. And it doesn't, I'm not talking about just education. If you're bright at all and have a bit of insight, then, again, as I've said before, the Soviets called it, “inflexibility of opinion”. If they couldn't persuade you to just join them, and you know, see it our way, this is for the greater good, etc. You know, poverty is for the greater good and for a brighter tomorrow, for the great-grandchildren. If you didn't go along with it, then they classified you as insane. Because number one, you complained about their wonderful communist utopia, so you had to be insane because it was so beautiful. I mean, there was nothing better invented than communist utopia and workers paradises and things like that. So you were just, there was no trial, you were put straight into a loony bin and kept drugged until you... You died generally with inhalation pneumonia or something because you start drooling and then you breathe it in. That happens still today with different drugs, like Haldol that they tend to pump into people, and especially in old folks’ homes now. Has been happening for years.

The communist system could be used to down the road, you see, to destabilize other nations. And to get the change. Remember, change takes at least two sides. If you've got a happy society, or fairly content, you know, there's no such thing as perfection anywhere, with humanity, look at your own moods. Look at how many things have changed your minds down through your lifetime, hm. But regardless, as I say, you can use different sides to make the change happen. If you had a fairly okay system, and yeah, there's a lot of injustice and blah blah blah, which you always will get with humans, and you don't really want to change it. But the elite do want to change it for their own particular reasons, which they won't tell you about. Then they'll advocate again the antithesis. You are the thesis, the system is. The antithesis is a group that will be dissatisfied with whatever. Then you have your agitation and your arguments, threatening war even, amongst the two groups. Then you come to an agreement, different agreements and concessions. And a concession means you start walking backwards to an extent to keep the peace. Then you have your synthesis, that's your end product which you desired all along. So you need the two sides. You need two sides to create change. At least two sides.

Sometimes you get three. Like sheepdogs, it's often described as using sheepdogs. You, it's wonderful to watch trained sheepdogs, Collie dogs, in Wales for instance. You'll see, I don't know if they still have the big sheepdog competitions every year where you would see them. They had it in Yorkshire I think too. You'd see these collies, these border collies they call them, the dark and white, black-and-white dogs, working so wonderfully together. And the shepherds just whistling to them, certain whistles, a language to the dogs. They could literally take the sheep from these mountains, round them up, guide them down the hills in a certain direction, go left, right and the whole bit, and eventually bring them into a pen, and then guide them all into the pen, without any human help at all except the whistling that was going on to the dogs. Wonderful to watch it.

But when you watch the dogs working, that's how we are guided too. You'll get, here you are, you’re with the sheep, right. You're having a good, you in the grass there, it's a nice warm day. Not too warm, because you've got all that wool on you. And it's quiet, there's a little breeze, put it that way, and you're quite content. And it's good grass. Maybe a bit of clover flower there too. So you’re chomping away and it's quite good. And all your pals around you are, oh, yeah, they're all chomping away, and you're all smiling and all that.

Then, what do you see? You see a dog coming from your left. And you’re watching that dog, because it's sneaking along, it almost crawls along the ground. You get a bit, kind of restless here. So the dogs moving towards you, you see, from left, so you start moving to the right, all of you, you know. Somebody up ahead said, maaaaa, you see, let's go. So you all follow the person that says, the sheep that says let's go, and away you go, you see. But as you're going along there, and you can't see all that far in front of you because of the other sheep. But there's another dog coming from the right, eh. And so you say, oh what do we do now, eh, what do we do now? And you're starting to go back to the left, but there's that other dog, so you're sandwiched in between them.

So you say, okay, we can go forward, or back, you see, rather than go right or left. But wouldn't you know it, as you start to move just to the north a bit, another sheepdog's there. So you're starting to panic now, eh. Left, right, and from the north, so there's only one place left, and you start bolting down south, you see. And along come these three dogs with you, eh, and you look around, and yeah, there they are, y'know. So you know not to go to the right or the left, or try to go back up, because the dogs are there. And they can guide you step-by-step right into that pen. Even if it's a mile or two away at times. Amazing to watch it.

That's exactly how we are managed, the same thing. People take, you see, sheep take the path of least resistance. That's why they get into trouble, you know. We are the same, most people, all the studies they've done, countless, countless studies on us, we are the most studied species on the planet. It's not the baboon or the monkey, or it's not some rat or mouse living in some strange country. And it's not some strange little insect that excretes through their orifices some kind of strange gum on a tree that you can use to make a type of a lacquer. But no, I mean, this is how it's done. The path of least resistance, and we take it, that's what humans do all the time. We don't like stress. We're just like the sheep. It's a natural thing not to like stress.

At one time, you see, you would accept stress, in more natural times when you had some, you had some wisdom. Wisdom is a very important word. Because wisdom, at one time you were born with it, you see. Wisdom. And you still need your, the parents, I've mentioned it before. The mammal, mammals, parents are mammals and so on, have to guide a newborn for quite a while into what to be afraid of or what to be cautious about. Because they won't, even young bears will walk right up to you quite happily wanting to play with you, but unfortunately big mum is behind somewhere, and she's got different ideas. But yeah, young mammals can be very friendly. They have no idea that you can be a bad dude, you see. So that's how they are taught that, by their parents. For survival.

So you have the basic instinct for survival and preservation of yourself and your species basically. If you really have none at all, if you're completely domesticated, you've lost that ability to think quick for your own survival. That's why we breed domesticated animals. I'm not talking about dogs and cats. I'm talking about animals for feeding off of, that's your domesticated... Or you domesticate horses. Like Hercules in Animal Farm, the horse, he'll pull the plow all day long and get really nothing out of it really, you know, except oatmeal and water pretty well and a rubdown. But he's domesticated. Otherwise he would try to get out and run off.

Occasionally you'll see that, where an animal, they call it a throwback to a more natural time when it had more instincts, will leave a domesticated group or a herd. The clever ones, eh. They don't just attack the person who's rearing them to eat, they'll actually run off. They're clever, they'll say, no, no, there's no point in attacking that guy, they'll come after me. So you simply wait and bide your time and watch what happens and try to get out of the corral. That's what they do.

There was one in Australia a few years ago and it became famous, this one. I think it was a Miranda type sheep, a particular type of wool, and a lot of wool too. But he vamoosed from the herd. He was found a few years later, he lived, he was found a cave somewhere and he was living in a cave. I guess he came out later in the day and folk didn't see him or whatever, but he was far away from civilization. And he had a happy life. They'd hate him at the United Nations. They teach you the loners are dangerous people, or dangerous animals, eh.

In other words, if you're person who quite likes privacy, like in Canada, I mentioned that one two weeks ago, three weeks ago, where some old fella had gone in to get groceries and I guess there was a dispute. They're pretty nasty, some of these women actually in the stores, they're so freaked out they just turn on anybody who doesn't comply. I guess the old guy didn't know to wear a mask or whatever, because they keep changing their mind on what you're supposed to do, and they had a little dispute. He went home, the cops followed him home, and then they shot him, dead, you know.

So, this is where it's coming too, you see. They even said in the paper, the man was a loner. Like that was the crime, eh, he was a loner. He lived in a house that he built, and he paid for, and it was a good price he paid for it too, and he didn't encourage visitors, and he liked his privacy. But that's a crime now, you see. That validates your death right there. And don't forget, at the United Nations they've said over and over that even, again, they recycle the same story, that the greatest threat to the agenda for world peace is individualism. Meaning, again, the person who thinks for themselves, might like privacy, and he might be a bit of a loner. It's a crime to be a loner. There's obviously something wrong with you, right? Obviously. Not like all the characters that hung around Jeffrey, all the gregarious social types who like to go to parties and have it all for little children, hm?, and get blackmailed for. It would be that type, you know, the gregarious type they... anything but… No. They're okay, they're just falling for their basic instincts, you see. But anyone who avoids all that stuff and the partying lifestyle, whhhoa, come one, eh. There you go.

So it's dangerous now to know things. It's dangerous to be a loner as well, obviously. It can be deadly. It's taboo by the United Nations, the wonderful communist United Nations, that's set up again, hm, by the same characters that put up Karl Marx in London, hm. The guys who ran the British Empire, Lord Alfred Milner at that time, you know. And out of them came, they eventually morphed into the legitimate title that folk got to know, the Royal Institute of International Affairs, a private club mind you. A big club but private. They ran the British Empire. But there's the guys that put up Karl Marx. And he had sponsorship too. They eventually gave you the League of Nations. And then that morphed into the United Nations.

So again, here's the richest characters on the planet, Lord Alfred Milner, eh, who really was German, or born in Germany, and a lot of guys with him actually were actually not really born or are British as such. A big story to it. But they work as a very tight team to run the British Empire and to conquer other nations, as long as they themselves took over the resources of the country, including diamonds and gold, baubles like that, you see. And that was okay.

That was okay, because they ran the Empire so they could make these rules, you see, for themselves. And royalty never complained about it because they got a good kickback for advocating that the military should backup their ventures for them, and the taxpayer would pay for it all. Which is a great set up, really. Of course that's where the idea of fascism really came from. Where governments worked with corporations, and they worked with, like a brotherhood you might say, like a liaison, like something tighter than a family. The corporations and the banks, the mercantile banks, the merchant bankers, and government work together to make sure it kept, you know, the trade would flow, and their trade would flow, and the public would pay for the upkeep of it all, for armies and navies and things like that. It was a good deal for those who owned the corporations. Nothing much has changed in a sense, has it, really.

Again, getting back to what I'm trying to say here, is this organization didn't nip communism dead, you know, in its tracks. Folk are still astonished as to why they let it happen in the Soviet system, in Russia I should say. The whole thing is, if you have a long-term enterprise, and this is how intelligence agencies work as well, the really big high ones, there's different levels of immediate action and long-term planning, and long-term planning is just big business plans as I've said before. Business plans and corporations, they have their projections into 50, sometimes, some of them 100 years in the future. Well, that's exactly how the big intelligence agencies work as well. Where were they be in 100 years? So they have ten-year plans, and even five-year plans. You see the exact same terminology used for the United Nations as you saw in the Soviet system. Oh, this part of the plan will take five years, a five-year plan. To get the workers up to a better income or more bread or whatever, will take 10 years, that's a 10-year plan. And to put pipelines in and, well that will take 30 years, 40 years, 50 years... That's how it's done.

It was all modeled really from London, the City of London for a while. Again, folks are ignorant of it, they really don't have a clue that the US and Britain financed in the 1920s and 30s the building of the infrastructure for power for industry for the Soviet system. We sent over lots and lots of engineers. They even built up, I think they used to have an awfully good documentary that was put out by Russia itself in fact. They set up streets, houses, like villages for the scientists in the Soviet system. They built them, and they even made the houses look like middle class suburbia America to make them feel at home, with all the comforts of home and things like that. Even brought in cars from the States and things like that. Had them really help rebuild everything for Russia for the electrical supplies and implementation, power lines and all that kind of stuff into factories and so on.

A tremendous cooperation. For a system, let's get back to the basics, which swore an oath to overthrow every other system, including the ones that were helping them. Try to figure that one out. It isn't until you stand back and say, okay, the Lord Alfred Milner group that planned long-term, even during the taking over of Africa and South Africa and places like that, and when they were working at it, they were already working on 100 years down the road… where they would merge all this into a global system with the kind of embryo of a global government, with global standardized rules, massive bureaucracy running commerce, and rules and trade rules and all the rest of it. And, free-trade, hm, that's where all that came from, was their group, free-trade.

So you have them working short time to get plans implemented, as they were taking over resources in South Africa, and then with the Jamison Raid they actually had a bunch of mercenaries, belonging to the Lord Alfred Milner group, who went in and started slaughtering Dutch settlers to get a retaliation against... And sure enough, this group were not part of the ones that did the slaughtering, were not part of the English settlement, they came into the country for the revolution. The Milner group also had a woman reporter they brought in from London, I think it was the London Times, who was in on the act, and she had prepared in advance the stories that the Boers had attacked the English or British settlements. That would really, then they would say in Britain, well, outrage, outrage, this is terrible, look what they've done to our settlements. Then of course they would advocate that the British military go in, and the taxpayer would fund all of that, and they would take over the country. That's exactly what happened, you see. Long stories about all of this. But anyway, once they did that of course they eventually appointed their own members in as the Governor Generals of these countries, these areas in these countries.

So you would have a different idea of where they were going to go, judging from what little information that you're given out to the public, as to their intentions. But you'd be stuck in a little, again, another little bubble, I always call them bubbles, because they are bubbles, that's a good way to imagine them, of what it's all about in your particular area. You wouldn't see the bigger plan. You wouldn't see that down the road they planned to eventually take more and more countries into, into this, an African Union. They would even use communism to galvanize the other countries to join the African Union, you see.

They had that planned long, long, long ago. And that's how things are really done in the real intelligence agencies. Sometimes you get the grandchildren working on the plan, in the same intelligence agencies, their own grandchildren. So they know it very well, what their part in the plan is and their vector or sector in the world. And they might have a few members, or siblings too, working on it as well, generation after generation, so they know exactly what they're doing. It's really a super civil service that runs it all, you see.

So anyway, they have their outer party and their inner party. Just like George Orwell had in 1984. But the true Lord Alfred Milner group had the inner group, you see, and their circle of friends, and outside and all that. And of course they had their Council on Foreign Relations branch for America. Every country's got a branch of them including the Far East as well. So there's nothing happening today that wasn't planned at least 100 years ago, and probably a lot longer.

You could never figure out in your particular little short lifetime, during your span from what you're taught, which is very superficial, that the things that are happening are obviously from an outside source to make these... Because you're overthrowing something that you've understood to be, you know, normal for quite a long time, it's getting overthrown now. It would never dawn on you that it's done by the same group, because now it's time to use another side, another group to cause the conflict to get the changes they desire to the next phase. That's how it's done.

This is the kind of thing that Rockefeller used to talk about too, old man Rockefeller, and David Rockefeller too, that they could take over the resources of the world. Rockefeller said, old man Rockefeller said, and so did David, that competition was a sin. And he was talking on very esoteric terms too, and I won’t go into the particular religion and all that, but he was going into that idea of it, that competition was a sin. Therefore standardization, that's why his companies were called Standard Oil, standardization of all resources, with, under the auspices of guys like himself, like a club, was the right thing to do. And they would keep prices high, then they could create the stock market, and then through investments they could keep the stocks way up and all the different shares in things. Keep tight control of everything, that's the idea, monopoly men.

They all come, again, from this particular group going way back. We know of them in Lord Alfred Milner's time simply because a lot of the deeds were published and written about, even some of them by Milner himself. But again later on too, they have their own archives, their own history archives, that are so important to the manipulation of world events, right up to the present, that Carol Quigley said it was time that the public knew of their contribution to the changing and manipulation of history. He thought it was wonderful what they did because he was an elitist himself. He thought it was wonderful the goals that they wanted to bring into the society. And he knew the goals wouldn't be understood by the people who even fought for them.

You know, think how many different regiments in Britain, for instance, as an example, other countries too, had fought on behalf of what they thought was the right... When you're born into the system it seems to be the right, isn't it, that it's there, it exists, so it's the right. But each generation, it's much easier if it's a long span of change, they won't notice it so much, like a drastic change. So you might go into the same regiments as your grandparents went into. And you still think you’re fighting and maintaining the same sort of order, and for civilization, etc. etc. But you never, and then when it starts to crumble, you might go to pieces yourself saying what on earth was it all for? and how could it suddenly collapse?

Well, it wouldn't suddenly collapse. It's time to go into the next phase, and you and the generations of you before and your own families are just irrelevant. You're like Rockefeller said, you’re the, you can't make an omelet without breaking eggs. You're all irrelevant to the ones at the very, very top. Really, you really are. But the public never, never know it.

But the Masters of intelligence for a long time were based in London, the City of London. Now of course you have, they are amalgamated to an extent as I've said before. You can't keep secrets in this day and age, for long, from other intelligence agencies. And apart from that, it's so wonderful today, if you want to get people to infiltrate, that don't even belong to your nations. Then you simply say, well it's discrimination if you don't let them come in it. So naturally you can't keep secrets. [Alan chuckles.] The best you can do is to bring them in on board to the big secrets, and knowing that they're going to share with other agencies, or even another, an outside country that they’re, might be born in, that's very common now to do today as well.

So what you do is you amalgamate the whole lot of them on the higher level, and often the ones, I would say up until about the 80s maybe, the intelligence agencies, you had lots of people in at the time that were so compartmentalized that the bulk of them didn't know there was a different agenda above them. They still believed in their little part in it and fighting the Cold War as it was called. They truly believed in it because they didn't know anything else. They had no idea that eventually their own countries would advocate the same global system, eh. Oh well after all, it's always been our wish to have a global government type system for the world, says [Alan chuckles.] the descendants of the leaders that gave you the Empire, eh. [Alan chuckles.]

They don't care if they're using a communistic technique to bring it into being. Because it's much easier if you create enough hardship amongst populations to get them to work for a cause. So you give them the cause. You can call it communism or socialism or whatever you want to call it and make them think they're going to get something. Then you use them again to further the next stage of the agenda. That's how global socialism... But we'll still run the show at the top, you know, and you'll all live in a kind of austerity. It will be very equal because you'll all be equally poor. You see, equally poor.

But nevertheless, they ones at the top will live incredibly rich. Because they're the masters that manage money, and they manage international corporations. And you do want your cell phones and things, don't you? Even if you're a radical Marxist, you really want your cell phone and you want your computers and you want your games and your pornography and all that kind of thing, surely you do, so you don't mind us running it all for you, right. But at the bottom you can all, they can all share in austerity, you can all be very austere.

Well, if you help the revolution to happen, for a little while, you'll get extra points and extra goodies, you see. But eventually they'll eliminate you. They always do. The truly radical types are chosen and radicalized because their personality types, they're on the fringes, they wouldn't fit into any society for long. If you look at the old photographs of Lenin for instance, you'll see that Lenin, you'll see all the original revolutionaries, the Bolsheviks in group photographs, and separate photographs but still bunches of them and so on. And then over time, up into Stalin's time, you see them actually airbrushing them out, different ones, just airbrushing them out like they didn't exist. That was the memory hole as they eliminated the ones who had been used, and were given all these positions of power in the NKVD, in the Cheka and so on before it became the later KGB.

The ones who were given those positions in the early days were mass murderers. They could never fit into any society for long. So temporarily for the reign of terror, because they always have a reign of tear on the public to get you to submit, they put these people in charge. But then once they have the whole system getting implemented, then they have to eradicate them because these radicals that they've put in charge are too dangerous. They like to slaughter, they like to kill, you know. Nothing will make them happy or content because they were misfits to begin with in any society. But initially if you want revolution, these are the ones you pick. They're selected. Often they don't even know they've been selected for it. They think they've just fallen into the right groups and similar minds. They don't even know they've been selected to be radicalized some of them. They don't know.

There's an awfully good movie, a series actually, it's a British series, that can give you an insight into really deep intelligence systems and the techniques which they used to rule. Regardless of what you think of Britain, I mean, I lived, I got out of Britain, I saw it collapsing long ago. The City of London still goes on, is still the banking capital of the planet, for investments, for across the world, the City of London, eh. And you can't beat their intelligence systems, again, with intergenerational intelligence operatives that go back through, you know, maybe a couple hundred years or more, descended from them. Tremendous educational systems to train them, very secretive but they exist, of archives, you know, they've archived their own secret universities with archives of incredible teachings to train them.

They have different levels of them too. You have the ones from what they call the better class families. Very class conscious. You have the ones going down the lower strata, right down to the red brick University types. So you have the granite and Ivy League, then down to the red brick type for the common folk, the working people. Then you have other ones too, they train them in a kind of collegiate type for real street work to infiltrate little groups, they were the lower-level ones. But they're all totally sworn and well trained for what they do.

So I mentioned before about a movie, it was called The Last Enemy, from Britain. A good, what was it, one- or two- or three-part series, with a good story to it. Which showed you even back in 2009 or 10 or whatever it was made, how GCHQ could operate with thousands of people, and know everybody and everything that was going on. Every keystroke on every computer was all monitored. Instant retrieval, hm. Instant retrieval. So it showed you a lot of the workings there. Including giving a virus, creating a virus to give to people in different countries, knowing they would eventually try to get into Britain illegally. And they could trace them that way because they could test positive for the particular virus. They could even tell what area they came from, you know. So you have stories within stories. But in the process of it they show you a lot of technology and utter confidence that they have of the fact that there's nothing about any of you out there that they didn't know. Even if you put masks on and put black outfits on and go rioting, they still know who you are. And they'll use you.

Another one too that's awfully good, and you've heard the one that was put up by Mel Gibson, it's called The Edge of Darkness. About the shenanigans of big corporations in the atomic energy field. In it he is an ex-cop, or a retired cop and his daughter belongs to a radical group. It's an interesting story. In the time of the ‘Gaia’ idea, you know, put out by Lovelock that the planet will turn on people and the Friends of the Earth and all these groups are going to be warriors, you see, kind of Marxist warriors to save the world, by eliminating a good chunk of the population. [Alan chuckles.]   How else are you going to do it, eh? So, man again was the enemy, The Club of Rome.

So in the Mel Gibson one it was actually shortened into 1 1/2 hours or whatever. But the series they did in Britain years before back in the 80s was I think a six-part series and well done. It brings into the actual play, or the movie, a few different agencies, intelligence agencies who all know each other, their strata’s and their names and so on of their actual agencies. Including the interaction between the US agents and CIA, etc. to do with the atomic energy field. You'll see how each agency is working with other agencies and sharing data and files and secret files on everybody and everything.

But you also see them trying to pull little moves on other agencies to get more from a different country, the other countries involved like America and vice versa, you'll see it all. You'll all see them sacrificing sometimes their own operatives in the field, just sacrifice them when you want rid of them. They know a little too much sometimes, if you're sent on a certain job you'll start to figure out what's really going on above what you've been told. So they sacrifice them. Without a problem. You see the psychopathic nature of the characters at the very end, how they discuss people in general, and people who have been used and wiped out to attain goals that some of them who are now wiped out or died of radiation or whatever had no idea that they were getting used for these purposes.

This is the, hhhch, this is perfect manipulation and field management of radical groups. Even into the radicalization of groups. I think the plot eventually was that the cop’s daughter, and with a group, had gone into try to find a hot cell in an era where Britain was taking in recycled fissionable material. They have a way of actually recycling the stuff and making it all potent, full strength again and selling it off, during Maggie Thatcher's time. So they get in there, they don't know that they've been set up to go in in the first place, and that the old miner that helps to set them, bring them in, to how to get down to this underground base, you see, where the real work was done on basically the cells, these radioactive cells, isotopes. The guy who led them in was like a labor union leader, working class type, but you don't know until halfway through or towards the end that he was a member also of the secret, that he had been inducted into the British system to protect the atomic energy system. He led these characters in and they got flushed out eventually with radioactive water and most of them died.

But it was so amazing, towards the end you found out, I hate even mention it in case anybody wants to see it, um, but the father goes through all this detective work to find out what was happening, he was so naïve in that area, etc., and to find out that his daughter had been set up to be killed and all the rest of it with the group that she worked with, rather than have it exposed. Then he gets involved with an ex-CIA guy who's gone a bit rogue and they eventually, the CIA guy comes out with some plutonium in a case at the end of it. I won't tell you the rest of it there.

BUT it isn't until later on that you find out that the different groups, the organizations, including the higher levels of the CIA, wanted them to do that. They used them to do it, to get the plutonium out. Because it was going to get banned to an extent, but they wanted the plutonium. They couldn't do it because of the legal restrictions, etc., so they used a group to go in thinking they were going to agitate and steal it and expose it to the public, what was going on. But no, everybody gets used. And folk never figure this out in real intelligence work. They never figure it out.

I remember a few years ago in fact, I think one of the, a fella came out and gave a lot of good information out at the time. I think he came out with his partner, MI5 I think he was in, although he did some international work as well which is MI6. But he gave some good talks on things that were wrong at the time. He had been reprimanded and so on. Sometimes that's used as a tactic to get people to believe they're, or they have gone rogue, and they had their slap on the wrist or they're getting punished. Then they try and recruit them too, that's very common as well. So you have to always be wary of these kind of things.

He gave a lot of good information out. But his job for years had been to infiltrate the left-wing groups, then to manipulate them to do things like what I've been just talking about, in the movie version. Because that's what they do. So in The Edge of Darkness, the British version, they show you some of the techniques that are used. It's quite interesting to watch. Including the old computer system they use to use, which is the R2, in London. There was, anybody who was under total surveillance went through that one computer years ago. I'm sure it's all changed these days. But the folk have no idea they're getting used and monitored and spied upon and manipulated. And it's done so professionally by experts who are trained in this way that they'll never fathom it out that they've all been used. To the bitter end. Even when it happens to them, they just can't fathom it. That's quite something, isn't it? That's perfect manipulation and understanding, as I say, of the dark arts, as they like to call it.

And there's no one you could trust. You would never know who was genuine, you know. That's generally how it is. So there's always a double, triple, kind of quadruple game going on. And even higher levels of that too, to get things done eventually. By using people like pawns, who never figure out they’ve been used. That's good intelligence work as they call it, you see.

I'm sure if you really looked into, [Alan chuckles.] as I've said before when I put the articles up where it had the financing for Black Lives Matter. Millions and millions of dollars coming in from the top corporations for goodness’ sake.

These are the major brands donating to the Black Lives Matter movement - cnet.com / 16 June 2020

Apple, Google, Amazon, Walmart back BLM cause with multi-million dollar donations - lifesitenews.com / 22 July 2020

Even after the leaders of the BLM movements came out and admitted publicly that they are trained Marxist organizers. Well, again, trying to overthrow the existing system, eh? And trained, using all other kinds of groups, anything to create splits and divisions, including gender identity. Anything they can use, they use it. It's nothing to do with what they tell you. They say the argument is irrelevant, it's all about the revolution, stupid. You see, everyone's fighting each other over points of this or points of that or morality or you know... No, no, this is all division to create chaos rather than have the folk unified for one cause. That's how it's done. Standard stuff.

But here's a top, the top wealthiest corporations, ALL of them, including all the ones presently that you're allowed to get your food from, everything else has been closed, that's just coincidence of course, and throwing money at them, that goes eventually to, as well, to the Antifa groups. Which really, a lot of them really think that they're doing, having a communist revolution, at the bottom level. Standard stuff. The ones in the lead, amongst the ones who are the radical, the ones who want to go kill people, because there are lots of them out there, these are the ones on the fringes, you see, who've been recruited for that purpose, just like the Bolshevik revolution. There are real intelligent organizers who goad them into doing all the radical, nasty, evil, you know, criminal work and getting caught. But these actual workers behind the scenes won't get caught themselves. They’re highly paid, highly paid indeed, and a lot of them are from intelligence agencies.

But yeah, this is a revolution on behalf of those who already rule the world, most of it, the food supplies, the banking industry, commerce completely, everything you need, even the food industry, the big agri-food businesses, not the little farmers, that all goes to the middleman. They decide on the price of what you're going to pay in the stores and all the rest of it. I mean, everything you need for living and basic existing, including fuel for heating in the winter, these the characters are funding communism. And you're not supposed to notice. You're supposed to get bogged down in Covid, eh. Which is part of it.

It's the resetting of the economy, which means the resetting of ALL human methods of existence. That's what it's about. It isn't just a time for devaluating the currency. It's... From that comes austerity, the plan I talked about years ago from the United Nations and different quarters too... That the so-called intelligence agency sells, their think tank, they call themselves think tanks, you see, they advise governments, eh. [Alan chuckles.] I used to give these talks on it all years ago, the coming austerity. They weren't kidding.

And here you go. Well, there's going to be famine and so on. Well, we've got a go into austerity now, and post consumerism. Remember Maurice Strong, again, picked up by Rockefeller and trained and groomed by him to be the guy who really would bring you into austerity by reducing energy, all kinds of energy to houses and stuff. Long story there too. But the fact is, Maurice Strong was not a happy friend of you, believe you me. Again, he was for left-wing socialism. Set up by one of the richest men on the planet, Rockefeller, y'know. No, these are agents. These are agents, you see, they are front agents and they are given these roles to play and that's what they do. And to fulfill.

Maurice Strong gave you a good part of Agenda 21, the Millennium Project, that's who started it all. He gave you the Rio Conference, that gave you Sustainability, and no rights for humans but rights for animals and trees and everything else. But of course, their agencies would decide on, you know, the levels of rights and what species, etc. Playing God again, eh. Maurice Strong himself, his family were related to the ones who overthrew the China dynasties and brought in communism. Long lines of intergenerational revolutionaries.

Again, the beauty of revolution is that the ones who do the revolution on the streets never figure it out, hhhch, they really don't figure it out that they’re not in charge. Because they're young, eh, and it's easy to get them all stirred up for a cause, you see. Very easy. They fall for it time after time. Then of course they're disposed of, once those that they serve, that they've helped, those that they serve, bring in the next part of the system, and it's always the same group at the top who is changing their own system. It's not being taken over.

There's only one group at the top and this is their revolution using Covid, lockdown, destroying the economy. These are the richest folk on the planet, they’re changing THEIR system into the next phase of their system. And using Antifa and Black Lives Matter across the world at the same time. It's their revolution. They have revolutions all the time. It might be 100, 200 years apart, but it's their revolutions. They are in charge of each phase of it. They have to have a revolution because you, for the last hundred years have thought that that was normal, what you are in now, you know, and your parents before you. No, it was their system. It was their system, always their system.

Going back even to the, do you think it's just ramblings of guys like Francis Bacon, The New Atlantis, they're just ramblings, do you think, eh? Who pretty well set up the scenario for an America that would eventually run the world to an extent? But he did say, and quite, I mean, not a bad sci-fi writer for his era, eh? [Alan chuckles.] He says, yeah, he says, and there'll be machines under the ground that would create incredible energy, with the light of the sun, as he's describing it in his book and so on. You know, that could create all kinds of weather by it. Oh wow, eh? Quite an amazing thing, accomplishment, for a guy who was writing with, the best they had at the time, a candle. [Alan laughing.] He said too of course that there'll be a form of democracy that the people would believe in, but in reality, there'll be a secret government of scientific types, ‘eh, who would really rule the system, the show. I tell ya, hm.

And you look at all the occult symbols, of course Francis Bacon wrote about, he learned Kabbalah, and he even learned other languages just to go with the Kabbalah, he talked about that too, and who he learned from and all that kind of thing. Long term planning. Then, so pretty well they accomplished it to an extent, where everyone would look to this new, this new nation, you know, as a pinnacle of virtue to follow, you see. It's a virtue thing, eh, to follow them, and you'd be so happy for them, the fact they'd brought you civilization, world commerce and so on. But anybody who wouldn't join this kind of Federation and be good and adopt the same kind of politics and so on and social regulations, would be banned from the trade, eh, banning them from their free trade, y'know, and so on and so on and so on.

So the US for a while got its lead in, was given its lead as, again, the policeman of the world, running world commerce and lending to the world through its institutions, etc. Now it's time to take it down, eh. That part of it, I've mentioned it before, eventually America, the US that has funded... [Alan chuckles.] I always think of the mouse on the moon, you know, that comedy, old comedy from the 50s and 60s. Where this little country in the middle of Europe, an unknown little place, was broke, was poverty-stricken and they wanted cash. They didn't even have running water, you see, in the castle. So they had to say, how can we get money? Well, America, this is during the Cold War, America or Russia, they're always, you know, giving money out to countries that they want to have as friends, you know, in other words, as assets. So they put out a rumor they were going to build to space, a rocket and so on. The US immediately says, well, yeah, with good public relations they'll never get anywhere, they don't have the know-how. So we'll give them, ah, a million. The actual little country had asked for a few thousand bucks, we'll give it about $1 million he says. So back to the little country that was broke, and the Prime Minister is talking to his mum that was the Queen and he says, yeah, they would've given us $1 million. And she says, oh my goodness, you only asked for a few thousand. He says, oh don't worry about it, it's every American's birthright to pay for the projects of every other country’s ambitions [Alan laughing.] he says pretty well.

So yeah, it's Americans birthright to pay, you know, through their taxes, all these great enterprises that their masters have worked out. And that's how it is, isn't it? So that the US literally has funded the United Nations and NATO for years and years and years. Been the policeman of the world. Now it's time to move on to the world system, and as I’ve said for years and years, America has to then submerge itself into the world system which really it helped create through its various agencies. And across the world you'll have a standardized system of austerity, which is kind of poverty, you see.

But it will still have its hotspots. Don't forget too that in Strategic Trends, the Department of Defense 2008 I think it is, that I came out with the article and put it up there. It mentioned their projections for the future for the military, the think tank that worked for the military, about city-states, etc. City-states are the things which will, out of this new Phoenix you see rising all the city-states where the actual nation-state, just like Karl Marx said, just coincidentally, eh, [Alan chuckles.] the nation-state would wither away.

You think it's all coincidence these things happen exactly the way they talked about making it happen?, a century, two centuries, a few centuries ago? Do you think it's all coincidence?

No.

So yes, getting back to the whole, the point of it all. The elite, who own the world as far as they're concerned, certainly they own everything in it that you need to live on, and all the corporations that are all having their revolution to the next phase, you see, using Covid, total lockdown, the total destruction, complete destruction of the economy, post consumerism. Maurice Strong said it too, we want to bring the nation-states back, before you eliminate them, but bring them back to preindustrial levels of austerity. Where folk really didn't have much, most of them were agricultural at one time, before industry, you see, before industrial revolutions, much smaller populations, and lots of folk died because they were so poor by the class system, etc. That's what they want to bring you back to and that was the wonderful Maurice Strong, where he wanted to bring you all back to it as well. And all the other organizations that still exist. So you're not going to get a utopia.

Literally, I'll put it up too, a link to General Flynn's talk, interesting little talk he gave. Because very few people, if you've noticed, have come out from the top at all to try and even defend the nation-state. Remember, the nation-states under Marxism is to be utterly destroyed, because that's what the elite want. The richest folk want that [Alan chuckles.] for their own agenda.

Exclusive from Gen. Flynn: This Is My Letter to America - westernjournal.com / 5 Aug 2020

A Warning From General Flynn To The Silent Majority - bitchute.com / 1 July 2020 him

So yeah, Flynn came out and talked about, two percent I think want to overthrow the entire population, and they could do it if no one else, the silent majority just don't do anything. And I, you know, I understand where he's coming from. Because regardless of agendas, etc., so much could be altered if people did stand up for themselves. Obviously against what appears to be a massive army. It's not a massive army at all. Again, it's perception management. They bus the same crew into different states, back and forth, full-time employees a lot of them. They're not starving. They're getting paid from different sources, obviously well-funded. But it appears, if you're watching TV of course, it would be, oh my God, they're everywhere. No, no. No. Not really.

The hard-core agitators, the ones who are trained, trained, trained, not just for agitation but to go it into complete rebellion against, against, to try to get a rebellion against Marxism, because that's what they want you to do is to attack them. Or even defend yourself and be called attacks. You can't lose really. Because you're going to lose anyway unless you do something at all. So General Flynn came out and pretty well said it. What was interesting me was, that's the one little caveat, again, you know, in the big, big plans of mice and men, is that the US...

I'll put up again a link to, that a reporter gave years ago from the Council on Foreign Relations talking about the need to do an end run around the Constitution. In other words, ignore it, just build laws around it and super... You know, almost like, like burying it in a whole bunch of overlapping strands, that would be just like a ball of wool, bury it with new legislation. To just ignore it. Which would, even though you're ignoring it, still legally you could throw it all off and say no, no, this is all illegal. And don't debate it, don't take it to court, just get rid of it. That's what you'd have to do, you don't have time to mess around. I'll put that one up too.

But back to Flynn, people don't know, I don't think folk really know because they haven't really read all the different letters to do with confederation of the United States of America by the people who founded it and so on. But so many of them talked about, it was republic they had chosen, you see. And a Republic that, it wasn't just any old republic. They had based it on ancient Rome. In ancient Rome you had the Senate, which was a kind of a nobility. Some people could work towards it through good works and get into it. Most of it that was hereditary, as you know, everything ends up corrupt. But regardless, the Senate was to debate all changes, and also debate things that had to be done, like more grain being brought in. Because ancient Rome had a massive world army, very much like the US became. And bases across the entire planet. Again, very much like the United States has right now. They were getting exhausted toward the ends by taxing. They had taxed every country they went into. Because they were so corrupt inside their own country, in Rome, that the money was vanishing all over the place. Just like now. It's no different.

But regardless, occasionally when it got so bad, and people were in poverty, and there was a problem with the people at the bottom that would be rebelling because they were starting to starve, you would get a person coming out to restore the Republic. Now, the Republic had a set of rules that would keep the system intact, not to be changed but to keep it intact, the basic regulations of rights and wrongs basically. But the system itself, it was spelled out in bold lettering, put it that way, into what it was supposed to do. Sometimes when the Senate became soo corrupt, that always happens in society, it doesn't even matter, communism was exactly the same. But, so corrupt that things were just not working and they were falling apart. Often the armies were kind of stranded in different countries, without even getting orders as to what to do next and stuff like that, or having supplies sent to them, or even pay.

Because of the corruption in Rome they would have their parties and their debauchery. Even though at the end it was so debauched that Rome had to try and decree that the nobility who ran Rome, ancient Rome, must marry and must have children. Because they didn't want children, they were aborting their children by then too. That's what it always ends up being. And women with women, men with men. It was amazing, it's amazing to read it, The Rise and Fall of the Roman Empire, and all the other things that happened at the time. It was amazing to read it. Caligula of course with his antics as well, as everything else was just wallowing and waiting for orders and instructions from their base, you know, all the other armies.

But it was soo bad that the Senate would often confiscate farmland for their own use, you see. Or, even early attempts of senators to get big businesses going by taking over farms and trying to get other guys to manage them, collectively, bring them into one. Like we've watched through the whole 20th century, the same con being pulled in America and across the world where hundreds and hundreds of farms in certain states are demolished, really, but out of business by the banks and loans and so on. Then in comes the characters who work along with them and they get them for peanuts, amalgamate them and they have a consortium. That's how they manage it really. Well, that happened in ancient Rome, and the Senate was so corrupt.

Of course the folk in the rural areas were so sick of it all they would gathering their pitchforks and so on, ready for rebellion. And in would come a tyrant. A tyrant wasn't a bad thing to have at times. And it was often a general from the military who knew the rules and knew the laws. His job then would be to use a martial law scenario, round up all the crooks of the day, if they had open rebellions inside the city he'd round them up as well. Rebellions often again too are fomented by psychopaths who know there's a lot of discontent. They use the discontent and they become the leaders of the people, you know, because they want the power, and they want to become the new Emperor. That always happens in every society. In every era.

Anyway, the tyrant would lay down the law, clean the streets up, stop them pillaging and etc., the things that were going on. It's always the same scenario, you see. And he might reside there for years as a tyrant before they start to give out, give away ultimate authority back to the Senate again. That happened on and off over different centuries. Not just in Rome, other places too.

So the US was modeled after that. So really, if, hhhch, if someone tries to subvert the laws of the foundation of the nation, which were meant to be cut in stone, forever, and if you saw them changing, then something's going on that shouldn't be going on, you see. Then you're supposed to get someone coming in to put it straight again. That's what the whole idea of ‘enemies foreign and domestic’. That's why Benjamin Franklin said to the people when they came out of the hall after the big meeting. And supposedly, in the history books anyway, they say that he was asked by the people outside, who couldn't get in, eh, it was a closed meeting. He says, what kind of government have you given us? And he says, a constitutional republic, or Republic, IF you can keep it.

Because history shows you that there's always power-hungry freaks who want to take it over, through any means possible, and any excuse possible. And for their own ends. By using the mob as they say.

So yeah, the US can if they want to, they can bring in their own tyrant to set things straight. And it's rather amazing for... the whole world's been watching the United States. It's been living on Hollywood for too long with all these movies of the proud American, you know, and the John Wayne, because John Wayne wouldn't have stood for that as you well know in his movies. But that era has been tossed out the window unfortunately. In a sense. I say unfortunately because it gave you some decent morality and decent role models at times as well, instead of the ones they've given you today.

But Hollywood has gone totally debauched for a long, long, long, long time. And it's all for, again, world government and communism. Because hhhhh, the Soviets released documentaries after their supposed fall, of their version of the Western culture, which they copied. Because the West was saying, oh look what we can do, we can have totally nude movements if we want in the West, and all this modern art where people can have eyes on their chins and things, you see. Russia didn't want to go to that level, but they wanted to still have control of the culture. So they gave them the miniskirt eventually. It took them, years later, but the miniskirt and promoted the sexual aspect to an extent. But nothing like the West. They even had in the documentaries, they had some of the people they put up as pop stars for Russia too, you see, and guitarists and things like that as they tried to compete and says, well you know, we're not completely morbid over here and that kind of thing. But in the documentary, they did admit, they couldn't believe how debauched all the stuff coming out of Hollywood was. Bezmenov knew it too because it was part of the agenda.

Communism knew how to use and destroy cultures by using the agendas that were used in the West. They promoted them. And they would forbid them in their own countries because they knew it would destroy the people. And if the people were destroyed, there's no more Soviet Union to Lord over, you see. And that's how it's done. Quite amazing.

But anyway, what you're seeing, and I keep getting back to it, what are the chances of having a Covid disease, one of the many Covid’s out there that cause no problems generally, you know... And you're going through, all countries, the countries across the world have been closed down to bring in all new system, eh, a global reset... And the global reset crew at the World Economic Forum have said it quite plainly, they are using this, this Covid idea to restructure society, sustainability, everything, hm. And at the same time, then they give you the unleashing, like something that was planned years ago and trained, these guys are trained for quite a few years, to unleash the Antifa groups on society to intensify the chaos, you see.

No, all these things would not happen at the same time. And again, the whole world is looking back and saying, well, the US doesn't seem to be doing anything about it. What happened to them, eh?

Then they play the legal game, oh, you can't bring any excess troops into your states, it's the law. And the people who are telling you that are taunting you with it because they're joining the rioters. They call them protesters, but look at Portland, it's still being burned. And they're going after, I'll put some articles up where you actually see they're attacking women, elderly women who are trying to put fires out in their homes that the Antifa's set away. Only they're protests, though, right, eh?

Portland protesters attack elderly women who tried to put out their fires - washingtontimes.com / 7 Aug 2020

We're watching this farce eh, and the world can't believe it that they're not trying to stop it. They don't seem to be, you know. So General Flynn as it came out, as I said, and he’s starting to speak the ultimatum, and he’s speaking to the general populace. Because yeah, do you really want two percent of the public, or even less than that, to overthrow your whole way of living?

It's not living. If they can charge, believe you me... What the Bolsheviks do, and communists do, is they get rid of the established order, the folk who might come against it. And that's why their enemy at the moment is the police. Then the mayors, etc. in the States are saying, abolish the police. Well hey, that leaves it wide open for complete communist takeover. And when there's no more police or whatever, the communists then send out their own people to round folk up and execute them! We know this! This is not rocket science. This is what they've always done in the past. What's so interesting is that they're not deviating from the old system here. They really are not. It's quite amazing to see this.

And people really are scratching their heads and saying, wait a minute here, I mean... If there's nothing at the top to stop it, then it's going to be everybody at the bottom, every man for himself. It's quite interesting to observe all this happening, isn't it? And you know it's... And of course if you go against them and say, well see, they attacked us. That's the standard technique in Marxist rebellion is to try and goad the authorities to use force against them. Then all the media will scream, oh look what they've done to us. So they want it to happen. This is all standard textbook stuff. And it is quite fascinating to watch it.

So the elite want it to happen. Obviously. The Antifa groups know it, they're getting funded by them, and all the top corporations, [Alan chuckles.] again, they're getting the funding from them, and Black Lives Matter. They've got their mayors bought and paid for by higher authorities, obviously, who want to disband the police, then they can get on with their elimination of everybody they want to eliminate. Nothing's going to stop it then. Then the rabid ones that are being put out in front, the attack dogs, will have their day. Then eventually they in turn are eradicated once they have established or gotten rid of most of the opposition, you know, eliminated them. Then they are eliminated gradually, and then they are airbrushed out of the photographs and so on and so on. Standard stuff.

And you have again, you have the intelligence agencies including Silicon Valley, that's all part of the same structure, including Google, etc. etc. They know who everybody is. Absolutely they know who everybody is. And for anyone in this day and age to think that, it's like, was it The Who that sang, I think, talking about 'my generation'. Everybody around the age of 18 thinks they’re on the cutting edge of something, they know things that adults just don't know. That's what they think, hhhch, that's why you're going to succeed. They have no idea what's going on, really, way above them. And they're given rope, they're given their lead, you see, and they're given rope and they'll keep, run with it and run with it thinking that they're really on a roll and they're really changing the world. All by themselves, eh? Except for the leaders who are smirking themselves because they won't get the chop eventually. Quite amazing times to watch it all.

The behaviorists are involved in it too. Because behaviorists, mind you, some of the best behaviorists work with all the intelligence agencies. Again, they are master manipulators. Because they understand human behavior and how to use you, without you even knowing that you're being used in 100 different ways.

Again, that Edge of Darkness, it's quite interesting. The guy who's the father of the girl who was one of the revolutionaries, then by the way, who were invited and, they really thought they were breaking in, but they were actually getting led into be killed off. And for other reasons as well. The father himself initially was no naïve character. He had worked supposedly, in the book form because this is from a novel. He'd worked in intelligence agencies in Northern Ireland, as an example. His job was to go in and recruit people to be informers within, and train them, inside the IRA. He'd be kind of psychopathic himself, to an extent. You could be, if you're brought up in a psychopathic milieu, you'll pick up traits of the psychopath, and you get trained into a narrow field of view, you won't think it's wrong, you know, you will behave like a psychopath.

So he knew how to get the field agents going and look after them. Right down to, and he says, it's even in the six-part series, if a person gets hurt, or one of the people that you're running, you're running these agents now, you see, and you want to get information out of them, you'd be everything to them. You'd be a husband, eh, a husband if it's a male too, a husband to them, or wife to them, to an extent. You're EVERYthing to them, you're a mother, father, everything to them. And they'll open up to you and spill secrets, etc. under certain circumstances. Right down to holding their hands and stroking their cheek and so on, you know, their face. That's how. You have no idea, [Alan chuckles.] you have no idea how they are trained to do all this kind of stuff. None at all.

Anyway, I've probably prattled on too much about that may be, I don't know. But it is interesting to watch it unfold. But don't forget, you just don't get a Covid thing coming out, and with all the data of fudged figures. I'll touch on that again. It's been admitted from Britain they've been, rather exaggerating a lot of the figures. And even the conservative numbers they give you now, or the drop of 10%, a decrease and...

It's no, come on. We know what's going on when Hancock said himself that, people forget in Britain, he says, there's 10,000 folk die every month here, you know. If you tally it up, if that's the case, if that's the normal death rate – because folk are dying all the time and folk are getting born all the time, this is birth and death's, eh – then really, if it started off in January, eh, you got about 70,000 folk would die off anyway, up to the present, under any circumstances. But now they're putting them all down as Covid, you see.

But you don't get the Covid idea, as I say, and the revolutions getting started, across the world, all, you know, and using racial attacks, etc. to do it as well. It's really quite amazing. All predictable, from long ago, absolutely predictable. Then you unleash them at the right time, and you want folk just to be stunned by this magic act. No. Everything can be reclaimed very quickly if people wanted it to be.

It would be interesting to see if Flynn and others start to come forward now and will go ahead with it. If not, then you've consented to communism, and all the horror that will come with it, you know. That's why you must always leave the public to themselves. Eventually, leave them to themselves when they don't want to know or don't want to listen or whatever. Because they acquiesce to their own disasters in the future and terrible slavery by their silence. That's what they call the silent majority.

Again, most folk being people, you know, or sheeple, at times, you know, take the path of least resistance, which is to shut up and keep your head down and comply to everything that's done. Until literally you're walking backwards, or you're running backwards with compliance, you see, because you'll never please the Masters, you see. Then what do you do? What will you do when it's all gone to hell and handbasket? Grovel and say how good you are, and maybe they can throw you more bread or something? You know?

It's not going to work.

You're dealing with an ideology which has no pity in it. In fact, pity is something that's to be drummed out of those who really rule it. It's beyond impartiality. Mind you, they use psychopaths at that level. But yeah, they have no compassion. You are an enemy. If you're not one of them, you are an enemy. And they mean a life-and-death enemy, that's what they mean by that. There's no coexistence with them, that's what they're taught. And they believe it. They will not coexist with you or anybody else unless you're one of them. And that you can parrot completely from their textbooks all the different quotes that they just parrot off like, you know, four legs good, two legs bad, from Orwell's Animal Farm. That's where you're going with it all.

Now remember folks again, I've gotta keep reminding myself at times, that you could donate to me if you go into @cuttingthroughthematrix.com and see how to do it. You've got electronic means to send it. You can send cash or checks. It's all fine by me. You can buy books and discs, or you can just do straight donations to me. Because these are dire times that we’re going through. I need the cash to keep running all my different sites. Hopefully I'll get another, you know, I'll get some better equipment now too. Because we're into the big phase now of this, is it.

It's important to keep going right now because you've got to be true to yourself, you know. Before anything else you've got to do that. If you keep walking backwards, or accepting, as I say, the easy path, easy way out, the easy way out may be easy temporarily until you find yourself going into the slaughterhouse. You know, you're following the Judas goat as they call it. That's how it's done, comply and comply until you can't walk backwards anymore. You can’t even get out of the maze, you know. That's how you’re being run by it all.

Again too, even if you had enough people and some tyrant type character, you know, to restore order or whatever, you've got to realize too that you’re in a life-and-death battle, already. I hope you understand. Because I've said before, you don't realize that the people at the top of our society, they are a society, secretive. Not totally secret but secretive, the ones that do all their bidding for them are definitely secretive, but you can see more of them, who they are, but the ones who give us our marching orders basically on behalf of the elite, you see. And the so-called philanthropists, like the CFR said, that it was time for them to take their place in helping to govern the world, a few years ago, I remember doing the story years ago. And here they are, suddenly you're supposed to obey them, the super-rich people. That really are not geniuses at all, they're just front people, well backed financially. Just like Epstein was too, mind you, for his role.

But you're supposed to obey them. And they get lots of publicity. Just like Einstein again, the star making machinery, eh. Make them into stars and give them little talks and TED talks and things, and then obey them. Because they're obviously very bright people, simply because they've got all these millions of dollars, or billions, and they must be bright, you see, so why don't you just obey them and stop trying to have your own ideas and impressions of things, eh. As Bertrand Russell says, training the public to believe in experts for everything. Well, we're here. We're trained. Yeah. But you remember, these characters at the top that are funding literally terrorist movements, overthrowing... What's the definition of a terrorist movement? Using radical techniques of rioting, killing, burning, looting, to achieve objectives. Hm? Political overthrows, of overthrowing of the system, the current system to put themselves in charge. They think. But the ones who are financing it all, if you, if you…

Look what happened after 9/11, let's just stay in this little area for a minute or two. After 9/11 they brought on all the laws against the, oh, we've got to just survey everybody, and the whole population, anybody could be a terrorist. You might not know you are one yet yourself, hm. So well I guess that's right. Very again, Orwell, you know, I didn't know myself until my daughter found out when I was speaking in my sleep, I didn't know I had these terrorist thoughts. So here we are all these years later, we've got acclimatize to that. But all your transactions have been watched like crazy. And if you, right up to the present, if you take any money from what they've stated is a terrorist organization, even as a donation or whatever, hm, then you're under suspicion immediately. Well, look at all the well-known corporations that have been throwing millions and billions to the Antifa and Black Lives Matter groups, the two radical communist organizations or Marxist organizations.

You'd better understand something. The ones at the top have sworn allegiance to this agenda. Sworn allegiance. Totally. Just like Bush Junior did with his PNAC group from 9/11 onwards with all the list of countries they started to take out, by taking the US into definitely unconstitutional wars, and definitely for lying reasons. That came out during the inquiry, and he said, I never said that Saddam Hussein had anything to do with 9/11, he says, I just said he was a bad man, we're better off without him. That's what he said. But no, no, at the time, he did say, oh yeah, he's behind all that too, you know. Born liar, eh. But he had a whole bunch of born liars with him in the PNAC group. And dedicated, dedicated guys who'd sworn again allegiance to getting this agenda through, regardless of the cost to anything or anybody else.

I remember in an interview Bush Junior years later said, when he was out of office he says, I remember telling this to so-and-so, I don't know who it was. He says, you know, he says, if the American public ever find out what we'd been up to, they'll chase us down the streets with ropes in their hands. That's what he said! That was the lying era of weapons of mass destruction and all that. All fuzzy pictures, and oh, that's definitely a rocket launcher. All these lies, eh. They were sworn on board with it. All of them. Because if it came out what they had all sworn an oath TO, what choice would you have? You'd have to deal with them. And everyone at the top that is part of the same story, that they’re peaceful protests. Have you seen Portland? It's still going on. It's 70 odd days I think, isn't it? Hmmm. So it's quite something. And you'd have to obviously say, why are you finding terrorist organizations?

So yeah, the problem with the US, like every other country, it's been so corrupt for so long. Soo long, you know. One thing is true as well, I can remember giving a talk in the 90s, I talked about the corruption everywhere. I said, the Tower of Babel, I says, is a tall tower. As they were getting plundered with the banks, at least twice a century, always, it's regular stuff. It's more now actually, hm. So you can’t get ahead of anything. The folks, their savings are always wiped out, if they have any at all, through inflation, where you need more and more money to buy the same basic, basic necessities. So the currency is always getting devalued, so there's no point in saving it. What you can buy for one dollar today is a fraction, tiny, tiny, tiny fraction of what it could buy maybe 20, 30 years ago, you can go way back into 100 odd years ago, and so on and so on. This is a con game of money, how it's worked out by the monopolists at the top.

I said, this tower, where they use nations, before they used Britain for years and years for all their wars, eh, not just Britain though. They used France at one point too. They had stakes in Holland. Every country has had its little Empire in some part of the globe that had been taken over in its colonial days. But don't think that somehow Africa was spared. Because Africa, Africans were always on the warpath with other tribes too in areas. They had their little empires on the go as well, within Africa. So don't pretend that no one, that they were just innocent of it all. Then you have the Native Americans in Canada and the States. They lived on battling with other tribes, you know. So no one's immune from this, you know. That's been the standard way everywhere you look.

But the corruption got to such an incredible state, from the 1970s onwards I'd say with corporate corruption like you wouldn't believe. And with wars that the people should have never been involved in. Because literally the ones who rule the world use your nations and your armies as though it was their own personal little armies. That's how they see it, you're there to protect their business, their empire abroad. But you paid it all, you paid for it all. They take all the profits from raw resources and everything else that they have, but they hand you the tab for the military and the expense of the equipment and everything, you know. So corrupt. Incredibly corrupt.

Never mind the drain, the constant drain on the public, until you get less and less back home, you're paying so much in taxes for all of this. I said, with the bank crashes on the corruption, the Tower of Babel is just swaying in the breeze now, held together by Band-Aids and scotch tape. It's had so many repairs to it, temporary. But it can't last forever like that. And here you are now, eh. But as I say, the elite knew that it would get to this stage because they've done this before down through time, to get into this stage, and they're transforming it into the next phase of their own domination again. So, it is their revolution at the top. Sure it is.

All you're really left with is, is there any will inside the US and elsewhere just to shrug this off, to stop it? And if you stop that you'd have to, [Alan chuckles.] like Bush said, chase them down the streets if they find out what we've been up to. You'd have to say, what were you corporations, what were you thinking of when you're funding these organizations that are burning cities? and threatening people? You'd have to, wouldn't you?

It would be interesting to see what's going to happen. As I say, I tend to look at it like a bystander looking at all of society. Because you think it's unique. The only things that are unique are the times and the little changes here and there, but it's always the same type of revolution. The radicalization of the youth done in exactly the same way. Then as Bezmenov said, once it's all over you have to go out and eliminate the real radical ones that were doing the killings and the violent, they were getting off on the violence, they enjoy, they enjoy it, you see. And they have to be dealt with once you bring in the peace, after you've conquered and you bring in the peace. I'm talking about the revolutionaries, when they're bringing in their communist system, then they get eliminated by their own people. Because they can't live in a peaceful system.

Nothing new under the sun they say, eh. That's why you can always use them, by the elite themselves, they can always plan. I wonder if they have, how many other revolutions they have planned over the next century or two, for their own next phase and next phase, you see? Interesting thought.

So it truly is an amazing time to witness all of this and to have maybe a deeper insight than some in what's really happening and where it will go. And the different possibilities too that are more remote but they're still there regardless if people suddenly have some kind of revival of some kind to oppose it all. That's what you would need.

And to counter that, though, you also have this amazing thing going on with Donald Trump, who's still prattling on about Russia, Iran, China, and he hasn't mentioned Syria, but I know the people behind him, is the same list, the PNAC group folks. The same list that Obama ran with too. The same list that Bush Junior ran with, all the different parties, all on board on the same agenda.

The folk really are just so sick and tired of war across the Middle East especially. It's a money pit, never mind a futile pit for the people back home and the incredible debt that it's costing, etc. So they're watching all of this and yet they don't have someone at the top that's… that has literally stopped that whole area. The folk were just so sick, it's a 30-years war for goodness’ sake! You had the lockdown of Iraq with no flyovers after the first, the Desert Storm, for a 10-year period, and then the full invasion after 9/11. In 2003 I think they did Iraq. But they did Afghanistan first, and they had the troops ready to go into Afghanistan [Alan chuckles.] before 9/11 hit. That's another thing too.

It's a list, you see, it's the list that General Wesley Clark talked about. And they haven't changed the list. And it makes no sense to the general public, because it's got nothing to do with your, with America's values or rights or whatever or necessities, at all. That's the whole problem with it. As I say, you have to really understand it, you seldom will figure out what huge intelligence agencies are up to. Seldom. Because they're brought up, I think they're raised in a different reality from birth probably most of them. Definitely within the families they are. They know a completely different view on everything than you have. They'll understand their own reason, they'll figure them out as to why you're into these countries and so on, very quickly. But you won't, you know.

But just the cost of it all, that alone is, when you're already into a postindustrial society, and now you're going to go into a post consumerist society, where you're just going to get basic essentials, you see, if you're lucky. Then, hhhhh, the folk just can't figure it out at all, you know. They can't. They can never figure out they're living in an agenda, living through a script as I've said so many times. It's a script. Step by step by step. And however they behave is, most folk again just go along with the flow, they can't figure it out, so they go along with the flow, the path of least resistance. That's what they do.

So it will be interesting when you have generals talking about other ways to bring back the Constitution and so on. Well really, the US itself hasn't been following it for years themselves, regardless of the party. They're following a different agenda, obviously. Don't forget that Bush Junior from the time of 9/11 onwards, you know, was quite open about, he didn't want to get any intelligence come into his office, and he told that to the different intelligence agencies that were coming into him, I don't want to hear anything that contradicts the fact that Iraq is a bad country, with a bad leader, just give me the stuff I want to hear. And that's what you got, you know.

If Trump's going to continue in taking out Iran and so on, and the countries around there, we all know about it, well, look at the fallout across the whole of Europe because of these wars. Massive armies of young men coming in, for years and years and years. This is all worked step-by-step, if we do this, this will cause this, and do that, and that will cause that. That's what intelligence agencies do. And we know that it's the elites' intelligence agencies that want a global system, and the eradication of borders, it's time for that phase now, that's what they say.

And it's their system, they don't care what you think. [Alan laughing.] Not at all. Np. You're still thinking you can vote and have rights and all that. No. No. They don't believe in that at all. N-n-n.

So yeah, where would it end and start and end, you know? But regardless, for those at the bottom that are use like a battering ram against society who really think, and again they're all getting manage by the well-trained ones above them, and the groups, the ones that do the actual overt violence and you can see it on camera and all that, they know who every single one of these people happens to be. Just like you see in Edge of Darkness, all these movements are full of infiltrators. Agents. And you never know who they are. You never ever suspect them. Some of them will be the leaders in fact. They wouldn't do the events themselves, the real violent, but you'll do it for them, you see, then you get in trouble down the road. This is all old stuff. Old stuff. A lot of these groups, by the way, years ago were funded by your own governments. Quietly. Quietly funded by them. But there you go. That's the world in which we live.

We're always, you know, I don't want to harp on about management, but we're always managed. I used to, I look at China and look at the so-called Third World countries around there in the Far East. Kept in poverty. Not just because they're poor [Alan chuckles.] they're kept in poverty. They were kept in poverty almost like, if you can imagine a world would be a kind of a timeline, and the leader saying, well you know, we'll move out of Britain and Germany and different countries, and we'll move eventually over to the Far East and different countries. Well, you keep the poor for maybe 50 years. You pay off everybody who rules over them. They're all on the pay. And everything is so corrupt and easily... Bribes go a long way in these countries. That's what they did with India for such a long time as well, you know. So you can keep them poor, and people in the country make sure they stay poor. Then maybe 50 years down the road, with the next generation or even 1/3 generation, who knows, you can use that crew of poor folk to do the industry, you see. That's how it's done. I'm not kidding you. That really is how it's done, you know. Again, the folk never figure that out.

Occasionally you'll get the exposes coming out to the general public, like Confessions of an Economic Hitman. Remember, that was a guy who went into the countries on behalf of the World Bank and the IMF and the big international corporations that worked with your intelligence agencies. They tried to buy over some leaders at times, they put them in if they hadn't done already or they'll buy them over or bribe them over. Then they call it, you know, we want you to do this for us. And if you said no, you see, and you owed the money to the World Bank or the IMF and that, then they say, you better do what we tell you or we'll send in the jackals. So, his job was to try to convince them to go along and just pay up and then do what they want them to do. These are the countries that had a stake in their country, they send in the jackals. He talked about it quite openly. He may be psychopathic himself to do a job like that in the first place, you know. But that's how things really are. That's how it is.

But yeah that's how long-term business plans with empires and countries and nations, and now you don't even need the countries, just empires of business, they can keep a whole area of the planet in poverty for another, they'll say, we'll keep them in poverty for another 50 years, and 75 years, by that time my son-in-law or my grandson will be in charge or whatever, and he'll reap the benefits of that and will move in there when he's in his prime and use the cheap labor. That's how you do things.

You see, you'd never think of it because you've been trained from birth to be naïve. You've been trained from birth as I said before to be domesticated. Domesticated animals are trained and bred, once you get ones that are more passive, you interbreed them and interbreed them and interbreed them in the cattle until you get the perfect cow that will reproduce lots of milk and cause little fuss at all. You know, when you see the cattle of some parts of Latin America, they're more back to the natural state and those things are pretty nasty. It doesn't matter if it's a cow or a bull, they can be pretty nasty. But the West is a more, great, you know, domestication and selective breeding, choosing the mating up of them, just like they did with the bees to get a passive bee colony so you can get honey off them without too many stings. It's the same kind of idea. It works awfully well.

But you do the same thing with the population of people. Darwin talked about it. He touched on these kind of thoughts, just like exercises of the mind sort of thing. Then his descendant’s including Charles Galton Darwin took it to the next level. Charles Galton Darwin, who was the physicist remember who worked on the Manhattan Project, the atomic bomb project in World War II, who came out with The Next Million Years, you know, saying that, yeah, and admitting what we all know, or we should know. He said, yeah, he says, there's always been slavery, and there's always been slaves, and I don't see why it would never end. It might take different forms of slavery, slightly disguised so that folk can have a... If you train the public, they won't catch on, and that's what it is. When you're a wage slave for instance, [Alan chuckles.], eh, that's a slave, a wage slave.

And you're a good slave. Because as I've said in my talks in the 90s, at one time they used to have whips and guys with whips standing over trenches, who are digging trenches and irrigation things in Egypt. That costs, you know, that takes time, and then you pay the overseers, etc. Then you have to feed and clothe the slaves. And because they're expensive, if you've trained them that they've now got value, you don't want them to die, so you've got to give them medical treatment and so on and all that. That happened in the US too during the slave times. So they took care of them to an extent, you see.

But eventually that's what happened, when they brought in the real entrepreneurs of money and commercial banking and commercial mercantile banking, then they were advised in the mid-1800s, rather than have slaves, you know, that you have to pay all this money out, that's loss of profit. Why don't you just give them a paycheck, just enough they can feed and clothe themselves and get to work, then they have to pay for all that themselves out of their paycheck, and if they need medical treatment then they have to pay for that themselves, if they can afford it. And you will save a bundle of money.

And that's why... So they gave you, you know, the worker, the right of the worker, the honest labor, oye. [Alan chuckles.] Then they started taxing it all back off you from the government end as well. Which was of course part of the definition of slavery. I mentioned that years ago, the same thing, that it was illegal to actually tax someone's wage because it was classed as slavery then, you see. No, you can't tax someone's labor. The only ones to get tax in the US were people who worked for the government at one point, and incoming goods. Most of the money was from incoming goods, import duties. That was plenty to keep everybody happy back then.

But once the new system came in with the real sharp men, you know, coming in and en mass and seeing, oh, how they could do all the scams, that was it. They went very quickly into the same system of Britain. Britain had been sunk long ago, you know, by the same monopoly characters. But folk again at the bottom never, generally never figure it out. Domesticated people, using all kinds of social sciences, and studying the public to make them docile and to make them...

I mean, hhhch, not just docile, I mean, ahhhhhh... You know every little thing I touch on sometimes is a big talk itself. Aldous Huxley talked about it, didn't he? Getting back to Charles Galton Darwin, he said, yeah there's always been slavery in some form or another and I don't expect why it would be any different in the future. And he was right in that, you could be in slavery and not recognize it in this day and age. You understand that? [Alan chuckles.] And he believed in his own class’s right to rule over the rest, right down to population control of the rest, etc., and breeding the people for specific functions. Just like Aldous Huxley mentioned in Brave New World, and Brave New World Revisited. A lot of it's already here, you see. It's implemented.

But the first step is to keep people dumb and entertained. Give them their entertainment. Don't let them participate or create their own entertainment, which still keeps the mind active if you create your own, you know. Keep them all stuck in their own little houses watching that Lucifer screen, you know, the light screen. [Alan scoffs.] And keep them, just their mouths open, aaaaaaaaa, until they go to bed after coming home from, if they've got a job to come home from, and give them sports, give the men sports, you see. That also was touched on by Orwell. He said, the people are kept, talking about his novel, he says, and the people are kept, the men are kept happy with beer and sports and so on, it was too easy to do.

Well, it's all been done, you see. Ffft. Domesticated. Don't think for yourself, you've got all these experts to tell you what the take is, the proper take is on any particular subject, you see. They'll give you your opinions. There's articles coming out now from behaviorists that are paid awfully well with our tax money again to try to con us into complying with all vaccines and complying with everything and complying with experts. And not to oppose them, just do what you're told. One of them actually said that in Australia. [Alan chuckles.] It's just amazing. It really is. You should never be bored in this day and age. Especially now, watching all of this unfold.

Getting back to Trump again, I mean, the man is fixated, because it's part of the reason they put, he was put in, was to continue the same wars, maybe even finish them off. Yep. And he’s pushed for [Alan chuckles.] military going around your doors giving you vaccinations, he says. Does that sound like a man who's listening to the people? Yp. You get little clues through everything. Even with the rioters, or those who run the rioters. They're all saying to Trump, you can't bring the troops in to stop the riots. But have you heard them complaining about him saying, he's going to put the military around door-to-door giving vaccinations? No. Nope. [Alan chuckles.] You get lots and lots of little clues about the fact that nothing is quite what it seems to be, eh.

So this is the testing time for most people to decide, you know, who you are and what you're going to do. I read an article today put out by the behaviorists themselves. It's almost like something that was put out for themselves by themselves, as they discuss ways to make the people comply with what they want you to do. And through the Covid idea of shaming, all different techniques they're going to really push hard now to shame the public and shun the public and get others to turn more and more on the general public within your own groups and so on, and even arrest people, you know, this is the next step. It was all laid out long ago actually in Event 201. But even before that back in the Rockefeller one on the sciences that would be unfolding etc. It's all in that too.

So you're living through your script. The whole idea of it just evolving is utter nonsense. Every step that's being unfolded now was planned and discussed, you can see the articles from years ago, step-by-step by step-by-step and stage 4, 5, 6 and 7, etc., right down to arresting people if they won't comply. But these behaviorists now are coming out openly, and with ridiculous articles, like in Forbes for instance, just saying that it's time the public stop thinking, don't think for yourselves, you're not qualified to think for yourself, listen to the experts. Pretty well saying [Alan chuckles.] that it's disobedient to think for yourselves.

What was I talking about earlier, domestication of animals, to get a domesticated animal that's compliant and gives you less problems and hassle, well, that's what they're... The arrogance is phenomenally in your face right now from all these different sources. And the manipulators, you understand too, if you had a counterrevolution, you'd have to go over, you'd have to go after those who have funded it, promote it and training, and who are behind at the high up. You would have to do it. Of course you'd have to do it. And they know that too, that's why they're not going to stop. If they stop, that's what just might happen with some fluke, that's what would happen.

So to the bitter end, death, and preferably your death, they're going to stick to it. But they're quite open about it in all their articles, the contempt they have for the general public... Don't think for yourselves. You're just a layperson, and look at the experts, as the experts keep contradicting themselves. Even the same experts will change their mind back-and-forth, back-and-forth, back-and-forth. Look at Fauci, wear a mask, don't wear a mask, wear a mask, don't wear a mask, well maybe you should arrest folk they don't wear a mask, yut-dut-dut-dut-dut.

Yep. Right down to the fake testing. The useless tests. One guy, some politician from the States was, he was tested in the morning before he left to go to this other state, and he was negative. He arrived at the other state, right, about an hour later, got tested again and he was positive. So they put him back home. They go back home, he tested negative again. Three different results in one day [Alan chuckles.] with these ridiculous tests. But don't think for yourself, you know.

Sad times indeed, eh. So before I talk about some of the articles I have here to talk too on, remember what the whole US was based upon when it was supposedly founded initially, was to stay out of foreign entanglements. He meant treaties, you know. Now, treaties can be overt or covert treaties. Like "special relationships" they had with Britain and other countries during the Cold War. If you're signed on to these, this is what dragged Britain into World War I and II, you know, was treaties. Well, they invaded so-and-so, so we have to go there and do, and things like that, you see. And because you sign on to these things the super manipulators can make things happens, so that yeah, you've already signed on to help them out, you make it happen, the other country's attacked, or whatever, or appears to be attacked or threatened, and you're in automatically. So it's all manipulation, you see, by higher powers. So remember that too, that the US this is supposed to stay out of foreign entanglements. That's what it meant, foreign wars disputes or treaties. That's what it's really about.

Well, look at what's happened. Europe has been demolished by mass migration of refugees with these ongoing wars. Mind you, it's being helped along by those who want it all to happened and to end the nation-states. You can take your pick from the globalist themselves that run international corporations and the ones at the bottom that help with their communist revolution. End of the nation-state, you see. That's how it's done.

They're not finished yet of course. They're still bringing them in. Through the United Nations, the communist organization too. They're just flooding them in and bringing more treaties to take more and more and more in until, until there's nothing left of you. It's just like the statues in the West, you eradicate all the past. Eventually they burn all the libraries too, you see. They were pretty well doing that anyway before they gave you the Internet, eliminating lots of books and information. Now they're going into really the eradication of them. So libraries and history, statues, any memory of history, and then eventually the people themselves that are left there, [Alan chuckles.] who are the original peoples, and then they're eradicated as well, you see. Step by step by step. That's how it's done.

We know who the different culprits are down through time, and watching them, who's advocating the end of your nation-states, etc. A well-planned organization indeed. And a well-planned war. It's multipronged. As Bezmenov said, the cultural war itself under the guise of sexual liberation, that totally destroyed family units and individual lives galore for goodness’ sake. And made everyone dependent in many ways on the state. As long as you don't breed, the same elite are quite happy. But you think you're making your own decisions, eh, I'm not going to have any children and... So you're fulfilling what your bosses, your masters want to happen, don't have any live births at least. That's how it's done.

But no, you're making your own decisions. Rather an amazing species, really. We’re so brainwashed from birth as I say, not to think for ourselves. A lot of folk cannot ever break out into the real world and see. And the shock would destroy them, a lot of them actually. It can hit you like... Some people get it quickly, it's like a ton of bricks, it's just booomfff, it hits them, and it floors them when they get this sudden insight. It's not easy to handle if you get it very quickly, or a lot at one time.

So yeah, you have foreign entanglements. Then you have all the articles I read years ago too about a time of what the military-industrial complex would do in a time of peace, a world peace. Well, they went on to make all the kind of gadgetry and electronic surveillance instead of just making weaponry, in preparation for a time of peace, you see. So the public would be spied on, you'd all be the enemy. And that's what they've done, isn't it? [Alan chuckles.] You are all the enemy now, and you can all be terrorists, you know. Yep. You just might wake up someday and suddenly you're a terrorist.

They make billions off us. We are the only source... Marx was right in a lot of things too, sure he was, when it came to studying how things worked in his day. He explained it pretty well, and that all wealth really comes from the people itself, not just the worker. But yeah, it's made of, and they make it compulsory, you must have this, and you must... With the Covid thing you're going to have to get a cell phone, they claim, or wear a bracelet. A manacle, you know, be a prisoner if you're not going to comply. You're going to have to just get a manacle put on you, a true slave. And maybe they'll put a little star on your back as well so the public can boo you and throw things at you if you venture outside the house. This is how they do it, folks.

Disgusting. Disgusting. And it will work because the public are so easily manipulated. Every strata of them. Everybody is figured out, everybody. No exception.

So the masses that they've helped to flood across Europe, they're not finished yet, you see. Don't forget, Iran has been one of the biggest groups of migrants into Britain, for example, for years now. Because would you stay in a country where for years now you've been, maybe 20 odd years, maybe more, you're going to get annihilated just like Iraq! Obliterated. You're going to be bombed out of existence, into the Stone Age. Would you stay there? Eventually you're going to crack or your wife or your husband is going to say, just, that's it, I've had it, and you migrate, etc.
Well, that's how you get them out. This is psychological warfare too.

And the big chessboard of course, then they come into Europe. And they have no affiliation with the histories of the countries. They bring young guys in, that are angry already [Alan chuckles.] with what the West has been doing, and they blame the West, they can’t think any further than anything else behind it. Then they're a good willing army to turn on the domestic populations of Britain and other countries that they've moved into. This is... You've had recent examples of this in fact. Many people knew at the time when they were coming in, by the thousands, that big, long road of them in through Germany and through Europe, that was all, and they were all getting financed to come in as well. This is a long-term war, and everybody is a player without even knowing what they are actually doing. But they're all players in making it all happen.

So here's the next one, you had the big, massive explosion in Beirut with the story, very clever too, eh? A ship comes in, it gets impounded for maybe about six years ago they say, an old wreck, but they had all these, you know, thousands of tons of explosives on it, ammonium nitrate I think, the fertilizer stuff. It just happened be full of that. So it was, they brought it into port, they stored it in a big, a big kind of hanger area or whatever, and eventually it goes off. Can you imagine a Trojan horse like that? What's this? Oh well, let's haul it into port and we'll bring it in and store it here. What is it? It's high, high explosives. We'll put it in our main area for the, the dock is like a bullhorn, eh, the head and the horns, that's what it looks like there at that particular port. So everything comes in that port. So they have it stored right there. So the whole place is demolished, you know. It says...

Up to 300,000 Left Homeless by Beirut Explosion: Live Updates

globalresearch.ca / 5 Aug 2020

Beirut's governor Marwan Abboud says some 300,000 people have lost their homes with damages ranging from $3-5bn.

(Alan: It's probably a lot more than that actually. Nevermind what's happened. I mean, they can't even get the food coming in now with the ports destroyed. And there are certain people rejoicing over it. And of course there's this, they're talking about what caused it or who caused it or whatever. But you know, I mean, there are certain intelligence agencies wouldn't miss that sitting there, no way at all, they'd have accelerants all sitting to go off whenever they press a little button, you know.)

The explosion on Tuesday sent shockwaves across the city, causing widespread damage as far as the outskirts of the capital.

Officials said they expect the death toll to rise further as emergency workers dig through the rubble to search for survivors.

The cause of the explosion was not immediately clear. Officials linked the blast to some 2,750 tonnes of confiscated ammonium nitrate that were being stored in a warehouse at the port for six years.

I-yi-yi. Silly indeed, eh? Hm? [Alan chuckles.] And their enemies are rejoicing, you know, through it all. But yeah, it's amazing. Nevermind the aftermath too. I mean, you'd be surprised how many chemicals, and I don't know if they're using asbestos too in the buildings or whatever, but that happen in New York City with 9/11, a lot of folk really, your lungs are destroyed eventually years later because of the asbestos at the time, the clouds that were happening. I could go on and about that too, but I better not even touch that. But yeah, so there you have what's happening. So you got to have an awful lot of folk again, another bunch of folk from a wartime scenario type thing leaving their nation. You know that's going to happen. A lot of them actually have already left before this happened. Some of them even living in Ireland.

But yeah, you can force the folk out by constantly threatening to annihilate them if you're powerful enough to do it. But now you're going to see thousands more leaving, like another Army coming in, a river, you know, a river of people flowing into Europe, etc. So this is a great agenda for breaking in the end of the nation-state, isn't it. It's quite good. It works awfully well. Very efficiently. Most folk can't fathom it out, you know, we better wait to let an expert tell us what their definitive cause is or their hypothesis will be, you know. There you go.

Now, coronavirus, right, this thing that can, ahhhhhhhhhhhhh, I don't want to even go into the thing. But anyway, it's an agenda, right, a massive agenda. Lockdown the entire economy, destroy the economy, bring in the global reset, a new way of living, total austerity, etc. etc., that's the plan. Couldn't do without it, right. So here's an article that says coronavirus restrictions, the actual restrictions because of coronavirus...

Study: Coronavirus restrictions killing 10,000 children per month and 'wasting' and 'stunting' millions more

washingtonexaminer.com / 29 July 2020

(A: That's true, you're going to see a lot more of this too. That's just the cost of it, you know, you can't make an omelet without breaking eggs. So…)

A new study shows that coronavirus restrictions and lockdowns are leading to the deaths 10,000 children per month and stunting the growth of millions more.

"It's been seven months since the first COVID-19 cases were reported, and it is increasingly clear that the repercussions of the pandemic are causing more harm to children than the disease itself," (A: It is so ironical, UNICEF, right, UNICEF that was, the first head of that was Julian Huxley.) UNICEF Executive Director Henrietta Fore said. "Household poverty and food insecurity rates have increased."

(A: Well, it takes a genius to tell you that. You know, I think we're all living through it, right. Shut down the economy, right. Only a few select stores open, the big corporations and so on.)

The study, conducted by researchers at (A: Again, Johns Hopkins University. They play every side of the game here, eh.) Johns Hopkins University and published in the Lancet medical journal (A: That's the British one.), said that hunger stemming from coronavirus restrictions is causing the deaths of 10,000 children per month and stunting the growth of another 550,000 per month.

(A: So they're already noticing it, you see.)

"By having schools closed, by having primary healthcare services disrupted (A: Well, they've been shut... Nobody else can get in for any other treatment.), by having nutritional programs dysfunctional, we are also creating harm," Victor Aguayo, the head of UNICEF's nutrition program, said.

(A: Well, I guess he’s an expert. I'd never have figured out if you shut down the economy, and folk can't get food, and the farms are going under too, and they closed down in Canada for instance most of the meatpacking plants as well so you can't get the protein. I'm glad they've got experts to tell us that it will create harm on the physical body. I could tell them that without getting a salary of maybe a million or two every month, eh. [Alan laughing.] So…)

“By having schools closed, by having primary healthcare services disrupted, by having nutritional programs dysfunctional, we are also creating harm,” Victor Aguayo, the head of UNICEF’s nutrition program, said.

(A: Now, here's the thing too, you see, a lot of these children, a lot of the children in this day and age, because of the destruction of family life, the massive unemployment in the West and everywhere else too, because they gave all the factories and that to China, you know, through free trade. All the elite who, the same elites who are bringing in the next part of their system for austerity, gave all your factories and all your work to China. That was the deal, free trade, eh, and the GATT treaty, etc. etc. All boring stuff to me now because I did it all years ago.)

(A: So yeah, here's the effects. And the destruction of the family unit too, so you've got single moms, and then trying to work for themselves and support children, etc. So a lot of them get food at school, you see. That's again, your socialistic system, let's make everybody utterly dependent on the system. Destroy the family unit. Destroy this, destroy that. Then feed the children at school. Socialism, socialism. But then you shut it all down. You shut down the schools, eh, and they're not getting the food anymore. Etc. etc. It's all rather evident, eh.)

The disruption of food chains has caused prices to rise,

(A: Well, again, that was part of what they said years ago. I can remember doing the article from, I think it was the Club of Rome again, and it was also put into newspapers across Canada and the States and elsewhere of a coming austerity. And how the governments were actually giving authority to – again, being fascist governments, fascist/communist governments, right, or socialist governments, which it’s all the same thing to me – giving authority to energy companies, now that they’d sold all your main infrastructure off, like water, electricity and power and all that kind of thing, off to private businesses, giving them authority to really start to increase their costs to the payers. And they said that, that everything is energy – that's Technocracy – therefore, if you want to reduce the population then you simply increase the prices of the same energy sources. And food is energy. Electricity is energy. Gas, electricity, they're all energy. So you do the same with that too and you watch the population start to get sick, and get cold in the winter, the childhood diseases…)

(A: I can remember as a child in Britain you didn't have all the double pane glass and things like that in the windows and you'd go to bed and there'd be frost inside the windows in your bedroom.

You'd get up and the morning with your breath and so on, and it would be a lot thicker. That's just the way it was. Everybody had these problems with sinuses and earaches and things like that, it was fairly common. So you'll see it all return again. Then you didn't have the same food either, where you couldn't afford decent food, hm. So here is…)

The disruption of food chains has caused prices to rise, (A: Again, that's genius, eh. Just shut down everything.) making it difficult for many regions that already had difficulty acquiring food before the pandemic even more difficult, and Dr. Francesco Branca of the World Health Organization (A: [Alan chuckles.] Oh, there’s the WHO again, eh.) said the disruption will be evident for years to come.

(A: Well, I guess the agenda is working, eh.)

An “increase in child malnutrition” is causing “steep declines in household incomes,

And it's going to get an awful lot worse they say here, that's what the whole story about, going to get an awful lot worse. Well, that's what the lockdown is FOR, to bring in the new system, folks. The elites’ new system. It's the same elite, they're not losing anything, it's the next phase of their revolution.

Another article here…

Farmageddon Continues As Bankruptcies Rise 8%

zerohedge.com / 6 Aug 2020

The American Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF) released a new report Tuesday (Aug. 4) showing farm bankruptcies continue to increase.

AFBF found bankruptcies rose 8% over the last 12 months (from June 2019 to June 2020), with 580 filings. The Midwest, Northwest, and Southeast recorded the most bankruptcies, representing 80% of all filings across the US. Wisconsin was the epicenter for filings, followed by Nebraska, Georgia, and Minnesota.

(A: So, everything is working along the right agenda, eh. It says…)

Farmers are on government life-support.

AFBF's President Zippy Duvall said the new rounds of farm aid helped cushion farmers from the economic impact of the virus-induced recession.

(A: [Alan chuckles.] It’s not virus-induced, it’s mandated-by-government recession.)

AFBF said, "approximately 60% of farm bankruptcies have been completed successfully – the highest successful percentage of all the reorganization chapters."

Don't forget, you're going into, you see, the elite as I've mentioned so many times and years ago too, are bringing in a socialist/communist system for the general population to live under. It's more efficient for them, and at this phase of their agenda. They won't have to really haggle with the public, they just order you in socialism what to do and that’s it, they pass the laws and rules, and you comply. Or they come and get you. So it's their agenda.

Under socialism, like Justin Trudeau said when he really praised communist China, he said that they could really handle the emergencies like Covid very well because they don't have to really be bothered with this idea of persuading the public to go along with it, they just tell them to go along with it. And he said, it's very efficient, you see. Well that's exactly, he's just parroting what the elite already know. They even had articles about that, will we be as efficient as China since they're communist, etc. and compliant.

So hhhhh, yeah, it's all unfolding the way it's supposed to unfold here in the West with bankruptcies and so on. That's part of the new sustainability program, right. That's your Agenda for the 21st century, the Millennium Project, etc., etc., etc. It's all the same thing, 2030, it's all parts of the whole century. M-hm.

I remember too, it was one of the heads of the Department of Agriculture at the United Nations said years ago that farming was too important to be left to farmers. They want total control over it through, by using big international corporations.

England to revise DOWN its Covid-19 death toll

(A: This is a wonderful bit of PR. Because the death toll, oh we’re actually going put it down by 10%...)

by up to 10 percent after bizarre ‘counting mishap’

rt.com / 6 Aug 2020

(A: It’s way beyond, you know, 10%. They’ve got about 50… Literally it’s a toss of a coin if you’re doing the swab tests in the back of the nose and the throat. Because they’re not meant for that, those tests, to give an accurate diagnosis at all. Apart from the fact too, [Alan chuckles.] they're putting everybody down as dying of Covid. [Alan chuckles.] I mean really. So here's how they word it here. It's a good way of doing it, eh, make it all, it's only 10% mistakes. No, no, it's way beyond that. Of course it is. So…)

Up to 10 percent of England’s coronavirus death toll could be wiped out due to reporting errors in which “Covid-19” deaths on the official register were logged months after positive tests regardless of the circumstances.

Public Health England currently counts the deaths of all people who have tested positive for Covid-19 among the coronavirus fatality total whether their death was related to the disease or not, an error which was noted in July, prompting the suspension of the daily death toll and an “urgent review” of protocol.

(A: [Alan chuckles.] Oh goodness, eh.)

In other words, as many as 4,170 fatalities could be wiped off England’s current Covid-19 death toll of 41,686.

(A: You see how they do it here, by taking it down 10%, rather than taking it down about 50%. [Alan chuckles.] Or even less, is the actual… The cause of death is often completely unrelated to the Covid, you see.)

According to reports in UKmedia, Secretary of State for Health and Social Care Matt Hancock (A: [Alan chuckles.] Well, he’s made a few bloopers, that one.) will bring all coronavirus fatality reporting in line with Scotland and Northern Ireland public health models, wherein a death is marked as Covid-19-related only if it occurs within 28 days of a positive test.

(A: …even that, you see, it could have nothing to do with the fact you’re dying, regardless of when they do it. M-hm.)

“At the moment, the figures are just confusing,” said Professor Carl Heneghan from the Center for Evidence-Based Medicine at Oxford University.

“All it does is muddy the water. While deaths are falling in Scotland, PHE data suggests matters are worse in England.”

(A: Hm, there ya go.)

There you go. That's, again, that's... aachhh, let's forget that. [Alan chuckles.]

CDC director acknowledges hospitals have a monetary incentive to overcount coronavirus deaths

washingtonexaminer.com / 1 Aug 2020

(A: That's like a repeat of what we've heard before but this came out on 1 August, and it says…)

U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention Director Robert Redfield agreed that some hospitals have a monetary incentive to overcount coronavirus deaths as they do deaths for other diseases.

“I think you’re correct in that we’ve seen this in other disease processes, too. Really, in the HIV epidemic, somebody may have a heart attack but also have HIV — the hospital would prefer the [classification] for HIV because there’s greater reimbursement,” Redfield said during a House panel hearing Friday when asked by Rep. Blaine Luetkemeyer about potential “perverse incentives.”

Redfield continued: “So, I do think there’s some reality to that. When it comes to death reporting, though, ultimately, it’s how the physician defines it in the death certificate, and … we review all of those death certificates. So I think, probably it is less operable in the cause of death, although I won’t say there are not some cases. I do think though [that] when it comes to hospital reimbursement issues or individuals that get discharged, there could be some play in that for sure.”

But we know that. I mean, we know that they get, if they put them down as Covid patient, you see, they get extra thousands of bucks per bed. And if they put them down, and then put a ventilator in them, it might be, what was it, 40 odd thousand dollars per patient. And that's what kills them. It's utterly corrupt, folks! Sure it is.

Also this whole idea of persuasion, all the, ALL the money that they, you know, the money’s getting thrown out like never before. Last time you saw anything like this was when Halliburton, this big, massive umbrella group were managing all the thousands of small and big corporations that went over to Iraq to support the troops and build water supplies and things like that. That was the excuses for it all. Millions and millions of dollars per day were spent on all of that, and none of it was really followed up to where it even went or was it used for things it was supposed to be used for. It was a complete free-for-all for corporations.

Well, it's the same thing now with all these, universities are our biggest enemy. They churn out all these little petty psychologists and behaviorists every year, who must live on either on grants or get into a job teaching the same thing. They've all got their hands out, we can help with Covid, we can manage the public with you because we understand how they tick, you see. This is Yale, this is one of them from Yale. I don't know how much money they were given, but it says…

COVID-19 Vaccine Messaging, Part 1 - Federal Government and Yale Are Holding Clinical Trials on How Best to ‘Persuade’ Americans to Take COVID-19 Vaccines

clinicaltrials.gov / 7 July 2020

(A: It was completed on July 7, 2020, first post, it says. So what they've done, this is behaviorists, you see, and psychologists and so on. It says…)

Brief Summary:

This study tests different messages about vaccinating against COVID-19 once the vaccine becomes available. Participants are randomized to 1 of 12 arms, with one control arm and one baseline arm. We will compare the reported willingness to get a COVID-19 vaccine at 3 and 6 months of it becoming available between the 10 intervention arms to the 2 control arms.

Study participants are recruited online by Lucid (A: The Lucid company, ha!) which matches census based sampling in online recruitment.

(A: They give you a list of messages they can put out to the public, you know. In other words, find out why they'll take it and find out why other people will not take it, then work on why they will not take it and try to change their mind. Or even cause guilt. One of them actually says...)

Other: Guilt message

Other: Embarrassment message

(A: They can target you if you say no.)

Other: Anger message

Other: Trust in science message

(A: We've already got them out today, I'll even touch on some of the trust in science, you're too dumb and stupid, because you're not a scientist, so trust in science message. They're already doing this stuff on you. They pay for these behaviorists to come up with these ideas, eh, what will work on you and how to implement it on the public.)

Other: Not bravery message

Other: Control message

Other: Baseline message

Other: Personal freedom message

Other: Economic freedom message

Other: Self-interest message

Other: Community interest message

(A: You don't want to harm the community really, do you? I mean, by refusing you might be endangering other people. Yep, it's all happening already, eh?)

Other: Economic benefit message

(A: So in the actual layout for the study it gives you the enrollment and it says…)

Actual Enrollment: 4000 participants

Allocation: Randomized

Intervention Model: Parallel Assignment

Intervention Model Description: In this study, 2/15 of participants will be assigned to a control message (bird feeding passage), 3/15 of sample to a baseline vaccine message, and 1/15 to each of the 10 other treatment arms.

(A: This is kind of standard techniques that they use. So they give you the arm…)

Arm	Intervention/treatment

Sham Comparator: Control

Control message about birdfeeding

Other: Control message

2/15 of the sample will be assigned to the pure control group, which is a passage on the costs and benefits of bird feeding.

(A: This is the techniques that they are using to get to vaccine, believe it or not.)

Active Comparator: Baseline message

These participants will be assigned a message about the benefits of vaccination. All other treatment arms include this baseline language.

Other: Baseline message

3/15 of the sample will be assigned to a control group with a message about the effectiveness and safety of vaccines.

(A: Right.)

Experimental: Personal freedom

1/15 of the sample will be assigned to this intervention, which is a message about how COVID-19 is limiting people's personal freedom and by working together to get enough people vaccinated society can preserve its personal freedom.

(A: This is, they're doing all these studies to see what's more efficient, you see, for getting the people to comply. They go through…)

Experimental: Economic freedom (A: …right…)

1/15 of the sample will be assigned to this intervention, which is a message about how COVID-19 is limiting peoples's economic freedom and by working together to get enough people vaccinated society can preserve its economic freedom.

(A: …all the lies that they're telling you here, right. Then they go into…)

Experimental: Social benefit, self-interest

1/15 of the sample will be assigned to this intervention, which is a message that COVID-19 presents a real danger to one's health, even if one is young and healthy. (A: You see how, this isn't even based on the facts here, you know.) Getting vaccinated against COVID-19 is the best way to prevent oneself from getting sick.

(A: So, a self-interest message. And then…)

Experimental: Social benefit, community interest

1/15 of the sample will be assigned to this intervention, which is a message about the dangers of COVID-19 to the health of loved ones. (A: …you don't want to endanger your loved ones, do you?) The more people who get vaccinated against COVID-19, the lower the risk that one's loved ones will get sick. Society must work together and all get vaccinated.

(A: You see, so that's the message, that society must work together and all get vaccinated.)

Experimental: Economic benefit

1/15 of the sample will be assigned to this group, which is a message about how COVID-19 is wreaking havoc on the economy and the only way to strengthen the economy is to work together to get enough people vaccinated.

(A: It’s the same message with them all, right. That’s the answer to everything. Your own immunity is just, even though your herd immunity, which most folk who have tested positive, the bulk of them all end up with complete immunity, you know, from your own body, natural immunity. That’s what your body does, that’s what it’s for, you know. But regardless, no, they want you want to get the vaccine, eh.)

(A: They planned this years ago, this whole idea of mandatory vaccination. When they were lobbying government, I have all the articles here over many years where they said that they were going to get the government to mandate vaccinations, to make it cost-effective for companies. Because before, like the swine flu one, or the one in 2009, they said that millions of doses were just dumped because the people didn't want it. So they're trying to MAKE you want it, make you take it, you see, by terror and fear so's they can make massive profits. That's what it's about. Then…)

Experimental: Social pressure- guilt

1/15 of the sample will be assigned to this message. The message is about the danger that COVID-19 presents to the health of one's family and community. The best way to protect them is by getting vaccinated and society must work together to get enough people vaccinated. Then it asks the participant to imagine the guilt they will feel if they don't get vaccinated and spread the disease.

Experimental: Social pressure- embarrassment

1/15 of the sample will be assigned to this message. The message is about the danger that COVID-19 presents to the health of one's family and community. The best way to protect them is by getting vaccinated and by working together to make sure that enough people get vaccinated. Then it asks the participant to imagine the embarrassment they will feel if they don't get vaccinated and spread the disease.

(A: Oh my, I’d be really embarrassed. M-hm. Then…)

Experimental: Social pressure- anger

1/15 of the sample will be assigned to this message. The message is about the danger that COVID-19 presents to the health of one's family and community. The best way to protect them is by getting vaccinated and by working together (A: …again…) to make sure that enough people get vaccinated. Then it asks the participant to imagine the anger they will feel if they don't get vaccinated and spread the disease.

(A: This is from Yale, eh. Big money to come up with this trash here to con you into compliance. And then...)

Experimental: Trust in science

1/15 of the sample will be assigned to this message about how getting vaccinated against COVID-19 is the most effective way of protecting one's community. Vaccination is backed by science. If one doesn't get vaccinated that means that one doesn't understand how infections are spread or who ignores science.

(A: I guess they're not going to mention the fact that in previous things that they've done, including articles from the Department of Defense, that vaccinations even against the flu often have the wrong effect by opening you up to the wild virus afterwards, and when that hits you, you get a massive, you know, pulmonary response to it, it kills you. How's about that one, eh?! An overreaction with your immune system, how about that one? Don't you want to mention that?)

(A: You just don't understand science, eh! [Alan laughing.] Even though they tell you they're not quite sure what's going to happen with this new vaccination of Moderna that's going to affect the RNA, which will lead to alterations in the DNA permanently of your lung tissue and so on. Because they haven't tested in on anything yet, it's just YOU, YOU're going to be the test subject. And they're going to tell you, they don't know exactly. Because it would take a long-term study to see how it affects you. Hm, okay. That's science, eh? I tell ya. Uuug. It'll make you sick, isn't it, eh? N-n-n. So there's all these surveys going out to do with these techniques.)

This is a self reported measure, immediately after the intervention message, of the likelihood of getting a COVID-19 vaccination within 3 months and then 6 months of it becoming available. (A: …getting you all prepared for it, you see.) During analysis, responses among those assigned to different intervention messages will be compared to those in the control group.

...to create vaccine confidence. How about all the folk who have terrible reactions to the vaccines? or have had before? It doesn't give me any confidence AT ALL… [Alan chuckles.] I don't care how much persuasion they try to do, you know. I'll put these articles up though eh. And then...

New COVID-19 restrictions will be needed for anti-vaxxers

Once again, your tax money at work. Australia really goes overboard with this. It's just amazing that these kind of British Commonwealth countries, in a country too that literally, it started as a penal colony, really, on behalf of Britain that is, when they started bringing in all the people who literally stole bread and things like that and put them on ships and sent them over to be prison laborers really. And for mining even then too, they did a lot of different things there to for THE EMPIRE, you see, you know. Free labor, that's what they were calling prisoners. You'd think they'd have more sense being descended from that, you know. Wouldn't you? Wouldn't you think they'd have more sense? But no, they are far left again in Australia, a lot of them are, they've had the communists in there for years, the whole socialist ideals, you know.

It's amazing how they don't question the corporations like pharmacology and vaccine companies. It's just amazing, isn't it, this strange contradiction of their dogma. So it says…

New COVID-19 restrictions will be needed for anti-vaxxers

theage.com.au / 16 June 2020

As if the bushfires weren't bad enough, we've since had the world economy shut down, millions infected with COVID-19

(A: No, they're not ill with it, folks, you know, you can test and test until the cows come home and get lots of positives. And folk, like all coronaviruses, eventually it's all through the community and you've got your own herd immunity, you know. This is the first one they've ever tried to stop it, herd immunity spreading, by locking folk down and stopping them from mixing. Otherwise it would've been long gone. The facts don't matter, right.) and hundreds of thousands dead.

(A: …hundreds of thousands where? Across the world? Or folks that were dying anyway? Hm?)

This pandemic feels like we're in the middle of a real-life Hollywood blockbuster.

Like all good movies, this one will leave us fundamentally changed well after it's ended. Our world will look and feel very different once the show is over. But not for the better.

Thankfully, the possibility of a vaccine (A: Here we go again, eh! Who paid for this, the vaccine industry?) for this virus is looking more plausible. Unfortunately, like a diabolical plot twist, the day the vaccine arrives, so too will the inevitable chorus of those who object to being vaccinated. But unlike hapless movie heroes, we can be prepared for this.

(A: Achh, here it comes… Off comes the velvet glove and you can see the iron fist, eh?)

To anti-vaxxers, I have one message: our tolerance for your willful ignorance is over. We cannot afford, morally or economically, to give any ground to those who choose not to be vaccinated against COVID-19.

Let me be clear. I'm not advocating that we vaccinate people against their will.   (A: Here's your real socialist communist talking here, who is obviously on the take as well.) That would be wrong. We must ensure that the safety of our community is the number one priority.

(A: Remember all the things I've just read there from Yale, to shame them and embarrass them.)

That means that participation in everyday life cannot put others at risk. If you do not want to be vaccinated against COVID-19, you ought to bear the consequences of that decision.

(A: I'd say to this character, look, if you just stop all the lockdown and let herd immunity go through the society within about a week or two, that's all it would take. Then you can lock this guy up for trying to terrorize people and for destroying the economy.)

(A: So again…) As a community,

(A: Not an individual, as a community…)

As a community, we should consider to what extent we allow organisations to prevent those who object to being vaccinated against COVID-19 to enter their premises, participate in their activities and, in some circumstances, seek their employment.

Governments have gone some way to doing this by implementing policies such as withholding family tax benefits (A: So here’s your standard blackmail techniques, if you want this, you know…) and preventing children from being accepted into childcare unless vaccinations are proven. Further restrictions would be a natural extension of these policies.

(A: Just… Just, oh, we’re not forbidding you, Sir, or Madame, you know. If you just comply with that, you know, otherwise you can’t go into this store, you can’t do that and you can’t feed yourself. And you know… That’s how it’s done. That’s tyranny, folks. It’s called TYRANNY. Hm? Overt, straightforward TYRANNY.)

(A: So it's going through the different ways they could really punish the people who won't go along with it.)

No doubt there would be logistical issues to overcome. However, the health and safety of our population (A: ...it's always like the mob against the few...) should be any government's primary concern, and the infrastructure to implement these changes exists.

(A: Yep. So there ya go.)

For the rest who claim they are conscientious objectors, the excuses don’t stack up anymore. There is too much at stake. I know after writing this my office will be inundated with correspondence from anti-vaccination activists demanding to be heard. For those of you who do contact me, know this. I have no interest in your alternative "facts" or your conspiracy theories.

(A: Well, there's a good, there's the person with an open ear, eh? Hm? So there ya go. And this guy is...)

Raff Ciccone (A: ...the con part a good part of his, a latter part of his name.) is a federal Labor senator for Victoria.

There ya go. Ffft. Isn't that amazing, eh? No, it's not amazing at all. These characters, this is the bully coming through. They think they can really make you afraid by this kind of speech, you know. But he's right on board with it. And he'll be getting a lot of, these characters all need big backing from big companies to run, you know. Do you understand? Are you starting to connect the dots here? [Alan chuckles.]   ...from certain doners, eh?

And of course Birx in the States, Dr. Deborah Birx, who’s another bureaucrat really, you know, who's had a fantastic career, riding high and big salaries... Just, almost like a Madonna of the health industry, you know, dishing out grants to different aids organizations. So she suggested in May that...

Dr. Birx Reportedly Believes Coronavirus Death Toll Inflated By Up To 25%

(A: …as opposed to the 10% in Britain.)

dailycaller.com / 11 May 2020

They can’t even get the figures right anymore, or... or… What they should do is get together and study at Yale and say, let's all agree upon the same figures and statistics, for goodness’ sake. Eh? Because after all, we’re telling the people we are the professionals and not to think of themselves.

You've got another one here, this is one of course I'd mentioned before and it was to do with the doctor that we've put articles up on before.

Sweet Innocent Dr. Fauci had an Assistant Doctor Fired and Jailed in 2011 for Warning that Vaccines were Giving Americans Known Chronic Diseases - thegatewaypundit.com / 24 April 2020

Well, that is a FACT. I can testify myself to that personally. That was Dr. Judy Mikovitz. A good article. I'll put it up to for those that want to see it. You're dealing with the Mafia at the very top. Absolutely. With incredible shares in all the companies and vaccines and everything. It's just astonishing. Then they get the government in true fascist style to mandate that you take their product.

I've mentioned before that Bobby Kennedy Junior, he says…

In New Interview Bobby Kennedy Jr. Claims Dr. Fauci will Make Millions on Coronavirus Vaccine and Owns Half the Patent

thegatewaypundit.com / 3 Aug 2020

UNBELIEVABLE: In New Interview Bobby Kennedy Jr. Claims Dr. Fauci will Make Millions on

Coronavirus Vaccine and Owns Half the Patent

(A: Aaaah, that's just coincidence though. You know that, eh. Conspiracy theory, eh. That was to do with, he actually had the debate with Alan Dershowitz and brought it up at that time too in July.)

Robert Kennedy Jr. and Harvard Attorney Alan Dershowitz debated on the topic of the coronavirus vaccine back in July.

During the debate, Kennedy Jr. claimed that Dr. Anthony Fauci invested $500 million in the vaccine that is not safe by any means and Fauci owns half the patent so he’s due to make millions.

In an earlier thread we reported on Bobby Kennedy Jr.’s comments about Big Pharma and the increase in vaccines in our culture back in April. Kennedy shared the story of how Dr. Fauci fired and led the indictment of a brilliant assistant who blew the whistle on the harmful consequences attributed to vaccines.

So I'll put this one up as well. This is an interesting one. I mean, I mentioned before about, hhhch, Trump. People think that he came in there to help. I mean, the Americans had no choice, at all, in the last election, for any party. You could see it, it was obvious. But I listened to his speeches that he made to different groups in fact, and some of the groups really important to know about. But he did say, he ran about bringing business into America, but he also said that he was going to cut regulations that forced companies that do testing for new drugs and things like that, meaning vaccines too, he was going to cut all these unnecessary, you know, restrictions, so's that they can go ahead and get these drugs out to help the people, you see. That's how he phrased it. Right off the bat it tells you he was getting financing from them too and something was coming up, around the bend you might say, you know.

So that was back in, what, 2016, just before that, he was running anyway. That's what he definitely said, I've got all the articles here, and some of the video, somebody copied the video for me back then and what he said about that. It's all coincidental naturally, as he talks about something that's going to come down the pike. But then, in 2019, eh, he put out an Executive Order...

Executive Order 13887 of September 19, 2019 - Modernizing Influenza Vaccines in the United States to Promote National Security and Public Health - PDF

govinfo.gov / 24 Sept 2019

(A: Just take your mind to the first line, modernize. Moderna. Remember Moderna is what they call the company that's got all the contracts by Fauci. That's just coincidence naturally, eh. They could have used something else, you know. But modernizing influenza vaccines...)

By the authority vested in me as President by the Constitution and the laws of the United States of America, including section 301 of title 3, United States Code, it is hereby ordered as follows:

Section 1. Findings.

(a) Influenza viruses are constantly changing as they circulate globally in humans and animals. Relatively minor changes in these viruses cause annual seasonal (A: ...somebody who wrote this, probably the pharma just wrote it for them I suppose.) influenza outbreaks, which result in millions of illnesses, hundreds of thousands of hospitalizations, and tens of thousands of deaths each year in the United States. (A: Not anymore, they’re all put down as Covid.) Periodically, new influenza A viruses emerge from animals, including birds and pigs, that can spread efficiently and have sustained transmission among humans.

(A: So the whole thing is...)

(b) Vaccination is the most effective defense against influenza. Despite recommendations by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) that nearly every American should receive the influenza vaccine annually, however, seasonal influenza vaccination levels in the United States have currently reached only about 45 percent of CDC goals.

(c) All influenza vaccines presently in use have been developed for circulating or anticipated influenza viruses. These vaccines must be reformulated for each influenza season as well as in the event of a pandemic. Additional research is needed to develop influenza vaccines that provide more effective and longer-lasting protection against many or all influenza viruses.

(A: So it goes into some of the, at that time right...)

(d) The current domestic enterprise for manufacturing influenza vaccines has critical shortcomings. Most influenza vaccines are made in chicken eggs, (A: …and it’s true…) using a 70-year-old process that requires months-long production timelines, limiting their utility for pandemic control; rely on a potentially vulnerable supply chain of eggs; require the use of vaccine viruses adapted for growth in eggs, which could introduce mutations of the influenza vaccine virus that may render the final product less effective…

(A: Then he goes into…)

(e) The seasonal influenza vaccine market rewards manufacturers that deliver vaccines in time for the influenza season,

(A: …blah blah blah.)

Sec. 2. Policy.

It is the policy of the United States to modernize the domestic influenza vaccine enterprise to be highly responsive, flexible, scalable, and more effective at preventing the spread of influenza viruses.

Of course they're trying to get away from the whole idea of using eggs, etc. They can do it on animal kidneys and things like that too which they sometimes do. But then you end up with other kinds of viruses creeping in. And you know darn well they want to get to this whole idea of altering, altering the RNA, the DNA eventually, actually your cellular lining of your lung tissue is what they're really after. So that was 2019, just before the so-called Covid thing broke out in China. So that's what this is, it's a presidential document and Executive Order. I'll put that up.

Again, everybody's in on the act…

Michelle Obama: Coronavirus an Opportunity to Change ‘How Wealth Is Distributed’ - breitbart.com / 6 Aug 2020

That's all through the WEF groups’ forum, you know, the redistribution of wealth. No, you see, at the bottom level it's going to be equally poor. That's what they mean by equality, for all you lot, you see, you're all going to be poor at the bottom. But for them at the top though, you see, they run the important things, like everything you need to survive, they run it, they own it, that's going to be different. You see, that's true Marxism where each according to his ability and to his needs, you see. And the needs of those who design everything and own it all are march bigger than you ones at the bottom, you peasants, you see. That's equality, for you. There ya go. And that term, you know, redistributing wealth. You're going to use a virus to distribute the wealth? Hm? What an opportunity. It's almost like it's an excuse, isn't it, eh. [Alan chuckles.]

New York's COVID checkpoints: Cops stationed at tunnels and bridges to question travelers from 35 COVID-19 hotspot states and order them to quarantine for 14 days - but none of the promised 'army of tracers' show up at Port Authority

dailymail.co.uk / 6 Aug 2020

Mayor Bill de Blasio announced the plans for checkpoints on Wednesday morning and they were not due to begin until Thursday

They scanned drivers' plates and pulled people over at random to ask them where they had been

(A: Where have you been?)

De Blasio sternly warned those flouting would face fines of up to $10,000

(A: There's freedom, eh, and democracy in action. By the communist De Blasio.)

But it remains unclear how the 14-day quarantine will actually be enforced once people pass the checkpoints

On Wednesday, contact tracers at de Blasio's press conference said they'd be reaching people by phone

The online form that people are required to fill out when they reenter NY asks if travelers will consent to receiving texts from the government

(A: Oh, can you im… can you believe that? where they're going with all this stuff, eh? Uuuuugh, totalitarianism on steroids, eh. This is not going to end with Covid, you understand that. It's not meant to. It's just starting.)

If travelers say their final destination is not New York, they are not required to give an address

But they know where you're from, they've taken your plates anyway. Yep. There ya go. I tell ya. N-n-n. It's wonderful having this freedom, eh? M-hm.

And this is an amazing one, eh. From Britain. I mean, I used to be amazed at Britain at times. They used to have this strange kind of futuristic sci-fi type scenarios. Like they'd show you Fahrenheit 451, the movie version and you saw these little Council houses that all look the same, ticky-tacky as they say, like the song went, I think it was Paxton [?] sung it. That's your socialized housing, all these little, small houses for one, each family, for family they were designed, you see. And how in the movie version 451 the fire engines, their job was to burn books, you see, the fire companies. So not to put out fires but to actually set fires and burn them, and the people too sometimes, and their houses sometimes too.

You see them when, going around the streets looking for people, with tannoies [speakers] on top of their vehicles. And so, 'every citizen outside into the garden, and the families.' And they all come out too, the families, and stand there on the front lawns. Obedient little socialists, you see. You think that could never happen, surely. But when you think that Britain had been through the war and had the compliant, uh, hell they put up with, World War II, straight in from the Great Depression and World War II, and the depression really was a continuation of the depression of World War I. I mean, compliance, compliance, compliance. I guess the longer you do it the more you comply, until it's normal, eh. That's... you just adopt normality, new normals all the time.

Councils can BULLDOZE contaminated homes and crush cars as a last resort under new laws to stop second wave of coronavirus

dailymail.co.uk / 4 Aug 2020

(A: Well this is definitely show because it's got no logic at all with viruses, the life of viruses and stuff.)

Councils able to draw on laws to impose lightning closures of public buildings

As last resort the (A: 1984, good title.) 1984 Control of Disease Act allows for building demolition

As a last resort for preventing the spread of the disease (A: … of coronavirus. [Alan chuckles.] to demolish buildings and even homes…)

Well, can you imagine... Oh sorry, it was a false positive. And there's nothing left but rubble. [Alan laughing.] Aaaah. I tell ya. You've got a laugh at times, don't you? [Alan chuckles.] But their tests are such rubbish anyway.

But these came out, nothing to do with viruses, these laws. They were to do with roaches, or rats, eh, rats that were infested and they had tunneled through the walls by that time. They could demolish old, old, old buildings. But viruses are completely... Viruses... Hhhch, they are living in the people, not the houses, eh! Eh?! If they got that, they've given you the list, study after study of billions of taxpayers [Alan chuckles.] they just toss the money out to all these folk in universities. We'll test the length of these viruses, the life of them. And, it will live so many hours on a tin can, and it will live so much on cardboard. It's down pat, so this whole stuff about to knock houses down because it's harboring coronavirus is utter tripe! After what, 24 [hours] it's dead, gone. I-yi-yi. Boris Johnson, n-n-n.

Well, it gets me with ideas, you see. Here's, I've figured it out. If they knock down all the houses in Britain, you see, then no one can, no one can get it by going into a building and catching it in a building. I guess that's the logic then, eh. Maybe they'll give them tents to live in. New tents. That'd be real austerity, eh. And because they give them tents, I'm starting to see the picture. Give them tents, right, the whole population, mow down all the buildings they can't possibly catch it by going into these buildings. Then they won't need all that money that they had to run the cost of the house, and that money can be used for redistributing the wealth across the world, like the WEF says! It's beginning to make some kind of sense, doesn't it, eh. Then of course you won't need to give them a second payout to stay in their tent because they'll all be dead because they've froze to death in the winter. But at least they wouldn't have died of coronavirus. Oh, maybe they'll put them down as coronavirus anyway. Acchh, well, you can't win, eh.

Another article…

'Shock and awe': Victoria declares state of disaster, six-week Melbourne curfew and stage four restrictions

9news.com.au / 2 Aug 2020

(A: Again, Australia's just going over the top with it, eh. Far left, eh. And again, sustainability. Everybody's on the take over there in the politics, and they all claim that they're really environmentalists in politics. But they're all on the take for pushing through carbon taxes and shut down the farms because they cause carbon buildup and yada, yada, yada, yada, yada, ya. Uuuuugh. Corruption.)

Under "shock and awe" state of disaster provisions, an 8pm - 5am curfew has been (A: I guess they mean used…) by police and soldiers across Melbourne, starting tonight and continuing daily for at least six weeks.

The state of disaster declaration means Victoria Police and others have been granted additional powers, (A: Oh, there's tyranny right there.) and the government can also suspend various acts of the parliament.

(A: That's all they do is act in Parliament, isn’t it? It gives you the stage IV lockdown restrictions. And...)

LIVE UPDATES: Big spike in Victoria cases

(A: These are not cases. The more you test the more you'll find the residue of particles of Covid, disintegrated particles of the virus… as folk catch it, get over it and never even know they've had it. That's what happens with these viruses. So yeah, the more you test, the more you're going to find, they're not sick, eh. So there you go...)

There have been 671 new coronavirus cases (A: That's just more testing.) recorded in Victoria overnight

(A: [Alan chuckles.] It's not like folk walk in and say, I'm sick. No, these are folks who've all been te... Can I stick this up your nose? Okay, you know, it's okay. Yep. Which nostril do you prefer? A left one this time, you know.)

- the state's second worst day on record

(A: What utter rubbish. These are not bad, they're not ill. They are not ill.)

- and a further seven deaths.

(A: Seven deaths. Did they die of Corona virus? Or just have it at the time? Like lots of folk have it at the time and never know it. N-n-n. So it says here...)

The stay at home restrictions for metro Melbourne have been enhanced and there are now additional limits to the four reasons residents are allowed to leave.

"Only one person will be able to go shopping once per day and they will need to secure the goods and services that are what you need within a 5km radius," Premier Daniel Andrews said.

(A: Ohhhhhh, my God.)

"In terms of exercise, recreation is now no longer allowed.

(A: [Alan chuckles.])

You will be able to have one hour of exercise, (A: That's what they give prisoners generally in prisons.) no further than 5km from your home. That means it's fresh air. It's a jog. It's a walk. It's in your local neighbourhood."

(A: They give you a full list of the changes coming to Melbourne. It says… You'll be stopped, if you're out anyway, and asked why you're out...)

On the curfew, Mr Andrews added: "Police will be out in force and you will be stopped and you will be asked

(A: And you must show and demonstrate…)

and need to demonstrate that you are lawfully out

(A: Maybe you must put running shorts on or something or pant a lot maybe when they stop you. You go, hhh, hhh, hhh, hhh, hhh, oh I'm joggin’, yeah. Yep. So...)

...demonstrate that you are lawfully out and you are not breaching that curfew.

(A: That you're out for exercise, right.)

"Going to a mate's place, visiting friends, being out and about for no good reason, all that will do is spread this virus."

(A: ...SPREAD it! Well, you want to spread it, so you'll all have immunity, herd immunity, natural immunity, you see. You can't get immunity unless you catch it and it's gone through you. But you won't even notice it, you see. It takes swabs to notice it, [Alan chuckles.] and even then it doesn't say you're sick.)

The ramping up of measures was driven by 700 mystery cases, (A: …mystery cases…) with authorities unable to track and trace the source of those infections, and a complacency from some Victorians.

(A: Some Victorians are complacent, eh! Can you believe, they're not really bothered?! Well, woah, I'm not bothered about that. Oh, you should be. Mmmmmm.)

Also confirming childcare centres in Melbourne would close

He said the Year 12 General Achievement Test will move from the end of Term Three to the start of Term Four. There was no change to any VCE exams (A: …and so on. Woah, this is quite something. I'll put this one up too.)

Coming to a place near you, eh?

Establishment Media Reaches New Low with Glowing Article About Growing Faith in Communism

westernjournal.com / 6 Aug 2020

(A: This is in America.)

"Trump views China's Communist Party as a threat. Young Chinese see it as a ticket to a better future."

(A: This is the article. So communism is good, you see.)

The statement wreaks of psychological operations strategy and reads like a state-run media sales pitch for modern communism — but rest assured, you are not reading a translation of CCP propaganda at The Western Journal.

That lovely little number was brought to you by the oh-so-principled penmen at The Washington Post.

It wasn’t cut from an official CCP Op-Ed submission.

No siree, this was the one and only headline that sat atop an original report Tuesday from the Post’s Beijing bureau chief, Anna Fifield.

Just when you thought the left-wing establishment media couldn’t possibly carry one more droplet of water for the Chinese communists, a bigger bucket is procured and an astounding introduction made.

Now, instead of simply defending China against presidential name-calling and allegations of early pandemic mismanagement, the media might as well have been writing copy for Communist Party membership advertisements.

“Party membership means better education prospects and better jobs, more politically advantageous marriages and nicer apartments,” Fifield wrote. “For many, it is a ticket to a brighter future.”

Yep. Well, don't forget, though, that China is still the model state for the world to copy according to the United Nations, and the CFR. They tell you and you obey, it's quite simple, there's nothing complicated about it.

Also from General Flynn, This Is My Letter to America. I'll put that up too. I think Bitchute has got a woman reading it too, for those that don't want to read for themselves, or can't read for themselves may be.

Exclusive from Gen. Flynn: This Is My Letter to America

westernjournal.com / 5 Aug 2020

We are witnessing a vicious assault by enemies of all that is good, and our president is having to act in ways unprecedented in decades, maybe centuries.

The biblical nature of good versus evil cannot be discounted as we examine what is happening on the streets of America.

(A: Well, all that’s true.)

It’s Marxism in the form of antifa and the Black Lives Matter movement versus our very capable and very underappreciated law enforcement professionals, the vast majority of whom are fighting to provide us safe and secure homes, streets and communities.

He goes on and on and on. I'll put the article up. For those that want to read it. And as I say, the link to the Bitchute one too.

A Warning From General Flynn To The Silent Majority - bitchute.com / 1 July 2020

But it's true, folk have no idea, that they can't quite get it, this is really a big, this is the shift, this is THE shift. It's not a practice shift, this is THE shift, the big push to bring in a communist regime over the general population. On behalf of the overlords of the international mega corporations that run the world. The new feudal system that Carrol Quigley was all part of and all for, the CEOs are the new feudal overlords. The communists don't object to that though strangely enough, eh. Maybe it's because the big CEOs and corporations are funding them all. [Alan chuckles.] Which is true.

Also to do with all these tests that had such bogus propaganda...

Faith in Quick Test Leads to Epidemic That Wasn’t NYT 2007

nytimes.com / 22 Jan 2007

Dr. And if it was whooping cough, the epidemic had to be contained immediately because the disease could be deadly to babies in the hospital and could lead to pneumonia in the frail and vulnerable adult patients there. ...

I've mentioned this one before. It goes round in circles, a lot of these articles that I put out there. And folk don't realize I put them out in the first place. It's to do with

Dr. Brooke Hendren, internist Dartmouth Hitchcock Medical Center could not stop coughing. Two weeks starting in mid April last year (A: This is in 2007) she coughed seemingly nonstop, followed by another week where she coughed sporadically and annoyingly said everyone who worked with her.

How they closed it down, hospitals and everything, they thought it was whooping cough. Massive campaign too, put millions of bucks on it too. It turns out months later it wasn't wolfing cough at all. So is the pandemic that wasn't, right. [Alan chuckles.] There ya go. I'll put that one back up again.

United States should shut down completely for another four to six weeks to save the economy, senior Federal Reserve official says

dailymail.co.uk / 2 Aug 2020

Neel Kashkari,

(A: Good name, that Kashkari, like cash and carry, eh. I think I read that one too before, mind you, or something similar about him because I remember the name Kashkari. Maybe you have to (Neel) kneel, because you can't carry the cash, because it's so heavy. Mind you, they say there's a lack of cash in pennies and things so it should be lighter, shouldn't it.)

Neel Kashkari, head of Minneapolis Federal Reserve Bank, advised lockdown

So you close down the economy completely to save the economy. Yeah, this is a repeat from a different source of the same article I'm sure, you know. So yeah, that will save the economy, just shut the economy down totally and that will save it, you see. That makes as much sense as everything else these days, doesn't it? Don't you think so? I'll put that up.

(A: This is a good one.)

Owners of Michigan B&B are forced to remove Norwegian flag from their inn after dozens of people confuse it for the Confederate flag

(A: We're done for. [Alan chuckles.] The education system is completely hopeless.)

dailymail.co.uk / 30 July 2020

Kjersten and Greg Offenbecker have operated The Nordic Pineapple Bed & Breakfast out of Civil War-era mansion in St John, Michigan, for two years

Until last week, the inn displayed Norwegian flag at the front entrance, honoring Kjersten's heritage

Couple took down the flag after receiving hateful calls, emails and comments from people who mistook it for Confederate flag

(A: Well why would they suddenly after all these years because someone could mistake it for… There's more to it.)

Both banners are red and blue but have distinctly different patterns

Offenbeckers said they were hurt by accusations of racism because their two adopted children are Black

But really what it is if you really look at it, it's because the Norwegian flag is like a Christian cross. You'll see it in the picture, the angle that it's hanging too, it's more symbolic of that. Whereas the Confederate flag was really the St. Andrew's Cross, you know, a modified St. Andrew's cross. But no, that's the reason I'm sure that they really went after it, you know. They wouldn't suddenly mistake it, you know, after all these years of having it outside their B&B.

Now, once again I'd like to remind you to buy the books and discs @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Or else you could donate to me. You'll find out how to do it @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Don't forget to, I always say this every week, in the last few weeks anyway because I used to always forget to talk about it at all. Make a list of my official sites in case any one goes down, and if you can't find me anywhere else if you're looking for me. Some other folk will put up my shows, you see, so if they're late or they're getting hammered for any reason at all and they can't get it out, go into my site and you'll find it, it's up there first, you see. Make a list of my official sites. Anything outside of that are not my actual official sites. Make a list of them and that way you can always get me, hopefully, if one or the other ones goes down. As I say, buy the books or discs or donate to me. You'll find out how to do it @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Don't forget too, PayPal or cash even or checks are fine. There's Money Gram and things like that too. I can accept all of those things and hopefully I can keep paying for all the sites.

…and be with you as we go through the massive changes, however it turns out. Which really won't be pleasant I think for anyone who knows what's going on, you know, the basic facts. And these are facts. The facts are facts. Just simply throwing out thousands of test kits every night to get more and more folk tested, are not, these are not illnesses you're getting, these results. These are folks who just come up positive. As I say most of them too, the test will pick up any fragment of old viruses of the Covid lineage, and any old coronavirus lineage, and that will give you a positive even if you're not sick or you don't actually have it at the time.

It doesn't matter. Facts don't matter here, you see. Numbers matter. Oh, if more cases, oh, oh. Because they must get you to take the vaccination. This isn't just one vaccination here. And it isn't just the old kind of vaccination. It's to alter literally the structure of your, the makeup of your lining of your lungs, as a start. Nevermind all the other effects it will have throughout your body. Who knows? Permanently too, you know. So good luck with that one.

And you're supposed to take it with, and there's no come back on the companies who are given immunity from prosecution by your own governments. Well again, that's fascism right there, folks. Do you see them writing about that? Nope. Nope. That kind of fascism is okay, you see. Because it's the bosses that donate to them big time that are behind it, so that's okay. Yep. There ya go.

So yeah, let me know, and by the way too, I'm still reading stacks of stuff from all over the planet and people who are giving, what they're noticing themselves and around them. It really gives me a bigger picture of things. It's really fascinating to see that the control's over the entire planet pretty well, of the same characters. And the same names are mentioned in every country as being behind it. And who are the great experts, like Bill Gates who hasn't got a degree in any of this stuff. You know? Again, that doesn't matter either, right.

Researchers admit trans-affirming study was wrong

christian.org.uk / 6 Aug 2020

Researchers who claimed transgender people who undergo surgery to ‘change sex’ have better mental health outcomes (A: …right. This is what they said before, these particular researchers, were given a big grant naturally, you know, to come up with the desired conclusion. I’m sure big Pharma and again surgeries behind it have benefited awfully well. Anyway, they’ve changed and admitted…) have admitted their widely-shared study was wrong.

(A: After it was all published across the planet, you know.)

Last year, Swedish researchers Dr Richard Bränström (A: I was going to say brainstorm, [Alan chuckles.] but Bränström…) and Dr John Pachankis claimed that people who have surgery to try and change sex are less likely to need mental health treatment than those who don't. They also said that the likelihood of being treated for a mood or anxiety disorder reduces over time.

At the time, media outlets such as NBC News and ABC News reported this as fact, but the researchers have now said the research was flawed and that key findings were wrong.

(A: [Alan chuckles.] Someone's caught them out at it, and they have to come up with the truth.)

Following publication, the study was scrutinised by other academics. One pointed out that their major conclusion was based on the outcomes of just three people, (A: They chose three people out of...) despite having collected the data of more than 2,500 gender-confused people in Sweden. (A: They chose three of them. [Alan chuckles.] You talk about a rigged result here.)

Bränström and Pachankis were forced to reevaluate their data, and have now corrected their study. They conclude that the results demonstrated "no advantage of surgery" in relation to subsequent mental health treatments or a reduction in hospitalisations following suicide attempts.

They acknowledged that their original conclusion – that their research "lends support to the decision to provide gender-affirming surgeries to transgender individuals who seek them" – was "too strong".

Dr Ryan Anderson, author of 'When Harry Became Sally: Responding to the Transgender Moment', said: "It shouldn't surprise us that the results of this most recent study — and its correction — show that hormonal and surgical transition procedures don't bring the promised benefits".

He also said: "Rather than attempting to do the impossible — 'reassigning' bodies to line up with misguided thoughts and feelings — we should at least attempt what is possible: helping people to align their thoughts and feelings with reality, including the reality of the body."

And I tell you, it's so sad in this day and age where so many folk are utterly, utterly, you know, around the bend with confusion about everything and society. There's been a war on society for a long time and the folk don't know it was planned. It's every bit as planned as everything that's happening today with things. War tactics. And then out comes the, you know, the saviors for them, we can operate and fix all your problems, eh. Really? And that massive, you know, massive fundings from government for these surgeons and so on and big, big money, yada, yada, yada. So they've got a lot, you know, to gain from it. And they give you these wonderful, all the fantastic results. But really, it's just not true that this is going to make you all better. Really.

There ya go. Sad indeed, isn't it, that they go through all this. And really, and I've had people get in touch with me who've gone through all this stuff, and they're still utterly screwed up and unhappy. They really thought it was going to bring them, make the world so wonderful for them. And it didn't, you know. It's like everything else in this day and age, in a society that's been through a complete war, and they're going through a war all the time without knowing it, total war on culture, a war on everything. And even taking away your purpose of people, taking away all your purpose until youngsters have no jobs or anything to look forward to, no purpose. All planned that way. Years ago, yeears and years and years ago planned that way.

And you're looking at all this unhappiness. And each group is catered to with this a special, oh, we can help you here. You know. We've got grants for this kind of thing, we get big money, we can help you here and help you there. And then all other ones end up doing all the rioting, you know, thinking that just burning homes down is gonna make them feel better. Huh? Really?

For most things, you've got to, you are the only thing that you can control, is yourself. You have no chance of controlling anything else. Yourself. And it’s true what the Masons say in that respect, you are, you know, your body is like a temple, that's from the Bible too, of course it is. But you're responsible for it, you see. And you can alter things within yourself, in that temple. But don't look outside for others to do it for you. And don't think that these people who say, yeah, come and join the revolution, you'll all be happy and that. Don't think it's going to be any different than the surgery here. It's not going to make you happier.

Only understanding yourself and getting to the point of it all, and reorganizing yourself, can you start to actually get any kind of happiness at all. And you must do it for yourself. All these things and the rages and that are all reactions to other things, and rather than reacting to them, you have to be in control of yourself, so you don't react to it all.

You have to stand back as I say, and realize, there are definitely powerful forces, no doubt about it, they are evil forces, tremendously evil forces running this whole system here. Tremendously evil. I mean, there's no doubt about it. Forces who have caused world wars. Like Carol Quigley said, he said, yeah, they'll bring in wars to get their agenda, and he was all for it. The CFR, eh. And the CFR is just a lower organization for the one above it. And yet that's your establishment. These are the guys who come out of Yale and go into the CFR, you know. Yeah, they create wars to get big changes and to get what they want out of it. The human collateral and damage is just that, it's just nothing to them.

Do you ever think, do you think somehow every few years they become more sensitive to the humans down beneath them ...somehow evolve? No, they don't. They stay the same. And in fact, if they want to kill another 25, they want to kill billions actually, get rid of them off the planet, they've been rather open about it. The Georgia Guidestones etc., eh? M-hm. And the statements put out by guys like in the past, Jacques Cousteau, when he said, oh yeah, he was all for it too. Yeah, they always give you these characters who are into nature, you see, and you love nature. Then they try to bring you into realizing that you are the problem, you must disappear to help nature. They all have the same goal, don't they? David Attenborough is the same. Cousteau came out and said, he says, yeah, to save the planet and wildlife we'll have to kill so many thousands, I think it was 120,000, 50,000 per day, excess, or something like that, big, a much higher number than that, of humans. He was all for it. Yeah, eugenics, etc. Of course they want, the people who come to that conclusion are the top of the tree apparently, they are the crème de la crème. They just know that they will have to survive, but you must all go, you know. There you go.

But most of the problems you have in life come from within, and your reactions to it. You have to realize how much control you have over anything at all. And you will realize that the reason you're frustrated is [Alan chuckles.] you don't have much control over the money system, you're not, you don't have the magic accounting ability that the specialists do and they come up with magic numbers and so on. You don't have that. You're not in their club, as George Carlin said, the big club.

But also, you have to work on yourself. Don't expect other things to make life happy for you. Happiness comes within, inside yourself. But comprehending what's really going on, hm, and not reacting to things outside so much. Stop reacting to it. The characters who run the world can have you jumping up and down all day long every day for the rest of your lives reacting to things out there. They do it on purpose at times. Look at all these behaviorists who put out the reports, paid billions with your tax money to con you and lie to you and manipulate you. Aren't you annoyed about that? [Alan laughing.] Ah well, but there ya go, everybody gets used, eh? And everything really is manipulated propaganda, all their different studies, etc. etc. etc.

Northern Ireland is interesting too, because the whole of Ireland is interesting, its history as well. North and South. But they're catching up to a lot of the rest of the world with, the ones who pretend that they're there for children's rights, you know, they've got commissioners now appointed by the United Nations, most of them have their own particular problems as you read their bios. But Northern Ireland...

NI Children's Commissioner calls for abortion to be promoted to young girls in RSE

christian.org.uk / 7 Aug 2020

Northern Ireland’s Commissioner for Children and Young People has called for abortion to be promoted to young girls in Relationship and Sexuality Education (RSE) lessons.

Koulla Yiasouma told the Northern Ireland Office that it should introduce compulsory teaching on the “prevention of early pregnancy and access to abortion” to girls as young as 13.

(A: These are actually all parts, if you don’t really know it, of the communist agenda. Hm. Promote mass promiscuity, and deal with the fallout from it, which further dehumanizes the people who are involved in it, and they never really get over it the rest of their lives. It’s a war tactic, you see. Not, it’s not for people’s rights and equalities and stuff like that you’re, all these different things you’re seeing today. These are communist tactics, all the things you're reading about today.)

Yiasouma’s proposals were partly based on controversial recommendations from a UN committee’s report.

A UN Committee on the Rights of the Child report claimed (A: And by the way, the Rights of the Child is to eliminate the rights of the parents. I remember doing the same talks years ago when they were doing it in Australia.) that RSE lessons should contain information on “sexual and reproductive health-care services”, “contraception”, and “sexuality, including that of lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex children”.

These were all the Communists agendas they said they’d promote to eliminate all family. M-hm. And again, the United Nations as usual, you know. Again, don't forget the departments of the United Nations and how Julian Huxley was involved in so much of all of this. I tell ya.

Another thing that's soo important, I've touched on it before, is that everywhere you look into everything that smells... It's like in the country you see it more, or you'll notice, you'll smell it more [Alan chuckles.] occasionally. Sometimes in the spring when people either add bacteria to their septic tanks, or it will start as it's warming up it will suddenly kick into action on themselves and start bubbling away there, and the vent's out and you can smell it, you know, for maybe a week or two. Well, everywhere you look these days, in all the hell that's coming down for the public, and the ones, again, the ones that are coming out saying, don't you deal with it, we'll deal with it for you, just like the last article, same kind of thing. Bill Gates comes up and it reminds me of the spring septics. Whenever I read the guy’s name, [Alan chuckles.]   and it really is, I have that reaction to this guy. He's so creepy. You sense it all, the guy has no hon... there's nothing honest in the man at all. It's like he's constantly acting, you know, when the hands flapping like crazy and all that. And I'm sure he is a bit of a front man actor, no doubt about it. Anyway…

Bill Gates shouldn't be the one 'reimagining' NY's public education - nyclu.org / 8 May 2020

I'll read the other one first, though, it says here...

Cuomo questions why school buildings still exist — and says New York will work with Bill Gates to ‘reimagine education’

Now Cuomo, I would call him, especially with his latest, all the different things he's come out with in the past few months, is a socialist communist. So why is he working with Bill Gates? Well, because Bill Gates also is a bit higher up the ladder, on behalf of the people who rule the world. That's where Bill Gates is, he's a bit below, he's still a worker bee, you know. Don't forget too that Bill Gates, Bill Gates was the one who funded lots of the money for Common Core to start with as well. You must, again, back to UNESCO that Julian Huxley worked with, UNESCO was to create a common culture using the children across the world. It didn't mean a nice... No, it was to be an indoctrinated culture, right, for standardizing the behavior and thoughts and so on of a whole generation across the planet. It hasn't changed. So…

Cuomo questions why school buildings still exist — and says New York will work with Bill Gates to ‘reimagine education’

washingtonpost.com / 6 May 2020

(A: So 'reimagine', these are the terms you see everywhere, 'reimagine education'. I touched on this a few months ago, maybe two or three months ago.)

New York Gov. Andrew M. Cuomo (D) rocked the education world — and drew strong criticism from teachers and others — by questioning why school buildings still exist and announcing that he would work with Microsoft founder Bill Gates to “reimagine education,” with technology at the forefront.

Cuomo, who in the past has angered educators by supporting controversial Gates-funded school reforms (A: That tells you a lot right off the bat, you know.), said Tuesday that the coronavirus pandemic offers an opportunity to change how students are educated, and he called Gates “a visionary” whose “thoughts on technology and education” should be advanced. The Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation has spent billions of dollars on education reform projects it has conceded did not work as hoped.

(A: Billions of dollars, eh? On behalf of his masters, because he’s not the boss, Bill Gates.)

“The old model of everybody goes and sits in the classroom, and the teacher is in front of that classroom and teaches that class, and you do that all across the city, all across the state, all these buildings, all these physical classrooms — why, with all the technology you have?” Cuomo said at Tuesday’s coronavirus response news conference.

(A: This is the guy, Cuomo, who made it law that they have to, that old age homes had to accept active coronavirus patients in amongst the healthy noninfected people, and that’s where most of the deaths happened in New York City. So these guys should be arrested! Shouldn’t they? Shouldn’t they? And they’re psychopathic, he’s out there still as confident as ever. Because they don’t feel shame, you know, these characters. You know behaviorism wouldn’t work on them, they have no shame at all. And he’s pleasing Bill and Melinda Gates, I’m sure he’s not doing that for free either. But hhhhh, yeah, this article goes on about it…)

He showed a slide with questions about how technology can transform education…

This is a common, common, the dream of Julian Huxley to get it all accomplished, that's what it's about. The perfectly obedient society, they will create them, you see. Standardized. The elimination of individual thought and opinion is a socialist heaven, eliminating, you know, individual opinions. Liberalism or democracy, or Democrats I should say, liberalism for Democrats, they are the most intolerant people of all. They have no tolerance of anything outside of the agenda. But that's communism. It's the same thing. You see. But they prattle on about it like a sales pitch and try to sell it to you. And then you see this one, this other article here to do with again Bill Gates, again, reimagining his education, or your education, or the children's education and what they say about it too.

A $1 billion Gates Foundation-backed education initiative failed to help students, according to a new report — here's what happened

businessinsider.com / 27 June 2020

A seven-year, nearly $1 billion education initiative centered on improving teaching quality in low-income schools — and bankrolled in part by the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation — largely failed to help students, according to a new report from nonprofit policy think tank RAND.

RAND was selected at the outset of the initiative by the Gates Foundation to evaluate whether the project improved outcomes for students.

"Overall...the initiative did not achieve its goals for student achievement or graduation, particularly for LIM [low-income minority] students," the report's summary said.

By 2015, six years into the initiative, "student achievement, access to effective teaching, and dropout rates were not dramatically better," than in schools that didn't participate in the program, according to the RAND study.

In 2009, the Gates Foundation, along with local partners, selected three school districts and four charter school networks in California, Arkansas, Florida, and Pennsylvania for the Intensive Partnerships for Effective Teaching initiative, which aimed to improve teacher effectiveness by changing the way schools recruit, retain, and reward teachers.

The hope was that by monitoring and improving teacher effectiveness, students would get a higher quality education.

The Gates Foundation sank over $200 million into the initiative since 2009, with local tax dollars and the federal government adding to the pot. (A: They always do this, eh.) The initiative cost around $1 billion in total over the seven school years, (A: So he put in $200 million, and the whole thing from the taxpayer cost, all the rest it, up to $1 billion in total over the seven school years.) factoring in the approximately $73 million the RAND estimated it cost to staff the initiative and evaluate teachers…

(A: [Alan chuckles.] It found out how many…)

RAND found little-to-no evidence that participating schools were likely to hire more effective teachers.

…or retain them. There ya go. But then again…

Bill Gates shouldn't be the one 'reimagining' NY's public education

nyclu.org / 8 May 2020

This week, Governor Cuomo announced a “billionaire coalition”

(A: Do you understand, Bill Gates is famous for putting in so many millions and getting maybe the governments and the other ones to put in all, maybe 9/10 more, you see, multiply it. And so he gets his big projects financed by the governments by starting off with the seed money, you see, and the governments do all the rest, you see, so he can get his policies through. We're all paying for it, with this character, and his agendas. So…)

This week, Governor Cuomo announced a “billionaire coalition” to lead New York’s essential reopening efforts: Former NYC Mayor Bloomberg, who has a dark record on protecting New Yorkers’ privacy rights (A: No kidding.), will lead contract tracing efforts; Bill and Melinda Gates, whose foundation has a history of high-profile, high-cost failures in education reform, will assist with “reimagining education;” and former Google CEO Eric Schmidt, who left the company amid allegations of covering up sexual misconduct and supporting censorship, will be in charge of technology initiatives. (A: [Alan chuckles.])

What could go wrong.

Governor Cuomo’s collaboration with Gates is especially troubling. The announcement was met with outcry from educators, parents and students, and members of the advocacy community. Just days before, Cuomo created the “New York Forward Reopening Advisory Board,” a body with more than 100 members but not a single representative from the K-12 sector.

This led the State Education Department to form its own Task Force for reopening. This makes sense, because New York’s Constitution places responsibility for education with the Board of Regents, not with the Governor. So the Gates partnership came as a surprise.

(A: It goes on and on about, hhhch, incredible amounts of money though.)

Disappointingly, the Foundation’s efforts have been marked by one high-profile, expensive failure after another. For example, Gates’s seven-year, $1 billion initiative to improve teaching in several states did “more harm than good” (A: …and the links are all here as to what happened to them.) and cost taxpayers almost $600 million. (A: There ya go.)

The Gates Foundation was forced to publicly apologize for the failures of its small schools initiatives, and it was a backer of InBloom, the student data management company that collapsed after its privacy practices came under scrutiny.

You understand, this is a massive project to monitor all students right through their entire life, from youngsters, eh. This is all manipulation on an incredibly massive scale on society by those who have the right, they think they've got the right to manipulate us all and manage us all like little... numbers, we're not people, we're numbers, little animals... and create the culture that they want to have created of obedient, subservient non-complaining people. N-n-n. I tell ya, n-n-n. It really is astonishing isn't it.

Everything is so deceptive. As I've mentioned before that UN commission, the Rights of the Child was literally to eliminate the rights of parents. It's been awfully effective by the way. Awfully, awfully effective. If parents try and interfere with their children's behavior, maybe at the age of 12, 13, you can end up in court. And if the child takes them to court for refusing to let them out after midnight, as an example, eh, or refusing them back in the door or if they're doing it all the time. Oh, you can't ban the child from coming back when he wants to come back. So then the child really ends up ruling the parents, you see. N-n-n. Quite something isn't it.

Everything is doublespeak in this system we're living in. But most folk never figure it out, do they. They really don't. Their entire life long they never figure it out. I'll put lots of links up tonight from the articles that I've been reading. I only read them off to let you know, as examples of what's happening. Little bits and pieces that let you see what's really happening on a big scale across the planet in a sense. Even the mad things that are happening by government authority, eh.

When you see the ones from Australia for instance, you say, for goodness’ sake, that won't change this or it won't change, why are they doing it? It's a campaign of terror. It throws the average mind into confusion and fear, and it makes you comply, because they've got bigger things planned for you in the future. That's really what it's for. It's nothing to do...

The same with the whole idea, we might have to bulldoze your home down, you know, there could be some viruses lurking there. Well, the viruses won't work there without food, or without, you know, literally human bodies, that's what it lives on. It won't survive, you see, if it can't get a host. It can survive in some animals sometimes, like ferrets, they keep telling us, oh if they watch for ferrets now. Because they use ferrets in the transition stage when they're modifying with gain-of-function these diseases to be more lethal to humans. Because they're all developed by the biowarfare, these Bio IV labs, they're biowarfare labs for goodness’ sake, eh. Let's say what they are. Well, it could be used for good reasons too, you know. Well maybe they can be too, as you say. But the other reason is for warfare. They take harmless things, gain-of-function, and then they try to see if it's going to be effective against ferrets, as an example, ferrets, an intermediate animal between that and humans, then to see if it transfers to them to humans. That's how it's done.

But we're not supposed to think for ourselves. We're simple peasants. Leave it to the professionals to constantly contradict themselves, day by day, week by week. Because they've got the, they've got degrees which allows them to contradict themselves all the time. You don't have all those degrees, you see, especially not the latest ones. So you'd better shut up and do what you're told. That's the sort of thing we're getting told now, eh, by these totalitarian types.

If you ever wondered how come, because folk do, they think in their age, well you know, I can't believe what happened in the communist era, how did it ever happen, how did the people let it happen, how could it have happened? Eh, that's what they say. Well, you're living through it. Most folk shut up and said nothing... hoping, in denial of course, that it would just get better. That's how it always happens. And tyranny prospers, as they say, when good folk do nothing. That's it, folks.

And you're all capable of doing something.

You're at the crossroads now.

And don't forget too, the big elite above all this would have to answer to it as well, wouldn't they? After all, they're funding terrorism. They're terrorizing the whole populations actually with Covid. And into completely misleading all the time, every testing doesn't mean you've got a disease, you're not ill. And the more you test the more you'll find folk have got it, or had it, or have got now fragments of dead viruses, if you're anywhere near anybody that's had it you'll breath in the fragments. The fragments can't cause disease, fragments of viruses. Such a farce.

Another article I want to touch on just before I go off is the Nightingale hospitals they threw up across England to deal with the Covid and how they're all closing down and generally without ever treating one case. Quietly taking it all down. I'll put that up too. Not a mention, eh. Just shhhhhh, take them all down, do it, there's nobody using them. [Alan chuckles.] The public must believe we're falling apart and that thousands are dying.

Here's an article to do with these emergency hospitals they were throwing up. Remember the one in the US I read months ago. But the ones you see in the movies, these big, massive inflatable type things. And very ominous looking. Because you've all been trained to be horrified and terrified when you see them, you see. They're throwing them up outside New York and different places. None of them were used for a single patient, that's when they were taking them down, they admitted that at the time. Well, here's Britain, you see. They rebuilt ones as well. They called them National Health Service Nightingale. This was in July.

NEC confirms full reopening, with NHS Nightingale being decommissioned

conference-news.co.uk / 19 July 2020

The NEC has confirmed that the NHS Nightingale currently occupying the venue is being decommissioned and will reopen for events on 1 October.

In a letter to its clients, the Birmingham venue noted that the field hospital has been in hibernation since (A: ...guess when? ...guess when the peak was long gone? It was before May actually, so in May they put it into hibernation because they weren't getting any patients in at all.) May and did not receive a single patient.

(A: This emergency hospital. You know, they were overloaded with all these cases, but just like all the other hospitals, especially emergency ones they threw up, didn't get a single patient it says here.)

However, the venue says it will continue to support the NHS with the creation of a small non-Covid standby facility until March 2021.

So they're wondering what to do with this particular one that they threw up that's lying empty and never used. So they might use it for other purposes down the road.

NHS Nightingale Hospital at Birmingham's NEC to be turned into cancer testing centre - birminghammail.co.uk / 1 July 2020

Because after all you see, hhhch, people weren't getting treated for anything else. And they weren't getting treated for Covid either most of them. Because you weren't getting any patients that needed the treatment apparently in some of the hospitals anyway. And yet folk die all the time. Every year folk die. And they die all throughout the year as well. That's what we do. As babies get born other folk die, and that's the cycle of things. But of course they've terrified everyone into thinking no one died before Covid came along. Isn't that quite an act, isn't it?

Massive psychological warfare on the public. A big psy-ops operation. But again, there's big, big agendas hanging on this whole idea of a deadly pandemic, to change society and the world, and to globally reset the whole economic system which means everything in the system, including you and your way of living from birth to death. That's the purpose of it.

So there you go, that was another article there. And not from a conspiracy site either. It comes from conference-news.co.uk. Yep, there you go, there's another one that was lying empty all along. And threw out lots of money towards it of course to get all the stuff that they didn't need because they didn't have any patients. There was no overflow in the hospitals to bring patients in. Rather odd, isn't it, that the facts don't fit the horror in the propaganda. So there ya go.

Anyway folks remember go in to @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Throw a few bucks my way and help me tick along and hopefully we can get through this together. At least we’ll get, we’ll come through something together, whether or not we’ll end up together I don't know.

Tyranny is staring you in the face. Organized, planned tyranny. With the richest folk on the planet funding movements that are meant to terrorize you on the streets. And they plan to, yeah, plan to vaccinate everybody and have your immunity passports for life, with every other update and booster shot for everything they can possibly think of. And they'll come up with a whole bunch of new things now, the passports will be out shortly. I'm sure they've got a whole plan for a whole bunch of things you've never heard of. And you have to take them. Isn't it wonderful, this fascism?

True fascism, that's what you've got. And the communist don't seem to be bothered about it at all. At the bottom that is.

You're going to be mandated to take it or you'll be kept prisoner in your own home and starved to death. There ya go, that's your choice.

Goodbye centuries of fighting for rights, to watch it all fought away with the fake fight for rights by people who want to destroy it all. It's quite an interesting time to be alive.

So take care of yourselves. Keep the emails coming just to see how you're all doing because it's important. You can't just bottle yourself up at times, you have to let things out as well. Just being in contact with... Remember too, I've said before, try and get a few friends that will stand up for each other when times get worse and worse and worse.

Because they really plan, shutdown economy to the end of the consumer society, with basic, basic scraps of food eventually if they get their way. This is horrific. This is horror, and we are allowing it to happen at the moment. We'll see if anybody steps forward, in a position of power that is, to stop at all from happening. We'll just have to wait and see, won't we?

But remember as I keep telling you, you are your own champions. You have to look out for yourselves. You have to speak one by one for each other and for yourselves and say, yep, I will or I won't go along with whatever it is. Because yeah, you've got to do it for yourself if nothing else. If you think you're going to go along to get along, not with this kind of system. No, they're ruthless. They're ruthless.

You look at the people who already tried to please them by putting up the Black Lives Matter things in their windows and so on. I think it was even, was it Wheeler, or Whittle, or Wheeler, the mayor in Portland I think it was. Was it Portland? I get them all confused now.. who was all for their demonstrations, then it turned into riots. Even then he was still all for it, until they went for his house, his own house. That's what happens. They set fire to his house as well. Yep. Whoa, and he changed. Out comes five guys that have been no doubt well armed who were security guards for him. Most folk can afford that, you know. Yep, that's communism for you.

Now, before I pack in for the night and get all this uploaded I should just mention that, it all sounds very depressing, isn't it? But it's meant to. This is total psychological warfare. The articles that are coming out there, and guys from Australia saying, oh you know, we're going to force folk to take this whether they like it or not, etc. No, you can be as much of a bully back to this character. These are the tactics that they use on you, in every tyranny of course. We're pretty used to it through thousands of years of similar stuff.

So you just, you know, put a mirror back on them and let them see their faces grimacing and say we're not going to follow this, you with your face like that, all screwed up and full of angst and either real or feigned anger. Because we're not children and you have no right to dictate to us of how we're going to live or what we're going to do, in a free society.

We're either free or we're not free. There's no in between's here.

Don't let them bring the lawyers in and bioethicists to come in and persuade you otherwise. It's all psychological warfare again. On you. Things are very simple in reality. You either, if women are in charge of their own bodies, right, let's be honest here, come on here, and logic is always logic, hm, then you can all be in charge of your own bodies and deciding what's going to go into it, not just what's coming out of it.

That's your right, that is your right. Of course it's your right. If somebody's going to stick their products into you, by law, hm, well that's up to you if you want to. But then it's a legal agreement for you if you want to go along with it. But everyone doesn't have to go along with that of course, for vaccine that's untested. And they certainly do have horrific stories down through the vaccine industries record-keeping, which is kind of half hidden. You can still dig them up, all the horror stories from it too. It's up to yourself if you want to risk it, isn't it? Legalities, everything's legalities. Well, you know, we warned you that, you know, it could be fatal in some people and could have bad reactions in other people, and we warned you. Did they really? Did they really? [Alan chuckles.] There ya go.

Informed consent, hm. And if you don't give your consent, your agreement, then they're going to put you in prison? Hm? Or lock you in your own home, put a big fence around your house so you can't get out, with the bracelet, a manacle like you’re like a prisoner. That's not a free society. That's true, true fascism, the government working hand-in-hand with big, massive private corporations. That's what it is.

Don't forget too, that if you watch TV you can get the impression that the whole country in the US is burning down. It's not the case, not that way at all. Things can change very quickly if enough people say that's enough, you know. That's enough. But you do it one by one, you see, and you just say no, that's enough, I'm not putting up with this nonsense anymore. Whatever the nonsense happens to be.

Because yeah, this is the big push to bring in the elites' next phase for a more controllable society, a post-democratic society by using a form of communism. At least to start it off with. Then down the road once they've trained a generation that it's all quite normal to just obey and do what you're told, by the end of that time they'll already got rid of all the ones who actually brought it upon in the streets. They always do that, they are used and tossed away of course. They’re used for the reign of terror, but because they are terrorists and they enjoy it, then the ones at the top once they bring in their own system, they'll then dispose of them too. They always, they always do this. Standard stuff.

Everyone's gets used. Be very careful who you follow. Remember I've always said that you generally are given your leaders. I don't care who they are, or how high sounding it's going to be at times, be very careful. Because ultimately, it's your choice what happens to you. And it's your choice to decide what's best for you as well. So be very, very careful out there.

And it's not over. Because as I say, turn off the TV and you'll find out, no, all your streets across, like, a massive country like the US, are not falling apart, at the moment. Apart from the fact they haven't been rebuilding the roads and stuff for years and years and all that kind of stuff because that was also part of the agenda, bring it down to the lowest possible state, then destroy everything and rebuild it new again to suit those who already own it and rule it. That's what it's about.

It's the elites' revolution, the next phase of their revolution. It's post-democratic. Again, Maurice Strong went through it all. He wants to bring you all back, remember, to a postindustrial state of living. Which is famine. Disease. All kinds of disease in fact. All kinds of death as well increasing because of lack of energy and hygiene, and even access to healthcare and access to real healthcare, and even to basic hygiene, etc. The old, old system will get brought back again. You'd see us all dropping like flies.

But I guess they've got programs to make us all happy when it's happening. And I'm not kidding you about that. They can convince you of anything. You should really look into bioethics, and death. Because they have a death pathway as you well know in the hospitals, and they had these professionals who will make it sound so wonderful. They'll actually almost hypnotize you as you go under, and they'll convince you just to accept every stage of what's happening to you. Then they'll say, you know, we could hurry this up and it might alleviate some of your suffering for you. Well, what do you mean by that? Well, it's got a bad name but there's nothing bad about it. It helps you pass over. So they give you the cheapest possible death drug that there is rather than give you the treatment that could make you recover and keep you going for years. That's part of the new efficient system.

That's exactly what Brave New World had, wasn't it? You're guaranteed a certain lifespan right down to the exact day and year. You'd have this kind of happy utopia, in a sense, at least for the upper, the Alphas and the Betas, then you just died. Then they celebrated death as a wonderful thing, you see. You can be trained to believe anything.

And unfortunately, they're hard at work. Thousands and thousands and thousands of psychologists and bioethicists working with, who are also part lawyer some of them too, and behaviorists and neuroscientists, all working towards this brave new world to run it efficiently for those who own it. And you know who some of them are, at least some of the front people are at least, they're all presented as stars of industry and stars of science and stars of this, etc., etc. So you can either follow the stars as they say...

...or look waay beyond them into way, way deep space, and look at something that's much, much bigger than any of them, and any of us. Because there are, there's definitely forces out there that are way beyond all this, rather than the dark forces down here. Always remember that. So it's not all lost.

Take care of yourselves and help each other out. You've got have a little plan there somewhere to get through it mentally and physically. Because it's important.

And you are important. Don't ever let them believe, that they train you into thinking you're nothing at all. You're important. You're all important. Of course you are. We used to have that in life. We used to elevate humans and elevate life to a high pinnacle. It's the Communists and those who ruled the communism, the richest folk said, like Julian Huxley said, we've got to knock people off their pedestal as the supreme being on the planet and teach them that they're just another, basically another animal. In order to rule them.

So it's time you start, got back on that big stool there and says, yeah, I am worth it. And you certainly are. But it takes some doing. Don't let, you can't, it can’t all be done for you. You've got to start doing things yourself as well. And start believing in yourselves as well.

Remember too, don't just think that magic is going to make it all happen for you. The whole area into the truly supernatural, it takes more than just wishful thinking. It can't be done through basic spells, put it that way. Again, you've got to work on yourself. If you've ever experienced anything that truly is supernatural as opposed to preternatural, a big difference, then you know there are bigger forces than any of these characters that are staring at you from TV sets telling you what to do. There's much bigger forces on the planet than that. Never lose sight of that. It's very important.

The first step in psychological warfare is to totally demoralize the target population to give up. So don't give up and we'll see what happens as we go along here.

For myself Alan Watt from Ontario, Canada, it's good night and may your God or gods go with you.

Topics of show covered in following links:

Study: Coronavirus restrictions killing 10,000 children per month and 'wasting' and 'stunting' millions more

washingtonexaminer.com / 29 July 2020

Farmageddon Continues As Bankruptcies Rise 8%

zerohedge.com / 6 Aug 2020

England to revise DOWN its Covid-19 death toll by up to 10 percent after bizarre ‘counting mishap’

rt.com / 6 Aug 2020

CDC director acknowledges hospitals have a monetary incentive to overcount coronavirus deaths

washingtonexaminer.com / 1 Aug 2020

COVID-19 Vaccine Messaging, Part 1 - Federal Government and Yale Are Holding Clinical Trials on How Best to ‘Persuade’ Americans to Take COVID-19 Vaccines

clinicaltrials.gov / 7 July 2020

New COVID-19 restrictions will be needed for anti-vaxxers

theage.com.au / 16 June 2020

Sweet Innocent Dr. Fauci had an Assistant Doctor Fired and Jailed in 2011 for Warning that Vaccines were Giving Americans Known Chronic Diseases

thegatewaypundit.com / 24 April 2020

In New Interview Bobby Kennedy Jr. Claims Dr. Fauci will Make Millions on Coronavirus Vaccine and Owns Half the Patent

thegatewaypundit.com / 3 Aug 2020

Executive Order 13887 of September 19, 2019 - Modernizing Influenza Vaccines in the United States to Promote National Security and Public Health

govinfo.gov / 24 Sept 2019

Michelle Obama: Coronavirus an Opportunity to Change ‘How Wealth Is Distributed’

breitbart.com / 6 Aug 2020

New York's COVID checkpoints: Cops stationed at tunnels and bridges to question travelers from 35 COVID-19 hotspot states and order them to quarantine for 14 days

dailymail.co.uk / 6 Aug 2020

Councils can BULLDOZE contaminated homes and crush cars as a last resort under new laws to stop second wave of coronavirus

dailymail.co.uk / 4 Aug 2020

'Shock and awe': Victoria declares state of disaster, six-week Melbourne curfew and stage four restrictions

9news.com.au / 2 Aug 2020

Establishment Media Reaches New Low with Glowing Article About Growing Faith in Communism

westernjournal.com / 6 Aug 2020

Exclusive from Gen. Flynn: This Is My Letter to America

westernjournal.com / 5 Aug 2020

A Warning From General Flynn To The Silent Majority

bitchute.com / 1 July 2020

Faith in Quick Test Leads to Epidemic That Wasn’t NYT 2007

nytimes.com / 22 Jan 2007

United States should shut down completely for another four to six weeks to save the economy, senior Federal Reserve official says

dailymail.co.uk / 2 Aug 2020

Owners of Michigan B&B are forced to remove Norwegian flag from their inn after dozens of people confuse it for the Confederate flag

dailymail.co.uk / 30 July 2020

Researchers admit trans-affirming study was wrong

christian.org.uk / 6 Aug 2020

NI Children's Commissioner calls for abortion to be promoted to young girls in RSE

christian.org.uk / 7 Aug 2020

Bill Gates shouldn't be the one 'reimagining' NY's public education

nyclu.org / 8 May 2020

A $1 billion Gates Foundation-backed education initiative failed to help students, according to a new report — here's what happened

businessinsider.com / 27 June 2020

Cuomo questions why school buildings still exist — and says New York will work with Bill Gates to ‘reimagine education’

washingtonpost.com / 6 May 2020

Up to 300,000 Left Homeless by Beirut Explosion: Live Updates

globalresearch.ca / 5 Aug 2020

NEC confirms full reopening, with NHS Nightingale being decommissioned

conference-news.co.uk / 19 July 2020

NHS Nightingale Hospital at Birmingham's NEC to be turned into cancer testing centre

birminghammail.co.uk / 1 July 2020

Portland protesters attack elderly women who tried to put out their fires

washingtontimes.com / 7 Aug 2020

Aug 16, 2020 "Cutting Through the Matrix" with Alan Watt (Blurb, i.e. Educational Talk): " The New Freedom

Hi folks, I'm Alan Watt and this is Cutting Through the Matrix on August 16, 2020. And as always, I hope you're doing as best as you can under the circumstances of [Alan chuckles.] utter chaos and madness, all organized of course. Because what's happening now is the designing, redesigning of society, across the planet, and redefining what we are as human beings, and societies in general in fact, right down to genders as you well know, it's been a big one on top for quite a few years, as all concepts of what used to be called normality or normative is being redesigned again, all of it, in order to destroy resistance among society to changes, the planned changes.

Before, it's harder, very, very difficult to bring in a whole new way of living without destroying the previous generation. Because naturally they'll dig their heels in and say oh, no, no, you can't do this, and this is ridiculous and mad and the whole bit. So bit by bit over may be a 20, 25 year period, you chip away through education, through the school system, grab them young and they grow up to be about 25 or so and they've got all the new ideas instilled in them, all the new indoctrinations. And it works awfully well in them.

Then you've already hammered and hammered through repetition through all kinds of dramas and movies and so on, where they imbed all the different new norms into their storylines, etc., until all age groups parrot the same stuff. Because they can't trust their own logic anymore, nor their own memory either. That's how it's all designed, you see, until you can't trust your own judgment, just listen to the experts. In fact, last week I mentioned one of the articles that came out from the top groups of thinkers, you know, scientific thinkers, telling us not to think for ourselves with these very important topics, we're not qualified to think deeply on them. So, there you go. This is the farce of the time we're living through.

A complete redesigning of society, and every possible method of deception and manipulation, psychological manipulation and coercion is in use right now. It's quite astonishing to watch it all. And it's too big for even one person or a group of people to keep up with all of it, because it's overwhelming in a sense.

But years ago when they were hammering on and hammering on about artificial intelligence and how it was going to reshape society, and Al Gore came out because Al Gore is a player in certain areas, for financial teams, and for fleecing the public for carbon taxes and trading them and making a profit on them, all these kind of things. You see, we're ruled by crooks if you haven't figured it out. Especially since the time of post democratic society, which the Club of Rome came out with years ago.

They said, on behalf of their masters that paid them, the big think tank, the Club of Rome, they were given the task, different tasks actually, about redesigning society. Because the elite themselves in the big business classes, the ones, the corporate raider types that were going across the world and having their big talks with CEOs that were treated like gods, with their innovative ideas of, you know, halving workforces or slashing it to the bone and then reselling off what was left of corporations. The corporate raiders, they literally wanted to take over the whole system. And this darn nuisance called democracy was a problem. It got in the way of profits, quick profits. So, if you could do away with democracy, you could get your big plans made and worked out and implemented with no real kickback from the public, you see, you eliminated the public problem.

That's what you've been living through ever since, including the whole idea of climate change, it was the Club of Rome that came up with that idea of blaming humanity for the climate, you see. That way you could bring in sustainability. You could bring in all kinds of new ideas. A new way of living. Again, austerity for the public. With high prices for everything, mind you, so the corporation don't, they're not losing anything. They're getting more in fact for giving you less. Especially in all energy forms too, like Technocracy planned long ago.

So, you're living through an agenda, a big, big agenda. Of course, science and business work together under the guise of public-private partnerships. Of course, what they do is they put in businessmen often, sometimes minor businessman as politicians. They're assets, if you like. And many of them actually are assets of intelligence agencies. That's been going on for years. Obama was well-connected. So, was Clinton actually. The Rhodes scholar Bill Clinton went over to London to study there with his scholarship, Oxford Rhodes scholarship, and then he disappeared there and spent the rest of his time in the Soviet Union. [Alan chuckles.] Then he came back, and they made him president of America.

It's quite interesting to watch what happens. Because you see, the real world has got nothing to do with what you've been brainwashed to believe. It really hasn't. I mentioned it before, this strange travel of important people in the sciences and so on, during the whole Cold War. It's the last thing you would allow in the reality for international meetings of this or that or whatever. You'd never allow it, let your best people go there and collaborate with your supposed enemies, and exchange ideas and information, etc. But they did that every year.

So, nothing made any sense until you really figure out, there's a different game on the go. The game is always against the public. And first and foremost, you must understand what power is. Power is a means of gaining control over people, either with or without their consent, it depends how you do it. And to benefit of course agendas. Again, you know, post democratic, get the job done and to heck with the public, that type of idea. Or as I say, it's also used for business in this day and age. Business was elevated as I say during the time of the corporate raiders to a much higher level. And they really did, they literally did hostile takeovers of businesses by grabbing the shares and so on, getting the controlling shares and then slashing everything to the bone.

What you don't realize is back in the 1970s and 80s you had lots of family-owned businesses, and maybe second or third generation, big businesses too with factories, etc. They still had that idea of having responsibility, those who owned the businesses, to the people who work there with them, this strange old-fashioned idea that you are responsible in some way. Of course, the new system was again the corporate raiders, they had no conscience about anything like that. They called everybody deadweight and slashed them and kick them off. Folk coming up to retirement lost their, everything, their pension, the lot.

This was the, these were early warning signs and symptoms of what was to come for, again, this technocratic, as they call it technocratic system of controlling the world. You know, there's nothing in Technocracy Inc. that said that those that would control it should be poor or as poor as the general public were going to be. On the contrary, you see. So, it's very appealing, this idea of technocracy where everything is reduced to energy. Of course, energy at the moment is simply transmuted into a dollar value or a pound value or euro value, whatever it happens to be, and you're subject to it, you see. But really, supposedly, under their idea, was that everything was energy. To make a product is all energy. Somebody puts out the energy to make this, or to change it from this to that to that, it's all really gradients in change of energies, you see. So, the idea was to bring in a perfect world where those who had the right to rule it would be the technocrats. Not an elected right, but a natural right, just like communism idea, without being subjected to or really responsible to the public, again. Because you see, they were the experts and experts should run the world. That was the idea.

It's quite amazing as I say, when you look at today and the CEOs of corporations that walk on water with their ridiculous TED talks. They always have to create their own lingo, to be in house, you know, you're one of us, here's the latest terminology to be cool. They come up with new terms all the time about their particular area. They flap their hands a lot like Bill Gates does, because they've all done their motivational, you know, training, etc. and apparently it impresses punters if you flap your hands a lot and you wave your arms and run up and down the stage. They're like peas in a pod in a sense. And they have to be really innovative, which means even more startling than the person before them, that's what they mean by innovation.

The idea too, is interlaced with psychology, with psychologists going into the social area long ago to do with factory management and so on and how to manage the people who are doing monotonous tasks, making them work harder and faster, and then trying to deal with the emotional upset it would cause so that they didn't crackup and claim compensation, things like that. So, make everything more efficient. In fact, you could get them on drugs, that would be, as long as they could still put out the same output it was quite good, you see. So, put them all on drugs. And even give them counseling. If they're really good employees you could put it down to insurance and get counseling for them so they could manage to handle the extra stress of work, you see.

So, psychology is a big, big part of managing us all with technocracy today. Look at the Covid thing. How many millions of dollars have been spent using these behavioral insights teams to con us and lie to us to get us to do things that they want, that the elite want us to do on behalf of those who rule us? I don't say they govern us; they rule us. [Alan chuckles.] I don't elect anybody, so are they ruling me? I don't vote. It's a con game and it's been a con game all my life. The elite have always got their people into office.

I'll touch on a few things tonight that even show it perhaps more openly and evidently than things beforehand. For instance, there are some good videos out right now, there's a lot of good videos if you want to spend your life watching videos. But, and I can't even get the speed to watch them, because I'm getting hammered by, it isn't just going after [Alan chuckles.] your income or shadow banning you now, and I've had this for years, they literally have got my server to slow me down to like 1 to 2 Mb per second, up until midnight and I can, it just… I can't watch anything until midnight, you see. Then like a magic switch, it just turns on. Which it, what it is it's a switch, so I get throttled and choked and so on.

I had that years ago, the same problem for years and years and years when I was doing lots of shows and so on, sometimes five a day and putting out information that people really had not heard before. I kind of broke the rules, because I realized, that's why I came out, people were navel-gazing. You had a lot of people in the States who were stuck on the same topics, but it was navel-gazing, they didn't realize it was a big world agenda. I came out and I had to connect the dots for them all and give them information on what was really, really happening. That caused a big stir at the time.

But after a while I got hammered, I couldn't, as I say, I'm right back to where I was where I was getting one or two… I was going to download something in fact before I did this talk. It was only I think 24 MB, the speed is that slow, and this is not cheap what I'm paying for, satellite, 'eh, and it said it would take me a day to download the 24 MB. That's how bad I get hammered here. So, don't think that I'm sitting here and I'm not getting, I've been getting hammered since day one. I was getting shadow banned before you heard the term. Once they realized what I was talking about, and it was like a panic mode and suddenly, suddenly, people couldn't find me. Just very suddenly. Because I was saying things they didn't want the public to...

What They Don't Want You To See (Shadow Gate) - youtube.com / 16 Aug 2020

You've got to understand, you control information by controlling people. And you've got to understand too, that in the US especially, and the intelligence agencies in Canada use the US as well, they work with them. That during the Cold War the CIA set up what was then patriot radio across America from the 60s and 70s on. They even hired a lot of pastors and put them on to preach against communism, as an antidote to Communism. That worked pretty well for time. But then they brought other people in too, and really it was thick, really thick with propagandists for the CIA. And the all-seeing eye never gives up something that works, even gets to be kind of peacetime, there's never peacetime with the CIA. The CIA has got nothing to do with what Americans think it's got to do. It really hasn't.

The whole, in fact the whole idea of a new world order that America must sink into after financing and building this new world order, and they must themselves sink into it, is a CIA creation. For those that haven't figured it out themselves. The CIA with different front groups, just like communism did, they had many front groups, worked and gave you the Macy groups and all the other groups that combined and work together. Even with Bertrand Russell, he worked with them all. And the Frankfurt schools and so on. They all worked together to bring a whole new culture, in preparation for a world culture, which they would then submerge all the nation-states into one big system for total control. And business and technology would rule, as we have today. To such an extent that most folk haven't figured it out, they still think we're fighting other countries.

As I say, tonight I'll put up some links to YouTube's and things, little bits I've seen after midnight sort of thing. I could see them after midnight, little clips and bits and bytes before I get cut off. And I do get cut off all the time. So, don't think I sit here, and I've got it quite easy. I've been hammered since, oh, for many years, put it that way, many, many years getting hammered with problems. And it's all intentional. Naturally. Because those who think they're living in a reality, a little bubble of where Democratic, or even if you're in a republic, you get a democratic right to vote and so on and it's a republic, well, go back to sleep. I think George Carlin said it, the comedienne George Carlin. He said, about the American dream, he says, of course you have to be asleep to believe in it, it's a dream. And he says, it's a big club and you ain't in it. And that's so true.

But today with complete interconnection of agencies, like spy agencies, and business, big business, technology and assets, you see, most people who work for agencies are assets, they work in front companies and so on. Hundreds and hundreds and hundreds and hundreds of front companies, especially in intelligence work, to do with technology, and they share it and sell it across the world. This whole idea that you're living in a nation that protects its borders is a joke anyway, but even its airwaves borders and its AI borders is an utter farce.

Because they've got people working in all different countries to manage us all basically. Again, as I say, I'll touch on that tonight because it's important you understand how some of it works, at least some of it works. Even if the ones that are showing you that, sometimes they may be an agency themselves, 'eh. Never ever stop and just take everything and swallow it and take it for granted. Years ago, I can remember talking about companies, one of them was Stratfor. Stratfor, it is well-known as an intelligence asset; they'll call it an asset even though it's all intelligence folk that work in it. And often from different countries too, one in particular. But they work with the CIA, and all the top ones. And the Pentagon that has its own agencies. Everybody's got its own, the Navy has its own agency, a very high one in fact, the U.S. Navy, just like the UK in Britain. So yeah, but they all work together for the common good, which is their own wallets and promotions, and continuation after retirement into very lucrative positions for/in the military-industrial complex.

So once again it's only people at the bottom that think these are our guys, you know, and gals. No, it's not. They're not at all. They're bought and paid for. They often have less integrity than the person on the street who is way more patriotic than the person up yonder. And that again is very true because of the incredible indoctrination that we all have. And these are natural instincts we have to be patriotic. It's very, very, it's tribal. Very tribal. We get attached even to the dirt were born on basically. That's what your nation is, it's your home. It's a natural thing. So it never dawns on you that the people who were paid to so-called represent it, even in Armed Forces at the very, very top, are often on the payrolls for much higher agencies and intelligence services that are working for a different, completely different agenda. And including their own pursuit of incredible wealth for its members.

There's nothing, there's NOTHING they don't know about you. Nothing. I used to give the talks years ago and I said, you know, you're giving all your, all your data to them, every day, willingly on Facebook and Twitter. And even your emails, you know they're all read. And from that, on a daily, a daily program they can updated automatically, all your profiles are updated automatically and whatever you add to you, the people you're communicating with, is all put on your profile. They work out, and they've got pretty good, perfect simulations they can run with you, a virtual you, putting you through, the virtual you through scenarios, like life scenarios, and predicting very accurately how you will handle these different situations. They've got us all sussed out. That's all sold from intelligence agencies to other private agencies that work with them. That's how they get around the legalities of things by using private agencies too, you see. It's quite something.

But don't think for one moment that your government, in fact your government is so far off into the future in a sense, and it has been for a long time, most folk will never, never catch up to what it's all about. I've mentioned some awfully good drama series with there's more reality in them, like The Last Enemy series in Britain, to show you how far the technology was even then from GCHQ watching everybody. And not just on their own country, but across the world. Including people they knew would migrate to Britain from other countries, they had it all worked out who they were before they'd even come into the country. It's just astonishing.

Then as I say too, the agencies themselves, that are often competing with each other for, again, it's always for money at the top, at the very, very top. Because information is incredible, incredibly well, you know, people buy it for big, big bucks. Massive, you know. Blackwater I think recently bought over one of the genealogical research firms that you all voluntarily, volunteered to give all your data about your DNA and your heritage to. And ohhhhhhhhhh, you just can't help people. You can't.

And insurance companies just love this, oh, now we know what these folk are prone to, there’s a whole lineage there, and who they're related to, their other cousins, they're probably so much percentage prone to this and that as they are too. It's all worked out with algorithms pretty precisely. And of course your insurance, or, they'll say, in the present state with the Covid nonsense, you know, now that they are deciding, you know, openly who's going to live and who's going to die, before you go into the hospital, should you happen to go in, if they're even going to bother going to bring you in and give you treatment. Because you see, they try to spend the money on the ones who are more likely to come through.

Have you figured out that hospitals are not, they're not... They're privately owned, and a good deal, at least half of them, like half of their cost is privately owned. Corporations work them all. Tonight, I'll put up a good documentary, it's up on Vimeo, for free. I think you can actually watch it mostly still paid elsewhere, but Vimeo has the permission of John Pilger, a free one up on the National Health Service in Britain, The War on the National Health Service.

The Dirty War on the NHS - johnpilger.com

The Dirty War on the NHS – video - vimeo.com / 11 Aug 2020

He does a good job as always into what's happened, when he shows you the corporate raiders that go in there and they slash and burn, and how they can, they took over hospitals for East Anglia as one project. And multimillion dollar, you know, they get paid multi-, these CEOs get multi million dollars paychecks to go into the social constructs of the hospitals, financed by the people, the taxpayers, and they plunder them for themselves and destroy how it works. And destroy lives in the process.

They give you in the documentary that he puts out one example, as I say, East Anglia, I think it was East Anglia hospital where this guy Ali Parsa, Ali Parsa owns at the moment many, he's got his fingers in lots of pies to do with healthcare and so on, for profits naturally. He was a head guy at Goldman Sachs before all this kind of thing. Now he's got an app out, the Babylon app in the UK, so he can get virtual GP or doctor consultations. And it costs you, of course. He's just a humanitarian, you understand. So that's Ali Parsa. Apparently, he's been on TED talks before, again, with a lot of handwaving and very convincing character, who destroyed some of the hospitals that he's been brought in as management consultants. That's what they call themselves, we're management consultants, we can help you run it more efficiently. And they slash and burn to the bone for profits, profits, profits as they privatize these hospitals. Right down to in some of these hospitals... Anyway, you'll see it in the documentary. The guy should be literally put up there with lots of other faces on massive billboards for the villains that they are, and called that, villains that should have been tried and put in prison for what they've done.

Right up to Cameron and all the other characters that have been in, Tony Blair too, all the usual, all these folks from different parts, they're all the same, folks working on the same agendas. The idea is NOT to help the people, but to enrich themselves. Public-private partnerships, where have we heard that? That came out, public-private partnerships from Prince Charles, you've often heard of that. But the fact is, the ones who brought it out were the guys in the Trilateral Commission, way back, you know, that they were bringing in their system, which again, is Technocracy.

But it's amazing to see it all work this way, you see, and oh, it's public-private partnerships, you'll pay for it all and we'll privatize it, so there'll be profit for these guys who are in the private parts, but the public will pay for the upkeeps and yada, yada, ya and the costs of running it and all that. Not a bad deal, 'eh? And because of public-private partnerships the people have seen their infrastructure sold off to these corporate fascists who plunder you big time and make it more and more inefficient, whether it's electric or water supplies or gas or whatever it happens to be, all these, again, energy areas of technocracy.

And it's not stopped. It's to bring a whole world in like this in fact, with all the resources under their control. Going way back again to Lord Alfred Milner and the British Empire idea. It was nothing to do with going across the world, they told the peasants in Britain, it was to bring civilization to the world. Ancient Rome said the same thing. Because it rolls off the tongue easily, we're bringing civilization, you know, across the world. But it's really to get resources, and the tax base because you can plunder folk for their taxes. That's what they did of course. They didn't start the idea, even in India, India itself, they had different maharajas who lived off the taxes of the public and all the transactions and commerce and so on. Many of them liked the idea, in fact, when Britain and Clive of India amalgamated a lot of the country under the British Empire. Some of them liked it, the maharajah's, because they could split the loot. Britain liked that too because they worked awfully well, the elite of Britain worked awfully well with the caste system of India because those at the top, the Brahmans, were pretty much like the folk who ruled Britain, or the City of London, they had a complete disdain for the lower caste, you see. So, it was a marriage made in heaven, you see. They could plunder them all and share taxes, etc. of the peasants.

So no, don't think that Britain invented this idea, or at least, I call it London. Because the British folk were the same as everybody, even the Sepoys, etc., in India that worked for Britain, the military there for the Raj. They were just the same, young guys who get recruited into the armies, and it never dawns on them really that they're working for something that's corrupt. They think they're being patriotic generally. Every country is the same, isn't it? Because it's a natural instinct to defend your own country. When a con comes in, you're getting used, they generally never figure that out until it's too late, if they live that long.

But that's the system we're living in today, is a CIA type operation that goes way back before the CIA was given the name, as I say, to Lord Alfred Milner, the City of London, the banking fraternity would rule. Of course, a lot of that was shifted to the CFR, they shared it and divvied it up in Kipling's time. I think they created the CFR in America in the 1920s and they took their share of it by diverting taxes and so on to special benevolent funds to help folk across the world, as they took over other nations. They could have a massive economic hotspot in New York City of course, 'the Empire state'. What Empire is that 'eh? What Empire are they talking about? Well, guess! Guess, folks.

So, folks never generally figure it out. And it's not their fault. What I will say here is that no matter what information it is that you get, you have to really try and verify it for yourself, as best you can. And don't take anything at face value. Because there are so many players in the intelligence, the artificial intelligence world that we are in today, so many players, that you're generally being deceived by somebody along the way. Even people who innocently might parrot the same stuff off that they've got from elsewhere, or send it to you, and really believe it, they'll fall for at times, you know. Because you have no idea of the power of manipulation through artificial intelligence.

And today with the lockdown you can actually see it, when more and more folk are sitting at home on the Internet all the time, and some of the things that they'll freak out about, they shouldn't be freaking out about. They're panicking because that becomes their real world. They're not seeing people, not even meeting people, that's one of the consequences and the casualties of isolation is that they start to distrust themselves and they'll start falling for things that they shouldn't be falling for, you see. Very sci-fi isn't it, you're locked in your own little world, and you have no human contact, very little, and what you get could be coming from, again, computers themselves, just algorithms hitting you, or as I've mentioned before, the 77 Brigade in Britain of thousands of cyber warfare guys that they employ, and their assets, which run into the multi-thousands of them, across the world they use them, this one group based in Britain for the Department of Defense. These are the guys that literally will pick up those who are putting out information and then attacked them like crazy. They've already got all the information on your personality, they know your Achilles heels, and they can hit you and try to destroy you internally by pretending to even befriend you. Be awfully careful of this technique.

Now, tonight I'll put up a link as well, and be wary as well, because as I say, you don't know where it comes from really, or who is really behind it. But it's about Millie Weaver who, I don't know much about her myself except that, who knows if she's involved herself in some kind of intelligence. You just don't know. I don't know. But it could very possibly be, especially when you see the people who have come out and put a video out that she was working on, that Weaver was working on with a woman called Tore, is the name she goes by, Tore, and another fellow who also worked for security agencies in the US. Very interesting. There's no doubt about it, it's got all the positive facts that come out with this incredible spider web of intrigue and blackmail through intelligence gathering on every single individual. It really goes into it in some depth. I've only seen little bits and pieces, again because I can't get a constant speed here, I'm getting hit hard because of what I do. And I pay money for it too. Yep. To get that ridiculous speed.

But as I say, be careful because again the one thing that I do know is that they do go into how Donald Trump is being hammered and hit. And I don't go into politics myself because I see them all as just players in the same game, politicians, who are often backed by even foreign powers themselves with big agendas, you see. I thought about what I know of Trump and he, I know he had people when he got elected in, they said, he was their last hope. I thought, my goodness, do they know anything about this guy? He's their last hope, a guy from New York is their last hope?

Then you think about his speeches. His speeches are awfully important, even though they're probably written by a speechwriter, you see. But when he was running the last time he did say he was going to allow big Pharma and the vaccine industry to cut a lot of corners and get things out, for the public's good you see, get things out to the public, people in need, without all the incredible testing and delays that they have to go through for safety, he's going to rush things through. So that was a clue to me right off the bat who was also backing him. And it was important, I knew then something was going to come down the pike or something was going to be put into force. And bingo!

But also, and I know Obama did this too I believe, but they allowed, I remember reading it at the time and talking about it in a talk, where they were allowing pharmacology to, or at least the guys who own the drug companies, to put different ingredients, substitute ingredients into well-known medications, because they would be cheaper, these substitutes, than what they're using already, but they may be less safe, and of course maybe would not have the same efficacy, you see. So yeah, the same prices or bigger prices for the same drugs and using cheaper chemicals to make them. Substituting the ones for the ones that were proven, that was another part of it too.

Well, pharmacology is one of the biggest rackets out there unfortunately. You see, anything that's to do with people and helping people is an open door for corruption. We're here from the government, we're here to help you... That's another one too from the state itself. From big business, we are part of your community nonsense and stuff like that, right down to, we're here to help you. Don't you… It's a multibillion-dollar industry, in the States alone, and these guys are not there to help you.

Look at the incredible OxyContin farce we had for years and years, where the family, they did it with again a lot of help, 'eh, knew darn well that this was going to addict millions of people, and kill a lot too. Well, they were, big profits, big, big business. And how much collusion of folk in government went along with that? And of course, do you think money didn't, of course money changes hands, 'eh. There're other ways of getting money to the people without it being found out.

Because we're run by corruption for God's sake. Utter corruption. From the top to the bottom. There's nothing out there that's not corrupt. Including all those at the head of the Armed Forces. Integrity went out a long time ago unfortunately. And now it's just get-rich-quick and the massive military-industrial complex that built up during the Cold War, and really, quadrupled itself probably at least in the last 15 to 20 years of the Cold War, just got worse and worse after the Cold War, and changed its sites on the public. I remember years ago I said, what will they do now, what will the military-industrial complex do now that the Cold War is over, they said? Well, it's going to change its way and go into surveillance, that's where their money would be, in high-tech surveillance of the populace. So, there you go, from defending you, because they're there to defend you, you thought, right, to surveilling you and selling your, selling it all to government by lobbying.

Ahhhhhhhhhh. Folk never really figure it out. So anyway, I'll put this link up to Millie Weaver and she apparently was arrested, I think, who knows, arrested on Friday perhaps. Probably because of this video, but something to do also with having access to Hillary Clinton's emails or something, which I thought lots of folk probably had. So, we'll soon find out. But the same token too, be careful of everything, because you don't know who's working for whom, for what. You really don't. And I won't go any further in some areas, but you really don't.

In the little bits I could glean from in the video, they did go into some of the tricks of the trade and the incredible corruption within all these different agencies, that the general population don't even know exist. There's hundreds and hundreds different companies, and you see the same characters in the U.S. Congress, and the State Department, and in the military at the top, all CEOs of the biggest corporations that are buying and selling information for private companies, that the taxpayer funds initially through the CIA and NSA, etc., and it all gets shared with all these private companies, and they make money off you all.

But they manipulate, they did go into how they can manipulate EVERY kind of vote, and how they've got the target areas of even people who will riot and have revolutions, they can actually get them all excited by using the same techniques, by the way, as the 77th brigade in Britain, and using them in the States. Because they know everybody. They're all on cell phones. Obama [Alan chuckles.] gave them the cell phones, and they even use that against them. They manipulated all the folk who got the free cell phones for the Ferguson riots, here are the guys explaining how it was done.

I mentioned last week and maybe the week before too, that do you really think that all these folks who are rioting, they don't know all about you? ALL about you? Never mind the live assets they have amongst you there, that will turn you all in down the road when it's time to do so.

But yeah, they can literally, really work on folks' emotions, on masse, very quickly by the way, to stir up their angst, etc., by giving them false information, the fake news stuff, targeted to their cell phones. Did you know that those so and so's are doing this to you, yada, ya? And they all get the same information and you can get them to riot just very, very quickly. Quite amazing.

What They Don't Want You To See (Shadow Gate) - youtube.com / 16 Aug 2020

So anyway, there's some good stuff in the documentary, I haven't seen it all because I can't because of my speed and the Internet. But again, be wary, again, as to when folk come forward to help, you don't know, is this another agency working for another agency [Alan chuckles.], and so on. And there's some agencies as I say in Texas for instance and California, that are even foreign owned, 'eh, that work with the CIA. So, it's a murky world out there as I say and be very, very careful. But you can learn a lot if you want to.

And it might make folk at least a bit more cautious maybe with their own information, if it really matters. Because there's nothing they don't know about you already. And it's disgusting. Our whole reality is utterly run by corruption. Total corruption. And everywhere you look, total corruption. They even mention that too, everybody is blackmailable. If they want to get you there's nothing they don't know about you. You hear that woman Tore in that documentary saying that, yeah they can find out about, if they've got a target for instance, find out who their acquaintances are, where their relatives are, and then checked all the information of the folk who knew them, years ago, try to get every little bit of dirt on them they can possibly get, and then use it on them with blackmailing. Blackmail them in a sense to do their own bidding. That's how the world is run today.

Look what happened with the Covid thing, 'eh, and how many things were working up to a crescendo at the time. You had the Epstein case, and Ghislaine Maxwell of course, all too conveniently timed for her arrest, knowing this was all going to get swept under the rug to an extent. And with a much bigger intelligence operation behind them all, massive intelligence operation, including the fixers and the players and the distributors and the managers of the intelligence agency in the States that was running them too, and financing them. Incredible information. And it's all just going quiet now, isn't it, pretty well.

Because those who control all information and target information to us all know how to do it and how to just quiet, quieten away all the little references to Ghislaine Maxwell, and suddenly it's just Covid, Covid, Covid, etc. That's how it's done. You've seen it yourselves doing searches, as I say, I don't think there's a single search engine out there now that's untouched, I very much doubt it, and it will try to guide you off to the stories that they'd rather you looked at, rather than the ones you're trying to find. And it's not going to get any better because our systems are utterly corrupt, the people are corrupt, and you cannot fix it, it's so far gone.

Years ago I said too, even when I first came out talking about all things, I said, you know, I didn't have a computer then, I said I didn't want one, I said I knew what it was for and I knew it would bring in a hellish world, you know. The old idea that Satan couldn't bring in his world of total control, a hell on earth, without the computer, because of the complete access to everyone's private thoughts and doings, continuously, it couldn't be done actually. And I knew it wasn't for the public's benefit. I mean AARPA had it for the military during the Cold War, and they had it since at least the 50s actually and right on, then it became DARPA. And they gave you at the bottom obsolete technology right up to the present time, it's still obsolete compared to what they had in fact even then. They'll tell you it's the latest for big profits and all the rest of it.

But it was all designed from the beginning to get all your information from you. Including the big Google machine, the big massive intelligence operation that even ran the Myspace and things, I think it did even mentioned in that documentary, I think they mentioned that in the documentary about how they did a lot of startup companies themselves, and it was all to get folk start dishing out their private information, which they would then acquire, you see. It's a morass out there of overlapping agencies, and both governmental and private agencies and private contractors as they like to call themselves too that work for them. It's just a... You can't fix it, folks. But the system was designed that way too, that there would be no protection for the people, the general population.

Again, the military-industrial complex is a for profit business. As I say, they said they would go into mass surveillance when they couldn't be making missiles and antimissiles, ballistic missiles and so on, at the end of the Cold War they would go into intelligence gathering of the public, over the public themselves, and spying on the public. Under the guise of security.

Can't be fixed. So sad. But that's the way it is. I said years ago too, many years ago I said, don't throw away your little photocopiers, even though they can trace where everything comes from, because you don't see it, but there's an actual number which is available under certain lighting of every photocopy page that you make, of any machine, so they can trace where it comes from too. That's how much we've been spied on, even before you were given access to the personal computer. What a con that, personal, it's your personal computer, and I've got privacy on my personal computer. [Alan laughing.] You know your anti-spyware systems are parts of agencies too, working with them to get all your information, as you scan everything it's getting sold off again, even if you pay for the program. Hhhh, it's so sad, isn't it, the corruption everywhere? But you've got to stop and say, well wait a minute here, how did we get this far with humanity was so corrupt? It is a good question. And most folk should come to that point and say, well how did we even get this far?

It's because you had checks and balances before. You had cultures that often, even if you were weaning off of Christianity like the West was, by force actually, as they try to elevate science above religion in order to dominate you more efficiently, you see. You've got to understand that they knew where they were going to take it. But at least with, even if it wasn't waning, if it wasn't waning, Christianity was waning, you had your moral guidance from it. Whether you liked it or not it was there. There were rights and there were wrongs, you see, these were moral things which you grew up with. You knew when you were doing something, personally I believe folk know when they're doing something wrong anyway, I really do, you know.

But when you go into a materialistic system, and ex-moral society, or ex-moralistic society, into materialism, which is what you've all copied, and that was well explained in Political Ponerology, excellent read, I mentioned that many years ago, where psychologists and psychiatrists in the Soviet Union era looked at their own politicians and comparing them with the West and found out what they had in common. They came up with the idea that they're psychopathic. And of course, they are. But they also found that you can give, like the West, you see, it was always to do with the decadent West, they had copied materialism. Because they threw Christianity out the window and copied another group of big businesspeople, whose whole life is business and money, money, money. Materialism. And when you start to adopt the completely materialistic system and elevate wealth to the top to replace God, then morality goes out the window anyway, that's a natural occurrence, you see. And that's what's happened.

It's all through the strata of society and all through your institutions. It's just greed, greed, greed. It's phenomenal. Right down to people talking about celebrities. What's a celebrity? It's someone who's given a lot of publicity by the publicity makers who own the system, like the machinery that makes you pop stars or rock stars or whatever it happens to be. They're made. It's not because they've got a special talent that nobody else has got. It's because they're made to be. They've been doing that for years and years, your whole life long and before you were born. That's how they've made these stars.

Just like vaudeville, for instance, and basic theater in Britain. If you go back into the 1800s you had these nice little, actually I like some of the old theaters that retained some sort of the old-style, where actors and actresses went on stage and they did their thing. But they weren't paid a lot of money. In fact, they were looked down upon to an extent because it wasn't like a real job, you see. And they often were, because it would break the rules of society, even in their acting, you had to show what you did in acting, then the women were looked upon as being rather gauche, they used to say gauche, or loose as they used to say, or fast, again that was another term they used, oh they were rather fast.

So loose morality was looked down upon by the general population. And they weren't wrong actually, often they were, the people, they liked their drinks and drugs too, you know, even then.

But once the big money folk came in and took over the whole industry of entertainment, morality immediately went out the window even further, it took a real nosedive. They elevated them into stardom, now they're stars, you see, the folk who just acted, just puppet parts here and there and got little money for it, now they got big money, they didn't before. And they made them celebrities.

Of course, the idea of stars is important because you follow the stars. This is the idea. They are somebody's now, whatever idiocy came out of their mouths would be parroted by lots of people through magazines, etc. Then they would start copying what they were being told in the magazines because these were famous people now and I'll be like them now, you see. So much of it was targeted at women, 97%, I remember giving the talks years ago of the magazines right up into the 1980s and 90s in the US were targeted at women. All advertisers will tell you study after study that they do, and psychology and public relations that they do, public relations companies will tell you that women are far easier to influence, they'll try something new, where the men are way more conservative, you see. So, you can change society through the women much easier, that was an old idea too that they've known down through history.

So that's why in this Covid push right now you'll see a lot of the women freaking out in stores and attacking people for not wearing masks and things like that. Because they're watching TV all the time and they really believe, it really gets them emotionally, you see. It's meant to switch on the emotions, not logic. It's to bypass logic and make you react as opposed to think and reason. That's why it's aimed at really, a lot of the women are just going nuts and attacking folk. There's lots of little clips out there I believe showing this.

So, we’re manipulated all the time by following some of them, following the stars. People who get millions. Why do you get millions of dollars because some else tells you to stand here, right, and say this, and you say it? I used to think about the James Bond movies, you know, and when you saw what they got paid, the guys that played Bonds, and each little quip that came out of their mouths was written for them. Little short phrases, you know, where I would say, there's another million dollars just for that quip… and here's another million dollars.

Really, lots of folk could have done it. None of the people who did this stuff were geniuses. Some of them were better liked than others and things like that. But the fact is, they're made into stars. Stand here, say this, you know, put your hand there, bring this woman towards you, push her away, blah, blah, blah. And you've made a star and you get millions of dollars for doing that. Then when you're brought out to speak on a certain political point of view or social conditions or whatever it happens to be, folk will suddenly listen to you like you're a somebody, because you're rich. You're an actor who often doesn't know their own mind, a lot of the actors, you know, they really don't because all they do is play other people.

That's what George Clooney and Angelina Jolie, she also was made a member of the Council on Foreign Relations along with Clooney and a few other ones too, brought on board by them because the public will follow them and take their opinions more seriously, because they are actors and well known. Think about that in itself. It doesn't say much about us at all, does it? That if a Clooney says it, an actor, simply because he's well known and he's made famous, right, meaning wherever you look you read his name by the machinery that makes him, suddenly you're going to start to, well he said it and he's a decent guy. You don't know the guy. You never met him. But you think he's a decent guy. So therefore, he's probably right about this topic, that I haven't really looked into. So, you adopt his opinion. Very easy, isn't it? And that's the way it goes.

But everything is so fake, so incredibly fake. And it's sad how fake it is, and how the public themselves don't know. They don't know. Look at all the old TV productions of rock groups for instance, going way, way back, and how overproduced it all is. Even Abba, I mean, you like the music and all that, but they mimed on stage all the time. It's all miming. They couldn't do that live, even coming out on a stage. Because it takes a long time to prepare the kind of sounds, to get the sound the same, way too much time in fact on stage just singing one or two songs, you see, then is worth it. It would take you hours and hours to prepare it all, so they come out and mime. And most folk don't know that. But so are all the other groups out there doing it too, nothing was plugged into their guitars, or plugged into anything. But the kids growing up, the children growing up, they thought it was all real. It was all real, they thought. And often in their albums it was session guys who would play the stuff for them, because often they weren't good enough [Alan chuckles.] to play the stuff themselves, so they bring in session guys to play them. And arrange them too often.

But anyway, we are a sad lot, aren't we, as human beings, that most folk can't figure this out. We truly are a sad lot. How everything's been fake, fake, fake, fake, fake, you know. And people will look back with nostalgia to even the fake stuff because every generation is supplied with, they don't create it but they're supplied with the music for them, that they'll live with for the rest of their lives and think back on fondly, you know, because what they were doing at the time when I heard this song first and blah blah blah, and it sticks with them. And as life gets worse and worse, as they get older, they look back a lot more [Alan chuckles.] frequently than they used to and these kind of things, my goodness, yeah, it was kind of pleasant back then, you see. But they were supplied with it.

Your fashion was supplied too. It's a culture industry. It's complete. It's music. It's plays. It's drama. It's art of all kinds. It's what you wear. It's all put on for you and supplied for you, to differentiate you in your mind with those just ahead of you, older, and those young ones still to come, you see. To make you think that this is you, then you are used. It's our generation, 'eh, yeah, we're doing, ah, we're the avant-garde, we're on the cusp here and we're making history, yeah. They think. They have no idea it's all made for them.

Now, when it gets down to intelligence agencies again, financed by the taxpayer, well-paid too, a big part of the budget goes to, a huge part actually, they have all ready access to all the data on the public, on their citizenry. They use these asset companies, private companies, that are also staffed by ex-military and ex-CIA, etc. and ex-MI6 and ex-MI5 and all the rest of it working the private fields, they can get around the bends of regulations. They can all share the same information, but then use it and sell it off even. The government contract these private ones, but they keep records for themselves too. Whatever they find out they keep a record for themselves and then they sell it off and they give the government the one that they asked for in the first place. But they've got access to all this other data and anything coming back you see, any little inquiry, any little nuisance deal, is easily fobbed off by saying, well you know, we didn't do it ourselves, as your MI5 or MI6 it wasn't us that did it. But no, they're working hand in glove with a private contractor, often that had worked in MI5 or MI6 and they can get away with it, well, we're a private business, you know, and there's nothing to stop us from doing this, we're not working for the public. And that's how it's done.

The same intelligence agencies are all working full time right now with the behavioral insights teams and psychological Sage groups and so on to persuade you, including the one too I read about Yale, I'll put that up again too, how Yale is working to get big money to try to con the public into obeying and doing what they're told by the governments, and to take this Covid idea seriously and all the rest of it.

US Gov and Yale Hold Clinical Trials To Test "Persuasive Messages For COVID-19 Vaccine Uptake" - collective-evolution.com / 3 Aug 2020

Never mind the fact that in Britain as I've mentioned before the Sage groups and so on put out recommendations to all the media at the beginning of this whole Covid idea that they'd have to really frighten the public into compliance. And how to do it. To apply more pressure on the public and create more anxiety by exaggerating certain problems and so on, as they said. These are your government's lying to you!

Well, when they do that all the time, there's nothing you should take and believe them on at all ever again. Never. No. Using your tax money to lie to you! Whoah, ha. Hhhhh. Never mind the fact of course you're getting the great reset for the World Trade Organization, and for the World Economic Forum, and the World Bank, and the International Monetary Fund, and the Bank for International Settlements, as they bring in their New World Order, the Great Reset.

It means a post individual society; you can't be an individual. You're only part of the masses now, you see. Mind you, they have different masses within the masses group. You have certain special interest groups and special privilege groups depending on what, if you belong to certain minorities, as we all know, you know, they're given more privileges, etc. But generally, you're all part of the mass, you see. And you can't have individualism. It's a threat to world peace according to the United Nations, they said that long ago. Again, they keep reiterating that kind of idea. The individual that can think and communicate is a big problem to them. As it was with Bertrand Russell who said they have to eliminate them.

So, we're living an agenda, you see, and it's in full blast right now. And it's becoming utterly intolerant, utterly intolerant. It's not going to get better, folks, by itself. It won't happen.
And you have to really start your nonviolent disobedience, each time you get the chance to. When you're getting ordered by idiots, and even police in some countries that are really going overboard with it all...

It's a shame, it's an awful shame, hhh, and it ties in again with the culture industry. Many years ago I said, back in the 90s this is, you know, I didn't have the computer myself but I saw nothing but ads in the papers and so on and little clips at that time on TV, and had TV way back then, in the early 90s anyway. What it was, was videogames. I says, all you've heard for years and years is video games, and the next video game, the Pac-Man, the Pokémon and all the rest of it, game, game, game. And then they got more and more realistic. And children were addicted to these games. I went through the history of some of them where it was admitted, especially the ones in Japan, they were the first ones to admit that the military-industrial complex companies/corporations had actually funded all these games. And all they did do; all the children did was to practice killing folk. I hope you understand what I'm saying here?

All they did was, they'd get desensitized, they were designed initially for the military to desensitize them, troops, desensitize them from the act of killing, so it would be automatic and reflexive as opposed to a calculated thing to do. It was awfully successful. So, they then put it into the general population. I knew then, I says, there's big wars coming up, I could tell, they were creating generations to go to war, a long long-term war and that's all they got was videogames. You've got to kill kill kill, how many ones have you killed? What's your score today? It didn't matter who they're killing or why they were killing them, the why didn't matter, it was reflexive and so on.

Some of them in fact, and I did the talks [Alan chuckles.] on some of the documentaries that had been posted years ago, it's probably still the same today, where you would see the recruitment offices in Britain and the States and other countries, and they have games in there, they'd have the machines in there for the youngsters to go and to play there and pass the time, in the hope that some of them would just join the military, and the guys that were slick enough to give them the good PR and stuff and they were paly to them to get them right into the military.

So, it was Xbox-to-the-military, they actually said that. They had documentaries years later of guys who were in Desert Storm, and then in [Alan chuckles.] Operation Iraqi Freedom, you know, as they invaded Iraq. They talk to some of these people who had been through it all, and they were brought up with Xbox and they really just went straight into the military, almost in a dream. It worked awfully well with them. You know. But some of them definitely get posttraumatic stress syndrome afterwards when reality, gradually works its way, you can't keep reality off for long because eventually you've got to think back of people you've killed that you didn't know, coupled with the fact that you start to say, what was I, why was I over there killing them in the first place? You see, and the propaganda wears off you. Then they give you lots of drugs now and that's how they handle it, to flatten your emotions as they say.

But yeah, so this was all designed for a generation that would end up being more violent, and would use violence without thinking, of even the whys they were using it. So, the police are no exception. And there's articles today, I'll put some up, ones in Australia. You see the cop strangling a woman pretty well with a chokehold because she hadn't got a facemask on. In the story it actually says that she was exempt from it because of some breathing problem.

Police Wrestle Australian Woman to the Ground for Not Wearing a Mask - breitbart.com / 11 Aug 2020

So, this brainless fool, you know, with the authority of the state behind him as he thought, is going to choke a person because they're not wearing a mask? He's choking her, I guess that's to help her breathe more easily if she's got a breathing problem. You're dealing with morons here who were brought up with these games. And they're reflexive, again, as opposed to reasoning. They don't reason things through, they’re just reacting Pavlovian style. It's like a game that they're in. Unfortunately, it's the same group that goes into the military. In fact, a lot of them come out of the military and end up doing that.

So, everything's got reasons to why things are happening like this. And Britain is so bad. I mean, the Sci-Fi's they used to put up in Britain, I mentioned this before, the Sci-Fi’s were way ahead of their time, but in such a socialistic field or way of portraying them, in the Sci-Fi's, of, you to always see the authoritarian part of governments that were totalitarian. And of course, don't forget Britain is supposed to be the home of democracy. I don't know where they got that from. Because it was a good con while it lasted.

But really, Britain and its satellites, its dependencies, like Canada here they used to call it the Dominion of Canada because it was part of the British dominion or this London, I call it the London Dominion. Because the folk in Britain, in England and Scotland, they're no wiser in any country than the other. They're all under the strange phenomenon of a center of London, where everything is centered, including some of these secretive archives, where they train high intelligence operatives in them, that folk don't even know they exist, a lot of them are underground, you know, old ones too. So anyway, well over 100 years some of them, these underground bases underneath London itself. In fact, they have some there, I'm going to go off on a tangent as usual, but there are some there that were actually built during the Napoleonic wars in case Napoleon ever got into Britain. And they're not abandoned. They've been put to good use for training operatives that, in areas where you don't get taught in university. Although Britain has got really a lot of good places to teach them high-level agency operations in actual college courses too, mind you. But they have these other ones as I say where they can go even deeper into the dark arts and so on. And I'm sure it's the same in other countries now as well.

But the point of it is, folk in the countries outside of these massive financial enterprises live in the tradition, in the shameful fallacy really of their indoctrination as to what Britain was, you know. It's so sad. So sad indeed. The history of Britain is, was incredible greed for those who had the cash, big, big money, and all completely tied in with government, whether it was the crown or its supposed democratic system that came from the parliamentary system. But no, it's always been corrupt, of course.

If you can call it corrupt. After all, the crown can do whatever it wants. It's kind of like God. It can do whatever it wants to do, and it always did in fact, really. As I say, from Elizabeth I onwards, the first of England, you see the wealth really begin to accumulate in a massive style with those who could manage the money system. But also, from the coterie around her of Buccaneers in a sense, like Sir Walter Riley and Sir Francis Drake. These were privateers and as long as they were plundering the oceans and taking Spanish galleons and the gold and so on and bringing good a good portion back to the crown, they were all given titles of nobility. So always think, when you hear these titles you should be [Alan chuckles.] highly suspicious of them to start with.

But yeah, that's where they got the whole start of it, the big, big money system coming into London. Then of course they expanded that, all trade coming in, and the swing towers to allow ships in but you have to pay big, big fees from your cargoes to get back out again, you see. That was the idea of the tax system in the City of London. Even today it's probably the wealthiest area on the planet for managing money. The City itself is quite interesting. Again, there's a documentary I saw years ago but someone sent it to me again recently, I think Britain's Second Empire, the spiderweb across the world that London controls. How even after World War I and then World War II it ran the military-industrial complex for a good part of the world from the City of London, from all the different armaments and arms trading of all kinds, of missiles and aircraft, aircraft bombers and weaponry and so on. Incredible. It was well done actually, as I say, this particular documentary. If I can find the link for it, I'll put it up again.

All from this square-mile. But a very important square-mile where the four big banks really face each other, and of course they brought over an obelisk from Egypt itself. Awfully important, that itself, isn't it? It really is. It truly is. The City, 'eh. If I remember too, when they were going to bring it over, they built a casing for it to make it float and they towed it cross and out to Britain. They lost lives on the way apparently. But it was awfully important to get that obelisk up there, 'eh? Hhhch, and it really fits into England, doesn't it, an obelisk? [Alan chuckles.] Really? Why? But it's to do with the people who ruled it of course, far more than anything else.

But again, everything ties in together. The Royal Society, I mentioned last week and before that many times too. The Royal Society, because Isaac Newton and his complete obsession with alchemy basically, and Kabbalah of course. He studied all the writings of John Dee and Kelly. He was fascinated by them. He learned Hebrew too, in order to go really into the magical, lower basically, of Kabbalah, etc. Much of Newton's work today has been kind of discredited because it really wasn't backed by anything else apart from his speculation into the occult in a sense. Again, he was given positions, I think over the Royal mint at one point, like a retirement thing, a good income for his works and so on. So, you have to say, well what kind of works was he really involved in, you know?

Then you go into Christopher Wren who did St. Paul's Cathedral, and again, just happened to have a big scroll of drawings for new buildings before, all drafted up, before the fire of London kind of burned all the places down. He just kind of just happened to have, you know, and out it came, and he was given financing for a different project. But when you go into St. Paul's and you look up to the high part of the dome inside it, you see the square and compass [Alan chuckles.] right in the center there. It's quite fascinating. A very old agenda, 'eh.

But again, that's another whole area of things, you have the occultic sides of things as well, and the signs and symptoms of another power that runs things of course. It's all combined with the money system as well. But the whole structure of control, what keeps the structure under control called society, it's quite interesting in itself.

So, remember, no matter what you hear from me, don't freak out about things. Don't freak out. We've never had peace in society. I've gone through countless talks about peace and generations and how you're not allowed to have peace. Peace isn't conducive to high profits from those who rule over you, you see.

I think Lord Rothschild said it when he was asked, when do you make the best investments and killings, in a sense, that's the term, killings, that's where it comes from. He says, when blood is running in the streets. Whatever you've got that folk need, they'll pay it. They're desperate, they're terrified, they'll pay it. You can see that in the Covid idea the same kind of thing, ridiculous prices for certain things, oh, it's getting scarce, you know. Of course, the ones who say that are the ones who have held things back to make things scarce. This is an old, old idea. The gold reserves are completely [Alan chuckles.] manufactured, the whole idea of gold reserves, by withholding stocks. The same with diamonds. They have warehouses full of the things to make sure the prices stay up. This is how it's all managed, very old ideas.

But don't freak out with truth. A lot of folk, and don't push it onto people who will not handle it. You know that you know they won't handle it. They'll tell you often, well don't tell me that, it's, that will upset me, or, I don't want to think that way. DON'T tell them because you'll make an enemy. And if it's in your own household, or relatives or whatever it happens to be, you don't need that.

In these times you've got to have folk who still help you out, and you help them out, regardless. That's how it works. And some folk really can't handle it. It doesn't mean they're not, can't help each other out, they can handle the bad news part, when it all comes down, they'll help each other out through necessity, you see. So, don't make enemies of people, or try to evangelize, like it’s a cause, you see, like a religious cause. It's not. It's not that way at all. A lot of folk truly can't, because of their indoctrination, they cannot let go, and it would frighten them too much to think that, to think the truth, that all of this structure of society is held together with cobwebs in a sense, this whole veneer of civilization as they call it.

That gets me right back to all these riots in the States and that particular documentary that just came out with people who are assets in a sense, or independent intelligence contractors for artificial intelligence. They show you how they can switch riots on and off, literally, very efficiently, predictably and efficiently, just because they have all the folks on the cell phones and so on. They can use them all and get them all worked up very quickly by feeding them and directing them the same information at the same time. The last folk to know it are the folks that are getting targeted. Hmph.

And that goes with every area of information in this day and age. It's a dangerous area. Even to open up a newspaper in an age like this can be upsetting. Because everything is so contrived and manipulated. But the bad news isn't easy to ignore, if you want to get it, you'll find it easily enough. But most folk can't handle it. They want to live in fantasy. They want to live in their dreams. They want to live, and they want to believe that their favorite groups and musicians of years gone by were real and genuine, and the world was better then, they want to really believe in all of that. They want to believe that their governments were responsible, and only went to war out of necessity or something like that. They want to really believe that. And to throw it all in the ditch so quickly, or instantly, causes a severe case of breakdown and shock. [Alan chuckles.] It does to a lot of folk.

It used to be described, waking up and the process of it, was described as death and experiencing someone else's death, which is generally your own death actually, you go through the same signs of someone dying, a loved one dying. You have incredible remorse and grief when it happens, you see. Then you have to come to grips with the person's really gone. It's like the truth, the truth is gone, or naivety is gone, it's buried, you see. Then you can get anger setting in, the same stages of grief, then anger, then you want to take vengeance out on the evildoers, you see. But how many folks actually get angry when someone, a loved one dies? It's like it's all unfair, you see, they'll actually blame themselves or they'll blame the person for dying at times.

But when it's the truth and its reality, and it's your reality that's dying, and you die along with it to an extent, you go through the same signs and symptoms of utter depression. Of loss. Complete loss. Where that fabricated child, if you had a decent childhood, most folk I know didn't have, in Britain, didn't have a decent childhood. It wasn't pleasant for most people actually. It wasn't like the TV dramas for the upper crust and so on, it wasn't like that at all. It was pretty nasty. Always unstable, you could feel it in the air, you know, where folk live on the edge. But yeah, when that is gone, and that's all you had was looking back to a childhood, no matter how precarious it might have been, the fact is, it always feels better than it is now. Once the folk became adults and had to work, you know, that was precarious too in the UK, you're always kept on edge about, strikes would happen and folk will get laid off, or government would just lay folk off anyway or get the companies and corporations to do it. Then of course they said, well you know, you'll never have a full-time job in your lifetime, get a whole bunch of part-time ones. And a whole generation grew up with that idea. M-hm. No security.

Because an elite had planned it that way. Just like the great reset is again the next stage in the global elite, for the global system of global wealth, global resources, power over everything for themselves. But always presented that it's for you, it’s for the benefit of humankind, you know. That's how it was done. Meanwhile you're tracked and traced and prodded and pinched, and there's nothing you can do that isn't known about by those who are, who want, who've got your best interests at heart.

Now before we go into a lot of the topics tonight by the way, I should just remember to remind you all that, please keep sending donations my way. Cuttingthroughthematrix.com. You can send cash or PayPal, or you can send a check. I think it's Money Gram too is another one. There’re ways to do it. And straight cash is fine too. As long as it's still in use. You can buy the books and discs @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. My books are different in that it exposes a lot of reality for what it really is. That's the whole point of it. There's no point in reading a stack of big tomes of history, you know, like 5 inch books and so on when a lot of it is phony anyway, at least the realities of it all are often very phony indeed, contrived, again by those who rule. So, I show you the reality of it and how symbolism is a language. And those who rule all belong to the proper associations where they can understand it, they are taught symbolism, that one symbol can be a complete message, you know, a whole paragraph's worth, or a page worth, just a symbol itself. We will do this now, in other words. Or close ranks, is a good one too, close ranks. Lots of symbols for those in-the-know of how to do things.

The terminology they will use too can have different meanings amongst themselves, where they can speak quite publicly, and it goes over folks' heads. I heard just recently, it was a Catholic station on the radio, that generally doesn't come in very well because it's aimed at Latin America, usually, but sometimes it will skip, as I say, on the ionosphere and came in pretty clear this day. I was just listening to this guy talking about, he was, I don't know if he was, he was maybe a bishop. Anyway, he was talking about something within the Catholic Church, I was just listening to it with half an ear. But he kept using Masonic terminology, and he says, it doesn't square with this, it doesn't square with that, and it should square. He must've set it at least a half-dozen times. And only Masons we use that kind of terminology, you see. Yep.

Of course, as we well know in this day and age, that lots of Catholics are Freemasons, going all the way up. There are more Masons in the hierarchies of Catholicism than down below I believe. And Freemasonry after its revolutionary phase, it's real revolutionary phase, is more into the quieter societal revolution now, still manipulating society to accept more and more and more things that perhaps they shouldn't, the kind of things that Aldous Huxley mentioned, that perhaps we shouldn't accept, using techniques of persuasion and so on. For this great utopia they're going to bring in, where man-to-man the world over will be, will brothers be for all, that they say.

It doesn't seem to be working that way right now, where certain brothers are bent on annihilating other brothers right now, aren't they, and enough little manipulations to not bring us together into a happy society, but to use it against society itself, to break it up. Which again, gives up more authority to the government to try and control it all. It's great how you can create the scenarios to give themselves more fascistic powers. And call it socialism by the way. Socialism is fascism, for those who can't quite figure it out at the time. M-hm. The same… Signs and symptoms, that's how you describe disease, same thing with what you're seeing politically, you know. Authoritarian systems, forcing things on the public, that's in bed of course with big corporations, who actually finance them, the left-wing, including rioters getting financed by the biggest corporations on the planet. The only corporations right now actually that are allowed to stay open, hm, are financing them. And the other ones that gave you the Internet, and all the things they're addicted to, well, we won't attack them.

No, these are the ones, all the little independent stores, family ones, are all destroyed or are getting destroyed. They're not allowed to open, and go bankrupt, 'eh. But no one... And being attacked too by crowds in the streets. But the big ones, oh no, no. I haven't heard of Walmart's getting burned down or whatever. That's because those who are chosen and picked and trained to lead these riots [Alan chuckles.] make sure that the followers, and they give them all instructions before they all go in, you know, they do, leave this, leave that one alone and leave this one alone, but don't, here's the one to go after and blah, blah, blah. That's how it's dealt with obviously.

But yeah, it's the same system run with, fascism's always run in a public-private partnership deal and nothing has changed as you well know with this one. Not only is it allowed to happen from even the top down, how can you possibly allow what would appear to be the overthrow of your system, at least on a societal level at the bottom, and your streets and your safety, how can you let it happen? give it no opposition at all pretty well? Never mind you have people who are mayors, etc. encouraging it all. That's generally called at least anarchy or treason, you know. But it's being allowed. So, it's from the top. It's from the top, at least the structure at the very top, that doesn't just have to be president, it can also be the military industrial complex around there too, the ones that run everything. And the intelligence agencies for sure are tied in with it because they know who everybody is. They know about all the programs they use to communicate with each other. They've got it all down pat. No one, they know who everybody is. [Alan chuckles.] I don't care how many masks you wear, how carefully they, you cannot be careful enough in this day and age. They know who everybody is. And they had infiltrators through all their different organizations too. They're there from the beginning actually, because often it's the governments that set them up in the first place and fund them. Nothing is what it seems to be, you know that, nothing at all.

So, going back into what I was talking about, cuttingthroughthematrix.com and help me tick along. Look at all the websites I have listed there, my official websites, and I really mean it, take note of them in case the .com site goes down. Because these stages, one, two, three, four and five and so on, all came out as you well know in their programming before they talked about how they would step up against people that are talking out against the Covid idea, etc. etc. It isn't just the Covid, it's everything, and don't do this. And eventually they'll start to literally ban them off the Internet altogether by the way. Not just, before that they'll try to stop the money getting to them, and ban them off the Internet, then arrest them if they continue somehow. All publicly declared. Like the Event 201, they went through that all that kind of thing. So, it's all coming into play. Until only the ones that are left are the ones that they want you to listen to, that are the fake ones, you see, the ones that are tolerated, or that they run themselves. Because there's a lot out there that they do run. [Alan chuckles.] Deception, 'eh, that's how intelligence agencies operate. Certain intelligence agencies actually have that in their motto, [Alan chuckles.] deception, as you well know.

But that's the way it is, it's obviously trying to spin the blame off to other people. Cause confusion. And even have others fighting other ones, you see. And never figuring out who's really behind something. That's how it's done. Again, it was a movie, I think it was The Good Shepherd, about the beginnings of the CIA coming out of the OSS. It's quite interesting to look into. You get little bits and pieces of truth through them. The one I mentioned last week was awfully good, Edge of Darkness, the British six-part series, way more, they let so much out of the bag actually, which actually was true. Even right down to the politicians at the time, they use the right names, etc. They touch on the fact that Britain under Thatcher was bringing in, and it was controversial at the time, bringing in nuclear waste, they call it spent rods, from other countries. They weren't spent altogether, believe you me. Then they could literally dispose of them for other nations, or replenish them, make them potent again and sell them out again. It was very lucrative. Britain was suddenly, it was like taking in the garbage of the world and getting big money going to these big contractors that worked with the British government at the time.

Margaret Thatcher was way up there with the military-industrial complex. Her son Colin, I remember when he went missing once and they got the SAS all over parts of North Africa looking for him trying to find him. But he himself was gunrunning for the big corporations based, the headquarters based in the City of London. Big money again, getting paid big money to do it. And sometimes getting money directed from his mum, [Alan chuckles.] through the British government, for selling arms across the world, and aircraft and so on. Very lucrative indeed.

But all the big Khashoggi's and so on that were involved in gunrunning, were all connected with them, you know, they all knew each other and worked with each other. But when Thatcher was in, I mean she literally went to the big arms sales places and help sell the British jets, etc. Like a salesman. Nothing is ever what it really seems to be, is it? You have to really stand back and say, how do they have the gall to do that? Well, they got the gall because they can, they do things because they can. Because the system that runs us all, it's pretty well untouchable for those at the top. Who is going to put anybody of any import on trial for anything at that level? You know? It doesn't happen. It won't happen. Look at all these fake ones the US has all the time, these puerile inquiries that go nowhere except into dead ends. Which they are meant to, they're steered down, they're meant to go that way. Quite something. That's the world we live in.

So anyway, as I say, don't forget, cuttingthroughthematrix.com and help me tick along. Because it's important. Because I really, you wouldn't believe how much work it does take, that I put into all this kind of stuff. And I tell ya, I could go on for hours and hours more per week except I don't want to overload people altogether. Because as long as you get the general idea, with a few examples here and there, that's all you really need. Otherwise you get bogged down, you'll overload your mind.

And I truly believe, just like Sherlock Holmes, you know, the fictional Sherlock Holmes, Arthur Conan Doyle's character, talk about his attic, where your mind is an attic and Sherlock would say, well I only keep so much in my attic he says, and sometimes I have to clean it out and get rid of the excess or the old, etc., to make room for the new. Because all you're doing is taking in information, information, information all the time. And it's more important you understand the purpose of the information, the purpose of what's happening, as to where it's supposed to go, in order to start preparing for either bad times ahead, even worse, or ways to again survive.

And you have to survive by being an individual. The one thing they don't want to do be is an individual. Because you're gonna have to start using a form of passive individual rights, you see, and saying, I have rights. It doesn't matter what the rest of the public are doing, it doesn't matter what the rest of the public are doing, I hope you understand that. You see, democracy, it's always misused and abused and mislabeled, and definitely misunderstood. They'll say, well it's really, it's really the herd thing and the bulk of the people, it's like mob rule where the bulk of the people now think they're in control because they think they voted so and so in, so they just ride roughshod over everybody. And it's not that at all.

It's the elite who know how to use the mob, that creates the mob in the first place, then they use the mob. The mob only do what they're told to do. They're given their opinions like everybody else are given their opinions, the same opinions often. But the same spinners out there, the ones that spin it to you, the one thing that they don't want is individuality. They keep saying over and over that's the enemy of their big plan, for peace and safety and security across the world is the end of individualism. Yeah.

But it's the only safety you have. That's when you say, why should I do what the rest are doing? If they all start cutting each other's heads off, should I start doing the same thing too? You know? Really. Look at the farce with facemasks. And you can always tell who watches TV, because they're even wearing them in their cars now. They believe what they've been told. Like, don't ever take it off. I think they must sleep with it too. They've got everybody so terrified with incredible manipulated propaganda and indoctrination, repetitive indoctrination by psychologists, teams of them. And marketers, ones who can market ideas across to you using psychological techniques and behaviorism.

Shameless, evil people. I mean, you can dream, you can always dream through terrible times, like wishful thinking, that one day there'll be a reckoning and you could have all these tyrants, as I say, faces on billboards, like Rogues galleries, big big billboards of every one of them. Right down to the people who really wrecked the National Health Service as an example and profited from it too as they were doing it by the millions, billions actually. And the politicians who push this Covid idea. And all the professionals in the field who are profiting off it, who add to the weight, the credence of the whole idea, oh yeah, it's out there and it's really horrible, and you'll all have to take the shot. And they've all got shares in the corporations that are going to give you the shots, 'eh! Isn't that disgusting!

Never mind the folk who have died because they can't get into hospitals during the whole time. Folk dying of heart attacks, there's one article I was reading there and it's from a guy talking about the very thing. It was in Britain, yeah it was in the UK, it was one of the sons of this man who died, he had a heart attack, they called the ambulance service, that was I think in The Death of the National Health Service. And the National Health Service now has a lot of private contractors as ambulances and so on. The first ambulance comes and the people at the defibrillator, it's never been used before, it's a secondhand one the company had bought, and they go to try it and it doesn't work. Hadn't even been tested. So, they call another ambulance, they're told to phone the fire brigade, so they phone the fire brigade, because they have better ones. By the time they came, you know, the guy was dead. And the doctor, the GP at least they put on it, he said that this man would have probably lived if the right equipment had come when it was supposed come.

Well, look at all the ones who've been, they've actually been told to stay at home, having heart attacks, during this whole Covid idea. And the folks who had literally small primary tumors, who couldn't get into get cancer treatment. If you've got a small primary there it's much better to lop off that little primary. You've got far more chance of surviving if it's not spread. But by the time months go by and months go by, it's all through their body.

All these characters that have done it, their faces should be up in LIGHTS! rogues, rogues, rogues, to suffer and be charged for the evil they've committed here, and they are still committing. And those at the VERY top of governments who are in collusion with the private corporations, who work with the global reset idea for completely restructuring global society and running people from birth to death, in a form of austerity for sustainability, as they depopulate step-by-step, they should all be tried, hhhch, at the very least tried, hm, and imprisoned, at the very least and their faces put up in shame forever in the rogues gallery. All of them. ALL of them.

It isn't just that evil prospers when good people do nothing. It isn't just that. It's just that there's no system built up to take these folks to justice.

Now there's a problem.

Now, here's an article here which should help people ponder at least a little bit as to what's going on with this whole Fauci idea. Almost called him Faustian idea, 'eh, Fauci, to do with his claims right off the bat that the only way you could go back to work and be allowed out of your homes, back in February I think, March he said this, would be with the vaccine. Because that was always the agenda that they'd agreed upon years ago that they'd be using if they ever had a pandemic. They had agreements signed with governments, I've got them all here, where they drafted them up, the government signed them that government would definitely buy their vaccines. As an incentive to produce vaccines, the governments would definitely buy vaccines, really invest heavily to make sure that they wouldn't just give up on vaccines altogether being nonprofitable. What a joke that is, 'eh?

So anyway, here's the possibility here, this is from the WHO, the World Health Organization…

WHO Memo From 1972 Explains How To Turn Vaccines Into A Means Of Killing

theirishsentinel.com / 17 March 2020

(Alan: It ties in with what Fauci and all the other characters who are involved with these big bio labs do. Because these are really bacterial warfare laboratories, that's what they used to be, before they said oh, we've got to ban all these laboratories. Well, we're just there now to make vaccines, just to study these things, in case these vaccine should jump on their own and become highly pathogenic towards the public, we'll make it happen, you see, with the stages it would have to go through itself, you know, the gain of function as they say. Of course, they're still biowarfare labs, of course they are. The scientists are all biowarfare experts. There's no doubt about it. Well, we're not doing it right now, we're doing it to help people right now. Yeah, right. So, 1972 they were talking about how they could turn vaccines into a means of killing. This is the World Health Organization, right. It says…)

Two key memorandums from the World Health Organisation (WHO), discovered by Patrick Jordan, prove the WHO has intentionally created the three-shot killer vaccine that people in the USA and other countries could soon be forced to take.

(A: You see.)

The 1972 WHO Bulletin 47, No 2 Memo #1 and #2 Virus-associated immunopathology state:

Animal models and implications for human disease technically outline the ability to create biological weapons in the form of vaccines that:

1) First totally disable the immune system.

2) Load every cell of the victim's body up with infection.

3) Switch the immune system on causing the host to kill itself in a Cytokine Storm.

(A: Hm.)

These WHO Memoranda describe the three stage impact of the three "shots" many people will be forced to take this autumn …

(A: Because that's what they want, they want about three shots, isn't it? It's just coincidence, 'eh. From the same group of people who work with the WHO, 'eh. But again, don't forget that memorandum that came out as well for the Department of Defense in the United States of America. I remember it came out and it's when the Aides broke out initially and some people really scoured the records of requisitions and things and bills that were put through. One of them that was put through in the States was for, I think it was even the guys involved like Gallo and so on, or somehow involved them. But it said that the Department of Defense was looking for a possible bioweapon that could destroy the immune system.)

(A: That was all published at the time. I've still got articles here, somewhere, in hard copy, you know, about all of that. That all came out at the time because that was a definite, it wasn't a surmisation or speculation. It actually was an official thing the Department of Defense of the US Pentagon had put out, requisitioned, for something to be created that could be used as a bioweapon, destroying the immune system. So, this is not so far-fetched, this article, regardless, of how seriously you want to take it. It's up to yourself. But three shots, you know, one to disable, one to open you up to infection, and number three to cause a Cytokine storm of course.)

This is a crucial piece of evidence of the WHO's long-term genocidal intentions that could stand in any court of law because these memorandums give the best and fullest explanation of the WHO's affiliated labs, such as the Centers for Disease Control's (CDC) current activities.

Their patenting of the most lethal bird flu viruses, (A: ...and that's true.) their sending that virus to Baxter's subsidiary in Austria, which weaponised it and sent out 72 kilos to 16 laboratories in four countries, almost triggered a real global pandemic.

(A: I think one was caught in Czechoslovakia, and someone did test it there and found that it was a live virus they put in the vaccine.)

For every crime, there needs to be a motive, an indication that it was deliberate and that it was planned.

The WHO memorandums provide the evidence of just that deliberate, long-term planning to kill people by weakening their immune system by use of the first vaccine, injecting a live virus into their body by a second and creating a fatal cytokine storm, using ‘ squalene’, in a third.

And squalene is an adjuvant that's meant to try to attract a bigger blood supply to the area of inoculation or vaccination. Squalene is one type that they use, there's other ones too that are all really nasty. In fact, you've read I'm sure the reports of the ones, the so-called volunteers that took the Moderna one, in trials that is. Some of them literally couldn't move their arms for days, some ended up in hospitals and so on. So good luck if you want to take this stuff. Believe you me.

Apart from that too is the next CDC governor, whatever you want to call the guy, executive, or head actually, who said recently that he really doesn't believe they're going to have a workable vaccine, and that there's already too many variations of this particular one virus to be even workable. And he said, it will be the same as any other flu vaccination, which is literally a guess, does it work or does it not. He said, they'll say that 50% of the time it works and 50% of the time it doesn't. In other words, it's the toss of a coin. So, there you go. And apart from that too, this particular guy said that, that literally the inserts, the actual protein inserts that's put onto this particular one, might make it impossible to have a vaccine that works. Because we've got...

The history of this particular coronavirus is a horror story in itself. As we know. That's why so much work went in, after it was exposed, that had Fauci [Alan chuckles.] agreeing that the virus, that was created, the coronavirus, was sent off to the lab at Wuhan, and the financing of the Wuhan lab too and the whole bit, so they could do the gain of function and make it more lethal over there. Because they admitted it could be, it would be catastrophic if it was released in the States by mistake, so they actually had the Chinese do it in Wuhan lab, that's what came out. Well after that is their massive retaliation, oh, and of course the talking heads came out, oh no, no, no, it developed in nature by itself. Now suddenly it's completely reversed all the different information. This is how they do it in these psychological operations with artificial intelligence.

Again, going back into Millie Weaver’s documentary with Tore, the woman Tore whose name she's using to explain how it all happens. But the fake news, they run all the fake new stuff, these intelligence agencies. That's admitted in the documentary.

So anyway, yeah, these are biowarfare programs that we're dealing with here. This makes more sense here that that's, again the three-stage plan of vaccinations they want to give the general public. You always find, they'll tell you this, just to get the shares in to make their millions and billions, and all the companies that have come up with vaccines have done the same thing, they always tell you right off the bat, oh their initial tests showed positive reaction with antibody stimulation in all the volunteers.

But the problem lies with vaccinations, especially this one coming out, remember this is an RNA type vaccination here, to alter your [Alan chuckles.] epithelial lining of your lungs for, for, permanently, for good, and bio engineer you. The biggest problem always is, is that once you are exposed to the real or a different kind of associated virus, but the one it's supposed to be for, or an associated type virus, right, similar to it, you can have this massive cytokine storm that will kill you. Sometimes they'll camouflage it too in their terminology, vaccine enhanced respiratory response. That's a lethal response [Alan laughing.] this is what they're talking about there and they don't want that, you see. But that's what happens. After they... But they won't come out with that information until they've made a fortune, not just the money they're given from government which is incredibly ludicrous the amount of it. It's easy enough to conjure up a vaccine, but it's what happens afterwards, you see, once you're exposed to real viruses out there. Hm. Associated viruses. That's where your problem kicks in. So yeah, it's like, the operation was a success, but the patient died, 'eh? The same with the vaccine. So anyway, I'll put this article up and let you peruse it, for those that want to do some perusing.

This one is from the Harvard Gazette, 'eh. That's the awfully important Harvard Gazette, 'eh, another closed shop run by the folk that help to rule, along with Yale. It's called…

Cheap, frequent COVID tests (A: Because they're all in on the act and get the money in.)

could be ‘akin to vaccine,’ professor says

news.harvard.edu / 11 Aug 2020

(A: This article, it's about selling test kits basically, and have you constantly test yourself, maybe daily even. Every crook on the planet is in on the act here to get money, profits off the peasantry. So…)

A Harvard epidemiologist and expert in disease testing is calling for a shift in strategy toward a cheap, daily, do-it-yourself test that he says can be as effective as a vaccine at interrupting coronavirus transmission

(A: In other words, if you can catch it early enough and knew, then you'd quarantine yourself. That's the idea behind it. What a lot of nonsense.)

I've got to say this off the bat by the way, I keep, because this is what we all know. With all kinds of flus or viruses out there, right, and coronaviruses, vaccine has never conquered them. Never. The so-called Spanish flu, there's never been a vaccine created to fight that. AIDS doesn't have a vaccine that works. So, how we get through most things, most viruses like the flu viruses and things, is we build up what's called herd immunity ourselves, without any help.

And as always, we all get to the stage, we get to a certain age, we are all vulnerable to die from flu. Although in this day and age they can certainly give the right treatments to help people through it and get over it. But if you've got comorbidities that your heart, if your heart's packing in and your organs are dying on you, anyway, without the flu, you know, or Covid, then, and that's another con too with the Covid, folk are dying off with lots of things but if they say you also had Covid or positive test for Covid, you're putdown as a Covid death. They've padded everything as Covid. Even if you have no symptoms at all. So, talk about racketeering, 'eh, and conology. M-m-m. Again, put their faces on the rogue’s gallery for all to see for eternity.

You want herd immunity. We've always built up herd immunity because children generally will spread it, that's how it used to be always spread, by children. They come home from school and then the parents would start having coughs and sneezes and maybe they had a few pains and aches, and a few days of the flu or whatever it was and you'd get over it, that's how things work, you see. And before you know it, and viruses spread so quickly through society, you'll never notice them, most of the public. Most of the public never gets signs and symptoms of it, of these things. Why sometimes you get it yourself and other times you don't, and other folks who are even healthy get it and you don't get it, we don't know yet, you know, this particular strain, etc., they hit us in different ways and different gene types.

But the thing is, you WANT herd immunity. This is the first one in history they've tried to stop herd immunity, so's they can give you a vaccination. Are you getting the picture? Massive money. Massive profits. And really, anyone who takes, you're taking your life in your hands by allowing them to use experimental vaccines, never mind the horror that happened with the swine flu one, you know, some years back. And the one in 2009 too, folk were getting paralyzed and children were getting narcolepsy and all the rest of it. A little oops thing... And believe you me, they always just gloss over it as though it's nothing at all, these corporations and the quacks that work with them. N-n-n. Talk about psychopaths, 'eh.

So, what I'm going to say is, it's the first time in history they've tried to stop herd immunity happening. Lockdowns stop herd immunity. Otherwise we'd all have been exposed to it long ago, and it would be just the same as today, most folk would never have known they had it. It wouldn't matter, you wouldn't have to know, but you'd have immunity, you see.

Now, the con with the testing is we need more testing. Well, if you have 10,000 more tests, you're guaranteed X amount of folk that will come back positive. If you've had any cold or flu, or even shots in the last few years for the flu, you'll often show up as positive for the coronavirus. If you've been near anybody that's had it, because a lot of folks still give off fragments, especially the swab tests, the swab test as opposed to the blood test, the swab test will pick up fragments of the virus, you see, fragments, not the whole virus but fragments of it. They could have been dead weeks ago, but you still give off fragments of it, you see, but you test positive. Because that's what it's designed to pick up is fragments of the RNA and DNA. So, it's a joke. If you've been in the same room with someone who is given off fragments, you'll test positive, because you will breathe the fragments in.   But apart from the test itself, and I've been through it so many times, by the inventor of the swab test, said it's not meant, it's not meant to be a diagnostic tool. It's so inefficient, you get false positives, false negatives, it's pretty well useless.

So, getting back to my point, you're supposed to get herd immunity. And most, they'll give you scary stories, oh another 3000 have tested positive today. It's because they put may be another 10,000 tests out that day, you see, that's the only reason for it. So, amongst all these false positives and false negatives, some people, and a politician last week found it too. He got tested before he got on the plane, it was negative they said. He arrived at his destination in another state in the US and they gave him another test and he was positive. That evening they gave him a test again; he was back to negative again. They're utterly useless. This is common.

Remember, the whole thing is a designed hoax for a bigger program, it's a massive program of a completely redesigned way of living, post Democratic, etc.

So anyway, think about it, if every week they're testing more folk positive, and literally within about eight days it's over and done with, 'eh, and generally sooner, what's happened to all those folk that's accumulating for months and months that were tested positive? Well, they're now immune to it. That's, they're not telling you that they died. No. Most of them never even went into hospital. But you're forgetting, it's not just added to this limbo state, they're all stuck in limbo here with Covid. No, no. They got over it and now they're immune to it. They've got antibodies. If they didn't develop antibodies, they'd be sick with it and become sick with it. But they haven't become sick with it and they got over it. If they got over it and went negative, it means they've got antibodies in their body to kill it. [Alan laughing.]

Which is the whole point of what the supposed vaccines are meant to do. Well, you develop it yourself naturally. And that's a good thing. So, you should allow it to spread? Absolutely. You can take care with the elderly and so on and keep them away from groups and so on. BUT, for the general population... spread it. And once it's at 80% of the population, say, sometimes they say it's smaller, once they've all had it and they're immune to it, the virus dies off, then the elderly are safe. This is not rocket science. This is not a novel idea I'm talking about. This is standard.

There's never been such a war propaganda exercise continuing, begun and continuing like this ever in history. It's a massive war campaign, I hope you understand that, for a whole new way of living.

So yeah, you want antibodies to develop. Then you can say to your vaccine maker, get stuffed, I'm already immune. And that's it, you see, the point is to get the stuff IN you and to give you an immunity passport. I did the talks years ago about this idea that they're now calling immunity passport. I said, you wouldn't get into a store to get groceries, alarms would go off if you weren't up to date with your vaccines. I said that back in the 90s and here you are. Big business. Massive business. Massive control.

And conformity. Well, if you want to eat you've got to, you gotta, you gotta have this app with you all the time now. Or you've got to have a bracelet on you, an electronic bracelet like a convict. A manacle. The farces are unbelievable. When they couldn't sell you all this stuff through sustainability and the climate change, oh we've got to change the way we're living because of climate change, and sustainability ala Maurice Strong, you know, the different sustainability programs he pushed out on behalf of the Rockefellers and the Council on Foreign Relations and the Trilateral Commission. The Rio de Janeiro meeting that they had to change the way we live and bring us into austerity, poverty basically. And depopulation. All they had to do was find a way to enforce it. Oh, it's the climate, you see, okay, that will do. The Club of Rome came up with that one, were paid handsomely to do so.

And to depopulate. Who's the guy that had The Population [time]Bomb? Paul Ehrlich way back when he said we're going to freeze to death, they tried that one. And who's on the board of the Club of Rome? It was his wife. [Alan laughing.] It's just a small world, you know. A small world isn't it:? Too many people, that's always been their agenda. Well I think myself this is one way to reduce the population, so this article isn't so far-fetched as I say, the last one I read.

Then back to this Harvard one. So, he's trying, they're all in on the action to make millions of dollars. Let's have people to test themselves, they can buy themselves and test themselves every day, you know. Yep. All these professors at University, they're all on board with it. Anywhere they can get money off the gullible public, they’re on board with it all. Shameless. Absolutely shameless.

Psychopathic too. Again, you supplant the religious values that were at least tied closer to the home, to the ground, to the people, and you supplant it and put it to pure materialism and profit and riches, and psychopathic personalities run the thing at the top and then the ones beneath them, including the academics, are often psychopathic too. Then the people at the bottom copy the psychopathic person. They copy. They can't emulate it completely, but they still start to adopt the values of the psychopath and then you end up with a psychopathic culture, and life is cheap, that's what it is, very, very cheap.

Now, here's another one too...

US developing coronavirus strain for human 'challenge' trials

news.yahoo.com / 14 Aug 2020

(A: No kidding eh. It says…)

US scientists are developing a strain of the coronavirus that could be used to deliberately infect volunteers in so-called "challenge studies," a government agency said Friday.

The work is preliminary and the government is continuing to prioritize randomized clinical trials of vaccine candidates, the National Institute for Allergies and Infectious Diseases (NIAID) said.

(A: That's Fauci's area.)

Several of these have entered their final stages, including the vaccines developed by Moderna, Pfizer and AstraZeneca.

But NIAID (A: That's Fauci again.) has nonetheless "begun efforts to manufacture a strain (A: ... that's his area of course, is bio warfare.) that could be used to develop a human challenge model, if needed," it said in a statement.

In normal clinical trials, (A: In normal trials...) volunteers receive either a medicine or a placebo and their health is then followed over the course of months of years.

Scientists look for how well the vaccine or treatment worked when the person was naturally exposed to the pathogen.

A quicker way to test whether a drug works is by deliberately infecting volunteers, as has been done in the past for influenza, malaria, typhoid, dengue fever, and cholera.

In the US, advocacy groups like 1DaySooner support challenge studies for COVID-19, but the subject is controversial because of how serious the disease can be and because its effects aren't fully understood.

NIAID said it would probably reach a decision toward the end of 2020, when the late-stage clinical trials that are underway start reporting their results.

This would help it determine whether challenge studies are needed, safe and ethical, it added.

David Diemert, the director of George Washington University's vaccine trial research unit who is overseeing a trial of Moderna's vaccine in the US capital, told AFP he did not think challenge trials were appropriate for COVID-19.

"I think they're a critical tool, but only under the right circumstances," he said.

Diemert is himself leading a challenge trial into a hookworm vaccine.

(A: I guess he's going to try and straighten it out, 'eh?)

But he said that for COVID-19, "we don't have a very clear understanding of who is at risk of developing severe disease and we have no treatment that is guaranteed to cure someone if they do develop severe disease."

(A: And that's not quite true actually, that last part there.)

There's also enough widespread community transmission in the US -- the worst hit country in the world

(A: [Alan chuckles.] It's not. It's because it's the mode of what they decided to treat them with, sticking something down your trachea, which means put you in a coma and causing a lot of heart attacks in the process. That's the difference there. Plus, they wouldn't give you the one drug that’s been promoted across the world. I can't say it because they’ll ban me altogether. I’m almost banned totally right now. And we all know what's going on too. Of course, we do. The worst hit country...) with 5.3 million confirmed cases -

(A: ...confirmed cases? Is that just tests? Or is that folk who have had it and got over it? You see, they don't even clarify THAT to the public. It's meant to terrify you, well, if there's 5.3 million confirmed cases...)

- to mean challenge trials are not necessary, he added.

Our goal is to create a safe and engaging place for users to connect over interests and passions. In order to improve our community experience, we are temporarily suspending article commenting.

(A: [Alan laughing.]   Well there won't be commenting on this whole thing.)

In the meantime we welcome your feedback to help us enhance the experience.

What drivel is this? To enhance the experience? What experience? Hm? You won't let the folks say, [Alan laughing.] you won't let the folks have their say in this complete con, this farce that we're living through here, you know. N-n-n. Safe and engaging place for you to connect over interests and passions. Temporarily suspending article commenting. Hm. We want your feedback to help us enhance the experience. Uuhhhh, what dribble. Uuhh, hogwash. That's the kind of stuff they prattle on about these TED conferences, you know. Everything is emotive nonsense.

A third of National Health Service staff in two hospital units were infected with coronavirus without showing symptoms, study finds independent.co.uk / 12 Aug 2020 him

A new study has highlighted the number of NHS staff who can be infected with coronavirus but be completely unaware they are a risk to their colleagues and patients.

(A: ...just like the general population don't know they've had it, you see, because they're healthy.)

The research by doctors at University College London Hospitals (UCLH) found a third of staff working in two maternity departments at UCLH and St George’s Hospital tested positive for the virus but had no symptoms.

Overall, one in six staff who had not previously been diagnosed with the virus were tested for Covid-19 antibodies and were found to be positive for infection.

(A: You see, this wording is telling you good stuff here. But it sounds confusing to the people. It's meant to be. It says...)

...tested for Covid-19 antibodies

(A: Hm, that's blood test.)

and were found to be positive for infection.

(A: How they should have worded it is, and were found positive of having HAD the infection. You see how this is meant, everything is written to terrify people. If you had the antibodies you've fought off the infection.)

Of those who had the antibodies, almost 60 per cent had neither a cough or fever which meant they continued to work and to commute to hospital, potentially spreading the virus.

(A: Well, that's how all herd immunity happens. So, here's the whole thing, asymptomatic healthcare worker is the University Professor...)

Prof Keith Neal, emeritus professor of epidemiology of infectious diseases at the University of Nottingham, said: “Asymptomatic healthcare workers with Covid-19 pose a risk of spreading the virus depending on the personal protective equipment in use. We know many cases were acquired in hospital.

“Regular testing of healthcare workers is clearly warranted.”

(A: There ya go.)

I remember too doing maybe a couple months ago how many folks in the National Health Service in Britain had died. And there was definitely a strong correlation, in fact, most of them were from outside the country, and in different ethnic groups, most of them were really overweight, you should see how overweight they were, a diabetic and things like that. These were the folk on the staff. And a lot of them by the way that they put in there had retired years ago. If you really, you have to look at the small print at the end of find that out because they wouldn't tell you. Everything is a con to exaggerate everything. Lots of them literally had been retired years ago and then died. So, I can't believe the conology that's going on to terrify the public though. Imagine putting folk in that died years after retirement and trying to pretend it was all National Health Service personnel dying. Uugghhh.

I'll put up too an article it's from Germany. It's an association of doctors now who, they're calling it the Corona extra parliamentary inquiry committee. The ACU.

English versions – ACU 2020 640 European Doctors

acu2020.org

(A: Extra-parliamentary corona investigation committee. It says…)

Parliament does not do it, we the citizens are called upon to do it ourselves. As the Corona Extra-parliamentary Investigation Committee we will investigate why these restrictive measures were imposed upon us in our country as part of Covid 19, why people are suffering now and whether there is proportionality of the measures of this disease caused by the SARS Cov 2 virus.

We have serious doubts that these measures are proportionate. This needs to be examined and since the parliaments, neither of the opposition parties, nor the ruling parties (A: …which tells you a lot, you see.) have not convened a committee and it's not even planned, it's high time that we took this into our own hands. We will invite here experts here in the Corona speakers' group. These are experts from all areas of life, medicine, social affairs, law, economics and many more.

(A: He mentioned some of the doctors that are involved in this. Because you can't leave it to the politicians, who are all on the take by the way [Alan chuckles.] of the big corporations that are involved to make billions off it all. And apart from that they are all, it's a big agenda and this is just the cover to push it all through, as we well know. This is a PDF and it's about six pages I think they go through a lot of the stuff here talking about, the fallout from it too.)

According to an internal report from the federal Ministry of the Interior, 90% of all necessary operations in Germany were not carried out which affects 2.5 million people. This report also writes that there are or will be 500,000-125,000 deaths resulting from these government measures. These are human beings, fellow citizens who have already died or are still dying.

(A: 90%, that's the same probably in Britain and elsewhere.)

(A: This report was dated May 7, 2020, the one that I'm reading from.)

This is also the reason why we are now taking this corona investigation into our own hands because we can no longer wait.

(A: And talking about...)

... the gross negligence of government agencies not disclosing these things, and as it seems, orchestrates them because the scientific data already shows that there's no basis for these measures.

We all ask ourselves of course also in business but this is mainly about human lives, who benefits, that's the question we will try to find answers to. Who benefits?

And they have different doctors putting their bid forward in this PDF here. But yeah, they all know it's, that the measures that are getting carried out, total lockdown, wrecking the economy, getting folk on food stamps, across the planet pretty well, on rationing, and worse to come, for something that nowhere near warrants it. Hm. But again, it's a big agenda, right.

Also, I'll put up a link to a video. I mentioned before the article that it came from, the Rockefeller report that came out in 2010 I think it was, to do with the coming innovations in science and all the rest of it, where they talk about a pandemic breaking out. But I'll put up a PDF where a person at the time, I think 2012 maybe around about then or something, I'm not quite certain, but he put it ahead as a documentary he was on, talking about this, and they're calling it lockstep. This is what they had in the Rockefeller report and how they would manage it, right. Listen to this, it was 2012, it was, yeah. Or 2010 I think they put the article out. Anyway, it says…

“Lockstep” Written 10 years ago chronicles how to bring the world down with a pandemic - video

youtube.com / 16 March 2020

“Lockstep” Written 10 years ago chronicles how to bring the world down with a pandemic | This report was produced by The Rockefeller Foundation

thewatchtowers.org / 18 April 2020

In 2012, the pandemic that the world had been...

(A: They write it as though it had happened, you see, from the Rockefeller report with all the folk on board. That now are called bioethicists. And they put another report out recently, how they were going to manage it all inside America, bioethics, right down to who would live and die, 'eh. So...)

In 2012, the pandemic that the world had been anticipating for years finally hit. Unlike 2009’s H1N1, (A: The other non-pandemic.) this new influenza strain — originating from wild geese — was extremely virulent and deadly. Even the most pandemic-prepared nations were quickly overwhelmed when the virus streaked around the world

(A: Pfew, just like that you see, and it cooked your goose.)

“The United States’s initial policy of “strongly discouraging” citizens from flying proved deadly in its leniency, accelerating the spread of the virus not just within the U.S. but across borders. However, a few countries did fare better — China in particular.

(A: Isn't it following the same agenda that actually happened in reality here? [Alan chuckles.] They're praising China...)

The Chinese government’s quick imposition and enforcement of mandatory quarantine for all citizens, as well as its instant and near-hermetic sealing off of all borders”

China’s government was not the only one that took extreme measures to protect its citizens from risk and exposure. During the pandemic, national leaders around the world flexed their authority and imposed airtight rules and Restrictions, from the mandatory wearing of face masks to body-temperature checks at the entries to communal spaces like train stations and supermarkets. Even after the pandemic faded, this more authoritarian control and oversight of citizens and their activities stuck and even intensified. In order to protect themselves from the spread of increasingly global problems — from pandemics and transnational terrorism (A: ...all at the same time, 'eh?) to environmental crises and rising poverty — leaders around the world took a firmer grip on power.

(A: There ya go.)

At first, the notion of a more controlled world gained wide acceptance and approval.

(A: Now remember, this is what they said could happen in a pandemic when it broke out back then, years ago. And they're writing it in the past tense, like a story. So…)

Citizens willingly gave up some of their sovereignty — and their privacy — to more paternalistic states (A: ... paternalistic…) in exchange for greater safety and stability.

(A: There you go, safety and stability. You remember 9/11 happened, they went around the streets with their microphones in their hands to get a common meme out to the public, you know, would you give up your rights and freedoms for security and safety? So, here's this article here again, right...)

...willingly gave up some of their sovereignty — and their privacy — to more paternalistic states in exchange for greater safety and stability.

Citizens were more tolerant, and even eager, for top-down direction and oversight, and national leaders had more latitude to impose order in the ways they saw fit. In developed countries, this heightened oversight took many forms: biometric IDs for all citizens (A: ...coincidence.), for example, and tighter regulation of key industries whose stability was deemed vital to national interests. In many developed countries, enforced cooperation with a suite of new regulations and agreements slowly but steadily restored both order and, importantly, economic growth.

Across the developing world, however, the story was different — and much more variable. Top-down authority took different forms in different countries, hinging largely on the capacity, caliber, and intentions of their leaders. In countries with strong and thoughtful leaders, citizens' overall economic status and quality of life increased. In India, for example, air quality drastically improved after 2016 (A: ...it says.), when the government outlawed high-emitting vehicles.

(A: Remember, this is written in 2000 and, what 12, whatever it was, or 2010. And during giving up all these rights and freedoms and blah, blah, blah, it hasn't mentioned death tolls of virus, it's like you've all forgotten about the virus already. [Alan laughing.])

In Ghana, the introduction of ambitious government programs to improve basic infrastructure and ensure the availability of clean water for all her people led to a sharp decline in water-borne diseases. But more authoritarian leadership worked less well — and in some cases tragically — in countries run by irresponsible elites who used their increased power to pursue their own interests at the expense of their citizens.

(A: Like the politicians have all got shares in Pharma companies, exactly what they're talking about here, I wonder. You know?)

There were other downsides, as the rise of virulent nationalism created new hazards:

By 2025, people seemed to be growing weary of so much top-down control and letting leaders and authorities make choices for them.

Wherever national interests clashed with individual interests, there was conflict. Sporadic pushback became increasingly organized and coordinated, as disaffected youth and people who had seen their status and opportunities slip away — largely in developing countries — incited civil unrest. In 2026, protestors in Nigeria brought down the government, fed up with the entrenched cronyism and corruption. Even those who liked the greater stability and predictability of this world began to grow uncomfortable and constrained by so many tight rules and by the strictness of national boundaries. The feeling lingered that sooner or later, something would inevitably upset the neat order that the world's governments had worked so hard to establish.

(A: Remember, this is supposed to be started, all, this whole idea started with a pandemic. Since the top line pandemic, I've read all this, it hasn't been mentioned again. Because it's all used as an excuse, remember. Hm? You see, it's all used as an excuse to make it all happen.)

TECHNOLOGY IN LOCK STEP

(A: That's where they get the term lockstep from.)

While there is no way of accurately predicting what the important technological advancements will be in the future, the scenario narratives point to areas where conditions may enable or accelerate the development of certain kinds of technologies.

Technological innovation in "Lock Step" is largely driven by government and is focused on issues of national security and health and safety. Most technological improvements are created by and for developed countries, shaped by governments' dual desire to control and to monitor their citizens. (A: No kidding, 'eh.) In states with poor governance, large-scale projects that fail to progress abound.

(A: So total surveillance is a good thing, you see.)

- Scanners using advanced functional magnetic resonance imaging (fMRI) technology become the norm at airports and other public areas to detect abnormal behavior that may indicate "antisocial intent."

(A: This all began with a pandemic, right? But now they're at antisocial intent.)

- In the aftermath of pandemic scares, smarter packaging for food and beverages is applied first by big companies and producers in a business-to-business environment, and then adopted for individual products and consumers.

(A: That's already been developed, I've got another article about that very thing they're on, food.)

- New diagnostics are developed to detect communicable diseases. The application of health screening also changes; screening becomes a prerequisite for release from a hospital or prison, (A: [Alan chuckles.] It's the same thing now, hospital or prison or home. [Alan chuckles.] It's all the same.) successfully slowing the spread of many diseases.

- Tele-presence technologies respond to the demand for less expensive, lower-bandwidth, sophisticated communications systems for populations whose travel is restricted.

“WHAT IS OFTEN SURPRISING ABOUT NEW TECHNOLOGIES IS COLLATERAL DAMAGE: THE EXTENT OF THE PROBLEM THAT YOU CAN CREATE BY SOLVING ANOTHER PROBLEM IS ALWAYS A BIT OF A SURPRISE.”

TECHNOLOGY IN CLEVER TOGETHER

In “Clever Together,” (A: That's the term they use, in clever together...) strong global cooperation on a range of issues drives technological breakthroughs that combat disease, climate change, and energy shortages. Trade and foreign direct investment spread technologies in all directions and make products cheaper for people in the developing world, thereby widening access to a range of technologies. The atmosphere of cooperation and transparency allows states and regions to glean insights from massive datasets to vastly improve the management and allocation of financial and environmental resources.

- Intelligent electricity, water distribution, (A: Again, it's all technocracy.) and transportation systems develop in urban areas. In these “smart cities,” internet access is seen as a basic right by the late 2010s.

- Advances in low-cost mind-controlled prosthetics aid the 80 percent of global amputees who live in developing countries.

- Solar power ...

- Flexible and rapid mobile payment systems ... while the developed world is hampered by entrenched banking interests and regulation.

(A: They want you to abandon lots of regulations and spy on everything you're doing, absolutely, even though they’re already doing it all.)

But remember too, I've done this, I've put up these, the whole lockstep thing before from the Rockefeller Foundation Scenarios for the Future of Technology and International Development and the Lockstep is part of it of course with the pandemic in it. I put the whole thing up before. I'll probably put it up again tonight, for those who can really, you know, go through it all.

Rockefeller Foundation - Scenarios for the Future of Technology and International Development - ia802609.us.archive.org

So, remember, you're living through agendas and scripts that were done and agreed upon years ago by those in control. Amazon…

Amazon lines up $10 billion for satellite-based Internet project Kupier

geospatialworld.net / 4 Aug 2020

Amazon is getting serious about space business. Coming shortly after Amazon Web Service’s announcement last month to set up a new business unit dedicated to accelerating innovation in the global aerospace and satellite industry, it has now announced its intention to invest $10 billion for launching a low earth orbit (LEO) satellite constellation called Project Kupier to eliminate Internet dark spots, specifically in the US.

(A: The whole point to is to survey every inch of the planet so you can’t get any peace no matter where you go. That's part of it too. Of course, it is. It will tie in with the 5G, etc. etc.)

They've got so many satellites up there already for goodness sake, that it makes a mess of the night sky. It was bad enough with the aerial spraying and the geo spraying that goes on all the time, the geo engineering as they call it. They admit since 2005 you've got global dimming, so at night you can't even see all the stars really clearly anymore. And that's true, I can remember, that was one of my hobbies is astronomy. I used to love looking at the winter sky, far away from light pollution from cities and so on. But now, you can see the brightest stars, the rest of them are just, just, they're never really clear anymore... because of the geo engineering that's been going on. Which again they pooh-poohed with all their disinformation experts, and these teams that hammer you for saying the truth and call you all kooks, no, there's no geo engineering going on, as they're having meetings about it and disclosing what they're doing, they're still telling you, oh no, we're not doing it. If you say it that is. But there you go.

So anyway, it says… Bezos vs Musk …with the pretense that they're all in competition with each other of course, for those who haven't figured that out yet, remember. It's quite something. I'll put this link up to for those who want to peruse it, if you can handle it. More surveillance, you know, though with the strings of satellites they've been putting up recently by the characters that we're supposed to believe are just geniuses. They are front people for big businesses, naturally. Some of them even have the grandparents as technocrats, grandparents for technocrats for some of them, real technocrats, like they ran the system before they were kicked out of the countries. But that's just coincidence too, isn't it?

But then again, you go back into Donald Trump, and Epstein, the whole lot of them. Everyone is blackmailable at the top. That also came out during that documentary put out by Millie Weaver's group, or whatever group they are and the Tore woman that posted that. As I say, take that with a pinch of salt or however you want to take it. But the fact is, the data inside it is factual. How your literally, you couldn't believe how many agencies, governmental and private, are all working together with all of your data. Stuff you have no idea they have on you. Things that you don't even know yourself. Things you've even forgotten. They've got everything on you. You help them along the way, mind you, by using all the electronic media you can possibly use. Like Facebook and so on, just incredible, you know. It really is incredible.

But yeah, when you start covering the sky with these strings of satellites that they've been shoving up for the last few years there, it spoils it all. It really does spoil it all. And again, that's the price of progress, they say, you've got to just accept it and let your masters do what they want. Well, wait a minute here, who says that these are our masters? And who says that they have the right to just spoil all the beauty that's in the heavens for goodness sake?

As I say, it was so beautiful to watch the heavens before they did the geo engineering and caused what NASA now calls global dimming, officially, and spoiling the night sky. You know, it's about the one escape you could really have away from all the man-made fiction that they deluge you with trying to get you to, that's your little tranquilizer to get away from it all. But to look into the night sky was just, it was a holy experience, it truly was. Absolutely. Until they caused the global dimming. Now you've got strings of the same characters that are put up there as your new gods, you see, and it's their right to just cover the sky with these satellites, 'eh? Hm.

There ya go, there's democracy in action, 'eh? And just like the idea with vaccinations, as I say, Trump signed a deal, Moderna and Bill Gates and GAVI and the whole group, one and a half billion dollars or something just to one of the companies, and probably billions more to another.

Trump inks $1.5b deal with Moderna for potential coronavirus vaccine - newzealandnews.net / 18 Aug 2020

And...

Canada Inks Deal With Pfizer and Moderna (A: It's just coincidence though.) To Prepare The Nation (A: .... you see how it's worded though…)

To Prepare The Nation For “Mass Vaccinations” (A: …like it’s a done deal. No, it isn't a done deal, you know.)

collective-evolution.com / 10 Aug 2020

(A: They can make as many vaccinations as they want, but before, you see, when it happened with the H1N1 back in 2009, and swine flus before, they ended up dumping millions of them because folk didn't want them, because they were so unsafe from what came out from the side effects, luckily the information spread quick enough and it was stopped. But here they go…)

Canada recently announced that they signed a deal with Pfizer & Moderna to secure millions of doses of a coronavirus vaccine when it's ready.

Why is vaccine hesitancy growing?

(A: Again, there's the Yale group jumping in, vaccine hesitancy growing, why is it growing, 'eh…)

Should the freedom of choice always remain? Are people who refuse made out to be the "bad" ones as a result of mainstream media/government/big pharma perception manipulation?

What Happened: The Canadian government has inked a new deal with pharmaceutical giants Pfizer and Moderna to secure tens of millions of doses of the new coronavirus vaccine in 2021, which is still currently in the developmental stages. Procurement Minister Anita Anand recently made the announcement after Pfizer tweeted news of the new deal, stating that “We are increasingly focused on the next stage of our recovery, including preparing Canada for mass vaccinations”

(A: Really? Really, a private corporation, 'eh, is going to get us ready for our recovery. Hm.)

This comes shortly after the U.S. government gave more than a billion dollars to Bill Gates‘ vaccine alliance called Gavi, which was co-founded by Bill & Melinda Gates. President Trump also signed a deal with Pfizer for one hundred million doses of the COVID-19 vaccine. You can read more about those stories here. (A: And it gives you the links to the other stories about it on this one site.)

Survey results released on Tuesday from the non-profit Angus Reid Institute found half of Canadians say they have no reservations and are ready to get a COVID-19 vaccination as soon as it’s available. But 32 per cent — roughly a third of respondents — say they’d likely wait a while.

(A: It takes away, you can't even believe statistics because they use statistics to lie to the public. That's how they do these polls, when they came out with the Gallup poll and Angus Reid poll, a long time ago. It was not to give you a truth, it's to try to sway the people by going with the majority. That's how people do it, oh well, if 70% say, oh well, I guess I'll just go with that. That's how it works, it's made up nonsense to sway opinions. Polls, 'eh? So, a lot of them say they'll likely wait...)

Another 14 per cent don’t want to get a vaccine at all.

(A: It's BIGGER than 14%, believe you me. [Alan chuckles.])

This comes from CBC, a major mainstream media organization in Canada.

(A: It's a government media organization in Canada. [Alan chuckles.] We used to call it the Communist Broadcasting Corporation.)

I do have a hard time trusting these numbers, and personally feel that the number of those who do not desire the vaccine may be much greater than 50 percent...

(A: .... blah, blah, blah, blah, blah. And of course, the mainstream media are all in bed with the corporate, other corporations, and with the government too.)

Edward Snowden, it's true enough, put out an article not long ago, [unable to locate article] said governments around the world are exploiting the pandemic to monitor us like never before. He and many others have been pointing out how society is moving fast towards an authoritarian type of existence.

(A: Exactly like that lockstep, 'eh, from the Rockefeller article 2010.)

Now it's already here. The enforcement or advocacy of strict obedience to authority at the expense of personal freedom has been here for quite a while. And it's done in a very clever way often hiding under the guise of goodwill, or making people feel that they may be harming others if they do not comply.

(A: Well, that's exactly the tactic that they said that they would have at the Yale, the whole list of terms they would apply to make the herd, the general herd turn on those that wouldn't go along.)

I'll put these articles up for those that want, again, to continue to at least keep their minds active. You've got to keep your mind active regardless. I've got to put, I may even put up the article again too, it was a talk, you can actually see it on YouTube I think it is, it's a talk, it was done at the EU, for the European commission group that runs the parliament. These are all these characters who literally are all humanists, and all applaud each other. And I mean humanist, secular humanists. Real communists in a sense, because true communism is, and socialism, is fascism. Again, they want instant obedience. That's the way I look at present-day China, I think, come on here, this is the advanced kind of communism here, where the folk jump and they do what they're told, or else, there's no complaints department there. Here we have complaints department, it's just that they, it doesn't go anywhere.

But again, most folk never really quite figure it out, do they? They can't figure things out. Vaccine hesitancy, hhhhhhhhhhh. Like it's normal to allow foreign objects and even deadly material, even fetal tissue, to be injected into your body. Why would it cause hesitancy for goodness sake, 'eh? [Alan chuckles.] Especially when you read that so many of the folk who did the trial vaccinations, which is not the strong dose yet, 'eh, they'll still alter it again and again and again, a lot of them would end up in the hospitals. That inspires confidence. Why would you be hesitant, 'eh? Don't you want to feel sick and nauseated and have a nasty reaction, maybe seizures and paralysis and end up in a hospital? Why wouldn't you want that for goodness sake?! Argh! You don't want your tissue in your lungs to be permanently altered, genetically altered, remade genetically? Tth. Ahhhhhhhhh, you're just against progress, 'eh.

Now, in this documentary called...

In vaccines we trust: stepping up action to increase vaccine confidence - youtube.com / 12 Sept 2019

…you'll hear these technocrats, that really run the commission, the European commission, specialist areas as they say, talking about ways to get the public to go along with things, the propaganda in other words. They mentioned that they can insert what they want the public to do, to follow, wear masks and distance and so on, and insert them into dramas and fiction and entertainment. Which is a common practice. For those who haven't figured it out yet, most of your indoctrination comes from fiction. Because you're unaware that it's actually being put right into your mind. Your firewall is down, your mind's firewall is technically down, you're not guarded about it at all and it goes right into your mind and that's where you get your opinions from.

Inside One Of Big Brother's 'Location Harvesting' Contractors, Which Tracks 'Hundreds Of Millions' Of Phones

zerohedge.com / 8 Aug 2020

A Virginia-based software company founded by two US military veterans with backgrounds in intelligence (A: Here you go again.) has been tracking hundreds of millions of mobile phones across the world, according to documents reviewed by the Wall Street Journal.

The company, Anomaly Six LLC (Limited Liability Companies.), draws location data from over 500 apps - partly through their proprietary software development kit (SDK) which they've paid to embed directly in some of the apps, while the company gets location data from partner providers. The SDK allows the company to obtain a user's location if they have allowed the apps in question to access the phone's GPS coordinates.

App publishers often allow third-party companies, for a fee, to insert SDKs into their apps. The SDK maker then sells the consumer data harvested from the app, and the app publisher gets a chunk of revenue. But consumers have no way to know whether SDKs are embedded in apps; most privacy policies don't disclose that information. Anomaly Six says it embeds its own SDK in some apps, and in other cases gets location data from other partners. -Wall Street Journal

Anomaly Six holds contracts with several branches of the US Government (A: No kidding.) - although they told the Journal that they 'restrict the sale of US mobile phone movement data to nongovernmental, private sector clients,' according to the report.

And as the Journal notes, in the case of Anomaly Six, "the direct collection of such data by a business closely linked to US national security agencies is unusual."

But it's a COINCIDENCE, for goodness sakes. M-hm. Spying, spying, and you pay for it all, 'eh, to get your phones and stuff, you pay for all that, to give away your life, your privacy. You pay for it.

Pentagon Releases Huge Slice Of Spectrum For 5G

technocracy.news

The unprecedented collaboration between Technocrats in the military establishment and their counterparts in the corporate world is on full display to empower the Internet of Things across America. This process is driven by the White House. ? TN Editor

(A: This is put out by Technocracy News.)

After a remarkably fast interagency review, the White House today announced a massive transfer of electromagnetic spectrum from military use to commercial 5G. It will be the “fastest transfer of federal spectrum to commercial use in history,” US Chief Technology Officer Michael Kratsios told reporters proudly this afternoon. But, Kratsios and Pentagon CIO Dana Deasy assured reporters ahead of the announcement, the rush won’t compromise military readiness or operations.

The 100 megahertz of spectrum runs from 3450 MHz to 3550, so-called mid-band frequencies prized by 5G developers because they allow longer-ranged transmissions than the millimeter-wave spectrum that makes up most of what’s been available in the US so far.

And it goes on and on and on about 5G, etc. And that's also why they're really hammering the Chinese for the Huawei model, you know. Because it's massive business. Massive. You see, we are all here to get fleeced, you understand that. And all the intelligence agencies and private contractors that work with them and all that, and they are in and out with intelligence agencies to the contractors, back and forth, it's a revolving door, back and forth all the time to get around legalities. But they all make their money off of us. All, you know. That's what it is, all of it, masses of money, masses and masses of money off of us all the time. And it's always gotta be done through a fear project, or a war, or terror, or a war of terror, or a war on terror, and then they give us a war of terror on us, or pandemics. But no matter what, you're all going to die unless you just give up all your rights and get fleeced and pay more and more taxes so's government can use them to pay all the security equipment and surveillance, etc., etc., etc. It's never-ending.

And this the normal now, you see, the new norm. So, it's not going to ease up unless the public have enough and ditch the darn phones and everything else and say we're not going to use them until we have our own system. And have some real privacy. And folk who invade that privacy and try to exploit it will, again, join this massive wall of tyrants and villains, all their faces everywhere, enemies of society. Which is of course what they're going to do against everybody who won't take their vaccines, you know, the Yale idea, they're getting paid millions, again, of your tax money.

Everybody lives off you. Everybody. Live so well, and castles in the air, and we are stuck here down on the ground, 'eh, in the mud with hardly anything left at all, as you lose your businesses, your savings, everything, to these monsters in this wonderful new utopia. They all live on our backs. Like the layers and layers of infestation of leeches and lice and ticks, always to help us and to save us from ourselves.

Ahhhhhhhhh, I tell ya, tyrant, tyrants, tyrants. Villains. Absolute villains. That's just what they are. It's so disgusting. But now that it is the new norm. They won't have all the money for the Cold War's like they used to have, creating brand-new missiles every week and saying it's because the enemy has got a better one then we have, and the enemy winks at your leaders, and they all winked together, as they fleeced us again for the next one. Well you see, now it's just live off our backs through crisis and terror. Yep. They want it forever. If you let them do it, they will do it. No privacy for you.

This is what they're going to use too, from the Yale idea, you know, they were given the contract to find ways of turning the people against you if you won't go along with the herd. They'll ostracize the ones who won't comply and say I'm not wearing a silly mask. It says on it, on the packets, it ain’t going to stop Covid 19, coming in or going out, no matter what kind it is. Because the virus is so small it will even get through the N95 mask. Never mind the dangers of anoxia and all the rest of it, and hypoxia.

It's just horrible what's happening to people through the biggest racketeering con ever devised, for the new way of living. You know, the arm flapping TED talkers, let's all get excited about this brave new world. M-hm. And how much money they're going to make off us. [Alan laughing.] So, what they'll use is how bad you are against society, you see. When the communists, or the Bolsheviks took over Russia and brought in communism, they called it communism while they themselves called it the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. Because there's no difference between socialist, or the goals of it to that of communism, for those who have never figured that out.

A lot of working-class folks simply think it's not the same. But again, when you go into the writings and the sayings and even the documentaries that were put out by guys like George Bernard Shaw, you know, who said, those who follow us are in for a fright, he said, when they think they're going to get more money to bring home to their families, like the men. He says, no, no. He says, this isn't to help you, this is to get the women out to work too, to increase the tax base, etc. etc. you know. Oh no, it's not to help your family, they want to end the family. Well, there ya go.

But when the Bolsheviks took over, they immediately turn on the opposition, you see, as counterrevolutionaries. So, they are the revolutionaries, and anyone who wants to keep the old system going is called a counterrevolutionary. So, you have to eliminate and slaughter all the counterrevolutionaries, even for thinking it, you see. That's what always happens by the tyrants. They always have to paint their target, the dissidents in their population, with a nasty term, that becomes more solidified as time goes on, just by repetition. Sometimes they'll put a little, you know, yellow star on you just make you stand out, so they always know who you are. And of course with the Covid idea that they're going to give you bracelets if you won't even take a cell phone app, etc., you wear a manacle around your ankle, around your wrist and you can't move more than 200 feet from your home apparently, you know, without it setting off a signal.

This is what your health, so-called, leaders, I don't have a leader, I don't believe in leaders, you know, when it comes to health, I've got a good idea what health is myself. I will not go by tyrants who advocate technology to stigmatize people who have a mind of their own and who are not endangering anybody in any age where, in a time, which is this Covid idea, there's nothing new about it really at all when it comes to the supposed deadliness. It's not as deadly as they're making out at all. And if they stop sticking the ventilators down the tracheas of people in hospitals as a form of routine here, they wouldn't have the death rate happening from it.

Again too, they're putting everybody down, in their 80s, and most folk are in their 80s and 90s who are dying of it, and they're dying already, you see. It's not Covid, they're dying alongside it. They probably don't have any symptoms from the Covid themselves even though they'll test positive, as their kidneys are packing in and their heart packs in, etc. Because that's what happens when we get old. But facts don't matter when you're padding the numbers for a big agenda.

But they'll stigmatize people again. It wouldn't be counterrevolutionaries, what they'll call you is the next step, you're an enemy of the people. And that's what's coming from Yale, that's the next step, you're an enemy of the people, you're going to make folk sick. Whereas the reality is, if they all take the vaccinations, then they are safe, aren't they? So why are they bothering about you? You'll only be harming yourself then, when the rest of them all take the vaccinations. But facts don't matter, folks. [Alan chuckles.] It doesn't matter. Really. N-n-n.

It's a multibillion-dollar fantastic scheme for profits, annually. Because you see they're not going to get rid of it. Just like they could never get rid of the flus either. So, they want annual vaccinations, you see. This is a great, can you imagine the guy selling the sales pitch to the investors in this, 'eh. Roll up, roll up, you know, a sure winner here, the governments are going to mandate that they vaccinate their populations, mandatorily, every year, rollup, rollup, invest here. Arrrrrrrrgh. Dear, dear, dear, dear, dear. N-n-n.

Now for those who suffered me this far, I'll just mention once again very briefly to go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Get the books and discs I sell there. Or donate, straightforward donations. Help me tick along. Cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Awfully important, folks because as I say I'm not selling anything else. I'm not selling you… I'm not even selling you good news here; I'm just selling you the facts. And I tell you them for free anyway, it doesn't make any difference. The facts are the facts, folks who can't handle the facts, well, don't force them to, don't try to force them to. But some folks need to know the facts, for their own peace of mind. It's more important to have your peace of mind than be terrified all along. In fact, the more facts you know the less afraid you become when you realize the scam.

It's like the boy who shouts out when they're all praising the king for his fantastic new costumery in the parade, and the boy shots out, but he's naked, the king has no clothes. That's what Covid is, folks, when you realize what's going on here. Never mind all, again the lockstep back in 2010 it was I think by the Rockefellers, the whole agenda for this pandemic and how they would react, etc. That isn't fiction, folks. This is what's been planned years ago by those who use the think tanks to help plan the future, and implement the future for themselves, always on top.

You see, that is the way of this democracy as they call it, it’s the same corporations that plundered and took over long ago, long, long ago, are eliminating the last bit of freedoms that folk had, to take over the complete system. That's the normal now. And they plan their future into the, waay off into the distance, you see, big business plan, a long-range business plan. How do, we plan to make so many, this is what they do at these big business meetings. Here's the profits that we expect to gain from this, you see, and we got the government investing the taxpayer’s money into the whole thing, yada ya, you can't lose, yada yada ya, and then they'll say, and now we're going to make sure they take it every year, look at the continued returns you're going to get for your investments.

This is a business plan, folks, as we get fleeced and fleeced and fleeced. I could say other nasty words actually, a lot worse. But I won't. But you know what we're getting? You do know what we're getting? But this is normal now. This IS the normal across all business in fact, is to get the government in bed with themselves, the corporations, which is normally called fascism, and then you mandate the public take this, that or the other, or get stiffed in a whole bunch of other ways, for the benefit of the corporations. And the corporations are awfully happy to, you know, back financially again the politicians who run for office, or bring them into the fold of private business when they come out of it. This is a revolving door for them all. You're living in fascism. Real fascism. And that's a long-range business plan, they keep it going for as long as they can possibly do it. Returns and returns and returns on their investments, big returns, using the public and law to mandate everything on the public. That's fascism for those who haven't figured it out.

Now, as small businesses go belly up, naturally, that's the intention of a lot of this, is to eliminate ALL small businesses and leave only the massive chains. It's strange, it's like an echo of Maggie Thatcher's talks in the early 1980s, where she talked about the future would be the end of small businesses and the big conglomerates would be the ones that would come through. You're hearing the same thing again, and here's an article here from Forbes and it says…

This AI Camera Can Help Restaurants Show That Their Food Is Safe From Coronavirus

forbes.com / 23 April 2020

(A: Listen to this spiel here, the food is safe. It doesn't tell you that at all. It's just that all, everybody involved in electronics and artificial intelligence is plundering everything else that's not involved with it, by telling you, you need it. Hm? So, they give you this spiel again...)

Walk into Emilie’s, chef Kevin Tien’s restaurant in the Capitol Hill neighborhood of Washington, D.C., and you’ll find yourself alone.

Only one customer is allowed in at a time. There’s an employee there to greet you, wearing a mask and gloves. (A: That's really friendly.) You talk about the frozen rosé they’ve made with their ice cream machine before he hands over your order in a pristine white paper bag. Demonstrating these safeguards helps customers trust that their food is safe from coronavirus.

(A: I read an article similar about this talking about how even in the restaurant business they've taken it over, and everything goes up in price, right? Everything goes up and up and up with all these, the same guys that worked, that weaseled their way into the hospitals to manage hospitals better and plundered them like the NHS in Britain, the same characters are involved in all businesses now. You need us, you know, we're experts in technology. So, it says...)

... says Dragontail cofounder and CEO Ido Levanon. “All the advancement in technology—especially artificial intelligence—all of the latest developments on the technology side unfortunately never really reached the restaurant industry,” he explains.

He and his cofounders launched Dragontail Systems in 2013 with two products. One is a system that uses an algorithm to optimize delivery efficiencies and the other is an AI camera that was initially designed to help restaurants with quality control. “About half of us [are] developers—mathematicians, data scientists—and half [are] operations people,” he says of the team.

(A: I think they should have half of them actually make the food, how about half of the make the food, 'eh? Actually, how about 90% of the folk to make the food, to deal with the food? Everything is superfluous as they graft themselves on to scam the public.)

The company’s AI technology can be used to verify more than just the correct number of pepperoni slices, Levanon says. The camera can also detect those all-important safety measures. Did the employee wash their hands? Did they clean the surfaces? Are they wearing gloves? Are they wearing a mask?

…etc. etc., it's just more spyware, 'eh. That'll be the only business left eventually until all, until their host, the ones that pay for the parasites, dies off. Hm? That's about where it's all coming to. And...

D-Link announces launch of a screening camera to detect skin-surface temperature in public places

mobihealthnews.com / 10 June 2020

(A: Well, that's an old one, that one is.)

Surveillance solutions firm D-Link has announced the launch of a group temperature screening camera which can monitor up to 30 people at a time simultaneously.

(A: Hm.)

It combines thermal imaging technology with artificial intelligence (AI) to raise an alarm if a person is experiencing elevated skin-surface temperature. It does not measure actual core body temperatures, which should be further confirmed using clinical measurement devices.

The all-in-one, intelligent fever screening kit comes with a dual-lens thermographic camera. (A: They've been using that in airports for years. They were using that back when the SARS thing broke out, the first one, SARS 1. Yep.) Together with the Full HD optical imaging sensor, D-Link says the camera can create high-quality footage that overlays both thermal and optical images into one.

(A: Again, it's all sales pitches, 'eh, everything’s a sales pitch. And it says it's...)

... wireless, video surveillance, storage

(A: ...and so on and so on.)

As public places begin to reopen, solutions are needed to prevent spread of COVID-19. (A: Arrrrrrgh!) DCS-9500T has been engineered specifically for monitoring large, busy areas and provides fast skin-surface temperature detection at a >0.3°C accuracy.

(A: So, they've already got all their teams working on it, well how do we get money off this scam part here, and okay, you're going to start to open up, how can we make money off them opening up? Well, terrify them and say, folk could still be infected so this might detect it. You know, it's just nonstop profit, isn't? And what, all it's about is permanency, that's what they want is permanency. 'Eh? If they could even get rid of this Covid idea, you know, once they give up on that after a few years, they've made their billions off us all and changed society, they'll have another reason for keeping it in place, you see. Yep. There you go. N-n-n.)

(A: They want to do digital trackers, it says...)

...digital trackers and other security systems to flag the potential risks of the coronavirus’ spread.

...spreeeeeeeeaaad, oooooooooooo. How did they get over it with the Spanish flu? It just faded away after the second, you know, winter it was gone. Without any electricity really getting involved in it I suppose. It must be a fluke of nature. Our saviors are, is technology. It's not medicine, no, it's technology, and gadgetry, and surveillance.

Now, here we have again some people who are not really stable, or they're tyrants, take your pick. Often it’s both. But…

Nashville councilwoman wants attempted murder charges for people who don't wear face mask, pass on COVID-19 theblaze.com / 5 Aug 2020

'...if they pass a virus, then they are tried for murder or attempted murder'

Sharon Hurt, an at-large member of the Nashville Metro Council, suggested this week that people (A: I guess she watches TV a lot, you can always tell the ones who watch TV.) who do not wear a face mask, but spread coronavirus, should be hit with attempted murder or murder charges.

(A: Well, how about folk who pass on aids? Hm? Would that include them? Hm? Or other, say, other diseases? Hm? Why just Covid? Think about it. Of course, you know this won't pass because obviously somebody will have to say that about AIDS, [Alan chuckles.] but somebody will say that, and it won't pass. But that's what it would lead to, wouldn't it if it was passed? What's next? And what's next? And what's next? And what's next? How about gonorrhea? How about syphilis? Never ending, 'eh?)

During an August 5 meeting between the city's Public Safety, Beer & Regulated Beverages and Health, Hospitals, & Social Services committees, Hurt asked whether the council could enact legislation criminally charging people who don't wear face coverings in a similar fashion HIV-positive people (A: Oh, they actually mention that.) who knowingly spread HIV without informing partners.

She said:

My question goes back to legislation. I don't know if Mike Jameson could be the one to answer the question, but my concern is — you know I work for an organization, that if they pass a virus, then they are tried for murder or attempted murder, if they are not told … and this person who may very well pass this virus that's out in the air because they're not wearing a mask is basically doing the same thing.

Even though the masks, mind you, don't stop it from getting into the air, for goodness sake, woman, you know. This is all from their own, from the manufacturers themselves, they have to say it and on the package that they sell or they get sued, it doesn't stop it coming in the mask or going out of the mask. [Alan chuckles.] N-n-n. But there ya go, they're all talking, hhhhhhhhhh, utter nonsense is what they're talking. But don't be surprised if this kind of thing gets made public, you know, and they put it into law. Again, I mentioned before about the Australian police.

Police Wrestle Australian Woman to the Ground for Not Wearing a Mask - breitbart.com / 11 Aug 2020

I'll put that one up too, because you're going to see more and more of this as they try, a lot of these articles actually are also made, meant to terrify you, this might happen to you, you might get wrestled to the ground, they might even break your neck, you know, or suffocate you with a stranglehold, if you don't comply. It's meant to terrify you as well. M-hm.

I've mentioned before that Britain, all the satellites of Britain, that came out of Britain, or London, really, they're more totalitarian than a lot of so-called Third World countries with their police. They really feel they have a real authority to do what they want, as opposed to do what the law says. Mask mouth, a new term, 'eh…

'Mask mouth' is a seriously stinky side effect of wearing masks

nypost.com / 5 Aug 2020

People are brushing their teeth way more after smelling their breath with a mask on (A: Dentists are noticing it too by the way and calling it, actually saying that it's causing...)

...is leading to all kinds of dental disasters like decaying teeth, receding gum lines and seriously sour breath.

(A: More problems I think, dental issues because of oral hygiene is changing when you wear a mask all the time.)

"We're seeing inflammation in people's gums that have been healthy forever, and cavities in people who have never had them before," says Dr. Rob Ramondi, a dentist and co-founder of One Manhattan Dental. "About 50% of our patients are being impacted by this, [so] we decided to name it 'mask mouth' — after 'meth mouth.'"

(A: They're getting the same kind of symptoms of the blackened teeth and so on, brown teeth.)

The term "meth mouth" is widely used by dentists to describe the dental problems that arise among methamphetamine users. Addicts often end up with cracked, black- and brown-stained teeth because the stimulant causes sugar cravings, teeth grinding and jaw clenching. They also often neglect their oral hygiene.

While mask mouth isn’t quite as obvious, if left untreated, the results could be equally harmful.

“Gum disease — or periodontal disease — will eventually lead to strokes and an increased risk of heart attacks,” says Dr. Marc Sclafani, another co-founder of One Manhattan Dental.

He says the stinky syndrome is triggered by face coverings, since wearing a mask increases dryness of the mouth — and a buildup of bad bacteria.

“People tend to breathe through their mouth instead of through their nose while wearing a mask,” says Sclafani. “The mouth breathing is causing the dry mouth, which leads to a decrease in saliva — and saliva is what fights the bacteria and cleanses your teeth.”

Of course, when they're wearing masks too, he says, they drink less water. [Alan chuckles.] So, it's all a chain reaction, isn't it? But again, the elite don't care. Dentists shouldn't really care, they make money, right, isn’t that good for their business?

I mentioned this one too, it's…

Peak Idiocy: Wisconsin Government Agency Mandates Facemask Use For Virtual Zoom Meetings (A: That's all on the Internet, right?)

zerohedge.com / 13 Aug 2020

Despite the deluge of data that continues to come in indicating that the coronavirus may not be the death sentence that the mainstream media has made it out to be, the sharp overreaction from those who can't help but be scared half to death from the virus continues unabated.

The latest example comes to us from the Wisconsin’s Department of Natural Resources, who told its employees that effective August 1, they would have to wear a mask - even for teleconferences.

(A: [Alan laughing.])

Preston Cole of the DNR said in an e-mail to employees: “Also, wear your mask, even if you are home, to participate in a virtual meeting that involves being seen — such as on Zoom or another video-conferencing platform — by non-DNR staff. Set the safety example which shows you as a DNR public service employee care about the safety and health of others.”

(A: Oh, dear, dear, dear. It reminds me actually of my own Internet provider, that I've complained umpteen times in this last few months as they cut me back and cut me back, because I keep talking about Covid, until literally as I say, I can't even download 24 MB come about 9 PM, you know, source time. But at midnight if you want to stay up all night long you can start to use a bit of it. To train you, again how they train YOU for the product ‘eh, as they take more and more customers on, they train you to stay up all night long. This is all worked out by teams of these professionals, these manager classes and so on.)

(A: But anyway, it reminds me when the excuse for it is, for the slow speed, is Covid. No kidding you, Covid 19, that's why the speed was so slow. In other words, they've taken more and more clients on, that's why, it's got a fixed bandwidth, but it's to take more and more folk on, that's what it is. But they're blaming Covid for it. It's the excuse for everything today, isn't it, when it comes to money? But that's what this article here reminds me of too, it's very, very similar in some ways. So yeah, here's government agency mandating facemask use for virtual Zoom teleconferencing meetings. It says…)

Even the CDC doesn't recommend wearing a facemask while social distancing at home under most conditions.

Sheridan concluded, justifying the idiotic policy: "We ask staff to wear masks when on externally facing calls is that, taken out of context, a screenshot of a staff person or high ranking department official, if not properly attributed, could be misinterpreted to suggest that state employees are not properly following the Governor’s directive."

This is political correctness to the absurd extremes. This is what you're getting now. We are in Idiocracy. You understand that? We really are there, you know. In many ways, actually. So, there you go, wear a mask at all times, 'eh.

Technocracy Is Already Driving Tens Of Millions Into Extreme Poverty

technocracy.news / 12 Aug 2020

The global rise of extreme poverty was entirely predictable as Technocrats shut down the entire global economy in response to COVID-19. In the end, it will be hundreds of millions forced to live in abject squalor.

(A: No, I'd say it's a scam using Covid, that's how I'd word it. But the intention is to shut down the entire world economy, right.)

In America, the homeless population is exploding as people are displaced from homes and apartments. This too was fully predictable. (A: Everything is predictable, folks.) This underscores the sheer lack of concern for any other lives except those “saved” from COVID-19. ? TN Editor

As a domestic worker, Amsale Hailemariam knew from the inside out the luxury villas that had grown up around her simple shelter of raw metal and plastic sheeting. And in them, she saw how her country, Ethiopia, had transformed.

The single mother told herself, “Oh God, a day will come when my life will be changed, too.” The key lay in her daughter, just months from a career in public health, who studied how to battle the illnesses of want and hunger.

Then a virus mentioned in none of her textbooks arrived, and dreams faded for families, and entire countries, like theirs. Decades of progress in one of modern history’s greatest achievements, the fight against extreme poverty, are in danger of slipping away because of the COVID-19 pandemic. The world could see its first increase in extreme poverty in 22 years, further sharpening social inequities.

(A: I think it's a lot worse than it will be than 22 years.)

“We are living in a state where we are above the dead and below the living,” Amsale said, near tears. “This is not life.”

With the virus and its restrictions, up to 100 million more people globally could fall into the bitter existence of living on just $1.90 a day, according to the World Bank.

(A: The World Bank of course is all part of this. Because they were set up at the same organization that gave you the IMF and the Bank for International Settlements, the same group that ran the whole British Empire. So, India is struggling as well and Nigeria. In fact, I think Nigeria, it says...)

Nigeria, Africa's most populous nation, has surpassed India with the most people in extreme poverty — roughly half its citizens.

I tell ya, it's pretty bad. But that's what it's intended to do. What d'you expect when they mandatorily outlaw working [Alan chuckles.] during this whole thing for most folk? Everything is shut down. Well of course, they're getting what they wanted. They didn't shut things down with the pandemic in what they called the Spanish flu, you know. Actually, it was called the flu at the time. But it wasn't shut down. You don't close the economy down, which is guaranteed to cause incredible privation and poverty and hunger and illnesses and disease. M-hm-hm. That's why they did it, to make it all happen.

Food bank doles out tons of food as Texans, like many Americans, fight to feed themselves

cnn.com / 11 Aug 2020

(A: And so, it's happening in all other areas too as you well know.)

The food bank's latest handout at Fair Park comes after many Americans lost their $600-a-week unemployment benefit in July. Food bank officials targeted August, Hawthorne said, because they knew there'd be a dip in families' incomes, and food stamp benefits tend to run out early in the month. Since March, more than 3 million Texans have filed unemployment claims.

That's all over the place, the same idea, isn't it? But phew, well, they're not happy yet. They want it to be a lot worse than this, folks. M-hm. They're going to teach you a lesson you're never going to forget. It will affect you for your whole life long, however long that might be.

Another article here...

Pandemic? What Pandemic? 2020 Death Rate Lower Than Previous 5 Year Average in Ireland.

theirishsentinel.com / 13 Aug 2020 / By Helena Handbasket

In a recent Freedom of Information request sent to Mary Cunniffe at the Department of Employment Affairs and Social Protection in Ireland, some startling figures were disclosed to a Mr. McFadden, the gentleman who made the request.

He had enquired into the deaths registered from all causes since 2015. He was supplied with figures covering a 5 year period from January 2015 up to and including June 26th 2020. However, figures were only supplied up to the end of May 2020. As can be seen from the figures below, there is a huge discrepancy in what the Irish people have been told in relation to the Covid-19 ‘pandemic’ and the reality of the actual number of deaths recorded from all causes.

It is clear from these figures that there is an admission that there is no pandemic under even the latest reclassification of what constitutes a pandemic.

In fact, there is not even an epidemic.

As mentioned above, the figures supplied only cover January to May of each year respectively from 2015 to 2020, despite figures being available to June 26th. I would speculate that if those figures were supplied they would reveal an even more startling lie.

The total deaths in each year, January to May, are as follows:-

2015 – 13,752

2016 – 13,811

2017 – 13,484

2018 – 14,380

2019 – 13,234

2020 – 12,553

(A: It's actually been dropping, it's actually less now than it was all those previous years. This is the official count.)

As you can see, up to May 31st 2020, the total deaths in Ireland were the lowest on record since 2015.

(A: So there ya go.)

This is the biggest lie ever told to the people of Ireland and the wider world.

As of August 12th, official government figures put Covid-19 deaths at 1,774.

(A: The previous ones were the total deaths, you know, total deaths. So, they're trying to say that the total Covid deaths are…)

...Covid-19 deaths at 1,774.

This equates to just under 8 deaths per day attributed to Covid-19. However, we are aware that deaths attributed to Covid-19 have been hugely inflated with no differentiation made between people who have died with the infection or of the infection, (A: ...big difference.) the vast majority of deaths being in the elderly population, mainly in nursing homes and with 2 or more comorbidities. This is normal in any year from respiratory diseases such as the flu, or the common cold, which Covid-19 is simply another strain.

(A: By the way, you can't get the numbers for flu anymore because they're lumping them in as Covid. So there ya go. It's pretty bad, isn't it.)

THE WHOLE WORLD HAS BEEN LIED TO.

The whole world has been lied to it says here. But it's a massive agenda, and believe you me, all these, you wouldn't believe the organizations that all these politicians are tied into, globally, they're all on board together with this kind of thing as they always have been.

Kissinger, Henry Kissinger, the man who, you know, talked about the overpopulation problem that would happen in the Third World. In fact, he said that the greatest threat to the state, the enemy of the state would be overpopulation. Way back in the 1970s I think he said that. He's still going with his big plans for the world. You know, he mumbles a lot. He doesn't say much, but you almost have to get someone to decipher for you what he says. [Alan mimicking Kissinger's mumble.] That's how he speaks. It says…

Kissinger: Failure to establish post-COVID new world order 'could set the world on fire'

lifesitenews.com / 7 April 2020

NEW YORK, April 6, 2020 (LifeSiteNews) - A Nobel-winning American foreign policy expert has warned that the United States will have to join a global program to overcome the damage wrought by the coronavirus pandemic.

(A: So, what is it they said about, to bring in a world governmental system, isn't what he said, it would be awfully handy if we could use some of this to make it happen. Anyway...)

Henry Kissinger, 96, (A: There ya go, 96!...) was the national security adviser and secretary of state for Presidents Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford. For the rest of his long career, he has served as an adviser to political and business leaders. The Wall Street Journal published the iconic political thinker's response to the international health emergency on Friday, April 6.

Kissinger stated that "the world will never be the same after the coronavirus" and that the United States government will have to sustain "the public trust."

(A: No kidding.)

"In a divided country, efficient and farsighted government is necessary to overcome obstacles unprecedented in magnitude and global scope," he wrote.

"Sustaining the public trust is crucial to social solidarity, to the relation of societies with each other, and to international peace and stability.”

(A: Well maybe they should stop lying to us and they might get some trust, 'eh.)

The former official stated that the current U.S. administration has done “a solid job in avoiding immediate catastrophe” but that its “ultimate test” is stopping the virus and maintaining “public confidence in Americans’ ability to govern themselves.”

At the same time, Kissinger called for the government to launch “a parallel enterprise (A: …awfully important that.)

“a parallel enterprise for the transition to the post-coronavirus order.”

(A: …a parallel enterprise, 'eh. An enterprise that will coexist with the usual one, so it's an extra one, right.)

Coping effectively with the political and societal damage will take international collaboration, he warned.

(A: Which means you're going to be forking your money out, what's left of it, to Third World countries. Because that's the whole idea, is to bribe, the US has been running the world order, as the US sinks in to the world order that it creates, by funding it into existence and bribing everybody across the planet to take their people into it. That's how it's done, it's all through bribes. And blackmail.)

“Leaders are dealing with the crisis on a largely national basis, but the virus’s society-dissolving effects ..."

(A: As though the virus is causing all the dissolving effects of society. It's the whole scam itself that is causing the dissolving effects of society and locking everybody down.)

“While the assault on human health will — hopefully — be temporary, the political and economic upheaval it has unleashed could last for generations,” he continued.

(A: That's what they hope for, you see.)

“No country, not even the U.S., can in a purely national effort overcome the virus.

(A: So, he wants a...)

...a global collaborative vision and program. If we cannot do both in tandem, we will face the worst of each.”

(A: You can actually see the whole agenda here from this creep, 'eh, this dark character. He's very dark. As a child, and you used to have the black and white TV sets, and when this guy would come on, and there was always a buildup like, oh, Kissinger's coming out to speak on behalf of the president. That's all you saw, because he was the mouthpiece for the folk that they elected. And in black-and-white he looked, it was like there was a dark aura around the character, very dark indeed. Ominous. That's how you saw it as a child anyway.)

(A: And then the mumbling that he would do, you know. What do you think, Mr. Kissinger, of the situation in the Far East at the moment? And then he'd say [Alan mimicking Kissinger's mumble.] And it was like God had spoken or something the way the folk jumped around this character. That's the way they built him up. Again, like a super star. But he was part of the big CIA agenda, that knows where they were always planning to take the world. And they use people to fight the wars for them, you know, never realizing the whole intention is eventually to do away with the nations. But they'll use you all in the meantime. And then the last folk who figure it out who are doing it all are the ones that you're supposedly, are the bosses of you.)

(A: Kissinger, remember, is the guy who used the troops everywhere. And Kissinger also said the great famous statement when he was asked a question about the military, the troops and so on. He says, soldiers, they're dumb stupid animals who are used for foreign-policy. He told you the truth, that's how he sees you, soldiers are dumb stupid animals who are used for foreign-policy. Because you see, they're not given the truth as to why they're fighting. They're given simple propaganda, using their basic instincts to save-the-nation and go off and fight enemies, that's what they're told. But he tells you the truth, that's what he really thinks about you. But he's not alone. They're all the same. Uuuuuuuuugh. Yep. N-n-n.)

(A: And he goes into his usual diatribe, he loves to tell you about the walled city idea. It says…)

“The founding legend of modern government is a walled city protected by powerful rulers, sometimes despotic, other times benevolent, yet always strong enough to protect the people from an external enemy,” Kissinger wrote. (A: ...in his own articles and books.)

“Enlightenment thinkers reframed this concept, arguing that the purpose of the legitimate state is to provide for the fundamental needs of the people: security, order, economic well-being, and justice,” he continued

“The pandemic has prompted an anachronism, a revival of the walled city in an age when prosperity depends on global trade and movement of people.”

So, he goes on and on about how we have to change our values, etc. or actually sustain enlightenment values. Well you can't have much enlightenment if you can't afford the electricity and so the lights go off, 'eh, you're in the dark once more. The dark ages, in a sense, what they want to bring in is at least, at least, at least a temporary, it could be a few years, but dark ages, that's what they want to bring in, something you'll never forget. There ya go, that's from the king himself, 'eh.

This is a good article too…

Lab-Made? SARS-CoV-2 Genealogy Through the Lens of Gain-of-Function Research

thewatchtowers.org / 4 Aug 2020 / by Yuri Deigin

How I Learned to Start Worrying

He goes through this long investigation of the CoV2 and other known strains and so on and similar strains, etc. He tries to do it logically, again, through using the gain of function and so on and how it obviously didn't just evolve itself. We've got all the evidence too from the moving of the coronavirus, or for a coronavirus to Wuhan, we know that happened. Because we've got the evidence there of the US financing it to be put there, including Fauci okaying it and so on. And then it was modified there again, and we've got the woman's name to who worked on it, who had done similar stuff before and altering, putting, altering different enzymes in it for gain of function basically. Quite something. They've got the furin sites, they call it, furin sites or furin sites [Different pronunciations.] where you can see it's been altered, the actual virus, these four additions, 'eh. It's a good investigation into it. I'll put this one up for those who like deeper information concerning the disease itself or the virus itself.

Another article I'll add today too is about propagandists that work for other nations. Often you don't know that they work for other nations. [Alan chuckles.] Actually, I'd say there's an awful lot that work for other nations at the moment. But this one goes into some of the history of electronic propaganda, like radio. It even goes back to Tokyo Rose that she was called in World War II, it gives the history there. But then he goes into other characters who ended up working for an enemy, at least for some period of time, and they go into the reports about John McCain.

The late John McCain, who was caught, was a prisoner of war and held in Vietnam. But he did turn out a lot of… [Alan chuckles.] a lot of… um, propaganda pieces out, put it that way, on film, that broadcast to America and the world at the time too. I remember Bill Cooper went through a lot of it too, years ago on McCain and he says you could never ever trust the man. Never. This article is in a similar vein to it as well. He goes into the histories of McCain and how they made him a hero when he got back, you know, and he was on crutches at the time. Literally, he had a bad name amongst the POWs, they knew what he'd been up to, a lot of them. But as I say, Bill Cooper did go through a good talk about him.

John McCain: When "Tokyo Rose" Ran for President - unz.com / 9 March 2015

This article is awfully good because what you can see in America, and there's no real conviction in politics now. People go into it are generally psychopaths anyway. They are. That's taken for granted now, that's modern politics. You've always had a lot of psychopaths in it, but it's way more than ever now today. They tend to gravitate towards the party that they think is going to win. Because they sniff the public opinion, or media opinion, or the elite's opinion. And they all work for the elites all the time. This one's about Kamala Harris. It's interesting. And I don't care about politics, left or right, they're all psychopathic. And they're not statesmen anymore, you just don't find statesmen. But Kamala Harris, she's never found a ladder, never seen a ladder that she didn't like, you know. And of course, she'd join any side, that seems to be on the winning streak, that's how, you can smell it on her. But these pat slogans that she comes out with, the communist slogans, are just something else. This one says…

Report: Kamala Harris's Ancestors Owned Slaves, Too

breitbart.com / 10 July 2019

(A: ...for those who didn't know. You often find this is the case with the characters that are leading you. In the left wing for instance, it's very much like too, what's his name, Dawkins, who was again, the humanist who was always putting out ads about, against God and leaving God and so on. Again, a kind of technocrat type character. And then you see his family, his family crest. It's a slave, a black slave, with a rope around him. Because his family was in the slaving business, for those who don't know that. But here's, Harris's ancestors owned slaves too.)

The ancestors of Sen. Kamala Harris (D-CA) owned slaves — according to her father, Stanford University economics professor Donald Harris.

(A: He's a professor there, right.)

The information was reported Wednesday by the Washington Free Beacon, citing a genealogical report written by Harris's father, Stanford University economics professor Donald Harris.

The Free Beacon noted:

Donald Harris, a Stanford University economics professor, revealed in 2018 that his grandmother was a descendant of Hamilton Brown, the namesake of Brown's Town in northern Jamaica.

"My roots go back, within my lifetime, to my paternal grandmother Miss Chrishy (née Christiana Brown, descendant of Hamilton Brown who is on record as plantation and slave owner and founder of Brown's Town)," he wrote in a post for Jamaica Global.

A research archive of Jamaican records indicate that at one point in 1817, Hamilton Brown owned scores of slaves. The majority were brought in from Africa, though he also owned many Creole slaves.

Harris is among the leading contenders for the Democratic Party presidential nomination. If elected next year, she would become the first black female president — and the first Asian-American president, she has claimed, based on her mother's Indian origins.

(A: It's interesting too because I've met quite a few from Jamaica who were in the kind of ruling elite of Jamaica and a lot of them were from Indian ancestry. Because at one time when Britain ruled these countries, a lot of them came in from India and they became overseers for the British government, on behalf of the British government. You find them in some parts of Africa too. Some of them I've met in Canada who are still there and visit in Canada at the time. One of the main guys, he was from Indian ancestry, very proud of it. But God was he racist on the Jamaicans. It was incredible. So, it's interesting to see this tremendous racism from overseers again, 'eh. But anyway, there you go. So, [Alan chuckles.] then you go to…)

NBC News reported Monday that Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-KY) was descended from slave owners.

But there you go; they've all been at it at some time or another. And a lot of the black ones too were slave owners though. And even in ancient Rome there are some thereof, have the big cenotaph there and huge cemeteries in fact, and one of them there, one of the most successful slaveowners, who was a black guy, in ancient Rome. So, there's nothing new. There's no particular group got preponderance authority as slaveowners. It's been across the board, across the world. In fact, the word slave comes from Slav, and the Slavs were often some of the more chosen folk to get picked on to be slaves at one point by another certain group. Awfully important.

And I mentioned before the…

The 2006 Origins of the Lockdown Idea

aier.org / 15 May 2020

(A: Right? I'll put it up once again for folk, and it says that…)

Now begins the grand effort, on display in thousands of articles and news broadcasts daily, somehow to normalize the lockdown and all its destruction of the last two months. We didn't lock down almost the entire country in 1968/69, 1957, or 1949-1952, or even during 1918. But in a terrifying few days in March 2020, it happened to all of us, causing an avalanche of social, cultural, and economic destruction that will ring through the ages.

There was nothing normal about it all. We'll be trying to figure out what happened to us for decades hence.

How did a temporary plan to preserve hospital capacity turn into two-to-three months (A: ...that was then.) of near-universal house arrest that ended up causing worker furloughs at 256 hospitals,

(A: ... and so on and so on. And they talk about it...)

Let's start with the phrase social distancing, which has mutated into forced human separation. The first I had heard it was in the 2011 movie Contagion. (A: Which is a kind of familiarization predictive programming thing for the public.) The first time it appeared in the New York Times was February 12, 2006:

(A: ...this term, right.)

If the avian flu goes pandemic while Tamiflu and vaccines are still in short supply, experts say,

(A: Tamiflu, they made fortunes off it. I mean, in Toronto with the SARS epidemic, they kept showing you the Tamiflu, oh my God Tamiflu, if we just had lots of Tamiflu, we'd be okay and stuff. And they told us after, months and months, actually maybe a few years after, they said, it was completely ineffectual anyway. [Alan laughing.] But they wouldn't tell you that at the time, 'eh, when they're making money off it.)

... “social distancing,” which is the new politically correct way of saying “quarantine.”

But distancing also encompasses less drastic measures, like wearing face masks, staying out of elevators — and the [elbow] bump. Such stratagems, those experts say, will rewrite the ways we interact, at least during the weeks when the waves of influenza are washing over us.

(A: Then they go through the different things with George Bush and so on, what happened with him. But here's how it happened with the 6-foot idea, 6 foot spacing, the 2-meter idea. It says…)

The New York Times (April 22, 2020) tells the story from there:

Fourteen years ago, two federal government doctors, Richard Hatchett and Carter Mecher, met with a colleague at a burger joint in suburban Washington for a final review of a proposal they knew would be treated like a piñata: telling Americans to stay home from work and school the next time the country was hit by a deadly pandemic.

When they presented their plan not long after, it was met with skepticism and a degree of ridicule by senior officials, who like others in the United States had grown accustomed to relying on the pharmaceutical industry, with its ever-growing array of new treatments, to confront evolving health challenges.

Drs. Hatchett and Mecher were proposing instead that Americans in some places might have to turn back to an approach, self-isolation, first widely employed in the Middle Ages.

How that idea — born out of a request by President George W. Bush to ensure the nation was better prepared for the next contagious disease outbreak — became the heart of the national playbook for responding to a pandemic is one of the untold stories of the coronavirus crisis.

It required the key proponents — Dr. Mecher, a Department of Veterans Affairs physician, and Dr. Hatchett, an oncologist turned White House adviser — to overcome intense initial opposition.

It brought their work together with that of a Defense Department team assigned to a similar task.

(A: So, it's the Defense Department that's behind all this.)

And it had some unexpected detours, including a deep dive into the history of the 1918 Spanish flu and an important discovery kicked off by a high school research project pursued by the daughter of a scientist at the Sandia National Laboratories. (A: ...which is part of the military-industrial complex, this is the daughter.)

The concept of social distancing is now intimately familiar to almost everyone. But as it first made its way through the federal bureaucracy in 2006 and 2007, it was viewed as impractical, unnecessary and politically infeasible.

Notice that in the course of this planning, neither legal nor economic experts were brought in to consult and advise. Instead it fell to Mecher (formerly of Chicago and an intensive care doctor with no previous expertise in pandemics) and the oncologist Hatchett.

But what is this mention of the high-school daughter of 14? Her name is Laura M. Glass, and she recently declined to be interviewed when the Albuquerque Journal did a deep dive of this history.

Laura, with some guidance from her dad, (A: Some guidance, 'eh! Sure, she got some guidance. She got a little more than some.) devised a computer simulation that showed how people – family members, co-workers, students in schools, people in social situations – interact. What she discovered was that school kids come in contact with about 140 people a day, more than any other group. Based on that finding, her program showed that in a hypothetical town of 10,000 people, 5,000 would be infected during a pandemic if no measures were taken, but only 500 would be infected if the schools were closed.

Laura’s name appears on the foundational paper arguing for lockdowns and forced human separation.

(A: There you go, military-industrial complex, by her dad, right, [Alan chuckles.] who HELPED her. No, he did it, guaranteeing a career for her to the right schools, 'eh.)

That paper is Targeted Social Distancing Designs for Pandemic Influenza (2006). It set out a model for forced separation and applied it with good results backwards in time to 1957. They conclude with a chilling call for what amounts to a totalitarian lockdown, all stated very matter-of-factly.

(A: So, they go through all this stuff. Yeah, a computer program designed by a guy who worked for the military-industrial complex, did it for his daughter to make sure she's got a great future ahead, right. So, his name was Robert J. Glass, the father...)

The primary author of this paper was Robert J. Glass, a complex-systems analyst with Sandia National Laboratories. He had no medical training, much less an expertise in immunology or epidemiology.

That explains why Dr. D.A. Henderson, “who had been the leader of the international effort to eradicate smallpox,” completely rejected the whole scheme.

Says the NYT:

Dr. Henderson was convinced that it made no sense to force schools to close or public gatherings to stop. Teenagers would escape their homes to hang out at the mall. School lunch programs would close, and impoverished children would not have enough to eat. Hospital staffs would have a hard time going to work if their children were at home.

So, it was rejected by the guy. But that's the military, the guy worked for the military, so the military then approached them, and they said they'd incorporate it into their control for possible pandemics of the future, you see. There ya go. M-m-m. There you go, ALL theoretical, hm, by computers and so on. And the military got involved in it, and again the CIA was involved too, of course they were. But the 6 feet apart has got no, NO practical and factual reasons for distancing like that at all. Completely designed by computer. And just pushed out there. There you go.

As I say too, remember, I'll put up the article, or the link to the John Pilger, very good report on the National Health Service, the destruction. But of course, he doesn't go into the fact too that Britain, being a complete socialist country, even though the corporations benefit from socialism so well because it's all taxpayer run, right, then they get the money from the taxpayer things, project. He doesn't go into the fact that for about 30 years at least, maybe longer than that, Britain was literally an open door for people from all over the planet to come for operations and medical treatment, for free. So much so that countless articles have been written over many years that the folk at home couldn't even get treatment themselves, the ones who are paying for it all. He doesn't touch that at all unfortunately.

The Dirty War on the NHS - johnpilger.com

The Dirty War on the NHS – video - vimeo.com / 11 Aug 2020

[Alan chuckles.] And you can't have a National Health Service and bring the world in there too. Even with the European Union, they didn't have such good medical systems themselves and they were sending all the people across there to get treatment at the National Health Service. So you know, and again too, it was also taken for granted that they'd start training people, taking people from other countries, Third World countries, and give them jobs in the National Health Service, rather than train people inside Britain themselves, even as nursing staff and so on. That was part of the problem too.

He doesn't touch these other things. But he's definitely dead on with the private, public/private partnerships as they privatize the systems of the health service. And even gave a lot of nursing staff at some hospitals, through these trial ones, the East Anglia and so on, give them… At least I think it's East Anglia, don't take it to the bank, mind you. But they actually got the nursing staff and give them shares in the private company to make them work harder to get patients OUT of the hospitals fast as possible, because it was, they get more money, the more turnover they had the more money they would get for the private business.

Then of course, this is a typical strategy they have in business, then they would bring about a competition system and publish which nursing sister had kicked out more patients that week than others ones, and then they'd be competing for the money, you see. You can't do that with health industries. You can't have that with health. Health is not business. It shouldn't be business, really. It's above all that. But the problem is, everything is so corrupt. And if you even started off with a perfect system to begin with, the sharks move in and destroy it very quickly. That's across the board in every area of society today. It's terrible.

Now I think I'm probably over my time anyway. Remember as I say, send a few bucks my way, cuttingthroughthematrix.com. If you can. It will help me tick along here. And I'll continue as long as I can to get my information out. Even if they cut off my Internet altogether, because this is all part of the strategy as folk who are speaking out, as they go for their servers now, then I've got other means too, it will cost me more money again to get my other folk to put my information out for me. Which I could still do, mind you. So, if you could help me, send me money to keep ticking here, I'll do as best as I can and put out the information.

Remember, this is history and this kind of stuff, this kind of information can be held for years and years by people. As long as it's put out, because someone has to record what's happening, someone. And lots of people should be doing that. For future use for folk, whatever hell or heaven comes down the pike, it's got to be recorded. All the details of it. All the fakery. All the lying and the deceits of all government agencies. And the collusion of all media, of all the big media, who were given instructions to cause increased anxiety in their reporting, CAUSE IT to make them comply by causing them anxiety, frightened the people into compliance. How disgusting is that!

Anyway, I hope you hang in there, folks. And keep your heads. Keep calm about things. Don't panic either. And don't turn on each other, if you're living together as couples or whatever, or families, don't turn on each other because these are stressful times. It's meant to cause stress. It's meant to get everybody turning on each other.

And keep cool and calm, because it's not over yet, remember. The last time they did it with the mass vaccination programs, the people did have enough and say no. And they dumped millions of these, some of the vaccines, millions were dumped in a river in the States by the way. That's another story.

So, keep sane and make sure you have a coterie of friends. And swear to help each other out. Help each other out, come what may. Don't fall out with each other. Because you will need each other as time goes on. They want a really long lock down here, and a different system to come out of this eventually. And it will not be... Fauci said it, the little man himself, you know, little Foxy Fauci said himself at the beginning, things would never be the same again. He just knew it all, just a coincidence of course. And they mean it, they mean it. It's not meant to be the same again. It's to be a new world order, according to Kissinger and all the rest of these characters.

So, stay safe, help each other out, and don't panic. Don't panic. Keep calm. And remember, we've still all got each other yet, remember, we've still got that ability to at least communicate.

So, for myself Alan Watt from Ontario, Canada, it's good night and may your God or your gods go with you.

Topics of show covered in following links:

Cheap, frequent COVID tests could be ‘akin to vaccine,’ professor says

news.harvard.edu / 11 Aug 2020

US developing coronavirus strain for human 'challenge' trials

news.yahoo.com / 14 Aug 2020

A third of NHS staff in two hospital units were infected with coronavirus without showing symptoms, study finds independent.co.uk / 12 Aug 2020

English versions – ACU 2020 640 European Doctors

acu2020.org (alternate link provided) produced by The Rockefeller Foundation

thewatchtowers.org / 18 April 2020

“Lockstep” Written 10 years ago chronicles how to bring the world down with a pandemic - video

youtube.com / 16 March 2020

Kupier

geospatialworld.net / 4 Aug 2020

Pfizer and Moderna To Prepare The Nation For “Mass Vaccinations”

collective-evolution.com / 10 Aug 2020 (alternate link provided)

Big Brother's 'Location Harvesting' Contractors, Which Tracks 'Hundreds Of Millions' Of Phones

zerohedge.com / 8 Aug 2020

Spectrum For 5G

technocracy.news

Coronavirus

forbes.com / 23 April 2020

D-Link announces launch of a screening camera to detect skin-surface temperature in public places

mobihealthnews.com / 10 June 2020

Nashville councilwoman wants attempted murder charges for people who don't wear face mask, pass on COVID-19

theblaze.com / 5 Aug 2020

Police Wrestle Australian Woman to the Ground for Not Wearing a Mask

breitbart.com / 11 Aug 2020

‘Mask mouth’ is a seriously stinky side effect of wearing masks

nypost.com / 5 Aug 2020

Virtual Zoom Meetings

zerohedge.com / 13 Aug 2020

Millions Into Extreme Poverty

technocracy.news / 12 Aug 2020

Food bank doles out tons of food as Texans, like many Americans, fight to feed themselves

cnn.com / 11 Aug 2020

Pandemic? What Pandemic? 2020 Death Rate Lower Than Previous 5 Year Average in Ireland.

theirishsentinel.com / 13 Aug 2020

Kissinger: Failure to establish post-COVID new world order ‘could set the world on fire’

lifesitenews.com / 7 April 2020

Lab-Made? SARS-CoV-2 Genealogy Through the Lens of Gain-of-Function Research

thewatchtowers.org / 4 Aug 2020

John McCain: When &quot;Tokyo Rose&quot; Ran for President

unz.com / 9 March 2015

Report: Kamala Harris’s Ancestors Owned Slaves, Too

breitbart.com / 10 July 2019

The 2006 Origins of the Lockdown Idea

aier.org / 15 May 2020

The Dirty War on the NHS

johnpilger.com

The Dirty War on the NHS - video

vimeo.com / 11 Aug 2020

Trump inks $1.5b deal with Moderna for potential coronavirus vaccine

newzealandnews.net / 18 Aug 2020

U.S. funding of global health strengthens COVID-19 fight (June 25)

ge.usembassy.gov / 25 June 2020

Test “Persuasive Messages For COVID-19 Vaccine Uptake”

collective-evolution.com / 3 Aug 2020 (alternate link provided)

Turn Vaccines Into A Means Of Killing

theirishsentinel.com / 17 March 2020

See (Shadow Gate)

youtube.com / 16 Aug 2020

Rockefeller Foundation - Scenarios for the Future of Technology and International Development

ia802609.us.archive.org /

stepping up action to increase vaccine confidence

youtube.com / 12 Sept 2019

Aug 23, 2020 "Cutting Through the Matrix" with Alan Watt (Blurb, i.e. Educational Talk): " CONOLOGY on Parade with Masters Who Persuade

Hi folks I'm Alan Watt and this is Cutting Through the Matrix on August 23, 2020. Welcome to my world, where I explain the sciences behind the system that runs pretty well everything. At the top of course, you have conology, a term I coined years ago to do with the art of persuasion by the elite using professionals to give you your opinions and to fool you. In any good con, we've all heard about confidence tricksters, it's much higher than even the confidence trickster because confidence tricksters never work in such big teams for their stings. But what you do find is that they pick their target and when they pick their target the target must basically get involved in the game and consent to it. Generally, they think they're going to get something for nothing. That's how it generally works.

You can see how in 20 years really, before that as well of course, with free this and free that, if you buy 2 you can get 10 and all this nonsense to do with shopping and saving. It's called 'mousetraps' in the trade as they call it in public relations and marketing. So, they offer you all these little things to pull you in. And when they pull you in, they want your name, address and phone number, your DNA and everything else, you know, maybe even your firstborn, it depends what you're getting. And you comply with it thinking you're going to win.

It's based on winning, the game theory too, on winning, this idea that everybody's out for themselves, and they like to win. And sure enough, I've met people who are addicted to gambling. Maybe lots of you out there too may have similar experiences with people they know or maybe even relatives. It's a real addiction. You'll meet them; they're not into heavy drinking generally and things like that. It's just gambling. It's the feeling that they're winning something. That's the big high and the release of tremendous endorphins, and they feel fantastic at the time. They've done something. They've got value suddenly. Of course, it doesn't last long because they've got to win again, if they can. But the house never loses as they say in gambling. It doesn't matter, if you keep going back and back, you lose it all again and a lot more besides that.

It really is a bad addiction. Some good books have been put out there by people who were addicted to gambling and who've got out of it with a lot of help, etc. But it shows you how it destroys their lives. And don't forget, you've got to remember too, there's a whole industry based around gambling. Massive industry. You don't think about it, except what you see like roulette tables or horses or dogs at the dog tracks and so on. But it's a massive science behind it too, to prompt the customer to the next step, to the next step and the next step. Always with the lure of winning something extra. As I say, a whole science behind it.

Well, it's the same with all conology. You are the target and governments go to no ends using your tax money to employ people, who are awfully good at what they do. Some are awful as well mind you, they come up with children's ideas that have been done before, but they're well-connected. Because we live in a terribly corrupt society. But yeah, these persuaders, these advanced type persuaders understand behaviorism, and psychology, and consumerism with the Bernays techniques too that he got from his uncle supposedly. His uncle Freud, of how the unconscious drives, there's a lot of drives in the unconscious to give you, again, self-worth and things like that. Again getting back to winning and what you want and what you'd like to have, but you know, if you've got common sense, that you could never afford this, or if you could afford it you might not be able to afford the upkeep on a very expensive top class Rolls-Royce or something like that, or even insurance on it for that matter, so you don't do it. Generally. Generally, you don't.

So the idea is to make you really, really greedy and through motivational techniques, because that's what the motivational people do to you with their hand flapping on stages or run up and down, to stop you thinking for yourself, to make you feel excited and then they sell you the idea or the product. And the idea is the product. And you buy it from them, the techniques of how to do it. But it's short-lived again, it's a very short-lived idea that you're omnipotent to an extent. You can browbeat anybody if you just scream loud enough and keep insisting and demanding. That's what most of it's really based on. And they produce an awful lot of unpleasant characters, who are all fed up with them. I actually met lots of salesman like that too, and women too. Women are better at it, actually. If you look at the drug companies, they employ attractive young women, who are dressed to the nines with the best expensive clothing to go around the doctors' offices, and they drop off, after having friendly little chitchat on first name basis and so on, they drop off lots of free drugs to try, by their drug companies for the doctors to start dishing out. Everything works on basic psychology and human nature and you exploit it. It works awfully well in fact.

So, getting back to conology, everything is run by the art of conology. Many years ago, I remember reading a book about politics, one of the many books. I was never really into politics; I knew instinctively it was a lot of nonsense and a technique of just managing the general public for some other group obviously above them. Because the people you met or you heard about or saw on TV, weren't the brightest. They were pattern merchants as we call them, again, salesman types. But they were not the brightest of all. If they were tripped up by a good reporter in a very quick interview, generally what they call a flash interview on the steps of Number 10 or whatever it was, or their parliament building, they'd often quip back the wrong thing and would get in trouble. So, they were always taught by their handlers, and the politicians by the way all have handlers [Alan chuckles.] to manage them.

They even have acting lessons. Again, they put it, they charge the taxpayers for their acting lessons. I did the article a few years ago on that one in Britain, and other countries do it. Of course, they're all taught, again, never to answer a question directly. If it's sensitive at all, or it's going to commit you to any agenda, you just answer the question you wished they had asked you. That's why when you hear them getting asked straight questions, they answer back with... What are they talking about? Well, that's their wish question, you see, it's nothing to do with what was asked of them. It's all a con.

Again, the public, to even bother voting, you've got to understand young people, if they're idealistic, and have got over the destructive phase of revolution, you'd think that they'd eventually catch on and say wait a minute here, it's all corrupt. And you'd hope that you'd get even further and realize that the revolutionary leaders are all corrupt as well, and they are on the take from much higher powers, generally the very ones you are protesting, are managing it at the top. I'm not kidding you. [Alan chuckles.] That's how it really works. It's a vastly different, reality is a vastly different system than what you think it is, what you're trained to think it is.

Getting back to the idea of conology, they give you new normals. Now you see a rapid introduction of new normals all the time. All the time. Years ago, I wrote poems about ‘new normals’, years and years and years ago, to come up with the term, and it's widely used since. But you'll find that the folk do adapt rather quickly now, especially under panic. You know, the herd instinct as they call it, and the herd mentality, it's all aimed at the herd, at the general population. So, is all kinds of warfare, and weaponry by the way, you know.

If you look at bio weaponry, biowarfare, it's designed to hit the most amount of people possible. Sometimes. But even then, the ones that are designed for the maximum damage on an enemy population in biowarfare won't get everybody. They accept that there's always individuals have some kind of immune system difference that enables them to escape it. Sometimes it's a gene or a pair of genes, that's enough to get them, make them survive it. So, you seldom have a truly 100% cull, you see.

But you also have ethnic specific viruses. I did the talk I think in the late 90s on the reporters that would enter, I think it was from the Telegraph perhaps. The Telegraph newspaper in Britain was well connected with the military-industrial complex. Even for good public relations for them military or special forces, they would often use the Telegraph and tip them off, or even get them to put out little, if something came out they didn't want they get the Telegraph to do an in-depth interview, that type of thing, which would cover the tracks and exposed some stuff at the same time, to keep the public happy.

But a reporter did go into, and I think it was the Telegraph, I could be wrong, to Porton Downs. Other ones went into occasional PR pieces. They did talk to scientists, some of the scientists that worked on creating deadly viruses and bacterium and the anthrax and everything else. And who tested it on animal populations, and perhaps, we never know because they'll never admit it naturally, on human populations in other countries, in Third World countries. That was common. And I'm sure still common today, you know. I'll touch on that later perhaps. Because it's even in some awfully good fictional works as well. Well, semi-fictional works. About using test populations in Africa for instance where they can contain it. When it's a more remote area they could contain it and observe it and study it better. Ebola came out that way too, by the way.

So once again, we're living in a very controlled system. The world to them is a laboratory. The general population are the lab rats in their laboratory, and mice. And even the terminology that they use with the population is similar. You see, there's real beings, the important people, the somebodies, and then there's the rest, you see, the lab rats, and the mob and all the other terms that they have for the general population.

Politicians have it too. Politicians at the top, well, all the leaders belong to the same clubs, especially one big club at the top. Caroll Quigley did go through that, and others have done it since. About the Council on Foreign Relations or Royal Institute of International Affairs, and all that, the guys who gave you world government ideas and work towards it, up to the present time. They see the world as theirs. They have no problem employing great people in academia. In other words, great minds in their particular fields, to utilize the techniques of mass persuasion on the general population, cultural change of all kinds on the general population.

And the sad truth is, with enough time and money behind it and repetition, they can generally get the public to accept whatever it is they're pushing. And yet, most things that are used to persuade you to do something that perhaps you shouldn't do, the terms that Aldous Huxley talks about on his interview with Mike Wallace. He said that the techniques that they had then, in the 1950s, were effective of persuading the public, and he said, and perhaps these techniques that are so persuasive and effective that they're making people accept things that perhaps it's not in their best interest to accept.

Well, it's much worse today with the techniques that are used. You have a consolidation of pretty well all big media, and entertainment too. Remember, the European Union video I put up where they had a lot of the big players there who were persuaders on their own populations that is, the ministers, the people who were appointed to do this, that and the other for the European Union. They had them therefore the vaccinations, you see. That's what the title of their talk was really was pro vaccination basically, we are vaccs. You'll hear as I mentioned last week, one of them actually mentioning that, amongst the many things and programs that they're unrolling on the public and unleashing on the public, was using taxpayers money again, unlimited money to insert all these messages into dramas in fiction and plays and all the TV stations and so on. And they would fund these plays and so on and just put in, you know, like, ‘disease’ and ‘immunity’ and ‘herd immunity’, and ‘death’ and all that kind of stuff, and ‘comply’, and ‘vaccination’, vaccination, vaccination, over and over, and it doesn’t matter what kind of play it was or movie or whatever, just get it IN there. That was nothing new because you see, this is used all the time on you with many topics. You see.

And getting back, and I'm still in the whole art of conology. Because again, the first thing is to give a fake reality to the general public. It's quite easy to do because, you see, your parents, or parent, it depends, because you're under war remember, this is a war scenario, constant war, a changing battlefield of war all the time, financial, with the family too involved, or destruction of the family, or the new family as they want to call it as well. They came out with the 'nuclear' family, and now they have the real nuclear family because they can see right through you, believe you me, and know everything about you. [Alan chuckles.] That is the true nuclear family they were really talking about.

People don't know, you think you're growing up, in your own little bubble again in your generation, you look around to the left and the right and there's all the bubbles of your generation going along with you, like a straight line, you see. Just ahead of you you've got the older bubbles living in their generations, and everything that was normal to them is drifting off, and you are replacing it with your new normals. Which you think you all do yourself. Somehow, somehow you think that you designed the clothing their wearing. No, you didn't. Somehow you think you designed the hairstyles they're wearing. No, you didn't. Somehow you think that you designed the music that was promoted. But you know you didn't. Because you see, there are institutions above all these things, this is all part of the culture industry, and they decide what's going to be pushed and what isn't, you see.

Do you really think that suddenly, suddenly, after lots of, you know, different music and so on, and then you had rock and all the rest of it, and you had the glam rock and all that, until the guys were, oh, there was more hair lacquer on them than hair I think, and things like that, it went down the tubes. But you went right down to rap eventually. Just angry, angry, angry sounds, you know, that was, it had double meanings.

I talked about years ago, about how you rap it up. And the spoken word is awfully important. The spell is the spelling, you see, you can cast a spell by spelling. That's why the language is so [Alan chuckles.] it was so used before by different groups, and occult groups too that run societies. They had little winks and their nods as they talk to each other, and you get a different meaning from it. But they literally had this in the 1700s and 1800s. And movements against it. And you had people who analyzed the words, awfully important because it meant a lot, you see. The spoken word in court is what matters, when it's uttered, you see. The judge doesn't ask you to spell it, he asks you to speak it. And you're judged by every word that comes out of your mouth. That goes way back to the Bible too.

So, people, but people get confused with it. And you think of the English language, why on earth would it have so many words where one word could be spelled differently two or three times, but uttered the same way? It's there for a purpose obviously. And it is, actually is. They don't really need such coding today, so much, because they are so inter-wired with the encrypted programs for their own communications at the top, waaay beyond anything we can imagine. And it's really true enough, [Alan chuckles.] that folk can't imagine how far advanced all these things are today.

But the spell is spelling, it casts a spell. And you get back into, so now you can also use the fact that words can mean something else on the general public when you want them to buy something. Again, the subconscious takes it a different way, you can manipulate the mind by using subconscious or almost, almost unconscious but subconscious suggestions to them without them twigging on to it, as to why they suddenly want to drink this brand of beer or something, a sudden urge for it. Of course, the easiest things to talk about are candies and cakes and things like that, it's very, people are very suggestible that way, very simple. But again, the language is awfully, awfully important. Remember, language also can be visual. Colors are a language as well, for those who hadn't figured that out as well. Colors are very important.

You're living in a world that has not been explained to you. In fact, great pains are made to make sure that you don't really learn them as well, what's really going on. Again, Jacques Ellul, tremendous philosopher, very straightforward and honest about things, who is deceased now, but he talked about propaganda and how you must get the children early for an initial indoctrination. You think about it, what are you doing, if you have, if you are in power, if you had, if you are part of a structure of power that manages millions of people in the nation, then what you have to do is standardize thought. If you can standardize thought, then you're pretty well guaranteed, not exactly, certainly by persuading, but pretty well guaranteed eventually you'll have a population growing up, if you continue at it, they can come to conclusions, predetermined conclusions by the rulers, which are what they want you to come to. It's very easy then, you see.

That's why most folk around you today, they really have never questioned these things, they've never really figured it out, they can't imagine what you're talking about half the time, they really can't. They can't imagine what you're talking about. What are you talking about? They've never heard about all these terms and these things that you say happened, they never heard of them. And yet, here you are, you're telling it to them, and it's completely foreign to them. It's outside their ken as they say. They'll test it out and say, you know so-and-so said this, you know, what d'you think? And the problem off to them. And they'll say, oh that's crazy. Because those who've never really, it's like a vaccination, if it's taken on them, it's worked as they say, then that's it, and their indoctrination has really worked. Their initial indoctrination worked awfully well at school, then it's built upon through the curriculum that's drummed, or dun, they used to call it dunned, into them. So, it's worked awfully well.

Why should, I mentioned before, why should, hhhch, the tribe that you're born into, because you still think tribally, like a small tribe, even though you're in a big city or a nation with millions you still think like a small tribe, that's your nature, it's in you. It doesn't matter what country you're in. You take it for granted as a mammal that the older ones are going to take care of you and warn you and look after you. That's what all, how all mammals were, you see, you expect the elders, the parents, put it that way, to take care and warn you it's bad or dangerous to you. And if you don't get the initial indoctrination by the parent, they'll walk right up to something that's going to eat them without any fear, you see. That's how all mammals work. Well, all the things that makes us tick, that's well studied, is what's picked apart in order to exploit us, by using our nature, you see. So it's impossible for most folk to think that those at the top that you voted in, or your parents, or your grandparents or whatever it happens to be, put in there, are not working for your best interests. It's terribly sad. That's really how it works. It's very simple.

Then when they want to have you go off to war for a few people at the top that want resources or control over energy supplies or whatever it happens to be, they'll use the nation, and they'll use the taxpayer to fund it all, so that the big corporations can profit. But most folk never figure that out either. They're given, oh, we have to go to war against these people because they're the worst thing that ever hit the world since Satan, you see. They're given very simple propaganda because if it's too complicated a story it can be picked apart. So, you keep it simple until you're just left with great chasms, which you can't jump over. That's how they do it. It's very simple stuff.

So, all the changes that are happening today to me are boring because I talked about them at least in the 90s, publicly. Before that, even in smaller groups and so on. I knew it all because obviously, and they do publish all their stuff, I really did the reading, the real stuff, I don't copy somebody else's bio, I just really did it. I talked about in the 90s on radio shows and I says, you know, this is what's coming down the pike, because they publish the stuff, and this is what they wanted to happen.

As I say, the Council on Foreign Relations, as an example, and the coterie of big think tanks, they have thousands of them across the whole planet, they have them in every nation in the world, I think without exception. They have the think tanks, that all work together because they're all working, they're all preselected at the top. Just like the politicians in every nation are preselected at the top. As Quigley said, all we need is one or two people, like a president or vice president, or Prime Minister and Deputy Prime Minister or whatever, in every PARTY, SO it doesn't matter who gets in, they're on the same agenda. That's why the agenda never changes.

You would think long ago the public would've said to the United Nations, that's it, we've had enough with you, with this international, strange international communism you're pushing. Where you won't even let developing nations do their own thing and manage it themselves. It wouldn't, there's no way they'd be allowed to do that, they just won't, they won't allow it at all. It's like sustainability, they're going to keep Africa frozen basically in time because ‘too much energy would destroy what's left of the nation’, etc. It's for depopulation, that's what it is. Of course, it is.

But it isn't just Africa. The eugenicists started with Europe, the advanced nations, technically, technological and agriculturally and so on advanced nations, to sterilize them first. Interesting that, isn't it. That's what makes people say, well who on earth are these folk that manage us? Well, they obviously don't like you. But even the ones that seem to be born amongst you, are they really of you or not? [Alan chuckles.] if they ask these questions, how can they have no affinity with you?

Well, psychopaths don't. We know that. Psychopaths don't have affinity for you. And some of them seem to revel in the ideas of massive, mass culling of the planet, you know, from the days of Thomas Malthus right up to the present. We must remember too the Huxley's, I think it was the beginning, the guy who made his name actually was Thomas Huxley, Sir Thomas Huxley, he was knighted eventually, who became Darwin's bulldog to push the Darwinian theories after Darwin died. Because it tied in with this idea that they had been talking about for an awful long time, many, many centuries, long before Darwin, of who was superior to others, within nations too, you see. Nobility had always saw that as a right.

They were from God, remember, they thought they were appointed by God, if you were royalty in Europe. It's a good one, that one, isn't it? You can't touch me, God put me here. Argue with that then, 'eh. That became a real problem with lots of kings and queens over time. They could do no wrong because after all, since they were from God, God had appointed them, you know, that's what they always said, that they could do anything they wanted to. After all, they're acting kind of like... like a.... general of God, so you could do what you wanted to do. And they did. At times. I mean, they would literally give whole chunks of lands away, like parts of Scotland or England, in weddings, as wedding gifts, you see, as they intermarried the elites with the elite of different nations, it was generally amongst all their cousins.

Today that would seem kind of absurd. Maybe not, because I think folk today are more gullible. Again, conology is a better art than it used to be, and folk are more gullible today to really just accept it, you know. Because you think about that, I can remember giving that talk years ago, about how they would just give away, I mean, the parts of northern England, North Umbria and so on, that belonged to Scotland at one time, but it was given away a long time ago as a wedding present, part of the dowry I think. It seems absurd, it seemed absurd at the time I was mentioning and talking about it.

But then with the whole free, the European Union idea, what was awfully important was when we saw the fruition coming, the fruition of the plans of free trade, where it's completely tied up with Marxism, where the nation-states start to disappear as such, but no one realized it was on behalf of the big top multinational corporations. Part of England at one point, a few years back, was really taken over by a corporation from I think France, you know, maybe even Germany. But they owned a good part of the shores, they were given a kind of sovereign territory idea under free trade. Which wasn't a new idea, because then you find out that FDR set up ones inside the US, that are still there today. The countries that put in their businesses in those areas, have sovereign rights over that territory. Quite amazing the things that you really don't know, 'eh? [Alan chuckles.]

Again, it's back to conology. So meanwhile, when all this is going on, they're still brainwashing children at school, this is your nation, you know, and we're all happy, happy. They tell you that a lot, you're all happy. Even though you're never asked the question, you know. Or you have no chance to say, we're pretty sad actually or we're ticked off. You're told you're pretty happy, and you get all these children's books to read, you see, and completely loaded with political correctness of all kinds today, starting about the age 5. All paid again by the taxpayer. We pay for our balls and chains. Our manacles, we pay for them. Everything that shackles our brains, literally, we pay for. Big money to the guys that come up with the ideas, of how to insert little bits into stories that have got nothing to… for children, 'eh, to make sure they grow up accepting all the new ideas that your masters have decided are going to be normal, new normals, you see. It's quite fascinating, isn't it, when you think about it.

So getting back to what I was talking about, conology. I never really left it, because all I've been talking about is conology and how you get sucked into it. You accept that which is presented to you is real. Everything. You're given your opinions. Ellul again went through that and others have done the same, I've done it, by bits and bytes of information that you don't really consciously think about too much but somewhere it's assembling inside your mind, bits and bytes just come together, not a question is asked about a particular topic, and you'll just blurt out something you've heard bits and bytes of from different, you know, newscasters, just little bits and bytes, and your opinion comes out of you, and you hadn't ever before this just sat down and thought about it consciously and says I think I'll choose that as my opinion. It's because it's all given to you.

You're led to the conclusions. You're always led to your conclusions. It's the art of persuasion. And the art of building consensus, as they do with persuasion. And consensus management. You're living through it all right now with the idea for Covid and we must all accept that vaccinations for that, and everything else by the way that they've got lined up for you. It isn't just for that one. They've got a whole range of things they want to stick in you. And they want your cooperation, and in fact your willingness to allow it to happen. Again, conology, must make the victim [Alan chuckles.], 'eh, participate in their deception, it's for your own good, you see.

If they came up to you and said knock-knock-knock at the door, we're from the government, we want your house from you. And you said to them, why? Well it's for the greater good, we want to move you out to these tents out there, because there's folk already living in those tents over there and we want the world to be equal. So it will be good for them to see that you are losing your homes, which we will then take, you see, to put our toffs in, and then we'll be more equal at your level, you see, things like that. You say, no, no darn way. But if they can persuade you enough, they can get anything they want.

Just like Monty Python’s, The Meaning of Life, the beginning of that particular movie. After the hospital scene with the wonderful machines that go beep, you know, and another 2 million pounds just for the beep itself, and very impressive little flashing lights, whether they work or not and do anything is a different story. But that doesn't matter. Then they go on to the idea of the men driving up to get livers. If you're consented to having organs donated, and they come for it, you see, and at the end they persuade the wife of the guy that they had just taken the liver from, to put her name down. After making her feel so small and insignificant he says, can we have your liver too then? Oh yeah, okay, go on then. And that's how it's done, you must participate in the con, you see.

So, it's to do with also belief. Part of tyranny of all kinds, you can have wonderful utopic tyrannies where you're kept in cotton wool and you won't have a single thought or decision to make by yourself, because it won't even require your thought, you'll just automatically respond Pavlovian style into your conditioning, to whatever your governors want, you see, and you go along with it that way, quite happily, to the bitter end. It's for the greater good, you see, we're all in it together. That old slogan, 'eh, we're all in it together. [Alan laughing.]   Aahh. [Alan laughing.]

That keeps me thinking about a long time ago I was reading about the RAF, Royal Air Force in Britain. You had Winston Churchill talking about, we shall fight them on the beaches and all this kind of stuff. And in reality, of course he was talking about YOU would be fighting them on the beaches and so on. But this is the kind of propaganda they put out for the general public to swallow. Sometimes whole teams worked together, generally that is the case today, you seldom get anything coming out of a person from their own brain, as a talking head. It's done by teams. Even on the radio most folk, even [Alan chuckles.] a lot of the radio that you think is actually for you, it's got producers and all the rest of it and it's all worked out and yada, yada, ya.

But anyway, Winston Churchill was giving these speeches, the fireside chat ideas that FDR had taken on as well. Meanwhile, the particular long-range, I don't know if they were Shackleton's at the time or, which were really the Lancaster's, which had massive extra fuel tanks added to them. They had all whole, basically a squadron of them and they'd have two at a time with the engines going, through parts of the war, sometimes, sometimes for weeks on end, and then maybe a calm for a little bit and then on again. It was so they could rush the royal families and Winston Churchill and the government out of the country to go to Canada. So yeah, YOU'd be fighting on the beaches, etc. But that's how it's done.

Of course, Winston Churchill comes out as the great man for a war that maybe, maybe could have been averted, you know. Because there's a lot of evidence that Hitler really didn't want all the things he was accused of wanting. And I think personally if some of it had been given, some of the land back that was taken from them after World War I, it might have been averted. But the reparations were guaranteed, they had no option but to have another war, and some of the top observers at the treaty in Paris in 1919 said the same thing, this is going to cause another war.

Anyway, these things, but again, getting back to generations of people getting brainwashed. Because look what happens, look how easy it is to set up segments of society, the more differences of peoples and populations and even ethnic groups you can get inside a nation, and this isn't rocket science, this is old knowledge, you can certainly always stir up certain, and now they did it with the genders and so on, and sub genders of the sub genders, etc., you can really stir up people to be radical and start creating chaos, on command pretty well if you want it to happen. Especially when you supply the leaders of all these groups, and that's another key to it as well, they do. The followers seldom know that. The ones who are following, yeah they do what they are…

Have you noticed all the rioters in the States, none of them are against mass vaccinations that are coming? Don't you think that's a bit odd? None of them are against the wars across the world. No. They get switched on and off by unseen forces, don't they? You don't hear any of them demanding the abolition of the corrupt systems of money and having the government coin or print its own money like it's supposed to. It's all dished out to foreign groups, and a lot of them are foreign groups actually, foreign owned. But you don't hear them saying that or demanding. No, they don't. It's very selective, 'eh?

We've got very strange anarchists today, don't you? And very strange communists, 'eh, where they're getting funded by the richest corporations on the planet, hundreds of corporations, who are all part of the WEF, World Economic Forum. Who are all part as well of the ‘great reset’ powers for how they're going to run the world, and who are all part of all the global [Alan chuckles.] globalization structures that are money. The fact is, they don't stop and say, how come the people that you'd think we'd be protesting, but we're not protesting, how come they are the ones that are funding us all?

So, what ARE you protesting about? What are you, at the bottom line, what are you protesting about? If it's all the fault of the crooked system, and it is, it's a crooked system, way above you, a closed-door policy organization at the top, how come no one's protesting that? And yet that's the groups that's going to fund you to protest other things and protest destruction, so they can bring in a new system. It doesn't dawn on them, on the followers, 'eh. They're just full of rage.

Full of absolute rage. And the rage is fostered, again, that documentary put out by Millie Weaver there, think what you want about it, I mean it's well produced maybe, because you've got to ask yourself who really is producing all these things. But you get insight into some of the intelligence agencies and how they work, and how government works with them, and how big corporations, the military-industrial complex work with them too. What you see in that too, I'll just touch on it briefly, is the fact that you've got all these people at the bottom getting funded by the biggest richest corporations on the planet, who go to the WEF, these corporations, they run it, who talk about the need to depopulate the planet, etc. They're funding folk to riots in the streets and burn places, and defund the police.

Well, in the documentary, and I've seen this before in other places as well, they've got some articles I mentioned there, and in big meetings that have been happening over the last year or two, it goes way back even further than that. They want, don't you understand, the corporations have already got their bids in to put robots on the streets, that you're going to fund anyway. How do you fancy trying to debate with a robot when you're asked, why are you burning down this house? What d'you think you're going to tell them? A robot doesn't care about your emotions. Or what you've suffered. Or anything else. Or your mental state. It doesn't care. But they've got big contracts right now, and the companies have been named. This is the evolution of the military-industrial complex here. From not just this massive surveillance society that was put forth, after they said, what we would do in a post war world? Well, we'll have to go into complete surveillance. And then what? Well, then they can go into policing, the world. So what do you, how do you get folk that are, again, human beings we are dealing, back to human being, this problem of human beings, 'eh they don't like changing, 'eh, they might not like it if we just start putting robots on the street.

I can remember years ago giving similar talks from the science articles when they had the K-9 units, you know, the K 9, you know, the letter K. It was to get you used to the ideas of they would take over from actual real dogs, for sniffing dogs, and they would be robots, you see. Then they showed you the quaint little pocket-sized things that some of the guys in customs that they could sniff drugs and sniff this and sniff that. And sniff all kinds of unmentionable things, perhaps.   But the fact is, they had them, years ago, and all they have to do now is to start putting it into the robots and put them on the streets. I think China has already put them out already, they've had articles in the last few weeks about that and how they're expanding it.

Isn't it odd that, again, we're all called nations, are at loggerheads with each other, aren't we, we're all completing, going to loggerheads, but they all do the same things at the same time, 'eh? That's just coincidence though. Of course.

But again, it's the easiest way to get it in, is to get the people to demand that you defund the police. [Alan laughing.] Isn't it beautiful? Get them to demand what you want. Otherwise in a peaceful society they would say, oh, we don't want to be arguing with robots. I mean, how are you going to explain yourself to a robot? …that's got to go through a whole sequence of events, and if you, if it decides that you're raising your voice or belligerent or it's deciding that you're mentally unstable, because your voice is raising, you might just get zapped or lasered or worse, you see, or tasered. Or worse.

So, there you go, get the people to demand it. Why would they demand it? Because you see, once you pull the police out, you've got all these social ills that have been building up for years, with mass unemployment, mass drug taking, of all kinds of stuff, getting shipped in, etc. I've been following the drugs for years and years and years and it's a fascinating thing that they just couldn't stop the drugs, 'eh? Supposedly. Then you find that every intelligence agency and special forces has had people down Latin America and elsewhere, but Latin America all over the place because that's how they get their money for their black budgets is the drug trade. Massive drug trade. So, it's quite fascinating as I say.

But again, conology, 'eh? So you're supposed to sit home, at home and watch these detective stories, and what is it, CSI, 'eh, as they diligently, no matter what happened to the poor old sod that lived on the street and died on the street, you've got this whole team that's never going to sleep, they can't sleep worrying about this poor old sod that lived on the street and died, they've gotta find out what killed him or who killed them, 'eh, they're going to spend millions on that. That's what they tell you they do. Do you really believe that? Do you really, really believe that?

This is what they give you for reality, complete fiction. I mentioned it years ago too back in the 90s I said also, here's what they give you, here's all these complaints, and real complaints department for different social things, even social services, things you maybe need, you think well maybe I won't ever need those things, whatever it is. Or help, because you're stuck at home and you've been partially disabled or something, even temporarily. What do you do? Well you call these, you know, so you phone up the health this and the health that. Sorry, they can't help you. You find out, as I say, these are all tools that are put out there for you to use, that you think are there, you're paying for it, you know you're paying for them through your taxes and so on, you say, well, that's wonderful we've got all these things out there to help me if I'm ever in trouble. But they're rubber tools. They're rubber because when you whack them on the road they bounce, just like a check, you know, poof, they are of no use to you and they aren't going to do you any good.

So, everything sounds wonderful until you need it. You see? The general public are managed. It's the hardest thing to get through their heads, that they're actually managed. They're not managed because the agencies are there to help them. They're managed, because agencies are there to make things work on behalf of the Masters who own you all, that's really what it's there for, otherwise it would be utter chaos, you see, at times. And people don't want to believe they're getting managed, you see. Of course, you're getting managed. Of course you're getting managed, all the time, your opinions are given to you, the way you behave are you given to you, if you get married or don't get married is given to you. All these things are given to you. You see. A lot of what became you was given to you.

I think growing up in Britain it was way ahead of a lot of countries, way ahead with its psychological techniques, embedded in plays and dramas. I think Canada followed pretty well because the so-called Commonwealth countries are all the ex-British Commonwealth, you see, they still call them Commonwealth countries, or friends of the Commonwealth. Because the elite took their wealth from the commoners, I think, for the whole lot of you [Alan chuckles.] so's they could live in big castles and things. But Britain definitely exported its techniques to Australia and Canada.

France did pretty well on its own. It didn't really need the help. You know, France was one of the first countries that really accepted the system based really on an advanced socialism that came out of they call it Jacobinism, but it was really a form of communism. They tried to toss out all the old systems and get rid of it entirely. That's always the same thing, when you see year zero starting, that's communism. It's the same movement regardless of what they give you as the front people to lead it, you see, it's always the same movement. Of course, they give you new everything, including new days of the week. Even a longer week, I think they tried 10 days at a time for a new week in France at one point. Also, that thing that really annoys them, in France, they wanted free love and all that, without the consequences. So, you had, you know, backstreet abortionists just opening up quite legally at that time to get rid of, which often killed the woman as well. They also had a plague within 10 years of orphans on the streets, that they had to get rid of as well. And they did too, they had ways of getting rid of them. So, these things are nuisances. You always see the same thing cropping up over and over, the same darn things, right up to the present day.

But France did well because if you ever watched the French movies, you haven't got a clue what's going on. I'm not talking about the language, I'm talking about the story, you know. They go through these almost surrealistic settings and you'll follow it thinking, eventually it's going to get to some relevant pertinent point, you know. But they don't. [Alan laughing.] They really don't and you’re left feeling, uuuuuugh, yuk. Very much like the British BBC ones, which at least give you points, the BBC, everything they showed you about marriage was horrible, horrible, every marriage was made in hell. And the women were always nagging the men and yelling at them and it was dysfunctional. Until no one wanted to get married, you know. And the children were out of control, yada, yada, ya. It was all done deliberately.

Of course, it was part of the psychological operations that they were doing on the public for the new system. But they would promote more and more women's liberation and sexual revolution for the women during this whole period too. Of course, that's why the National Health Service, we've got to be honest about this, that was one of the main reasons that the people who brought it in, and I think the one for Canada said the same thing years ago, it was to deal with the population problem, unwanted children, etc. ‘Unwanted’ was the new term. Because most children are wanted, and if an economic system is okay. But it can be part of the dissuasion of having children is to use economics against people wanting children. It's well understood and actually taught in the higher sociological classes, and economists have come out with this quite openly. I mean, what do you think Malthus was initially, you know?

So, everyone has to have a purpose for the elite, as opposed to being a purpose for each other, you know. So, you have to serve them. Again, back to conology, you've got to believe what they tell you, it's for the common good and the greater good and all the rest of it, you have to sacrifice all the time. Whether it's going off to war, you see, and they'll paint whatever enemy it is with the most horrible brushes, that you really did think that, you know, Lucifer or Satan has just appeared there in the shape of Osama Bin Laden, 'eh. And everybody else you heard of since then. Hm. I'm telling you, it's quite something what you're living through. Then you had Saddam Hussein, another, again this evil just reincarnates immediately into somebody else, 'eh. All the way to Libya of course and Gadhafi. And then to Syria. Nonstop, just one after the other, isn't it? And who's benefiting in America from this? It's not the people, who get stiffed with the bills for it all. You know that. The same with Britain too.

And yet the strange intelligence agencies, way above, that have got nothing to do with you [Alan chuckles.] apart from using you. Because you see, they belong to something different completely from what you think are protecting you. But we must always accept, again, our part in it, and you go along with it. Most folks don't stop paying their taxes for it all. No. Again, this herd mentality. It's encouraged. It is encouraged, you don't want to protest that and stop paying your taxes. I can remember in the 90s, again, after 9/11 in 2001, certain folk here and there stopped paying their taxes. They didn't want these wars, you see, they knew what was coming and they had enough of it.

And why should you pay taxes for things that really are, is going to have such a blowback effects on all of you and destroy your nation eventually? Look at all the nations across Europe. The face of Europe is changed with mass migration under the guise of refugees. And they haven't stopped yet. They still want Iran. Iran has been losing its population for years now. Because would you wait in a country where you're told every week you're going to get bombed into the dust like Iraq? Hm? Of course you wouldn't. That's part of warfare, forced migration by terrorizing the public, you see. It's all taught in military academies.

So, you must participate, as I say, in your own deception. Your hardest part in mentioning the deception, as I say, is to get through to folk around you who swallow it all thinking it's too big to be all a lie. Hm? It's too big for it all to be a lie. And yet here you go. You are just, you know, one of the cattle, when you realize, and they're talking openly now of just not once they pass the euthanasia laws, the next step and the next step and the next step to go, until literally they want you to just kill yourself before you hit 65. Quite openly. Some of them. Again, your back to The Meaning of Life, can we have your liver? Well, okay then, I guess I'm so small and tiny and insignificant. That's what's getting done to you.

Again, using the same persuaders, like Yale University, I mentioned it before, the links I put up before, I might put them up again. They're spending millions of your tax money for these professional, you know, people who lie as a profession using psychology and behaviorism and all the rest of it to persuade you to accept vaccinations and things and to go along with the flow and do what you're told. And even to cause dissension and to get groups to turn on you if you don't wear a facemask or you don't believe in it or whatever.

These folks should be in, again, I mentioned it before, a tyrant’s hall of shame. Their faces should be exposed. And you add to them from the politicians that you waste your money on, these swine, let's call them swine, who professionally lied to the public by using psychology and your human nature against you. Hm?! Absolutely. I'm quite serious about it. They've got to start naming them, and add their faces to it, put them on it, I'm telling you, the tyrants. And the folk who are going to profit from it like billions and billions of dollars, and the Bill Gates and all the rest of them and the Fauci's, they're all in on it, the ones who deny any other treatment except the ones that they've got shares in. [Alan laughing.] Come on here. They're whole idea that nothing is going to work except their vaccinations, and they'll even tell you, whether it works or not... [Alan laughing.] Meanwhile, they're having herd immunity amongst the public. And they hate that. Oh, no. Well, it might not last long. Well, if it lasts a few years, it's as long as any vaccine is going to do. Hm? And apart from that, there's no side effects if you develop your own immunity, your own immune system antibodies. M-hm. But my God, it's free! There is no profit off that is there? Oh, no.

We live under such incredible corruption. We are a herd and they are the farmers. They see us as animals, and they see us as their animals. Our job is to be fleeced, for them. I'm quite serious about it, that's how they talk about us, them, you know, the little people. That's all of you. And the arrogance through years and years and generations of academia, into absurd learning, you know, absurd learning in absurd areas, the ivory tower really is just wispy, it blows in the wind up there, you know, there's nothing to hold that's grounded to anything, it's so into fantasia, they really believe their superiority and their right to rule us.

So again, it comes down to fear. But again, it's an evil system. You can't say it's just human nature. The scariest part for a naïve people who have swallowed their indoctrination, is even accepting there are incredibly evil people in the world. They don't have horns, 'eh. Except unless they've had them implanted. And they actually do that with some people now, 'eh, they implant these horns, surgeons will do that, these... Aaaaaaaaah, what about do no harm, where did that go? But they'll actually [Alan laughing.] cement them with some kind of cement, a horn, you know, on your skull if you want it there, you know. I know someone who was in a hospital in New York City and she was a nurse and she went on one day and... [Alan laughing.] there was a guy lying in the bed with a horn in his head. [Alan laughing.] The nurses were told right off the bat, don't laugh at him, you know, don't laugh at anybody. Do you realize how hard it would be to not kind of laugh [Alan laughing.] or quip at something to this guy. [Alan laughing.] I could not have shut my face, no way. But this is what they've brought society to, 'eh? There's nothing, you do something like that surgically, I don't care what you're doing, there's definitely harm being done there. And different levels of it. It's the same with using surgery to supposedly cure mental problems. You can't do that. They tried that with lobotomies and leucotomies, you know. It's horrible what they've done in the past, but it doesn't stop them to make money off of people who are obviously got problems. But they're not treating it the right way.

Anyway again, this is the world that we've been given by those masters at the top. Because the more dysfunctional it seems to be amongst the general population, the more scared, and it's easier to control them during this terror campaign we're going through. This is a campaign of terror. If you haven't fathomed it out, the whole Covid thing, coupled with the obvious total crashing of financial systems, and even food and all that. Because no ones allowed to work normally, it's all planned this way, if you wanted to save the system, why would you bring in this system of total lockdown that's never been done before and you have literally locked down all the healthy folk? Hm? Never been done before. And then you get all these penalties if they get out of the house. And all the business is coming to a crunch, EXCEPT the big corporations that are funding all the other, internal perhaps, terrorist groups. Isn't that rather coincidental? Hm? Isn't that coincidental, ‘eh?

Ahhhh. It bores me to even talk about it. It really does. But most folk never really figure it out, unfortunately. And the ones who take the information, like the stuff I'm putting out and then prattle it in the same week often, you'll hear it often put out there after I do these talks, with all the links and everything else, I've done all the work, you see, you have no idea who they work for. Because I don't believe that there's anybody in politics today that's not there because they were put there. And they play their roles on their sides, you see, they play their roles.

Years ago, I can remember when there were lots of alternate radio, mainly on AM and shortwave radio, worldwide. Harder to get it all censored back then, although you did get certain ones who'd try to censor them by having their ads withdrawn, things like that. Everything is political in this system, you see, there's no such thing as free speech, there never really was. Anything, the ones who got the biggest money and run ads and campaigns and fund the politicians, the ones they want in power, they've got the power, the ones who have got the cash and they get what they want. But yeah, at least you had a lot of variety in the whole, and people from different areas who really studied in different areas. It had technocracy all right, but you had interviews with people who lived through the Cold War, big chunks of the Cold War even from World War II onwards with lots of experience and wisdom, who are all gone now. But in the talks, they would add little bits, collectively they'd add little bits, you see, of their experiences and their insights into what happened and how the system runs and works and all that kind of thing. Lots of them realized too that politics really was a scam. It goes way, it's not new, being a scam, a conology, you see, the system.

I think Thomas Jefferson mentioned it too, I've mentioned this part so often, where he did talk about, if you see the same agendas being continued between changes in the house, meaning the parties, if you truly had different parties you would see really drastically different agendas, but you don't. We haven't. We've seen the same agendas, even from Papa Bush to Junior Bush, even when Bill Clinton was in, he was lobbing cruise missiles over into Iraq and different places destroying it, his whole time in office. You had the Desert Storm idea, you know, then you had Junior Bush of course, 9/11, and the whole PNAC group. Then you had Obama went in afterwards, and Obama, even Obama the name, hey, that's not what his name was. Hm? That's not what he called himself up until then. And the main arch villain, this is a comic book, right, I'm not kidding you, I'm still waiting for someone to convince me that it's just a big coincidence that the biggest enemy of the world at that time, supposedly the arch devil, the demon himself, the arch demon, was called Osama, they put in a President and they call him Obama in America. D'you really, are you really swallowing all that?

Do you realize that somebody's laughing at us all? Hm? D'you realize that someone's having a big chuckle with all these things that are going on right now. And they are. But most folk don't question it. It's that something? I think it was Barry Soetoro, he called himself up until then or something. Anyway, but no one questions it. They just present it, and going down the history books, folk in the future, if there's any folk left, you know, that matter, who read that kind of stuff, they'll be laughing their heads off at some big scam getting pulled, you know.

But anyway, Obama was then congratulated, the Democrat, you know, the so-called socialist communist international group Obama was congratulated by supposed PNAC group using Donald Rumsfeld, hm, who congratulated Obama for continuing his wars, the same wars, and expanding them and even adding to them, right. He got lots of applause from them for doing all that. Why would the so-called pretended, okay, neocon group, hm, that Rumsfeld and Bush were part of, congratulate their supposed archenemy of democracy, Democrats or whatever they call themselves, that are really communists, you know? But international socialism, as I've mentioned before, is the system the elite want for the present time, to suit their efficiency. That's what it's for. Technocracy, you see.

Doesn't matter if you call it communism or technocracy, whatever, it's all the same thing. It's for the greater good, you know. And the World Economic Forum as they crash the world economy, for you that is, not for themselves, they're getting richer at the top. But they're crashing the whole world economy for all the little people out there, are bringing in this system of efficiency, and you have to all be in it together, and you have to do what you're told, in order to collectively survive, that's just the way it's done, 'eh. Any other person in history who did that was a tyrant. But today it scientific, like necessary, don't you understand? [Alan laughing.] And the public as usual, unfortunately, through terror and fear, because you always use terror and fear and a reign of terror to get the public to comply to save themselves. Hm, to save themselves. That's awfully important.

Remember too folks, that you could help me tick along here as I say if you just donate to me and help me stay, well, alive [Alan chuckles.] and to keep all my sites going, etc. Go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Remember always, always make sure you've done it because folk postpone things, 'eh, until certain things happen and then you can't get them again. Make a note of my official sites, if anything goes down and hopefully you can get me on one of the other ones listed on cuttingthroughthematrix.com website. Remember you can buy the books and discs I've got there. They're different. There's no point in just churning out another big thick tome of history for you to waste your time on. I cut to the chase to show you the cons, right down to the language that are used upon you, to get you to think for yourself.

That's the only weapon you've got is it to think for yourself. It really is. It's the hardest thing for most folk is to think for themselves. The reason I say that is because you see, this is your fight individually, this is your fight. I always knew it would all get down to the chase, we'd have to make a decision personally. That's what it's about, folks. The last thing you want to hear, isn't it, oh my goodness, I have to make a decision personally? And you do. It would always come down to this. Always. It was inevitable. So, it's your decisions that matter to you, for you, and for your soul. Hm? That's what it's about.

So, as I say, go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Remember, other people take what I put up there and they'll put it into other formats for other social means to get it out there. But sometimes they're delayed for one reason or another, you know, and there's a lot of work involved. So remember, go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com and I always try to get it up on the Sunday night. And my provider of the Internet knows that too, I get slows to a crawl up loading, believe you me. That's just the way these things really happen. It's not paranoia. It's a fact. I've got stacks of records on them, and daily records on this kind of stuff happening. That's what definitely happens if you are a little problem. It's no big problem or they'll eliminate you, you know, if you've been a big problem. I have been in the past and I've had my close, very close calls, believe you me.

As I say, hopefully if you can keep watching my stuff and reading it and so on and listening, then you can at the very least have an idea of what's going on. And I don't tell you who to vote for. I really don't think Americans were given anybody else to vote for at all in the last election. And I don't think there are this time either. I really don't. I really think, I don't think they'll ever get a president in America whose real first and foremost agenda is to look after America. I really don't. And that's what you really need to pull yourself out of the mire. But even if that happened, all hell would break loose from the establishment. And there is an establishment that runs the country. Of course, there is.

It's the same establishment that ran London, and still does to an extent, you know, a big extent. Today it runs the world's economic system and it's very true, if the US was to fall down to an extent a good part of the world would go with it. Because the US is keeping a lot of it propped up through its own finances by throwing your cash across the planet. So, you have to pay for it all mind you but still, you are, you're buying countries off left, right and center, you always have done. That's how the game is played today. And if it’s not that way then you simply go in and invade them. But it's not for yourselves, it's for those who rule you, over you.

They have their proxies there. A lot of the proxies are the CEOs at the moment of corporations. You don't get to be a CEO of the top Corporation just because you know something the rest of them don't. You know? Or you know which knives and forks to use it a big, you know, a 15-course meal. One of the reasons, you're preselected for all these things, just like you're preselected for top politics, and you're given a kind of aura, they've had books out about this aura thing for, let's create a CEO who walks on water, he's just perfect, he's just magic, and comes out with these really new ideas, you know, they'll toss half the company down the drain to bring out these new ideas. And no, that's nonsense that you've got to. But they're preselected, these characters, by the richest folk on the planet.

D'you know there's holding companies out there, holding companies that own a good chunk of the world's transportation supply, of all goods that travel by road and rail, they own them? It was quite fascinating when a few years ago a train was out Montréal way I think it was, and it was to depart for the night. I forget what happened, the thing rolled down, it was left unguarded and it rolled down the tracks and it blew up, it had some tankers on it, a town. Everyone was looking at it and said well who owns this company? And they got the name, eventually got the guy’s name who owned it.

Now, he specialized in buying up railway lines across the world, across Russia and Europe and Latin America and everywhere. When countries that had tried socialism, this is an old ploy by the way, socialism and they get in so much debt and disrepair that they sell them all for peanuts. With a lot of help I'm sure, with maybe this guy's associates, they go into these countries to help the deals and so on. But when you realize how much power this guy has. As I say, a closed shop by the way for investments, of just certain people's, for pensions and things, but not everybody can get into it.

Multibillion, billion, billion-dollar industry, 'eh? A holding company for all these things. He probably never had ever visited one of them that he'd bought over. Because when they buy these things over they expect, they have managers in place, they do all the work. They don't want anything to do with the work. It's like when they used to own stacks of factories, they didn't want to visit the factories, they just wanted to know that the money was coming in and the programs were getting made, and they'd put a foreman or a manager in charge of it. Well, it's the same kind of thing, this guy would have his people all over the place.

But when you think that ALL your goods and services, all the stuff that you need to survive, food, energy, propane, gas, gasoline, oil, all these things, they're getting delivered, and here's this quiet company, that you've probably never heard of if it hadn't been for that one accident, 'eh. And it wasn't so much an accident, it was negligence again. Not on the driver's part or anything but because they cut everything to the bone, these characters, for massive profits. These characters, these guys have more power than any tyrant in history. If they wanted to just shut everything off and nothing's going to move, they can do it. D'you realize that? But you never hear of these guys. It's just...

Holding companies are massive operations. At one time you had all their laws in the States for instance about racketeering, and again, that came into place to do with Rockefeller, this strange guy, this family, Rockefeller family that where the old man Rockefeller said that competition was a sin. He went out there to try and take over all energy resources, completely. Completely. He really meant it. It wasn't just a greed thing or personal, no, this guy was part of an international operation and they work totally with the City of London. Totally.

Because whatever the City of London was pushing out across the world on taking over the world's resources, so was Rockefeller in the States. He set up, he was, he became head of the CFR and that was their branch of the Royal Institute of International Affairs, or the Milner group. That's what that was. And they really mean it, they take over what you need to survive. They own it all. And they don't believe in democracy. They'll use the idea for a long time, of democracy as an opposition to communism when it suited them. You see? Now they don't need that anymore and they want to use the communistic system of total obedience ‘cause you all obey.

They rather like China, the modern version of China where it's a model state for the world. The BBC documentaries have been churned out for years talking about that, oh this is a wonderful system, this is the model state for the world. Every member of the CFR parrots the same stuff in Foreign Affairs, etc. so, now it's the time to use that, you see. It's efficient. People just obey. You don't have to bother trying to persuade the public, you just tell them they'd better do it or else and that's it.

But the folk again in their own little lifetime, and it's a short lifetime, really, but in your own little lifetime, most folk just say, oh well this just happened and that just happened, they have no idea how things happen. I guess life to them really at the end is a mystery, they look back on it and say, oh that was a mystery, you know, what a mystery that was, hm? When you see all the things that could have been done and should have been done, but weren't, you're just left with this big, well why wasn't it done? Well, haven't you got a clue? Haven't you got a clue?

I used to mention it too, it's like the movie, I think it was called Prophecy. It was the three version one with Christopher Walken. I think it was in the last one, they were trying to reconstruct the physical Lucifer, hm, and eventually you saw this thing rising up at the ground or from the ground, resurrected Lucifer, standing on a pyramid basically of bodies. And I thought at the time, that like represents thousands of generations of people who were born lived and died and suffered, got used and abused and all the rest of it, and never ever, not one generation knew what was really going on, and I thought that's how we’re really run, you know, we're not supposed to know what's really going on.

I don't think folk realize how every nation in the world, it wasn't just Africa, has been through a lot of hell. Because in the old days in Europe, and it's not that long ago when you think about the feudal system, and right up into about the 1700s you were still living in the feudal system that might have given you early in the politics to elect this or that, that was for the nobility and the elite and the businessmen. The majority of the public were serfs, they were bought and sold with the land. They were still bought and sold with the land, of course they were. And they still doff the cap, as they say, and called folk, there's the master, you know, he's the master, the lord or laird or whatever, he's the master. And I often thought, what a demeaning thing to have to call someone is a master, you see. Really, a human being.

Because it really is a class system right off the bat, isn't it? If you use the term, you're obviously down yonder at the bottom dregs, and you’re elevating someone above you, just because of their status or their birthright or whatever. But that doesn't ever change and believe you me, it doesn't go away. It's so well camouflaged today that most folk can't recognize it. Even though it should be more obvious than ever, hm? Conology, you must participate in your own deception. You must participate in giving power to others.

I've mentioned this so many times before, for years and years and years, you give your power away to others by voting. It's a legality. In some countries it's mandatory. Why do you think it's mandatory? It's because for you to be ruled, it's necessary to you to accept the fact you're going to be ruled. And the only right you have in democracy, and this is a fact, check it up for yourselves, look it up and see what it means about democracy and voting. When it comes to recalls for anything, on any level, even from local councils, they've had cases in Canada that went all the way up to Supreme Court by people who ran for different offices, didn't fulfill their promises. They were told that the only right that a voter has is TO vote, not for what happens from the vote, that's what democracy means, they literally said that defines democracy.

So, any liar, and that's what most of them are, liars, that go into politics, are politicians, they are psychopathic, they don't mind lying, it's a way of life with them. For those who really rule the world, it's a natural thing to do is to don't tell the children any truth. They see you as children, naïve children, because they've kept you in the dark since you were born. Just like mushrooms, you know.

But yeah, people haven't got a clue at all of the system in which, and again, once you're out of school, most of your indoctrination is continued through fiction. Folk prefer fiction, because life is pretty nasty and rotten and boring or whatever, or even scary, so you escape from it all by fiction. You live vicariously either through sports, a lot of guys watch sports because in reality they have no ability or outlet to get rid of all their frustrations, so they watch guys, like a team, it's just a war on a battlefield is the field, playing field, and that’s the pitch, that's why they call it a pitched battle, you see. So, they live through these characters in front of them, it's a vicarious way of living. In their own lives they're given very little power today. it's been taken away from them, they've given up too, until they're afraid to even asserts their own selves over anything at all. All deliberate too, a complete war on the male as well, naturally, to get them into this position.

Everything is a battle strategy. I hope you understand you've been living through battle strategies that don't end and they simply run into the next phase and the next phase and the next phase of whatever part it is. And many things are going on at the same time in this particular battle. How do you get rid of the main problems? Who are your main problems? Well, they name them. Okay, how do you get rid of this, these ones, you know? Take away their power from them, make them feel insignificant. Even tell them the whole world's problems is theirs, that's what they've done with a lot of the males. [Alan chuckles.] In school it's rammed in their heads and so on. They were told to even feel guilty about it, about things that happened thousands of years ago, nothing to do with them, nothing at all to do with them. But that's not the intention. The intention is to make them feel weak and helpless and useless and guilty. And at the same time, with young girls, from a very early age they're telling them to be assertive, etc., etc., etc. All battle strategies. It was all done deliberately. Again, people live through it and never catching onto it. No. Because strategies work awfully well if you get the children young enough. And that way you disable your opponents, the ones who down the road could be your main opponents, well, they're not there anymore. They're not there. You've eliminated them.

A war on society, a war on every individual, a war on genders. A war on everything that could have worked, and did work at times, nothing works perfectly but the fact is, complete war across the board to disable everybody in society to get society itself collectively disabled. That's warfare. This is all warfare. Awfully effective. I'm not just making this stuff up. I’ve looked at the techniques for long-term and long-range warfare. They have so many, which can scare you with some nations that are at war at the moment. How they've looked at their opponents, right down to the children that are getting born, to eliminate them. So, they target women in those countries because they breed the boys that are going to be the problem down the road that are going to fight certain nations and so on.

It's just astonishing what you read, and it's horribly effective, I mean horribly when you see it's actually being done for years and it's still ongoing. And this is taught, this is taught as battle strategy. So when you look at your own nations and you see this long-term goal to eliminate opponents and then put in others that will be, that's been well known through incredible studies that have been done on genders, women are more apt to go along and try something new in changing society if it's given to them by a superior authority, you see, so, if you put experts behind folks today, they're more apt to follow that and go along with it. That's why you see so many today being placed, by the way, in charge of different functions in nations especially during a phase of massive change, it's not coincidental by the way. And most of them are openly, what they think is, they’ll say they're socialist, but they'll go with the wind. And they do like to feather their own nest as well as they go along. So, it's not for ideological purposes.

Everything is a sham, really, isn't it? Everything is a complete sham. But the last folk who must figure this out are the public themselves because the war is always on the public, and it's subdivided into different sections and groups of the general public, and ages too of course. So again, you gotta stop participating in deception, your own deception.

But yeah, I can remember when Pierre Trudeau, reading about him years later for instance, but it got me onto the track of looking at real communism, and I wasn't in Canada at the time, but to look at real communism to see how it worked. Trudeau was a leader of the Young Communist Party for Canada and he led the group from Canada for the Comintern, the Communist International over in 1952 to Moscow. Others too that I could name today, not just in Canada, who are names today, others had big parts in that too. But there was a woman in fact who was part of the Young Communist International group who recently I mentioned her name too, that's prominent in the newspapers.

But anyway, Pierre Trudeau did follow it to the letter. The idea was, they knew they couldn't overthrow the Western, it was the people in society, remember, you are the nation, not the leaders, that's why most of the work is targeting you, to get you to change, a whole bunch of things, you see, and your ways of thinking. So, you are the ones they want to change. Most folk, they knew from repeated attempts and testing the perimeters you might say, that's how they phrase it, that the people in the West wouldn't have revolutions. They just wouldn't be overthrown or collectively get the working classes to go and fight and overthrow whatever to take over. So they used the Fabian technique, you see, which again was born in Britain and funded by one of the richest guys on the planet at the time. That's always the way it is because it's always deception. It's the same group at the top that will use different strategies, for efficiency for themselves, that they have to have.

Pierre Trudeau did run on the liberal ticket, you know, to get in. Afterwards some of them boasted, and he himself did quip it a couple of times actually, that they did it, they got in by deception by pretending they were just liberals, you see. That's again what Khrushchev said himself when he came over to visit in the States, that's what he said, he said we don't call them Communists in America, we call them liberals, that was the party that they hid under at the time. Nothing has changed there. But it's very deceptive to the public who watch it because they see a lot of these liberals to who end up being multimillionaires in politics. Strange how that, you know, how they can end up as multimillionaires. But the fact is, there are no real sides here, they all play their game for those in charge at the very, very top.

But again, the idea was that they could get in by deceiving the public, and once they are in start pushing all the communistic doctrines under the guise of socialism, you see, and equality, it's always under the guise of equality. One of the first things they do is try to destroy the nation-state by mass migration, you see. Even when you don't need mass migration, because a lot of them you have to house, it cost a fortune to house people, retrain them and even educate them, before they can even learn to speak the languages a lot of times. A lot of money, etc. It's not to help people. It's to help disrupt the nation itself in order to create a whole new system, naturally, and the withering away of borders.

But isn't it odd, isn't it awfully odd that Karl Marx said that eventually you'll see the withering away of the nation-state. But before that they'd create free trade zones, European free collective zone with the parliament for the whole of Europe, hm? And one for the Americas eventually, you see. And one for the Far East, the Asia-Pacific region. So he wanted three free trade zones with three parliaments. And that's the same thing of course that Lord Alfred Milner wanted for the British Empire. It's just coincidence of course isn't it? Hm, what a coincidence. They all wanted this idea of eventually the state running everything. So centralization is part of it. What do you think creating a European Parliament was about? It was centralizing all power. You're running through the same agenda hundreds of years old. And most folk haven't clued into that very fact.

Then since 9/11, with free trade and 9/11 happening at the same time, and all these global meetings on free trade, the same agenda that Milner was pushing back in the 1800s, and even before that when Britain set up the East India Company and the Dutch East India Company, the idea was always the same agenda, then you'd set up the same parliamentary system in each country that you would take over, which they did very successfully. India did the same thing, it was based on the British system. And completely compromised just like the one in Britain is too. Because it's not there really to serve the people.

You're living through an old agenda. So here's the top capitalists working for the same agenda as the top communists, and using communism and capitalism to get where they want it to go. They are all terms, remember, 'eh, words, 'eh, just terms. Words can get you lost if you can't see what you're really looking at, because you get confused, well it can't be that because they've got a different name for it. No. You can use as many names as you want to camouflage something. It's what you actually see it as being that matters, hm.

It's really something. Folk as I say have no idea what they're really living through. And what you're living through is an eternal battle, really. Very old battle. And between good and evil. And yes, you can always break it down to an earthly system, okay, let's basically secularize it and use secular humanism to say it's bad people who are power-hungry and crave power, they're psychopathic and they don't have, they are not there for the common good. Whereas the humanists, you know, remember, humanism is a religion, [Alan chuckles.] who know better, they know better how to rule the world and they give you bioethics, awfully important field that bioethics. They can tell you what's moral and what's not moral, you see, using the sheer genius of their brainpower. Because somehow they're untouchable, the common things that might make you get tempted, no, it doesn't bother them at all. They've got it all, you see. [Alan chuckles.]

We live in amazing times, watching all this stuff is kind of comical. But the folk never catch on. But as I say, you're going through evil times. You can feel it, it's tangible. There's never been such a time of mass lying, across the board to the general public, all aimed at the public. With the admission they're using universities and behavioral insights teams and the Sage groups and the other groups working on contract to the Sage to brainwash the public to go along with everything that's being mandated. Hm? It isn't just to do with vaccinations. It's a whole new way of living. The global reset.

This is the great transition. In the last century they called it the coming century of change, or transition, the great transition. Here it is... where the elite will have you all running like clockwork, they think, at the end of the chaos. They create the chaos first and then to fix it all they'll bring down the population, and they'll run everything to suit themselves bit by bit by bit. Everyone is monitored from cradle-to-grave, you can't get away from them. And they won't allow you, most folk allow it to happen, all these rules to get passed and laws to get passed, and they comply with it, which doesn't help the next generation, you see.

Planned a long time ago. Planned before I was born. Planned before you were born, and even my granddad in fact was born. How to use the general public, and in every nation, how to create divisions in society and use them against each other for your own use. How to get segments of society, let's take it at the real idealistic viewpoint of history here, let's look at a real fictional version of a hamlet somewhere in England in say the 1600s. In a little very short peaceful time, right, and here all they are and there's a little smoky hamlet, because you could smoke back then to heat themselves and cook without getting fined and all that. Again, this is the idealized version, and here they're happy and they've got their culture and they know where they came from and they're quite content and all that, 'eh. How do you destroy that?

I mean, if you just come up as an outsider, they're going to turn on YOU, collectively, it's a natural thing to do, and you won't get what you want. Well, you must create divisions in this peaceful little hamlet, you see. Then you go and say, you know, tit to one of the farmers, how many pigs have you got there? I've got 4 or 5. Really. Then you go to someone down the road there who's really struggling, and he had a fire recently, his place burned down, he's rebuilding and he's, he can't do all the work at the same time and he can't afford to hire anybody. How many pigs have you got? I've only got two, I lost some in the fire. Why does that guy up the road there got more than you got?

And you stir the pot. You stir it to get it going. Or, you see folk, you know, who are intensive units, intensive units of solidarity, like a real family, but who have never heard of women's lib, 'eh, never heard of it, hadn't been invented yet. And any communist doctrine hadn't heard of that either. And you've got a get in there and say, you know, why are you carrying those buckets that, you know, those heavy buckets? Why isn't your husband? Well your husband, you see, was down in the field there up to his knees in mud cleaning, or he's cleaning out… But that didn't matter. The point is to exaggerate differences. Exaggerate them. Stir it up. Then you get a faction, then you get a collective, a bunch of women together. Then you start saying, making demands, we aren't going to do this UNLESS, unless, unless. Before you know it the whole thing is in a mess. And in comes the overlord to rectify, you need a government, we're here to help you.

This is how it's done, over and over and over again. Do you realize how many agencies have just appeared out of nowhere, you think they're coming out of nowhere, to deal with the chaos in society on all social levels? Often from the very heads that are causing the problems. And they profit off all the chaos they cause. Amazing, 'eh. From law, oh you need lots of new laws now and new lawyers, 'eh, The Devil’s Advocate. How do you think we're taking over the world, he said in The Devil’s Advocate, just by pure force? Armies, he says, armies of lawyers, we turn out thousands every year, lawyers. Then they end up in politics too, 'eh, the same characters. And before you know it, you can't just do this or that without getting a contract drafted up and paying legal fees for every darn thing that you do. Hm?

Or, destroy the family unit, what do you? There are countless agencies, privately owned, that deal not just with marriage counseling, which is generally how to break up quietly, but what do they do with the children? So let's have all kinds of agencies to deal with the children, right, and foster homes and this, that and the other, and psychologists get involved and psychiatrists. Every bit of chaos you cause, a disruption, as you destroy society and the fabric that holds it together, and the psyche that holds it all, they profit off it. Amazing isn't it?

Interesting. It's also interesting, it's interesting that you're into an area that most folk don't want to look at. It scares them. You see, in an age where you haven't seen mass slaughter, like open slaughter, pits being dug and people being buried after being shot, killed or whatever by all kinds of methods, then you're wide open for it to happen in different ways. Disease, it doesn't look so bad. Well, it's disease, you know, m-hm, in an age where one of the top fields that you have for war is bio warfare, it was always said to be the weapon of choice for the future, bio warfare. And the beauty of it is you can't really, you can suspect all you want, you can add little bits all you want, but you always need an admission, hm, like some crime drama. And you're not going to get it.

It was the same with weather warfare. Lots of data from the military declassified on weather warfare. It's not a lala land thing. It's not some conspiracy thing. They admit it, from the Department of Defense the declassified articles that they've done. They did lots of it in Vietnam to create massive flooding for instance in the Ho Chi Minh Trail. Weather warfare. Mud. And whether warfare they said too, that the advantages of it, again, it's silent weapons for quiet wars, isn't it. You see, you can know it all you want, you can say, you know, we're getting these strange signals and the weather is changing, or, you know, things like that.

The HAARP technologies, all countries have it now. They had it back in the 70s, in Russia, or Riga, you know, where they could blot out a lot of the airwaves in the West. Montréal was the first one to pick it up I think. It was the ‘woodpecker effect’ they called it, this, it was a high intensity powerful signal getting put up into the ionosphere, and that's how the HAARP technology works, it bounces off it, it can intensify it too, you can actually aim it to bounce off and reflect down elsewhere on your target and block out all transmissions on the AM frequencies, etc. Old technologies. Then you can superheat the atmosphere, they found out with the Alaskan one, testing that, superheat it, standing waves. Then you had these big explosions in the sky, clear skies, just boom, [Alan chuckles.] just super heating different parts of the atmosphere. And then lightning strikes in clear skies too in BC, it was interesting that. And they can aim that too across, using the ionosphere is like a mirror to reflect it. Old stuff. Declassified stuff now. But again, even though you know it's being used, you can pretty well suspect it, again it comes down to, well we know all about it, we just need that last bit of, well, you're not going to get an admission, that's the whole point of silent weapons. M-hm.

Or introducing the bugs that eat crops. Old, again, masses, masses and masses of information declassified on chemical and bacterial warfare, and agriculture is part of it. How do you disable an enemy? Destroy their sustenance, their meat industry, milk industry, cheese industry, butter industry, by attacking the animals. Attack the crops, all kinds of rusts they call it and things like that.

Argh. You can go on and on about the horrors of what humans will do on behalf of the Masters that run the planet, which should tell you what the Masters are like. The Masters are very cold. I remember too Malachi Martin, who was, an enigma to some people, but he certainly sold the Catholic Church out, that is true. That's come out since, you know. He helped with the Vatican II, to destroy some of the principles that kept them together intact for a long time. So he was like a double agent. He was also on an awfully good documentary years ago with William Buckley Junior. Interestingly William Buckley Junior was in CIA. Malachi Martin, on the Art Bell show, years later talked about the fact that a lot of the Jesuits and so on in the Catholic Church during the Cold War worked with the CIA. Because they were all over the world, and they could get into any countries and come back with information, 'eh.

Malachi Martin did say in one of his interviews, you'll never know where his head really was at with Malachi Martin unfortunately. But he did bring, isn't it odd, a guy who worked and sold out the church at one point, really, like big time traitor, a real double agent indeed, paid too, he was paid to do it, brought back in a humanistic world, in a world where humanism was demanding that folk give up superstition, as the communists called it too, silly superstitions, and trying to get rid of it all, and it was all taught through all colleges and universities, oh science will replace all these things eventually and we'll live in a very, again, a humanistic society where experts and human brains will be ruling us. Well God help us then, 'eh, especially if you wonder if they're really so human, 'eh.

But Malachi Martin did bring into the church, whether it was intentionally or inadvertently, the spark of something that was sorely lacking, as folk become more and more worldly and secular, including the church naturally, because the church itself, all churches are basically staffed with people who come out of the general population, they've been through the same changes, the same indoctrinations into the secular world where science is supposed to supplant all problems and solve them all and become the guiding light, you see. That's a lot of power to give to mere mortals, the scientists.

But Malachi Martin as I say, inadvertently or whatever, did bring back a spark of something which was sorely lacking for a long time. And again, it's a very powerful thing, that the elite actually fear, it's always intrigued me that. But he brought back the idea of the supernatural. And the preternatural. The preternatural are powers that are above ordinary powers, which evil has, in the Catholic viewpoint, or the Christian viewpoint. Or even the ancient world viewpoints, a lot of it came from the ancient world, remember, even pre-Judaic, a lot of it.

He brought out Hostage To The Devil, excellently written book describing people, you can take it from two ways, either they got severe mental problems, or they've got, there's other forces at work here, entities, something in a secular society folk don't want to contemplate. It's astonishing how they'll accept through dramas and movies, fictional movies mass slaughters as horrible, incredibly horrible. But when it comes to who's behind these mass horrors, is it just human nature, are we so defective as a species, or is there something else at play?

So Malachi Martin brought back this idea of the supernatural. The supernatural is something that comes from the creator, you see. Supernatural. As opposed to preternatural. Anything created by the creator therefore has, like, rebellious demons or angels, have these abilities, but they're not so much super but they're definitely above what any human is going to do, but they're preternatural. That was the difference. He brought back into the church something that they were forgetting, you're living in a world of forces. We can accept the fact that there are forces at work when it comes to, oh that's secular forces or its, you don't know who the people are generally or whatever but you know they're... But the fact is, no, what is IN them?

In one of his talks he did touch on someone he'd worked with for a long time, for quite a few years in fact. Until one day he saw him in a particular angle, in a library they were working, and he realized he was looking at something with a... with an... who was perfectly possessed. Something, a very interesting concept, it doesn't matter what you think of it or believe in it, but just take it from what he said. He said that he confronted the guy about it. And the guy realized before he said anything that Martin had noticed it. Because these things, remember, have the abilities, they have the psychic abilities. And there was no big argument or row that erupted over it or anything. But it was acknowledged that the guy, yeah, he'd had it for years and years and years and he was perfectly content with this thing abiding within him.

And you see, this kind of thing rings a bell. It could be like Jung said, who knows, you know, everyone's got their points of view. But there is such a thing as an archaic symbology, archetype, archetypal symbology. Something that rings true in all of us when we see certain things or experience certain things, that shouldn't, when you get a chill running up your spine when a certain thing's mentioned, or a certain place is reached and you know something happened, or you didn't know beforehand but you do know now. You've all had these odd, odd happenings.

And suddenly, as I say, inadvertently perhaps, who knows, it brought back into the church something they'd forgotten about. And he did say something true, regardless of the fact that he sold them out. [Alan chuckles.] He said the church, again, like all institutions, right, become corrupt. They all do. They become lazy. It's not news, it's been done before, in all churches, in all religions, where you get a class that evolves out of it, living on the rest that becomes fat and lazy and they expect it to be the normal that this is the way, you see. They forget what they are there for.

Francis of Assisi had the same problem and came back after years of being away setting up a lot of the monasteries, and to see his own monks basically fat, and they were getting big endowments from generally widowed women leaving all their money to them. They were fat and lazy and he was disgusted, he walked off again he was so disgusted. What happened to them? So it's nothing new in it. It happens through all institutions. Even, even if you could get, well they do it with communism, 'eh, supposedly they clean out the system, then they put their own people in who are fanatics, within a generation they're all corrupt, just like the previous ones. It doesn't matter who, what you want to call them [Alan chuckles.] that's what happens.

So anyway, this is important, a very important thing to touch on because getting back to conology, where you must participate in your own deception, hm, because you think you're going to get something out of it. Then, what's happening in your lives and to the world in general is the biggest deception we've ever lived through right now. You've been living through, I've watched in my own lifetime a good part of it being pushed way faster, because that's how it works, as they knocked down more and more pillars that hold up the roof of stability, you see, then it weakens all the other pillars and the fewer pillars there are, the faster they can move them, you see. That's what they've been doing since about, oh, for the last 50 years or so.

You're really seeing it happening. And you're seeing the fruits of it. And the fruits, again, it's almost like demonology where things will wither very quickly including the fruit itself. But what's awfully important is the one thing that churches had forgotten, especially Protestant churches because Protestant churches were completely hand in hand with science from an early, logic again, and so they were easily converted right off the bat, you see, into the idea of oh, no, it's just they can pray and all the rest of it, but no don't believe in it too deeply. And there's no central command in Protestantism, hundreds of sects, hundreds and hundreds of sects, there's still new sects dividing yet from previous divisions. And that's another thing, when there's no central command, you see, but they embraced the science quickly. That's why they were the first ones to fall away from churches.

Of course, then you have Freemasonry through it too, a humanistic religion to an extent. The higher orders is a bit different, it's more than just [Alan chuckles.] the humanistic part. But this is the important thing of all, communism, which is a front, it's a front, communism, for those who want to take over and rule the world. Of course it is. Just like today the World Economic Forum is a front for the same group that wants to rule the whole world. Just like the whole idea for Covid and the complete lockdown/destruction of society, destroying all economies and rebuilding, is a front. It's all the same system running it all. But from the days of communism you had the communist themselves ruling out what they had to destroy. At the top was religion.

Because people, they won't stand and fight for basically a secular idea. You can't get them all to fight, you see. But you can get more of them, almost all of them to fight for a religion. Or a belief. Especially a God-given belief, hm, with God-given rights. Well, who's going to oppose God-given rights? Look who's doing it today.

The World Health Organization from the start, they've got to end this exception for religious purposes, hm? They've been at that for years and years and years. Really. It's an awful nuisance, this God-given thing. You've got rights by your creator, hm, you're born with them. And these characters are there to persuade you to give them all up to them. [Alan chuckles.]

Mao Tse Tung, the great Mao Tse Tung in China said the same thing, he wasn't scared, he wasn't scared at all, he says, power, all power comes from the barrel of a gun. But he said, what did frighten him the most was a big idea. What he was referring to was religion.

When the Communists took over the Soviet system, they just went to slaughter, they got the most worst beasts imaginable in human form to do the slaughtering, that continued throughout the whole Soviet Union's period by the way, in all the Soviet bloc countries. Horrible things were done and they had to wipeout religion especially. They went to town to try to eradicate it. You saw it in the Spanish revolution too, the so-called Civil War, it was really communists behind that too. What they did to the nuns, n-n-n. Or Trotsky's train, you know, when he was head of the Red Army, and the reign of terror in Russia, and he had actually priests dying like on ropes at the back at the train, 'eh, as he went past all the different villages and stuff.

It never changes. It never changes. And yet those, once they are in power, they can kill millions under different guises, 'eh. Even for necessity, well we can't feed you all, now. And they'll encourage you, and again they'll get people from academia to come out and explain to you why it's necessary that you just starve to death. Or, you don't live too long because there's not enough medications to go around, you know, you're going to cost the state money, just like they do in Canada now and other countries. Step by step by step, 'eh?

But at one time folk would be horrified. I'm not talking about real deep fundamental really religious people. It was a natural thing that people felt, you had God-given rights, and life was precious. Not the Julian Huxley type where we have to knock man off his pedestal and train him and teach him that he's just another animal, in order to change and rule over him. [Alan chuckles.] That's what he said. But what they're afraid of is the other one, the other thing. Because what scientists can actually take on God, 'eh? And it doesn't matter what he prattles off about his degrees and this, that and the other, it makes no difference. Hm.

It's like the U.S. Constitution, yeah, it was put together by Freemasons. Again, not all of them were absolutely exactly like peas in a pod, but they were sworn allegiance to the same kind of things. They said, you know, that this was a chance for folk to rule themselves, like an experiment. It was called The Great Experiment at the time. The Soviet system was called The Second Great Experiment. So the first one was American, even though it wasn't given much of a chance to be honest with you because the corruption was there from the beginning, from the big, big, big landowners. And Washington came out of it owning another, what was it, 200 miles of land I think it was than he did at the start. So it was very profitable too, when you get away from the foundation myth of countries.

But it is interesting to note that they talked about self-evident, that which is self-evident, the people had rights and it was self-evident. What they really meant was it was given by God. They hate to use the term, Freemasons most of them, you know, not all of them but most of them. But it was self-evident. Well, that which is self-evident, that the rights you have, have been decimated since then by those that rule. And it's a joke, a sick joke to try to pretend that the US is still the same US of A, you know. It's not.

When someone has this state coming after them, and goes through their entire savings, and if they had, if they could live another 500 years they still couldn't take the state on if you can't afford it. What kind of justice is it where it costs thousands and thousands and thousands of dollars to properly fight some charge? That's railroaded, that's not justice. That's power, that's corrupted power. Of course it is.

Then the state takes away one right after another. Again, using all of its agencies. Well, now we've got this other agency, this health agency now, you know, it's privately owned but it's the health agency. And they will, you better do what they tell you. You see? And these religious exemptions just won't stand up, no way, we can't have that, that's an abuse. You see. It's always the same thing, isn't it?

They could never go so far as they've done without chipping away, chipping away, chipping away at religion, step by step by step. Most folk are the best Christians I've ever met, are quiet Christians. They'll stand up for themselves. They're not the ones, the TV type, you know, that go around there with the prosperity doctrine, you know, to make money, and God wants you to have gold now, you know, not in heaven, like one of them said, one of the preachers did say a while back. But no, most folk are quiet. But they have their beliefs. And there's enough of them. They can be a problem to people who want to take all the rights away from them, under whatever excuse, the common good, you know, and the greater good.

So communism always hammered at it. It was the first target of the French Revolution. And the Bolshevik revolution. Going on to the long term, Russian revolution, the Soviet era. And here it is all again, the same thing.

Do you ever look at the characters you see on television or in the news, spouting what they are spouting today, do you want to have them as your supreme leaders, and the Supreme Being over you? Do you really, don't you feel a bit of trepidation when you look at them and listen to them? Today especially? You'd better hear the warnings. And motivate yourselves. Because everyone here is involved. EVERYBODY'S involved right now and you're all going to get the ultimatum given to you individually. You know that.

You know, I look at different authors and the lives of some of these authors, like Aldous Huxley, a man who obviously was up there in the planning. He was in, because of his family connections, on the big agenda. That's what he came out with, Brave New World, that science would dominate and control, and that's all it would be, no mention of a supreme being or anything above that sort of thing, some deity, some God. In Brave New World it was just purely secular and science running everything right down to the breeding of people, and the nonhuman births even or pregnancies really, everybody was grown in a test tube to an extent and sperm and ovum came out of the same selected batches over and over, they'd been altered to perfection supposedly.

You had the division of labor, the communistic division of labor for those who don't know it, that's what the alpha, the betas, etc., were designed to do. The Alphas at the top were the natural leaders, that were designed to be the leaders, and there was Alpha Plus as well, but all the way down, right down to, it had the division of labor was done right down to menial tasks for certain types. And therapies and drugs naturally to keep people in line, if the ones at the bottom with their monotonous tasks and repetitive tasks, etc., in the advanced civilization that they had created.

But there's no mention anywhere of any particular deity. Religion had been abolished pretty well. The closest thing to it was in the books from the savages, some of the savages outside their huge, supposedly big magnificent utopias. The cities, outside it was the savages, remnants of the old ones who were born naturally and things like that, very primitive people they said. One of them, the main character in the book, the savage that they brought into the city to show him off, had read Shakespeare and other books too. He was talking about beauty and love, and the people couldn't imagine that, that he was mixing with there, the betas and so on.

They were too happy doing their own thing, free sex, a different partner every night. In fact it was illegal I think to have the same partner twice a week. Very important you see, no bond, you can't… If you bond to anybody you could be a problem, now there's two of you against the state perhaps. It's much easier when it's just you [Alan chuckles.] and the state is against you. So a family is taboo. But they bring him in and they kind of laugh at him and they see him as kind of quaint with these old-fashioned ideas of bonding and bringing up children yourselves and all that kind of thing. But they couldn't relate to him at all.

But really, when you think about it, what he was showing you was the artificial humans who had been altered, literally altered, genetically altered to be created to be what they are by humans. They were really different, they weren't the same human as the savage at all. He was natural ad they were not. They were unnatural. What really changes? You're back into the same area, whether you like it or not, of not just philosophy but religions going back for thousands and thousands, maybe even millions, who knows, of years, 'eh, of the questions that are asked about life in itself. And it always comes down to the same thing, that which is different from you, different, humanly different, hey.

And it takes me back again in a circle too, to the idea of all those that work in the realm of conology, back to conology again, you must participate in your own deception. The armies of people paid big money from your tax money to lie to you and convince you and deceive you and manipulate you and nudge you into doing that which perhaps is not in your best interests to do, on behalf of your government that dishes out the cash to these agencies with the instructions, are you content being lied to?

This is not conspiracy stuff. I've given the articles out for years and even the recent ones with the Sage units and the Nudge units, etc. and the Yale one that's ongoing right now with all its different levels of how to convince the public to do what they're told using psychology. Right down to scolding and getting other people to point fingers at you. They're not quite there. And to use all shaming techniques, all these terrible things, 'eh, to make you obey and comply. And yet you're supposed to be an individual being here.

You're either free or you're not free, I hope you understand the difference. If you want to define what freedom means, or chained, not free. If you have, if you're truly free, and have the rights of a free person, what's the first lie they tell you to take those rights from you? Well you see, you could be endangering others because you're not complying. No, that's called tyranny, folks. It's been used before. It always ends up in a horror show. We know this from history.

And getting back to what we were talking about, to the same guys, this goes around, you see my mind works, goes in circles. Because Malachi Martin talked about these characters, again, from the one he talked about in the library that he'd known for years without, maybe in the back of his mind he suspected something, it's almost a subconscious, or not even, something on the fringe, it's not into the consciousness yet but there's something there, and then it hits you one day.

Look at all these folk that run the world, the ones who sit up there and Lord over the general public with this air of superiority, all the top CEOs, as they mandate the world they're bringing in, on behalf of their masters. Because they do have Masters, these multimillionaire characters. They have Masters all right, you'd better believe it.

And what are these masters? Where is it leading to? You don't have to, you know, it's always been there, what I'm saying now has been said for thousands of years. But he talked about the perfectly possessed. Now, I'm sure psychiatrist can go off and pontificate for weeks about the same thing if they want to. Fine, let them do it, I don't care. [Alan chuckles.] But I've experienced people like that, who definitely have something in them. I have no problems with that at all, of understanding it and seeing it. And it's very real. And you have to say, are they simply just psychopaths?

I remember, and I've told other folk this over the years, if you draft up a list of signs and symptoms of the psychopath, of the nature and traits of the psychopath, and you list them, the signs and symptoms of the possessed, it's pretty well the same. In psychiatry they've got this big puzzle, oh, psychopaths are puzzles. Really? Are they really such? Because again in religion you don't say they are a puzzle. They're quite understandable. There's something in them. They don't react to horror the same way as we do. That's why they can commit such horror, and sleep at night, because they have no conscience. Where is the other place that you've been taught about, something that hates you in kind so much, the same way? Well, guess where?

I'm just bringing all these things up because you've got to ponder them. You really have to ponder them. Because you're living in such deception today. Really evil deception. Where when you uncover it, and it's eventually admitted to, yes, we are paying all the psychopaths to brainwash you and lie to you and deceive you to get what we want… for the greater good. [Alan chuckles.] And literally handing them out from the groups working for Sage in Britain, using taxpayers' money, to the groups that put out the instructions to all media on how to step up anxiety to frighten people into compliance by exaggerating stories and so on. Woah! This is admitted. This is published admissions here.

What kind of characters go home after terrifying the public and sleep well? Well, you can say psychopaths if you want. But eventually you're going to see a lot of compliance towards these psychopaths by folk that you might know, and local cops, and everybody else, as they start to enforce all these horrible mandates on the public. And you will individually, you're going to come down to the choice, you always knew it was coming. And it's a good thing to contemplate before it all happens. Isn't it?

In the meantime as I say, step-by-step hopefully you've done what I mentioned, try and get a few people to at least help each other out, swear to help each other out, do it. Because you'll all need help with what's coming down the pike here for basic necessity, just getting along. Because as I say, the food supply is a big target of those at the top. They want to destroy it to an extent to starve you into compliance.

I really mean this. This is war. These are all warfare strategies as we go into this, it's nothing to do with Covid. The Covid is a separate thing, that's an excuse, it's a milder thing than they said, it's hitting certain factions of society harder, we know this. And you can guess as much as you want if it's all accidental or it was purposely released, it's up to you what you want to think or believe.

But put it this way, I see them all in on it together, China and the West all working together. For goodness sake we know that the virus was in North Carolina, and then through Fauci and the rest of them, they made sure it got to Wuhan. They even financed Wuhan to continue the gain of function tests on it and so on, experiments. I mean there's nothing out there that you have to really guess at here. It's been published already by them.

But evil has to be stood up against. And personally, no matter what you think, humanisticly, secular-wise or anything, you should be really at least indignant at having your money, paying these evil characters that are finding ways to shame you and force you into complying with things that you shouldn't perhaps comply with. Some indignancy would certainly help. M-hm.

I've given so many talks about the system and their total warfare, as I said, has been going on my whole life long and my parents too, grandparents. You either had wars going on, in between the wars you had a Great Depressions, that lasted from after World War I right up into and into World War II and beyond World War II in Britain. Then after World War II the folk were still on rationing up until the 1950s and after that a lot of them couldn't even afford the meat then. You know, sacrifice, sacrifice for the greater good, you see.

And, hhhhhh, then when the folks started to get a little bit, you know, of money for the first time, a little bit, it took them years to get to even the 1980s where they started to actually see some money getting saved a little bit and so on. Then Margaret Thatcher privatized, which she should not have done, the Council housing systems, because it was technically owned by the municipalities, the people, and it guaranteed housing for all. All paid for by your grandparents and great-grandparents, already, so how could they even sell them off? But they did.

Then when they start to think they were getting ahead and so on, they're involved in all these foreign wars in the Middle East. Masses of migration into Britain, before that too, and then during it and afterwards, and across the whole of Europe because of it… the blowback that was all predicted before they started the wars. It was part of the strategy. Then they give you financial crash in 2007/8.

Then guess what you're into? Austerity, and here's the next part of it, and the big changes too, and the complete reworking and rebuilding of a world society based on socialism. Because they're done now with the so-called, the pretense of free enterprise and democracy. It's served its purpose. There's never a generation been given peace. Really. Think about that. They really haven't been given any peace. Wars, depressions, bank crashes, rip-offs, plundering of the economies. One thing after the other, 'eh?

And yet folk want to preserve a system, [Alan chuckles.] because they're brainwashed to think it was all real and it was there for them, they want to try to preserve that system for themselves. So whatever you do, yeah, you can't go back to the same crooks running you. You can't do it. With the pretense, you know, that they're there for you. You should really have had enough of all that nonsense. And you certainly don't want the communistic replacement for efficiency sake that the Masters now want, hm, the authoritarian society.

I know that when I look and listen to some of these radical front people who are put up there, they're all fronts, all of them, and you hear them completely altering reality, as you live through the reality, but what you're seeing and what you're noticing, as news, and they're preaching radical communism with all of that which it entails, which is mass slaughter down the road, maybe even sooner than you think, you've gotta say to yourself, what is in these people?

And even if you say, well, okay, they're front people for much bigger organizations, which they certainly are. Because I know for a fact, they would change their tune if they were told to give the opposite points of view and they'd still get up the ladder to power, they would do it overnight, immediately. They are what we call psychopaths certainly. But is that all that's in them?

And then you have to say, why would you accept the system with such psychopaths that are picked and chosen and trained and employed and used by the elite to rule over you to change you? Why are you doing it? Why are you accepting this? You hearing them say blatant lies every darn day, which can have no resolution, any practical sense to bring peace on earth, put it that way. It's meant to create incredible divisions. And because it's based mainly on Marxist fantasy, it can't be satisfied anyway.

It's a system based on hate with targets, and those who are taught to hate are told who their targets are… That's not going to end peacefully. But the people at the very top of the world are backing them right now, backing them financially. Which tells you, and I know that even in the Irish Sentinel that they're talking about what should really have to be done, if these characters are overthrowing a system that you're in and not for the greater good, put it that way, then really it's treason, it's insurrection, it's tyranny. In any real system it would have to be dealt with. And put on trial for what they're doing and what they're going to do, [Alan chuckles.] what they're talking about doing, to everybody, and dealt with and charged.

But the problem of course is the fact that the structural system in which we live, the whole structure is theirs in the first place with its police, and everything to do with forces, when you hear force, like a military force or police force, these are their instruments which they will use. And unfortunately forces tend to always go along with whoever rules them. Even when their country is invaded, the police immediately go to work the next day for the new master, you know, it doesn't stop. That's the unfortunate part of it.

Police and everything today is completely politicized with different people being the focus of police attention, especially in the States right now. And across Europe too. Where other groups are left completely alone, because they've got an elevated status because of some minority position or something like that. There's nothing fair about the system today. It's been completely destroyed in regards to fairness and logic.

But yeah, folk who are deliberately paying to have the countries overthrown to bring in the new system on behalf of those who already rule it at the top, and have done it quietly for a long, long time behind the scenes, and you're all going to have to suffer because of it because they've decided to change their world which they believe they own. Without your permission to do so, like you have no rights at all? I mean, it's up to you if you want to accept that or not. But these people who are funding massive, hhch, overthrow of a system that belonged supposedly to everybody, hm, okay it's a farce we know that, but supposedly belongs to everybody, you're all paying for it, and they're changing it for their agenda at the top using all instruments at the bottom for themselves? And funding groups that are radically [Alan chuckles.] burning down parts of cities and so on, funding them?

As I said before, under the terrorist law, anti-terrorism law, if you accept money from terrorist organizations, you know, it's the same if you're giving money to a terrorist organizations, you are classed as a terrorist. Well, what happens with all these CEOs and corporations here? You either have the laws or you don't have the laws. You can't select it, it can't be selectively enforced. But this is the new system to be brought in, with all these things in play at the time.

The WEF, the World Economic Forum has already stated along with the Club of Rome and others too, that work for the big, big global structure, they've already said that all the sustainability rules that they couldn't get the public to accept, you know, for like depopulation and post consumerism and the service economy, all this kind of stuff that I talked about years ago, if they couldn't get it done that way they can get it done by using, under the cover of Covid and they could only allow the companies that would go along with sustainability to reopen. The ones who they deemed in their, what d'you call them, star chambers, you know, hhch, where you don't know your accuser, they'll just decide that you're not sustainable, not essential, etc. and you can't reopen, yada, yada, ya.

And you're going to accept this? Hm? Hhhhhhhh, dear. Folk, they really don't know, and this is the sad part, the path you're on, you see, you're managed step by step to give in and to concede, step by step by step by step, in the hope that somehow they'll miss you and it won't get as bad as you suspect it might. That's how it works, every time. This isn't the first time in history this kind of thing has happened. M-hm. So there you are.

Now, I'm going to touch on a few articles tonight. But again, I've gotta keep reminding you, go to cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Buy the books and discs or donate to me. You can use PayPal, you can send cash, there's other ways to get money to me, checks, and I think Money Gram too is still on the go. But it helps me tick along. And remember as I say, make a note of all the sites I have, my official sites because they are mine. If you can't get my articles up fast enough when I put them up on Sunday nights, then go into my site first before. Because some people will take it, you see, to put up on video instead and they've got work to do and processing to do and it can take a longer time to do. So if you're really in a hurry you can get MP3 at my site cuttingthroughthematrix.com. But again, help me tick along and donate to me. Because really you have no idea what we are going into here.

Now, a few articles just to bolster what I'm talking about at times. But again, just the things to make you ponder about. As I say, like Malachi Martin and his explanation of things, is it really that far-fetched? Do you really think it's just that humans are just horrible people who just go into mass slaughters and so on? Or what takes them over? What's at the top that pushes this kind of thing, you know?

And who benefits from it? You've always got to say, who benefits? Well, the ones who plan it. But what's in them? I've met some of the characters near the top and really, there's something, there's no doubt there's something in them. They're as cool as can be, like cucumbers, cool as can be. And they're not, they don't stress. Yeah, you could certainly say they're psychopaths, they're not stressed, psychopaths can't handle stress, you understand, so they don't generally have it. They'll work off stress by getting into someone else's head, near them, even a couple of people, and having them argue with each other, they'll sit back and watch the conflict that they've started. Just sit back and watch it. That pleases them. They get a release from it. That's what a psychopath does. They're perfect for that. It's an amazing gift they have if you want to call it a gift. But the ones at the top literally can make horrible decisions, but to them it's all practical. They don't feel it, you know.

Now, here's an example right here, 'eh. I've mentioned the Yale study that's ongoing, on ways to convince the public, I might put it up again, the link to that one.

US Gov and Yale Hold Clinical Trials To Test “Persuasive Messages For COVID-19 Vaccine Uptake” - collective-evolution.com / 3 Aug 2020

They're getting paid by your tax money to convince you to go along with it. And they'll shame you and nudge you and get folk to turn against you and all the rest of it, to make you comply and conform, right. But here's one of these characters, these bioethicists, this fairly recent, you know, term. I remember when they first launched them back in the, about the early 2000s, and you heard bioethics, bioethics.   Professors would put up little bits and quips, we're bioethicists, you see, we know what's best for humanity.   All you have to do is convince the public to just go along with it, you see, you'd better let your betters decide for you. You see, you haven't been trained to be good psychopath, it's not easy to train you because it's a gift that you're born with being a psychopath, you know. Yep. No conscience required. This is this guy who's one of them, right…

‘Morality pills’ may be the US’s best shot at ending the coronavirus pandemic, according to one ethicist

theconversation.com / 10 Aug 2020

(Alan: There you are, morality pill.)

Parker Crutchfield does not work for, consult, own shares in or receive funding from any company or organization that would benefit from this article and has disclosed no relevant affiliations beyond their academic appointment.

(A: Right. So it's either that or it's a resume to get employed, who knows? [Alan chuckles.] But I don't believe him anyway.)

COVID-19 is a collective risk. (A: There you are.) It threatens everyone, and we all must cooperate to lower the chance that the coronavirus harms any one individual.

(A: So it comes down to anyone, any ONE getting harmed, right, any one, right, and that's an excuse that you've already heard from Fauci and all, if anybody gets harmed, you see, this is, when you hear the same terms used, this guy is in on it, right. And it's a collective...

It threatens everyone ...

(A: Now, they started at the very beginning even with that, oh, don't worry, it's only the immunocompromised and the elderly that get sick and they die from it. Remember that? Remember that one? Don't worry about it, that's what they said. In fact, Fauci said he didn't think that the US had much to worry about at all back in January and February. I remember that one as well. So again, if you're diabetic, or if you're obese, high blood pressure, etc., comorbidities, then you might get a problem, you see, that's what they said. But most folk, you see, won't even know they've had it. But this guy rechanges reality again...)

It threatens everyone...

(A: How does it threaten everyone when a tiny minority get sick, and an even tinier minority die with it? Hm? Until he brings it down to if it...)

...harms any one individual.

(A: So, his whole stance on changing the whole system, right, and that you'd better just comply with your betters, and they said, just one person could get harmed, right, that would be the first in history even for common cold that kills some folk every year too, who've got comorbidities or some simple flu.)

Among other things, that means keeping safe social distances and wearing masks.

(A: Even though the CDC in May put up on their own website, right, that the masks don't do any good AT ALL against Covid. Right? So even though the so-called top, top, top experts say it's no use to you, guys like this are trying to, for the greater good, want you all to wear masks, even though it's causing harm, right. And the social distancing, as I say, came out of a computer model, nothing to do with reality. In fact, all countries have different distances you have to keep apart. [Alan laughing.]   So he goes on to say…)

But many people choose not to do these things, making spread of infection more likely. (A: N-n.)

When someone chooses not to follow public health guidelines around the coronavirus, they’re defecting from the public good.

(A: So, you're BAD, you're BAD, you see.)

It’s the moral equivalent of the tragedy of the commons: If everyone shares the same pasture for their individual flocks, some people are going to graze their animals longer, or let them eat more than their fair share, ruining the commons in the process. Selfish and self-defeating behavior undermines the pursuit of something from which everyone can benefit.

(A: Really? So here's persuasion from a bioethicist at work, see? M-hm. I should also add to him, because he also hasn't studied history, that the Commons were taken from them by the Lord's bit by bit by bit. Look at the Levelers in Britain for instance, you know, and the Diggers, when the Diggers tried to get the Commons and start using it again. Because they'd been getting pushed off the common grazing pasture. It wasn't just grazing, it was for vegetables for themselves, that's all that they had most of them.)

(A: I mean vegetarianism was nothing new for the common people. That's all they could get. Hhch. And Walter Riley and these newly knighted people who were pirates really, were the last ones to take the land off the Diggers, they send in the troops when he was given the land, Walter Riley was granted the land, now that he was a Sir, you know, by the Queen. And that's a different thing. Anyway, I'm getting waylaid here from this article.)

(A: So, you're all guilty, you see, it's your own fault because you want something and it's selfish behavior.)

Democratically enacted enforceable rules (A: Where is the democratically enacted enforceable rules? Democratically enacted…) – mandating things like mask wearing and social distancing – might work, if defectors could be coerced into adhering to them. But not all states have opted to pass them or to enforce the rules that are in place.

(A: This guy has got all the makings of a real tyrant, you know. Uuuuuuuu. He hasn't given you one bit of evidence to say why any of this works. Even though some countries ignored it all and they're fine, and they haven't destroyed their economies in the process. So it says…)

My research in bioethics focuses on questions like how to induce those who are noncooperative to get on board with doing what's best for the public good. To me, it seems the problem of coronavirus defectors could be solved by moral enhancement: like receiving a vaccine to beef up your immune system, (A: ...that's a moral enhancement.) people could take a substance to boost their cooperative, pro-social behavior. Could a psychoactive pill be the solution to the pandemic?

(A: There ya go.)

It's a far-out proposal that's bound to be controversial, (A: No kidding. He gives you links to all this stuff.) but one I believe is worth at least considering, given the importance of social cooperation in the struggle to get COVID-19 under control.

Public goods games show scale of the problem

He goes on and on and on. You just won't cooperate, you see, you just won't cooperate. You won't do what you're told by guys like experts, you know. Hhhhh, a morality pill might be the answer to it. You're not complying, aaaaaaach, we'll force you to take this pill here. Go right to your brain and before you know it you'll sign on to anything, 'eh. There ya go, that's his answer. That's Democratic, isn't it? They're out there, aren't they, these characters. They really are, they really are out there, aren't they. N-n-n. Quite something.

And then you get this one, you know. Interesting again because you see, all the stuff I'm talking about here was planned years ago. Digital currency testing, I remember in Canada doing the articles on radio at the time, I was on radio, of places in Canada where they were testing out literally nothing but digital currency, on credit cards and things like that, and no money at all, giving folk the usual little incentives and extras to go along with it, using certain cities in Ontario for instance as the testbeds for it. Old idea.

Then the World Bank came out a few years ago saying, it's about time now to push digital currency and get rid of cash all together. I did all those articles too. So this is their excuse to do it, you see. You need a good terror campaign to push all these things forward. It works wonders. So…

China To Begin Major Expansion Of Digital Currency Testing

zerohedge.com / 15 Aug 2020

China's Commerce Ministry released new details Friday of a pilot program for the country's central bank digital currency (CBDC) to be expanded to several metropolitan areas, including Guangdong-Hong Kong-Macao Greater Bay Area, Beijing-Tianjin-Hebei region, and Yangtze River Delta region.

The Commerce Ministry is currently running pilot tests in four cities: Xiong'an New Area, Shenzhen, Suzhou, and Chengdu. The People's Bank of China (PBoC), the country's central bank, is supervising the rollout of the CBDC pilot program on a city by city basis.

(A: So, they're going to use the digital Yuan for the digital currency.)

Beijing owned China Global Television Network (CGTN) said test subjects would be able to "withdraw money, make payments, and transfer money after registering with their mobile phone number.

(A: So, your phone is the big key to it as always.)

The banks are also testing a scenario where users can transfer money without the internet."

So, this is the way. And it ties in too with your, basically your social standing program where you've got a social status basically, a program. Because everyone's getting that. And with the Covid idea, everything is getting rammed through. Everything that they've been talking about at the World Economic Forum for years and years, and the CFR in their Foreign Affairs magazines, all the agendas, and the Club of Rome that published it too, they can get all their agendas through under Covid. Isn't that amazing, 'eh? Like they just, they must be praising Covid for making it all happen. ALL of it. I don't mean some of it, BUT all of it. [Alan chuckles.] Isn't that amazing, 'eh?

In Australia, Australia, it's quite amazing. I've mentioned before that the countries that England or London used run and rule, this corporation called Britain, you know, the UK, or Great Britain as it was then, and it's a Corporation, it is a corporation, a maritime corporation, maritime law. But all of it is countries that it owned basically, it was called the Dominion, you see, of Britain, Great Britain. And Canada was called the Dominion up until not that long ago, the dominion of Great Britain, Canada. Now it's just part of the Commonwealth again, 'eh. But it says Australia, Australia is really going to town with it, isn't it. It says…

Australian Five- And Ten-Cent Coins To Disappear As Pandemic Ushers In 'Cashless Society'

Well, Canada did away with pennies and things, and they were talking about doing away with nickels, and then dimes eventually, they hope, in the process too. The little incentive is, when you get, when you're using cash, you know, when the money's not there they don't give you the proper change, eventually, so you get shortchanged each time. Until you say, oooo, I'm fed up with this, I'll just start using digital. That's what… You see how they prompt and force and coerce you into doing what they want you to do, 'eh? Hm? And as I've said before, when your choices are taken from you, eventually when crisis happens, then you don't have any other choices, you're done for. Don't laugh at having choices. So it says…

Australian Five- And Ten-Cent Coins To Disappear As Pandemic Ushers In 'Cashless Society'

zerohedge.com / 20 Aug 2020

Leading up to the pandemic, coin circulation in Australia experienced a sharp decline in the use of 5 and 10 cent coins.

(A: Can they prove that?)

Royal Australian Mint CEO Ross MacDiarmid told ABC News that he expects 5 and 10 cent coins to be phased out of circulation in the coming years, adding that the pandemic has likely shortened the natural life of coins.

(A: Wow. There ya go.)

Amazing how pandemics, this pandemic's done everything that they wanted, 'eh? They blame everything on it. My Internet speed is blamed on Covid. No kidding you. Slow speed. Oh, it's the Covid, you know. And I talked to the guy and I says, why don't you just give some antiviral medication or an expectorant to the satellite? Everything's to be blamed on it. What a joke, 'eh!

Everything is, you see, even with farming, and the food supply will start crashing and blah, blah, blah. It's not because, it's not Covid that caused it. It's the RESPONSE, this engineered response too, a preordained response that's destroying everything, folks. And killing folk. And more to come.

I just want to touch on one thing on this article before I forget it. Getting back to the value of life, and with bioethicists now saying, yeah, you shouldn't live more than 65 years. I mean, really, you shouldn't even get your pension, the state could do with the pension money and use it for better things, you know, that you paid into all your whole life. They've had professors come out and say this kind of thing. Again, it's bioethics, you know, as they train you that you're a piece of you know what.

Just take euthanasia, it's painless these days, you know. And it's cheap. We don't want to treat you for anything, you know, oh, older folk would cost money. Barack Obama had that in his speech when he was running for presidency. Oh, my grandmother, he was on about his granny all the time, and she must've cost the state quite a lot of money. So what! How much money did he throw at the wars? How much money are they throwing at vaccine companies? Trillions of bucks across the planet! Trillions of bucks for all things that won't be used. Trillions of bucks to keep everybody from going to work. And then they'll try and tell you, to treat you for something, oooohh, it's just too expensive.

Do you understand, when you see a failure in logic and the continuity of logic, you're being deceived, folks. Hm. So yeah, getting back to the article…

The Reserve Bank of Australia (RBA) recently published data showing the rapid decline of physical currency used in transactions over the last half-decade.

Yep. So they're trying to say that, well, it's time maybe just to get off cash altogether and use contactless payments and stuff. That way they can monitor every single person on the planet and withhold it if you're bad, bad, bad. And if they withhold it, they won't let you use your own account for a week or a month to punish you, because you're asocial or you've been politically incorrect, you have no cash system to use anymore. D'you see how it starts to work, folks? Hm? That's how the animals get trained. M-hm.

Australia's big four banks remove thousands of ATMs (A: That's just a coincidence, probably because of Covid.) and shut down hundreds of branches as the coronavirus crisis pushes nation closer to a cashless society - dailymail.co.uk / 16 Aug 2020

Aaaah, the Covid again, 'eh, it just shuts down all these machines and so on, and branches, so you're going to have to use nothing but cashless, cashless, cashless. Hm? There ya go, Covid, Covid, again. And then this article here, there's a whole bunch actually on banks, a whole stack of them. [Alan chuckles.]

Doctors banned from prescribing potential COVID-19 drug

brisbanetimes.com.au / 8 April 2020

(A: And this is in Australia again, in Queensland. It says…)

New prescription rules, brought into effect in Queensland on Tuesday, mean clinicians are banned from prescribing the drug, (A: …and it's that...) hydroxychloroquine, as a COVID-19 treatment.

(A: …that hydroxychloroquine one, that you're not supposed to mention, you know, it's banned. Hydroxychloroquine, as a Covid 19 treatment. So, the doctors are banned from prescribing it, and get a $13,000 fine.)

Doctors who prescribe an anti-malarial drug being trumpeted as a potential COVID-19 treatment face a $13,000 fine.

(A: Isn't that astonishing? When you qualify as a doctor, you're supposed to have the license to prescribe anything you see fit. But again, that's in the old system of freedom. This is the new freedom, freedom to do and obey what you're told to do by ones at the top.)

Hydroxychloroquine is an anti-malarial now used to treat autoimmune conditions such as lupus and rheumatoid arthritis.

(A: Right. This goes on to say…)

There is no solid evidence it is effective against COVID-19

I'll put up articles too, because remember, you see, Fauci said during the SARS and the MERS one, it was effective, it was okay for that coronavirus, you see. But at that time, you know, he didn't really have his pals at Gilead going with antivirals and things. You know what I'm saying? You know? Apart from that this particular hydroxychloroquine is awfully cheap. Awfully cheap. M-hm. So anyway, yep they banned it there in Australia. Australia is awfully authoritarian now. It's just sad. M-hm.

Was COVID-19 a Cover for an Anticipated or Planned Financial Crisis?

globalresearch.ca / 20 Aug 2020

A major sign of financial distress in the US economy kicked in in mid-September of 2019 when there was a breakdown in the normal operation of the Repo Market. This repurchase market in the United States is important in maintaining liquidity in the financial system.

It goes on and on and on. But I'll put this one up for those that want to read about economics and so on. But of course it's all part of that too. This is the global reset. They've said it at the WEF, World Economic Forum, it's a reset of all the currencies of the planet to go under the auspices, again, of the World Bank and the Bank for International Settlements, that's to get the final authority. Caroll Quigley talked about this in the 60s it would end up this way.

Here’s A List Of Corporations Funding (A: Right.) The ‘Defund The Police’ Movement

dailycaller.com / 17 Aug 2020

(A: It gives you them here.)

Prominent corporations from around the world are bankrolling the “defund the police” movement, a Daily Caller News Foundation review found.

Companies including Cisco, Clif Bar, Degree, DoorDash, DropBox, H&M and Pokemon announced donations to organizations that seek to defund the police.

Black Lives Matter Global Network and Color of Change are open about their desire to defund the police.

Both organizations have received an outpouring of corporate donations in recent months.

I think they also had government money thrown at them. Even though they're Marxist organizations, you know. M-hm-hm. Which means that those companies and the governments that are putting money towards these things are terrorists. Isn't that amazing, 'eh? M-m-m. And again, the ones who are following them, the leaders know who's paying them and financing them, the followers are not, you know, they're always used. Always used.

I've mentioned before that Millie Weaver documentary that was put out last week there. I think it's on Bitchute now, it was taken off YouTube, it's on Bitchute. It does go into that, regardless of what you might think of the documentary or your decisions are on it, the fact is, it shows you the workings of intelligence agencies, some of it, and how quickly they can alter everything in real-time on the Internet, including what you're doing or anything about you, or even to change what you're saying in real time, and change even information coming in to you, even if it's voice in real time as it's happening, and much, much more.

And also to do with the big corporations, the military-industrial complex that have already got a lot of these robot things to push, put out into society, all they need is the contracts signed. But first, you've got to get a problem or a crisis. So you defund the police, the crime goes sky high until folk, including some of the mayors that were pushing it already, are screaming and hollering, and in come the robots, 'eh, the new system. You know, rethinking, reimagining police. This is the terms that the WEF comes up with, and the Club of Rome, the reimagining, and Bill Gates, reimagining education, the system, stay at home and educate the children at home with computers, 'eh. Reimagining. Of course they give you the curriculum to make sure they're standardized and they're all equally brainwashed across the world. Clever, 'eh? Diabolical perhaps, 'eh?

Dozens of corporations from around the world have collectively donated millions of dollars to left-wing organizations that advocate for defunding America’s police departments, a Daily Caller News Foundation review found.

Companies including Microsoft (A: Naturally.), Intel and Airbnb have donated to Black Lives Matter Global Network and Color of Change, both of which want to defund police departments across the country.

And a lot of celebrities too...

‘A Violent Institution’: These Celebrities Are Funding The ‘Defund The Police’ Movement - dailycaller.com / 4 Aug 2020

(A: ...as they all move… [Alan chuckles.] They're all leaving Hollywood, 'eh, [Alan chuckles.] but they're telling you to defund the police movement. [Alan laughing.]   Oh dear, dear. There ya go. I tell ya. M-hm.)

It goes on and on and on. Yeah, I wonder if they ever stop and think, why are the richest folk on the planet funding them? The ones that they're actually complaining about, like who rule and own the system, are funding them to create mayhem to get what they want, you see. This is… You wish they'd figure it out.

Germany to test universal basic income by handing people £1,080 (A: ...pounds, that's pounds, like British pounds.) per month regardless of whether they have a job

dailymail.co.uk / 19 Aug 2020

Researchers will give 120 Germans £1,080 per month as universal basic income

Experiment will test how their attitudes and behaviours change as a result

Comes as support for nationwide scheme gained traction amid the pandemic

Spain has already announced plans for basic income to help economy recover

(A: It can't recover, folks, when you're paying folk not to work. Hm? How can the economy recover if you're paying folk not to work? But the whole plan really is because you're superfluous now. All your factories went off long ago to China and the Far East and it was all signed in under free trade negotiations. Again, through the World Economic Forum, the WEF groups all involved with the GATT treaties and so on. M-hm. They probably weren't asked if they wanted it, I mean, do you mind losing all your factories and all your employment and so on? So it was worked out 20 odd, 25, 30 years ago that eventually you'd get to this stage where they would just pay you to stay home. And now they're going to study them. They've done these tests before by the way, basic income studies and so on. So they're going to make it run for at least three years.)

It comes as public support for basic income schemes rises across Europe amid the coronavirus pandemic.

It's amazing, it's all to do with coronavirus. This virus is changing everything all by itself. Another one too is…

Fed's "Direct Money Transfers" Are Coming: Brainard Says Fed Collaborating With MIT On "Hypothetical" Digital Currency

zerohedge.com / 14 Aug 2020

(A: Oh, here it goes again, 'eh, it's probably because of Covid as well, I bet you. So this says…)

One week ago, we published a remarkable interview with two former Fed economists - Simon Potter (who was also the former head of the Fed's Plunge Protection Team for many years) and Julia Coronado (A: [Alan chuckles.] That's close to Corona, 'eh, Coronado…) - who have tremendous impact and influence on prevailing thinking at the Federal Reserve, and who hinted at the Fed's last ditch reflationary strategy: wiring digital money into Americans' financial apps, bypassing the reserve system entirely, and sparking an inflationary conflagration. As we said last Monday, "the two propose creating a monetary tool that they call recession insurance bonds, which draw on some of the advances in digital payments, which will be wired instantly to Americans."

(A: Aach. [Alan chuckles.]   The Federal Reserve is not federal, as we know. It's been really a racket since it was created. But it doesn't matter if they're going to be in charge of paper money or coin or digital, it's the same people running it. If you ever wanted a real war that would be the one. Because they'll never give up that. Can you imagine the power to run the Federal Reserve, 'eh?!   Hm, the power. Where no one, no one investigates YOU. You are your own power. M-hm. You've already heard in the past crashes guys like Greenspan saying, no they can do what they want basically, they're not subject to government dictates. Yeah, I'm telling ya. So...)

From "The Fed Is Planning To Send Money Directly To Americans In The Next Crisis"

...it says here, and it's got links to that as well, stay at home, stay at home, paid to stay at home. But everything, there's nothing for free, I hope you understand that. There's nothing for free. And the more you do for government, or get from government, the more they demand OF you. And they've got an awful lot of demands all lined up, step-by-step until your life is going to be ruled by them. Roll up your sleeves maybe once a month, who knows? Forever, 'eh, how about that? Oh, you want to eat good food? Oh, here's something you have to, here's a few hoops you have to jump through in that case to get the privilege. Everything is a privilege now.

I hope you understand, I'm not kidding you here. This is what it's all about folks. This is where it's all going, very quickly. Very, very quickly.

Never take anything from government. NEVER! Because they will, they will, they want it in blood, maybe literally, in payment, you know, the way things are going. And if you've got a blood that they want, [Alan chuckles.] maybe more than you'd imagine, [Alan chuckles.] if they're after it.

Celebrities, 'eh, they are funding defund the police movement. It mentions…

‘A Violent Institution’: These Celebrities Are Funding The ‘Defund The Police’ Movement - dailycaller.com / 4 Aug 2020

Celebrities including Anna Kendrick, Ellen (A: ...Degenerate. [Alan chuckles.] I always call her the same thing.) DeGeneres, Jennifer Aniston, Justin Bieber, Leonardo DiCaprio, John Legend, Olivia Culpo and Rihanna have donated to organizations that want to defund the police.

Black Lives Matter Global Network, Color of Change and the Movement for Black Lives are among the groups to benefit from a flood of donations from celebrities.

All three groups are working to defund the police. The Movement for Black Lives wants to abolish prisons as well as police.

(A: So there ya go, they've got a wonderful utopia, and it goes on and on and on. So they want to abolish everything that inflict violence on black people.)

“We believe that prisons, police and all other institutions that inflict violence on Black people must be abolished and replaced by institutions that value and affirm the flourishing of Black lives,” the website states.

(A: .... utopia, 'eh? Utopia.)

You understand, the problems in society today are so vast. People are dysfunctional because of a whole bunch of reasons, and never mind the drugs that have been flooding in and promoted. And don't forget that drugs were promoted with the pop revolution into the rock revolution, promoted, promoted, promoted. Society uses it all, and it all goes to you know where. Very quickly. All intentional. Now you end up with this kind of thing happening, where folk have no work, they have no future, they seem to have no purpose, and they've got lots of drugs. And then their brains go with it, all chaos happens in their lives. You can't be functional and on drugs at the same time. Then you have all these fallout organizations set up to manage the chaos. It doesn't work. So just dropping the police isn't going to be the answer, believe you me. It's much bigger than that.

But again, all these characters too, it tells you a lot of who they are, and who make, the star machinery owns the people that they make stars. They own them, the stars that they make. I hope you understand. So they can call on these characters all the time and, you know, they've got offers they can't refuse and orders they can't refuse.

Coronavirus: Governments slammed for 'treating celebrities different to residents' in quarantine

9news.com.au / 22 Jul 2020

(A: Again, we mentioned Nicole Kidman earlier. It says...)

Keith Urban and Nicole Kidman, as well as Dannii Minogue, have all been granted quarantine exemptions to self-isolate in their mansion homes in NSW and Queensland.

(A: I think they also have, I read an article, they also have two homes in the States, at least two in the States, one I think in Nashville they're moving to, and one in Italy itself too, you know, naturally.)

...have all been granted quarantine exemptions to self-isolate in their mansion homes in NSW and Queensland.

The celebrities were allowed to pay for their own security teams to ensure they could stay in their own homes while filming television programs.

(A: That's nice to be allowed that, 'eh, you know?)

...have all been granted quarantine exemptions...

Queenslander Nicola Ferguson, however, will have to pay thousands for her stay in a cramped Brisbane hotel room after flying back from New Zealand, where she said goodbye to her dying mother and organised her funeral.

"Money obviously talks a lot louder than the average taxpaying citizen in Australia," she said.

"Nobody disputes that quarantine is necessary. It is not necessary from a COVID-free country."

...will have to pay thousands for her stay in a cramped Brisbane hotel room...

Ms Ferguson was denied a quarantine exemption of her own when she requested to isolate in her house, (A: ...her own house...) despite New Zealand currently having no community transmission of coronavirus.

(A: Well, that doesn't matter. I mean, it doesn't matter if it doesn't even exist in that country, you know, you've got to pay for it, woman, come on, you're not famous. So anyway, that's what it is, the rich and the poor, you know. All depends who you are, doesn't it?)

Queensland Health responded to her request by saying it "does not meet the threshold for exceptional circumstances".

(A: But it's okay if it's Nicole Kidman that meets the threshold. Somebody's and nobody's. There ya go.)

But folk are all flooding out of, say, LA, I know that much, and other places too right now. M-m-m. And folk who are, say, important, you see, that’s essential for plays and dramas where they're incorporating all the story of the Covid thing into the dramas and that to make you copy, be and comply and behave the way they are telling you to comply IN the drama. It works awfully well. So they're essential, you see, that's why they do all this stuff. I'm not kidding you. I'm not being facetious here.

This one's about China...

China’s national-security law (A: They're really going at it now in China.) reaches into Harvard, Princeton classrooms foxbusiness.com / 19 Aug 2020

Professors at elite U.S. universities turn to code names, warning labels to protect students

The effect of the new national-security law that China imposed on Hong Kong is extending far beyond the territory to American college campuses.

So, courses that China considers politically sensitive, so anyone's who's taking them from China, they're just giving them fake names and so on so that China itself won't really know who they are, taking these particular courses supposedly. That's the excuse anyway.

Another one too is put up by Google... Interestingly enough. One of the biggest spy organizations out there, it’s part of the massive world intelligence service, this Google. It was from the beginning. So they put out this article here being the good guys, you see, because they’re in it with Facebook and all the rest of it that are censoring certain peoples.

The way Aussies search every day on Google is at risk from new regulation

about.google

Open letter to Australians

We need to let you know about new Government regulation that will hurt how Australians use Google Search and YouTube.

A proposed law, the News Media Bargaining Code, would force us to provide you with a dramatically worse Google Search and YouTube, could lead to your data being handed over to big news businesses, and would put the free services you use at risk in Australia.

(A: So, what's new regulation coming out, and they're trying to say that, like it's almost like they're saying it's not really their fault, right. [Alan chuckles.])

You trust us with your data and our job is to keep it safe. Under this law, Google has to tell news media businesses “how they can gain access” to data about your use of our products.

(A: Well, they've been doing that forever, that's what Google's about. N-n-n. Giving big companies special treatment, 'eh?)

Hollywood, the ones who are funding all the... the poor souls that are getting their businesses burned down.

Hollywood Apocalypse: The rich and famous are fleeing in droves as liberal politics and coronavirus turn City of Dreams into cesspit plagued by junkies and violent criminals

dailymail.co.uk / 16 Aug 2020

(A: It goes into examples...)

Set just a few hundred yards from the ocean in sun-kissed Venice Beach, Los Angeles, Gold's was the backdrop for Pumping Iron, the 1977 documentary which followed a young, unknown Austrian bodybuilder called Arnold Schwarzenegger as he prepared for the Mr Universe contest.

Yet today Gold's sits amid post-apocalyptic scenes which have consumed much of LA, turning the City of Dreams into an urban nightmare from which people are fleeing in droves.

Makeshift tents...

I remember last year I read articles where you had, oh, hundreds and hundreds of just mobile homes and cars, folks living in them on the main streets and so on, coming in, because they had lost their homes elsewhere, in other states too. The first thing you do is to go where you don't have to pay for heating, for goodness sake, that's essential, 'eh, if you lose all your financial income. And the rents are so astronomically corruptly obscene, a lot of folk can't afford it. So they go to places where, yeah, where you can at least not die of freezing, like it is in Britain, that die in the winter and now it's normal, it's accepted, again because of bioethics, you see, that's acceptable.

So anyway, here's, yeah, they talk about how bad it is now in LA, it's the same in San Francisco. Again, this, ha! Look at it too, you've got so many thousands of people living in tents, you've also got everyone complaining in LA and in other cities when these tent cities come, there's needles everywhere because they are ALL on drugs, and often the syringes are supplied to them. And in some places too, the drugs are supplied to them by the state too. ‘Safe injections’ they call it. Come on, folks! This is beyond soma, hm. N-n-n.

These are all techniques to create a class that will literally accept the final exit by the bioethics committees, you know. It really is. That's what it's all about, folks, essential/nonessential. I said it years ago, with all this demand that there's too many people, there's too many of you that they’re on about constantly from the top, the Sierra Club and all the other big groups, the Duke of Edinburg belong to as an example, one example. Too many of you, David Attenborough. Jacques Cousteau, too many of you.

I said, d’you think that they were going to keep you hanging around as pets when they have no work for you or no use for you, they can't use you to gain an income? Do you think they're going to keep you as pets? I did this talk years ago. No, they’ll convince you what they want you to do by making it so bad.

By the way, I want to mention a series I'll put up if I find any links to it. I don't know if you can get access to it. It was put up by Britain in 2013 called Utopia, it's a six part series. There's actually two, the first series and the second series. But the first is about literally what we're talking about, an elite who already rule the world, just coincidentally, a secret society that is, you know, has all the power, who can, they've infiltrated MI6 and CIA, they've got members everywhere. Their whole thing is to prevent overpopulation of the planet by basically releasing a virus, then offering the vaccination, which in the early phases of the show tells you will also sterilize the people who get the vaccine. And it goes through this convoluted story, with amazing graphic violence, just for the sake of violence, and sex and all the rest of it and things, the PC stuff that they have to shove in there.

But yeah, a lot of the story is actually in there, [Alan chuckles.] including the twist at the end of they want to eradicate most of the public, that's the big, big secret, most of the public, not just sterilize them, but eradicate them completely and so on and so on; you see some of them turning on each other towards the end. But there you go. And they have the big guys at the top that are into this altering the genetic makeup of the individuals that are going to survive. That's exactly what this new RNA vaccine is going to be by Moderna, ha, it's going to all to your genetic makeup, 'eh. Permanently.

What a coincidence. I've always talked about predictive programming, how they give it to you in entertainment so when it comes out in reality it seems kind of familiar and you don't really question it much, it seems natural. Because you've been fed little bits and pieces of it, and it is familiar to you, even if you haven't consciously really dwelled on it, it's familiar to you and you accept it more easily. The behaviorists know this, you see. That's how it's done. Lots of things like that out there.

It's called Utopia and it's a two-part series. Each part, one, has got six episodes, I think part two is the same. If you can get a hold of it. Someone sent it to me luckily and it was interesting to watch it. Predictable from my point of view but it's interesting, they even had it all out there, Bill Gates type character in 2013 where he talked openly about the depopulation and so on.

And just before I finish on that one, you find generally these characters who write these things are paid and coached by the ones who really do run the world on the topics they're going to write about. But the guy who wrote Make Room, Make Room from which they took the story for Soylent Green, that's where it came from, it was called Make Room, Make Room. The guy literally admitted, yeah, he was approached by some of the eugenicists at the top to actually promote that idea in his story, that's what it was about, to try to get the public to think about it, that there's too many of them, you see, so they would maybe not have children or something like that, and persuade them not to do it. That's where that story Soylent Green came from, Make Room, Make Room was the original story.

The same thing happened of course with, well, many, many movies of course, Logan's Run, that was one of the other ones too. It makes it sink home, the idea there's too many of you. And the idea that, really, I could tell right off the bat with Utopia, was, and I bet it worked pretty well too for folk who really sit for half their life watching TV. Because these episodes are really padded to drag on a bit. But it's to get them talking about it, you see. And they'll find that groups, well, I see their points of view. Because they can put it across, again with bioethics would put it across, you see, well you know, there's too many folk taking up resources, eventually there won't be enough food to go around, and enough of this, and yada, yada.

There's even a part in one of the later episodes in part two, where one of the characters are set loose, they've been trained and they are sleepers to actually release these viruses in different parts of the world, come out of hiding and throw off their disguises. One of them talks to a woman and says, that's a nice child, don't you feel guilty about having that child? Then he goes into the usual sustainability thing, that they've already trained people into, all these different movements, save the Earth and all that. He says, do you realize how much carbon that child is going to cause to be consumed and used in its lifetime? He goes into all the amounts of carbon that's being put up by Friends of the Earth and so on and David Attenborough, and again the Club of Rome, World Economic Forum, all the usual culprits.

Because it's always been the same agenda. Always. It doesn't matter what guise they used to get it through, it's always been to reduce the population of all of YOU. And you can’t please them. Don't forget the countries of Britain and other ones, the population, domestic populations have been plummeting with native British people, etc., and Scott's and all the rest of it for years. They've been awfully good. Then they get punished, there's not enough of you to pay off the debt so we've got to bring in mass migration. You see, you're not going to win. [Alan chuckles.] With lies, how can you win with lies?

What always gets me too is, again, the Rothschild statement when he was asked about, when's the best time to make a profit, the big profits, you know, make a killing in a sense. And he answered he says, when blood's flowing in the streets. That's where the term 'a killing' comes from. When you got what they need, even if it's bandages or medicine, then you're made, you see. Just like the vaccine companies, oh, give us billions, we might get a vaccine while were working. All these characters get to be instant billionaires, lots of them right now. But you've got all these other ones jumping on the bandwagon...

Canadian biotech company says its anti-viral clothing kills 99.9 per cent of coronavirus

ctvnews.ca / 12 Aug 2020

(A: Now, do they have their hand out for something, I don't know? Probably will be.)

A Toronto-based biotech company is a frontrunner in developing a new kind of COVID-19 protection: antiviral clothing, made to protect against the virus.

(A: They go into the usual sales pitch kind of thing, it's going to be interesting and necessary, etc., etc. It's got a sort of chemical treatment on at supposedly that will kill off the viruses and so on. And how long it will last and how long it will take to even kill the stuff, and how many washings it will take, yada, yada, ya, you know. Mind you, I mean, what will this chemical do to you if you're breathing the darn stuff in and you're wearing it? M-hm. I'm telling ya.)

The chemical targets the fatty molecules that surround viruses, destroying them in minutes.

It has also been tested against other pathogens, including norovirus, H1N1 and E.coli, according to the company’s website.

So, everybody is it on the act, 'eh, everybody that you can name is in on the act trying to get richer or richer. Again, our greed is enough, it destroys us all, isn't it? Really, the greed factor. Tyson Foods, amazing company, Tyson. I remember when Bill Clinton was a big fan of them and pals with them too.

Tyson Foods Helped Create the Meat Crisis It Warns Against

bloomberg.com / 28 April 2020

How Will the U.S. Meat Industry Change From Coronavirus?

(A: This article goes on about it too, how they put a stranglehold on output, etc.)

There have been about 12 closures at U.S. slaughter plants this month because of coronavirus outbreaks among employees who are jammed together on processing lines.

That’s wiped out roughly 25% of pork-processing capacity and 10% for beef...

Remember too, the more they test everybody the more they're going to find coronavirus because it's in the air from fragments of people who have had it, or animals that have had it too. Never mind most of the tests are pretty useless anyway, these tests, especially the swabs. So it doesn't mean the folk are ill at the plants. So, it goes into how come the company actually helped to cause the problem. Which, and they'll benefit from too, naturally get more business for themselves. And another one…

Tyson Joins Bill Gates, Cargill (A: …another big agribusiness.) to Invest in Lab-Meat Producer

bloomberg.com / 29 Jan 2018

(A: No, that's a coincidence, Bill Gates is just, he’s innovative, with his vaccines, antiviral drugs, you know, education for children, um, depopulation, sterility. He's just an interesting fellow, he's got interests in these things. It's a pastime. Everybody bored stiff needs a hobby, and that's his hobby, you know. So he's in with Tyson Foods...)

Tyson Foods Inc. is boosting its bet on meat that comes from the lab instead of the slaughterhouse.

Now, Bill Gates already has patents out on some of these artificial hamburgers and things I think too, these veggie burgers and all that. Again, they always benefit from the chaos that they [Alan clearing his throat.] cause [Alan clearing his throat.] at times.

Philippines bans chicken imports from Brazil on coronavirus scare

yahoo.com / 14 Aug 2020

MANILA (Reuters) - The Philippines imposed a temporary ban on poultry meat imports from Brazil on Friday after two cities in China found traces of the new coronavirus in cargoes of imported frozen food, including chicken wings from the South American country.

(A: Mind you, they did the same thing with that president, was it Tanzania in Africa, who took, he took swab tests from fruit, right, and different things like that, and also even from motor oil at one point, and they all came back positive for coronavirus. So he kicked the WHO laboratory out of his country. [Alan chuckles.] Quite right too. So maybe they should try that with, you know, maybe that's what they're doing there, just... I guess they should test everything there and they'll probably find it all over the place, no doubt. It depends who’s doing the testing. So…)

Brazil has the world's second-worst COVID-19 outbreak after the United States, recording more than 3.2 million cases and more than 105,000 deaths since the pandemic began.

Remember, if you've got the darn thing, and you don't know you've got it and you have no symptoms of it, and you die of heart attacks or motor accidents or whatever, they put you down as Covid, folks. This is incredible what they're doing. And it's been admitted to in a lot of countries, including the US. So you can't even take these death figures as, you know, as meaningful. So anyway, everybody's getting affected by, 'eh, everybody, everything in society.

Dr. Fauci says aiming for herd immunity would lead to ‘enormous’ death toll

You see, anything like normal immunity from your own body, 'eh, it's not profitable. So here's Fauci and he says, it will cause an enormous death toll. So here's the, remember I mentioned the blood plasma treatment, where you can get the white blood cells, like the actual immune cells, the response ones, you know, antibodies to the disease, from the blood plasma, and give it to people who can't pull out of it themselves so well. And there's was a big drive, I remember, I mentioned it, I saw it happening before it happened, because sure enough the Red Cross went into overdrive to get more blood, then admitted it was taking the plasma. Well, where's it going? Why aren't they giving it to the folk who really need it? Because they would say that they are giving it to the folk who really need it at the very top, 'eh. Hm?

Dr. Fauci says aiming for herd immunity would lead to ‘enormous’ death toll

nypost.com / 14 Aug 2020

FDA halts emergency approval of COVID-19 blood plasma treatment - nypost.com / 19 Aug 2020

What a power this has got, ‘eh, the FDA.

Trump shares Fauci's advice on in person voting amid Covid-19 - nypost.com / 16 Aug 2020

And Fauci….Who is this Fauci, ‘eh?

Fauci doubts Russia has proven new vaccine is safe, effective - nypost.com / 12 Aug 2020

Fauci slams disturbing Georgia school that reopened - nypost.com / 11 Aug 2020

Hhhhhhhhhhhh. This guy is getting himself in a real dither.

Dr. Fauci says aiming for herd immunity would lead to ‘enormous’ death toll

nypost.com / 14 Aug 2020

Dr. Anthony Fauci warned about a staggering death toll from the coronavirus, particularly among vulnerable people, if the US allows the infections to sweep across the country in a bid to achieve possible herd immunity.

(A: So letting it happen naturally, which happens always, even with a Spanish flu... You understand, the Spanish flu went away, didn't it, after about two years, gone. That's what normally happens. It devolves its potency, that's what generally happens.)

(A: Then the article from Oxford, remember, a few months ago I mentioned that one, where the chief virologist working on the vaccine over there, at the time, said that it was disappearing so fast in society, the virus, then they might not have time to actually come out with a vaccine, it would already be gone, he said. And Fauci said at the beginning that, oh, the whole agenda that was really part of the Dark Winter exercise too, ongoing, where they mandated they'd lock the whole country down, yada, and lockup everybody who is healthy, yada, ya, you know. And Fauci said, you'll never get out again unless you get the vaccine, at the beginning. Because it's profitable.)

(A: It isn't just money and profit. He worked for the big society that owns the world. That's why he's got so much power in what happens. It's an agenda for reshaping everything. So he says...)

“If everyone contracted it, even with the relatively high percentage of people without symptoms … a lot of people are going to die,” the nation’s top infectious diseases expert said...

(A: He's not an expert, I don't think he's an expert, I really don't. He's wrong on so many things. He said at the beginning, remember, that he didn't think Americans had much to worry about. Remember that one? So he says...)

“You look at the United States of America with our epidemic of obesity, as it were. With the number of people with hypertension. With the number of people with diabetes. If everyone got infected, the death toll would be enormous and totally unacceptable,” said Fauci, director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases.

(A: And don't forget too, his institution's got money, millions from Bill Gates too. Really astonishing, 'eh.)

Anti-vaxxers could ruin any chance at COVID-19 immunity, Fauci warns - nypost.com / 29 June 2020

HHHHhhhhhhhhhhhhh. I'm telling ya. N-n-n. It's also interesting too in another article, they're starting to worry about folk who might not want to take the vaccine, and a big movement starts, so they might not need as much folk to get herd immunity, if it's 30% or… I'll try to find the article before I finish where they try to drop the amount.

Bill Gates: If 30-60% of Americans take coronavirus vaccine, 'exponential spread' will stop - foxbusiness.com / 18 Aug 2020

And…

The CDC Confesses to Lying About COVID-19 Death Numbers

americanthinker.com / 9 April 2020

(A: This one goes back again to April, right. Just to show you again, you've got to remember that, how they were fudging the rules then. And the CDC openly admitted that it's fudging the Covid 19 death figures, then, this is the article about it, or one of the articles.)

Dr. Annie Bukacek, MD, explained in a presentation how death certificates are made. (See “Montana physician Dr. Annie Bukacek discusses how COVID-19 death certificates are being manipulated,” YouTube, April 6)

It's really amazing, hey? But it doesn't change anything, even when things are exposed, because it's a huge agenda. Preplanned, you see. I tell ya. Here's an article here from 2005, it’s from Virology Journal, the big one.

Chloroquine is a potent inhibitor of SARS coronavirus infection and spread

virologyj.biomedcentral.com / 22 Aug 2005

(A: This is from one of the top Virology magazines, in their journal.)

Chloroquine is a potent inhibitor of SARS coronavirus infection and spread

(A: Now, remember that this present one is called SARS Coronavirus 19, with the base model really being the same SARS coronavirus. That's how you see it. And it's got four inserts, certainly, added to it but it’s still SARS coronavirus infection, right. They go through it too...)

We report, however, that chloroquine has strong antiviral effects on SARS-CoV infection of primate cells. These inhibitory effects are observed when the cells are treated with the drug either before or after exposure to the virus, suggesting both prophylactic and therapeutic advantage. In addition to the well-known functions of chloroquine such as elevations of endosomal pH, the drug appears to interfere with terminal glycosylation of the cellular receptor, angiotensin-converting enzyme 2. This may negatively influence the virus-receptor binding and abrogate the infection, with further ramifications by the elevation of vesicular pH, resulting in the inhibition of infection and spread of SARS CoV at clinically admissible concentrations.

It goes on and on, it's a good article actually, how it basically gets in and all the rest of it. We know how it works basically. There's little spikes, you see, on these little pictures they keep showing you all the time, is how they really attach itself to the ace 2 receptors and download into them pretty well. But that particular instant of it touching the receptors in your lungs and your nasal cavities, or sinuses I should say, it really, it has a little acidic response, if it's nonacidic, and it will inhibit the transfer of downloading into the particular cells and invading the cells themselves. Awfully important that little bit. So alkalinity definitely helps to destroy, or inhibit the infection into the cells themselves. It's really interesting to me.

It's awfully similar to an old sci-fi, I can't remember the name of it. Oh, yeah! It was Andromeda Strain, I think it was the first one, where a satellite comes back to earth supposedly and people just die in a town where a satellite was brought in. It's landed somewhere and someone brought it into the town and everybody died off. But it turned out that folk, the only survivors was an old guy who was a drunk and he had a stomach ulcer and he took bicarbonate of soda all the time, and a baby, that the system was alkaline to start with because of the milk and that supposedly is what inhibited the transfer of the virus. Again, very similar to a coronavirus type thing, into the body, because they need the acidity to transfer itself, that moment of transfer of the site, that spike to the receptor. It's interesting that it was an old sci-fi and yet this is similar to it in the way it’s describing it here.

So I'll put these links up too from, again, they're all from good articles written years ago basically praising it for what it did, you know. Here's another one too, I mentioned this one already as well.

More infectious coronavirus mutation may be 'a good thing', says disease expert

reuters.com / 17 Aug 2020

(A: This is dated August 18, although I thought before that, maybe a different article. It says that…)

An increasingly common mutation of the novel coronavirus found in Europe, North America and parts of Asia may be more infectious but appears less deadly, according to a prominent infectious diseases doctor.

Paul Tambyah, senior consultant at the National University of Singapore and president-elect of the International Society of Infectious Diseases, said evidence suggests the proliferation of the D614G mutation in some parts of the world has coincided with a drop in death rates, suggesting it is less lethal.

(A: That's normally what happens, it starts to die off.)

“Maybe that’s a good thing to have a virus that is more infectious but less deadly,” Tambyah told Reuters.

(A: And it's true enough, if it's more infectious, but the symptoms are lessening all the time, you don't really mind it because you won't even know you had it.)

Tambyah said most viruses tend to become less virulent as they mutate.

(A: Well, that's common knowledge, except they don't want you to really know that, [Alan chuckles.] especially if you're common.)

“It is in the virus’ interest to infect more people but not to kill them because a virus depends on the host for food and for shelter,” he said.

(A: That's an amazing theory, that, too, where they almost give a virus, this primitive thing, you can't really call it a life either, it's almost like a little robot, it’s almost like a little machine. As opposed to a bacterium, you know, where bacterium has a cell, it's like a tiny little animal. But not a virus. It can go inert, a virus, it can hibernate for a long time too. But it's almost like a little machine. They have this theory about it as though it was like it's a living entity that can think. And how would this little thing know, why not kill off its host and it would be done with it? I mean, it wouldn't know, it wouldn't say I better not kill them off. It doesn't have a brain to think, so how on earth would it know that? But they give you, they always give this, I've seen this theory taught in medicine for a long, long time.)

Scientists discovered the mutation as early as February and it has circulated in Europe and the Americas, the World Health Organization said. The WHO has also said there is no evidence the mutation has led to more severe disease.

On Sunday, Malaysia’s director-general of health Noor Hisham Abdullah urged greater public vigilance after authorities detected what they believe was the D614G mutation of the coronavirus in two recent clusters.

Sebastian Maurer-Stroh of Singapore’s agency for science, technology and research said the variant has also been found in the city-state but that containment measures have prevented large-scale spread.

Malaysia’s Noor Hisham said the D614G strain detected there (A: ...in Malaysia.) was 10 times more infectious and that vaccines currently in development may not be effective against this mutation.

But Tambyah and Maurer-Stroh said such mutations would not likely change the virus enough to make potential vaccines less effective.

So, you can't find two experts agree on anything. Because it's all speculation really, you know. And agenda driven naturally. It's essential all this happened because of the agenda. How do you think you're going to get a great reset and a whole new way of living and sustainability and austerity without it?

And this other article by another top scientist, he says…

Renowned European scientist: COVID-19 was engineered in China lab, effective vaccine ‘unlikely’

thewatchtowers.org / 11 Aug 2020

(A: You're not supposed to mention China at all now anymore, because we are all, everything is so PC, we're all friends again, you see, and we mustn't upset anybody and, it doesn't matter what the truth is.)

August 10, 2020 (LifeSiteNews) – It will not be possible for the Dr. Fauci’s of the world to dismiss Professor Giuseppe Tritto as a crank. Not only is he an internationally known expert in biotechnology and nanotechnology who has had a stellar academic career, but he is also the president of the World Academy of Biomedical Sciences and Technologies (WABT),

(A: This again must be reprinted because I know I read this one before, a month or two ago. I'm pretty sure of it. Maybe from a different paper, or site. So he's the head of the...)

the president of the World Academy of Biomedical Sciences and Technologies (WABT), an institution founded under the aegis of UNESCO in 1997.

In other words, he is a man of considerable stature in the global scientific community. Equally important, one of the goals of WABT is to analyze the effect of biotechnologies—like genetic engineering—on humanity.

Prof. Tritto's book, (A: .... this world-class scientist does exactly that, what he says is...)

says that the China Virus definitely wasn't a freak of nature that happened to cross the species barrier from bat to man. It was genetically engineered in the Wuhan Institute of Virology's P4 high-containment lab in a program supervised by the Chinese military.

(A: We know this already because it was all admitted in the beginning, wasn't it? We found out too from the top, and from official papers in the US, that Fauci even okayed the transfer of the coronavirus from North Carolina to Wuhan, which they helped and even get a few million dollars to get it, for gain of function experiments there. This is no conspiracy. This is all published stuff and verified. So, the scientist goes into the history of it, which we've done many times before. He said, it was...)

...genetically engineered in the Wuhan Institute of Virology's P4 high-containment lab in a program supervised by the Chinese military.

What sets Prof. Tritto's book apart is the fact that it demonstrates—conclusively, in my view—the pathway by which a PLA-owned (A: People's Liberation Army owned...) coronavirus was genetically modified to become the China Virus now ravaging the world. His account leaves no doubt that it is a "chimera", an organism created in a lab.

He also connects the dots linking the Wuhan lab to France and the United States, showing how both countries provided financial and scientific help to the Chinese as they began to conduct ever more dangerous bioengineering experiments.

(A: It was a woman in Wuhan, a scientist, I think she's missing now. They say she's missing now, who knows, they just take her into hiding or whatever, for her own good, maybe even in China. But that was her job. She had lots of papers on how she altered different viruses through, again, gain of function to make them more lethal. She got lots of awards for it too. This article goes through some of this. He says too that he's doubtful they'll come up with, he goes into the gain of function research and how Fauci was a big proponent of getting it altered with gain of function, and he gave it to the China to continue that in fact. Again, it's all been published before. Anyway, because of all this too, he doubts that because it's...)

Given the many mutations of SARS-CoV-2, it is extremely unlikely that a single vaccine that blocks the virus will be found. (A: And he goes on from there.)

Now again, Fauci, right, this El Duce, Dr Fauci, says, this is again from 2020, right...

WOW! Dr. Fauci Cheered Hydroxychloroquine Success Treating MERS Coronavirus in 2013…

But Today He's Skeptical… That's Weird?

thegatewaypundit.com / 4 April 2020

Exactly two weeks later hydroxychloroquine was deemed the most highly rated treatment for the novel coronavirus in an international poll of more than 6,000 doctors.

Dr. Fauci was skeptical of hydroxychloroquine's effectiveness in treating the novel coronavirus.

But he wasn't so skeptical back in 2013. In fact, Dr. Anthony Fauci CHEERED the use of hydroxychloroquine appeared effective "only in cells in lab dishes" in treatment of against MERS.

(A: MERS, that's the other coronavirus type.)

So Dr. Fauci thought a 2013 test in a "lab dish" was particularly encouraging.

Anyway, again, they've been working with the Gilead company for quite a few years by the way before this happened, so I guess he's, he seems to always, he picks the Bill Gates type winners, and other companies' winners, I guess he likes winners.

I'll also put up for Australia, it's a class-action I think against the government in Australia for this incredible lockdown, this horrible lockdown they're having. The PDF, like all of them, it's like 25 pages for these kind of class-action lawsuits. I'll put it up for those that want to look at it.

Lockdown Class Action in Australia - b46d3b17-2c96-45ba-9a87-8c2fb9df6f7e.usrfiles.com / 20 Aug 2020

Also, the bad news again…

Government may provide indemnity to NZ supplier of Covid-19 vaccine

Because of course as you know, they know there's going to be an awful, awful, awful lot of folks who are going to die of it. Fauci said that himself… No, Bill Gates said that himself, didn't he, was it like 700,000 might die across the world, I hope it was just the world he's talking about and not just one country, because of the vaccine itself. That's what he said in that video.
N-n-n.

So yeah, they want immunity for the suppliers of these vaccinations because you won’t get all the side effects shown until a few years are up by the way. You could have all kinds of nasty things happening. Just like the terrible fallout from the original Simeon 40 polio vaccines that came out with all the cancers in them. Still affecting folk today. So...

Government may provide indemnity to NZ supplier of Covid-19 vaccine

rnz.co.nz / 30 July 2020

The Ministry of Health (A: ...is already, I guess he must've greased a few palms in the country to...) is planning to fast-track the approval process for a Covid-19 vaccine, and won't rule out offering a supplier indemnity from any potential claims resulting from its use.

Well there's something you shouldn't do right away, don't take anything you can't sue them for, or have them locked them in prison for.

AstraZeneca to be exempt from coronavirus vaccine liability claims in most countries -
finance.yahoo.com / 30 July 2020

This is another article here, the AstraZeneca one. They're all getting their immunity from maiming you or killing you. Or sterilizing you. Oops, we didn't know. Just like the movie, Utopia, hey, or the TV series I should say. But here's the good news, which we all knew already, because it's quite normal it happens.

A "Novel" Breakthrough? New Studies Show Memory T-Cells Offer Long Term And Pre-Existing COVID Immunity

zerohedge.com / 20 Aug 2020

Much of the talk about the coronavirus over the last couple of months has been about antibodies.

(A: Of course, Fauci said, well we don't know how long these antibodies will last in you. This is why they want to keep sticking these needles into you. But they found with testing that a lot of the tests they've done on people, who didn't even know they'd ever had the virus, they are finding that they are creating cells, they've got immune system cells working in their bodies already, and it might be from previous infections from other Covid diseases that are actually working against this particular one now, you see. Because they are all coronavirus types that they're looking at, at the moment.)

"People who don't seem to have high titers of antibodies, but who are infected or have been infected, have good T-cell responses," Fauci said during a Facebook interview last Thursday.

Similarly, a study performed in July found that in 36 COVID-19 patients who recovered, all produced memory T cells that "recognize and are specifically engineered to fight the new coronavirus."

(A: So, your own body is producing it itself.)

A third study, published in Nature, found that out of 18 people studied, more than 80% developed these T cells.

They should be giving the globulin to the folk who can't recover by themselves, whose bodies just can't, they're two weakened for whatever reason to produce it themselves, give them the transfusions, you know, that's what the blood's for, for goodness sake, and treat them.

But no, it's again, bioethics. Well you know, we can treat everybody and if these folk, you know, they've already said that, Canada was one of them, we have to work ahead of the plans, make decisions on who should get the treatments and who shouldn't get treatment to keep them alive, because we won't have enough medications. This is before it really broke out. And even when it broke out, nothing much happened.

I've got another one too...

US ‘frontline’ doctors’ website exposes ‘criminal’ campaign by tech giants, govt agencies to block COVID med - lifesitenews.com / 5 Aug 2020

Again, we know the one they're talking about. It's astonishing what they've done trying to stop folk from using this. Because they don't want you to get clearing up. They want you all to get vaccinated. That was on the books before you even heard the term Covid 19. That was mandated as a must-be. They are all in it together. Literally. And they're going to hammer anybody that comes out with any treatment that works. It says...

IMF and WEF – From Great Lockdown to Great Transformation. The COVID Aftermath - globalresearch.ca / 14 Aug 2020

I can put that up too. And another one too is…

Global report: Australian PM backtracks on plan to make coronavirus vaccine mandatory

theguardian.com / 19 Aug 2020

Scott Morrison wants 95% uptake of vaccine

New Zealand bolsters quarantine with 500 military personnel

South Korea in record daily rise

But no, they'll backtrack on it, but they'll make you wear a manacle and they won't let you out of your house unless you… Just like a prisoner, you see, make you a prisoner, like a criminal. You won't take the vaccine, you're a criminal.

COVID 19: Mandatory Mask or Face Covering Bylaws - toronto.ca / 5 Aug 2020

This is another one too of Toronto, how they come out with all this nonsense. Even though the CDC in May came out with a big article on their own site saying none of the masks make any sense at all, it won't save you from giving or receiving Covid infection. This is from the makers of the masks, 'eh. And the CDC approval.)

Virginia Plans Mandatory COVID-19 Vaccinations For All Residents

zerohedge.com / 22 Aug 2020

(A: There's another one. Even though they say it's peaked and it's starting to fade...)

The State of Virginia is setting a new precedent by seriously discussing forcing Virginians to be vaccinated with whatever rushed-to-marked candidate the FDA approves first.

They're all getting bribes, that's what it is too, you know, these politicians. Another one too is…

Depopulation Through Forced Vaccination: The Zero Carbon Solution

theirishsentinel.com / 10 Aug 2020

(A: That's by a good friend, Helena Handbasket, because we all go to you know where in it.)

This original article was first published in Issue 4 of The Sovereign Independent in June 2011. The lady in the image above was astute enough to keep a hold of the original printed newspaper.

Depopulation Through Forced Vaccination:

The Zero Carbon Solution

By Rachel Windeer. (First published June 2011)

You see, we are carbon lifeforms, I've mentioned this for the last 25, 30 years. We're carbon lifeforms. We are the target for it all, it's our fault, everything is our fault. You see, carbon reduction, carbon reduction, carbon lifeforms, 'eh?

This is an interesting article here…

Government Cameras Hidden on Private Property? Welcome to Open Fields

agweb.com / 10 Aug 2020

(A: How the government's now in Tennessee...)

...the Tennessee landowner removed a game camera secretly strapped to a tree on his private land by wildlife officials in order to monitor his activity without apparent sanction or probable cause.

(A: So, he removed it, and he got a SWAT team on him, for removing their property, which they had put on his land [Alan chuckles.] on a stakeout. And no probable cause or a search warrants or anything to do it. It says…)

Welcome to Open Fields.

The vast majority of Americans assume law enforcement needs a warrant to carry out surveillance, but for roughly a century, SCOTUS has ruled that private land—is not private. Fourth Amendment protections against "unreasonable searches and seizures" expressed in the Bill of Rights only apply to an individual's immediate dwelling area, according to SCOTUS.

However, SCOTUS' Open Fields doctrine has been bucked in Mississippi, Montana, New York, Oregon and Vermont...

It's, you see, unfortunately the US is overregulated now, just like the country of Britain was already overregulated when they all left it to go to the Americas. That's why America prospered so well too, LACK of government interference and regulations in all businesses. It helped folk get off the ground. Now you can't get anything started, even in your garage, without permits and inspections and fees galore, 'eh.

Now, there are a few other topics I just want to squeeze into the talk without going over any excess time. One of them is, someone sent me a link to I think a Twitter where it came out from the Netherlands in Holland where the police brutality against protesters, against wearing facemasks, and you see them laying into people with big batons, young, frail, actually frail looking woman actually getting hammered with these batons. And that's what you get in a system that's been, that's ultra-politically correct and very obedient to the state generally. Holland is very much so, always obedient to the state. In the meanwhile, they had riots on the go for quite some time, and the present time too, with immigrants coming in who are protesting and demanding and rioting in parts of the country there and the police won't touch them. That's what it's come down to now.

As I said before, if you don't belong to an elevated special interest group, or classified as a minority or whatever, [Alan chuckles.] even if they're not a minority in some countries, then you won't have any rights at all and the police will just turn their angst onto the general population that have no powers or anybody to speak for them. And that's what happens. So yeah, if you don't wear a mask, they'll lay into you there with batons, you'll see it happening, little clips from it. I'll put the links up for that.

NETHERLANDS: Police officers baton Dutch-lady, attending an AntiMask Protest - twitter.com / 20 Aug 2020

Also, I'll put the links up for two other things as well, to do with Belarus for instance. We've got to remember that Great Gain India...

EXPOSED: World Bank Coronavirus Aid Comes With Conditions For Imposing Extreme Lockdown, Reveals Belarus President - greatgameindia.com / 27 July 2020

That was what they put out about from Belarus. And...

Belarus president unwilling to accept additional terms to get foreign loans - eng.belta.by / 19 June 2020

And the Belarus president, that's now under fire actually, and after winning the election, he was targeted because he refused this massive aid, way more than they needed, with conditions for, to put them under the control of the World Bank and the IMF. He said this way over, it's 9/10ths over what they actually need to get through this. But the conditions were extreme lockdown, and an Italian type lockdown. He didn't want an Italian type lockdown, he said, we don't want this happening, what happened in Italy to happen here he said, so he refused this massive loan, you see. So immediately the EU Parliament turned against him and now they've got a kind of color revolution, a lot of young women protesting him just winning the election there.

Belarus election: Police use live fire on protesters in Brest - bbc.com / 12 Aug 2020

Who knows what the situation really is? I'm sure all countries are corrupt, you see. But supposedly he won, no different from here or the States, right, it's just in the open, it's always really been that if you understand what happens with elections. That's the way it is.

But anyway, he turned down the loans and immediately he became the enemy of the World Bank, the IMF, and the European Union. Remember, they control the world, this is part of the big structure that controls the world. He said he wouldn't go along with it, he wouldn't become the latrine, he said, of the European Union. In other words, because if you truly are taking, just like Franklin said, Benjamin Franklin, if you take the loans that are given to you, you're now the borrower, and he says, never a borrower nor a lender be. Although he borrowed himself [Alan chuckles.] to get over to England to meet certain important people in the financial areas in the financial district, different story again.

But anyway, that's how it is, those who you owe money to end up ruling you, and that's basic, basic economics. That's what it is. So, I'll put these links up. As I say, he became unwilling to accept additional terms to get forgiven money as well. They wanted to give him $940 million in rapid financing. He said, we don't need all that, and along came the demands. So, I'll put all these links up. Including this new color revolution. It has all the traits of it, all the signs and symptoms of it, where the young women must wear white, that’s standard stuff.

And then Bill Gates interestingly enough, he said…

Bill Gates: If 30-60% of Americans take coronavirus vaccine, 'exponential spread' will stop

foxbusiness.com / 18 Aug 2020

(A: He is contradicting his little low down employee, I call Fauci an employee, he is really an employee of Gates, they all are, including the characters that run the WHO, they're all under Bill Gates financial demands and so on. Because he's the boss. So, Bill Gates, after Fauci says, we've got to get up to 80 to 90% vaccination to get it to stop. Bill Gates contradicts it and says 30% to 60%...)

If 30-60% of Americans take coronavirus vaccine, 'exponential spread' will stop

'It will bring the pandemic to an end,' Microsoft founder says

So, there you go, the guy who has no qualifications in anything except making money, and being elevated by a bigger society that runs him in fact, tell you that it will only take 30 to 60%. And even that's a big jump. I mean there's a big difference between 30% and 60%. These are the kind of figures that they give you all the time on these things, as they test the waters. Because they know most, a lot of folk aren't going to take this. They've had it with the nonsense with the compulsory vaccinations as they took over our lives, 'eh, and change us, and sicken a lot of people too.

This is horrible, the horrible reactions a lot of folk have had to vaccinations, and permanent damage it's caused a lot of people with incredible immune responses to their bodies, and the damage to their immune systems too... They can’t keep sweeping it under the rug and banning folk from mentioning it, even the victims themselves. What a disgusting thing to do is ban victims from talking about what happened to them, hm? There’s totalitarian tyranny for you. So, I'll put these links up for you to peruse for yourselves and see what you think of it.

As I say, it's so much to cram in, you can't do it all, it all takes time and work, etc. But for those who want to know, there you go, add these ones to it. So, there you go folks, that’s the rush through everything and I hope you'll get something out of it.

But you're all getting, coming to the stage you've gotta start realizing, you personally, every one of you, is going to be forced by the system we are in to make decisions, and comply or not to comply with the incredible totalitarian regimes getting rammed down our throats.... for a very long-standing and old agenda, that's using it openly and admitting it in some records as an excuse to ram it all through, including the WEF with its economic forum.

The next step of their system to rule us all, 'eh, and training us into their new system. The great reset. The global reset. This is for a reset of culture, of living, of ideas, of nationhood and no nationhood, globalism, all that stuff. And expert ruled society. Again, technocracy. The same in China, for those who haven't figured out what communism in China is, it's Technocracy. They tell you what to do and you obey, for efficiency.

Justin Trudeau said in Canada, he admired China, how they're handling Covid, you see, they didn't have to try to pamper to the people in an individualistic society with individual rights and freedoms and all that. They don't have to bother with that. They can just order you to do it and you do it. He admired that. He told the truth. So, if you want it in Canada it's up to you. A lot of people will comply. A lot of folk will quite like socialism, actually, where you don't have to think for yourself, all your decisions are getting made for you.

So anyway, remember folks, go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Send a few bucks my way, hopefully, and I'll possibly keep ticking along as we go through this. This is the biggest change in your lifetime, right now, that you'll probably see. This is real history in the making. You're watching it all come out, all of the tyranny, the stuff that you'd read about in history books thinking, thank God that happened in the Middle Ages, it would never happen today. [Alan chuckles.] Really? You're living through it. You listen to the tyrants, and there's lots of them now on board all working against the system that you thought was yours. Big wake-up.

So yeah, send a few bucks my way. Cuttingthroughthematrix.com.

I'm Alan Watt from Ontario Canada, northern Ontario where I live, or exist, it's good night and may your God or gods go with you.

Topics of show covered in following links:

‘Morality pills’ may be the US’s best shot at ending the coronavirus pandemic, according to one ethicist

theconversation.com / 10 Aug 2020

Begin Major Expansion Of Digital Currency Testing

zerohedge.com / 15 Aug 2020

Disappear As Pandemic Ushers In 'Cashless Society'

zerohedge.com / 20 Aug 2020

Australia's big four banks remove thousands of ATMs and shut down hundreds of branches as the coronavirus crisis pushes nation closer to a cashless society

dailymail.co.uk / 16 Aug 2020

Doctors banned from prescribing potential COVID-19 drug

brisbanetimes.com.au / 8 April 2020

Was COVID-19 a Cover for an Anticipated or Planned Financial Crisis?

globalresearch.ca / 20 Aug 2020

Corporations Funding The ‘Defund The Police’ Movement

dailycaller.com / 17 Aug 2020

Police’ Movement

dailycaller.com / 4 Aug 2020

Germany to test universal basic income by handing people £1,080 per month regardless of whether they have a job

dailymail.co.uk / 19 Aug 2020

MIT On &quot;Hypothetical&quot; Digital Currency

zerohedge.com / 14 Aug 2020

Coronavirus: Governments slammed for 'treating celebrities different to residents' in quarantine

9news.com.au / 22 Jul 2020

China’s national-security law reaches into Harvard, Princeton classrooms

foxbusiness.com / 19 Aug 2020

The way Aussies search every day on Google is at risk from new regulation

about.google

Hollywood Apocalypse: The rich and famous are fleeing in droves as liberal politics and coronavirus turn City of Dreams into cesspit plagued by junkies and violent criminals

dailymail.co.uk / 16 Aug 2020

Canadian biotech company says its anti-viral clothing kills 99.9 per cent of coronavirus

ctvnews.ca / 12 Aug 2020

Tyson Foods Helped Create the Meat Crisis It Warns Against

bloomberg.com / 28 April 2020

Tyson Joins Bill Gates, Cargill to Invest in Lab-Meat Producer

bloomberg.com / 29 Jan 2018

Philippines bans chicken imports from Brazil on coronavirus scare

yahoo.com / 14 Aug 2020

Dr. Fauci says aiming for herd immunity would lead to ‘enormous’ death toll

nypost.com / 14 Aug 2020

The CDC Confesses to Lying About COVID-19 Death Numbers

americanthinker.com / 9 April 2020

Chloroquine is a potent inhibitor of SARS coronavirus infection and spread

virologyj.biomedcentral.com / 22 Aug 2005

More infectious coronavirus mutation may be 'a good thing', says disease expert

reuters.com / 17 Aug 2020

Renowned European scientist: COVID-19 was engineered in China lab, effective vaccine ‘unlikely’

thewatchtowers.org / 11 Aug 2020

WOW! Dr. Fauci Cheered Hydroxychloroquine Success Treating MERS Coronavirus in 2013… But Today He's Skeptical… That's Weird?

thegatewaypundit.com / 4 April 2020

Bill Gates: If 30-60% of Americans take coronavirus vaccine, 'exponential spread' will stop

foxbusiness.com / 18 Aug 2020

Lockdown Class Action in Australia

b46d3b17-2c96-45ba-9a87-8c2fb9df6f7e.usrfiles.com / 20 Aug 2020

Government may provide indemnity to NZ supplier of Covid-19 vaccine

rnz.co.nz / 30 July 2020

AstraZeneca to be exempt from coronavirus vaccine liability claims in most countries

finance.yahoo.com / 30 July 2020

Pre-Existing COVID Immunity

zerohedge.com / 20 Aug 2020

US 'frontline' doctors' website exposes 'criminal' campaign by tech giants, govt agencies to block COVID med

lifesitenews.com / 5 Aug 2020

IMF and WEF – From Great Lockdown to Great Transformation. The COVID Aftermath

globalresearch.ca / 14 Aug 2020

Global report: Australian PM backtracks on plan to make coronavirus vaccine mandatory

theguardian.com / 19 Aug 2020

COVID 19: Mandatory Mask or Face Covering Bylaws

toronto.ca / 5 Aug 2020

All Residents

zerohedge.com / 22 Aug 2020

Depopulation Through Forced Vaccination: The Zero Carbon Solution

theirishsentinel.com / 10 Aug 2020

Government Cameras Hidden on Private Property? Welcome to Open Fields

agweb.com / 10 Aug 2020 (alternate link provided)

Test “Persuasive Messages For COVID-19 Vaccine Uptake”

collective-evolution.com / 3 Aug 2020 (alternate link provided)

Protest

twitter.com / 20 Aug 2020

Conditions For Imposing Extreme Lockdown, Reveals Belarus President

greatgameindia.com / 27 July 2020

Belarus president unwilling to accept additional terms to get foreign loans

eng.belta.by / 19 June 2020 (link broken)

Belarus election: Police use live fire on protesters in Brest

bbc.com / 12 Aug

Aug. 30, 2020 (#1790)

Elite's Working Complicity Toward Efficiency:

Hi folks, I'm Alan Watt and this is Cutting Through The Matrix on 30 August 2020. As always, I hope you're hanging in there and getting through these insane times. Because we're living through the biggest exercise, really, in mind control and warfare, it's all warfare, it's mental warfare on the whole population of the planet… and psy-ops, etc… and revolutions all sponsored often and traced back to the same few people. It's quite astonishing, isn't it, that regardless of the Covid idea and the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, and Fauci and all these characters, the head of the WHO, you can tie them all together, can't you?

You see all the funding from the same old big corporations going to BLM. Which again, is Marxist as we know. A beautiful cover though. Remember, communism always hides behind covers. It uses excuses, always did. There were dozens and dozens of them in the 1960s that were Christian. And the Christian groups and churches had no idea they were getting used. But they were great covers because they would promote policies which the Marxists wanted to be put into, to weaken America actually.

That's what you always find, behind the covers there is a weakening of the state. And yeah, you can always, hhhch, complain about the state as much as you want. The state of affairs isn't that great, is it. But the reality too is that there are other players that simply want to end up in the ruling seats and displace the present rulers of it all. That's really what it is. OR, or, really, to maximize their power, their existing power and take over the remaining seats [Alan chuckles.] in politics and governance and so on. And you have to understand that. That you're living through amazing times, that nothing is happening by chance.

You've got the Pentagon, obviously, in on the same acts with different generals standing by. They're all on the payroll of the military-industrial complex, which will still be working for a long time under the auspices of the United Nations and NATO organization. As they, again, go through this game of divvying up the world into competing factions of apparent conflicts.

That's how the Cold War was, really. There were more billionaires created during the Cold War than ever before. Maybe even afterwards. Because all governments on all sides took tax money and put billions and billions, without question, into defending the people by creating more and more missiles, etc., and jets and military equipment. Way overpriced anyway; it does matter what they made it was always way overpriced. But no questions were asked.

Like the Covid idea, it's to keep you safe. Right. So you know, it's a wartime, you see, and of course Covid is, has all the attributes of a wartime scenario. Of course it does. More than you think actually. Because there are signs and symptoms too, techniques of controlling the public through fear in wartime for compliance reasons. We've had all the exercises exposed from Event 201, and long before that too with the Rockefeller Lockstep idea as well.

Again, many other organizations that, some of them I'll mentioned tonight, that the GAVI and Bill Gates groups still control as well. There are so many organizations, you see, all telling you the same stories. So important to control the media and the flow of information. You think you've got lots of competing organizations giving their... No, they're giving you the same opinions, all the media, the official media, because they're all owned by a small coterie of people.

Going way back, I mentioned this years ago in talks, when Rockefeller and others, the Rockefellers especially got a group of his, hhhch, hijackers, you know, together. Because they hijacked other companies all the time to basically take them over and stop competition. Old man Rockefeller said that, competition is a sin. And he meant it.

There's an organization running the world that truly believes they have the right to own everything in it, the technocratic type, and to rule everybody under it basically. That hasn't changed. It's more than ever enforced today. You can actually see some of the front people coming forward, maybe lower edges of them, but it's still the same organization. The idea was to take over the world's resources, everything that you need to exist as an individual human being, and then collectively it's owned by people you don't even know generally. They make all the policies, how much food you're going to be able to buy, or even get, or even if you can get it, or even if you can buy it. And it's all coming to pass right now.

Because this is to be your winter of discontent that's coming up. Because it will either make or break this big agenda for the World Economic Forum, for its global reset... of the economy, of your way of living, on the value, actual value and the, basically the, almost like an examination paper with tick marks. You'll all get checked off on a checklist of things that, they'll give you extra help if you need it if you're ill or whatever it happens to be, according to your status or importance, or necessity to THEIR society. That's how it's going to be put out actually. It's already in force. That's why they're killing a lot of elderly people in the hospitals. It was in force before Covid came along when they introduced euthanasia.

Everything is economics, you see, and value to their system. Even though you paid for it, it doesn't make any difference. They are thieves that run the world. They have all the signs and symptoms of gangs. And that's a fact. There are other people that have come out with this too, they have all the signs and symptoms of organized crime, BIG, BIG organized crime at the very top.

Their relationship, as I've mentioned before, between Bill and Melinda Gates foundation and... Don't forget too, Fauci and his wife, and his wife too is a bioethicists working with the government, to, again, evaluate everybody's status in society and your value to the system. That's what bioethics is all about, folks. That's what it's about.

So you're living through the big scientific takeover of society. For the planet. They've always been after this global society going way back into the 1800s. Folk have no idea that the British Empire, this oddball thing the British Empire, was run by a secretive group in the City of London. Lord Alfred Milner, he published books himself about it. He, again, some of the people who took over much later like Carol Quigley who was the historian for them, praises them to the highest heavens for taking over the world and trying to get a world governmental system in place. Again, with this, he didn't mention technocratic system, but that's what it was. Quigley knew it was. Because he believed they had the right, again, to go after the world's resources even then. And he was all for their agenda.

Britain was used. Really. The people who get used, generations can pass, they haven't got a clue they're being used. You understand that? They just think, oh we're off to another war with so-and-so today, and it may last for a few years. And after it's over, you don't realize, no, maybe two dozen people have corporations in London that end up ransacking that country by taking resources out of it, and your troops are guarding it all, for them. Even the troops don't really know what they're there for except they're 'bringing civilization', they think, to these people. [Alan chuckles.] It's quite amazing to watch it happen.

Because it's still happening today. Y'know. Often the countries that were dominated are coming back to the parent countries, [Alan chuckles.] like Britain, and dictating to them now. Because often in some ways they're, they become wealthier themselves too, the people that were left behind, and now they're dictating their policies too, for a global system again. Because everyone, from every nation, at the top is part of the big structure. They know what's going on. Of course they know what's going on. Quigley was awfully good about telling you that the top people in every party, pretty well across the whole Western world, it does matter who the party was, the top people are always a member of the same organization. They are vetted way in advance. They play the game of left and right, etc.

Then when you have the books, their members books which they published at one time, when they had annual meetings, you see other names at the back. Even the heads of communist parties for countries like in Britain were in attendance to their global meetings. And Ireland too, eh, a lot of their members were there too. So the folk who... And the top bankers that ran these nations were also in attendance, say, for the future of the British Empire. Funded by Rockefeller. Of course all the old Milner group guys for their, that had taken over, and their descendants because they hand them off to their offspring.

And here we are down to the present day. Folk still can't catc... Because it's never mentioned so you can't catch on. You see? It's not mentioned very much at all. In fact, the history we're given, that the BBC is such a, ohhhhhhhh! Well, Orwell said it eh, who controls the past, etc., and the future and all the rest of it. It's all been said before. And it's so true. So incredibly true.

Then again, you have this wonderful, and it's wonderful from the elites' point of view running the world through creating factions and divisions, eh. Lots, I mean Britain's sunk basically with mass migration. So is Germany to an extent too. All from these wars in the Middle East and across northern Africa for years and years. And they haven't finished yet. We know that there'll be even more, so that will be the complete end of it. When more, again, military age guys will rush through by the millions into Europe, when they do away with the last few countries left, like Syria. They won't give up with Syria. And Iran. Because it's not our wars. It's for another reason as we all know.

And by the way, that is another reason as well that a lot of folk are protesting and really upset and ticked off, because of these endless wars. The people haven't fathomed, they can fathom out why they're even going on. I mean, the wealth of America, I'm talking about the average citizen [Alan chuckles.], has been squandered in 30 years, 30 straight years of war, hm. People forget that it didn't start with 9/11. They already had Desert Storm in about 1991. Then they had the flyovers and all the military around Iraq for years. That was a fortune right there. Then they hit it again in 2003 using it as an excuse of course, 9/11 as an excuse. Even though Saddam had nothing to do with it. It was all on the list of the PNAC group. We all know, that stuff was all published, you can find it up there yet I'm sure on the net.

So you're living through a BIG agenda. I mentioned it so many times, you're living through a script. It's a big business plan, exactly how a big business plan runs. In business plans, and that's the striking thing with the United Nations and the communist organizations before the United Nations, they all have these 5-year plans for one part and 10-year plans for another, and 50-year plans for some, and even 100-year plans for the other parts of it. That's how it's run. And that's how big multinational international corporations run too. Huge agendas going way off into the future, where maybe they'll hire and retire three times, three generations sometimes, you know. All planned that way, how do we make it happen?...

Then they have the foundations, which are so important to all of this, the tax-free foundations. That managed the world, you know. These are the ones who create and finance and train leaders for future warfare. Including the NGOs that, hhhch, and they train, and the ones who train the Antifa groups, etc., they're all from the big foundations owned by the richest folk on the planet.

This is not conspiracy stuff. Read Foundations: Their Power and Influence. Written years ago. All to do with Norman Dodd's investigation into it and the Reese committee. How they looked into the foundations in America back in the 50s and 60s and wondered why they were funding the top... the Ford, Carnegie... And the Ford foundation had already been taken over by other foundations that are awfully well known. They were funding groups to destroy America and radically change it and so on. It made no sense to the people, so they had sent a congressional committee out there to investigate it. They were shocked by what they found.

The head of the Ford Foundation at that time admitted, and you can actually get old audios or videos of Norman Dodd talking about this. He said, he asked them why they were funding these groups. The head of the Ford foundation in America said that, we're working hard to create a system and alteration of cultures and education so we can seamlessly blend that of the Soviet Union with America, down the road they could blend it all together. Yeah.

Most folk haven't got a clue today about all that. It's just amazing. But it was all published. It's in their books written by the guys who were involved in it. That's what I've often said too, you can stuff your head full of all the data you want. But it's not enough obviously to change the present, which is the way you change the future. You've got to understand, there's more than just learning who did what. You've got to find out why. You also have to look into all the whys how people went along with things and why they went along with things, and they accepted conditions and systems that they shouldn't have.

Again too, how can you possibly even live under a system and accept at the same time that most of the agencies above you in government are secret and run secretively? …on plans and agendas you're not given even access to? You might down the road have laws implemented by them upon you. But no, you're not even brought into the debate about things, to setting up anything. No. Who decides the future of the nation? Hm? Think about it. Do YOU get to, um, fill out questionnaires about what you want to see in the future of the nation? Do you? For voting? You're just given the front people to vote for, aren't you?

It doesn't matter what party is in, the same agenda goes ahead. Look at free trade deals. Generations went by for free trade deals pretty well. Then the ones in the 90s to do with the North American free trade. First it was a free trade agreement, then the North American Free Trade Agreement. And then you had the Three Amigos too, two Prime Ministers and a President, Mexico, Canada and the States meeting every year to further tie us into, and in a binding, that's what they call it, a binding system bound together which would be the nucleus of an EU type of authority, European parliamentary authority down the road. That's what they hoped for. Then they would start bringing more Latin America countries in. And the Caribbean countries too naturally.

All discussed and printed and all the rest of it. But it was done, it was admitted too, the whole thing was drafted up and worked upon for years by the Council on Foreign Relations. A group that's private. A private group that often claims itself to be the establishment. In one of its videos it put out itself, talked about itself as THE establishment. And you don't vote for them. Most folk don't even know what they are, or that they exist.

You're given these front comedians of politicians to look at and boo and throw tomatoes at, you know. That's what you're given for politics. Have you ever heard any real wisdom come out of the mouths of politicians? Come on. Come on. You watch this Punch and Judy show, that's what it's called, Punch and Judy show that they used to have at fairs in the Middle Ages, run all up to the 20th century, where people would have these puppets bashing each other with clubs and so on. That's what politicians are, they’re there to take the heat. But not to ever to tell you what's really going on.

The key to all of this of course is that think tanks, privately owned think tanks have run the world for an awful long time. And they still do. We know, as I say, the top politicians are picked long before the public even hear their names to vote for. And they are vetted. And they will do what they're told, there's no doubt about it. And all parties are in on it at the top. That's why nothing really changes for the better for the general population, it gets worse and worse.

I can remember looking at all the books I found, about Canada as an example. I've seen the same for Britain. But you have the Departments of Information and Statistics, owned by the government pretty well. Everyone is measured and weighed and yada, yada, and numbered long, long before we came along, our generation. I've got one's going back to the early 1900s, and right down to how many matchsticks were made by companies and things like that. Just incredible data they had on us all. Before they had computers. At least we're told that anyway. [Alan chuckles.] But anyway, it is quite fascinating to see how these massive books, with the years of production and costs and all the rest of it, and every little company in the country listed.

But back in the early 20th century in Canada, Britain at that time, or London that ran it all... I hate saying Britain. It's like this strange entity. What the heck is Britain really? It's got millions of people, all kinds of people living in it. Even before the mass migration there were still lots of different kinds living in it. The Yorkshire folk had their own identity and cultures, and different parts of the country were similar. Had been for centuries, that kind of thing. But when it comes to official purposes, you see, and taxation and things like that, then they want you all to be one part of Britain. Or for war, we'll send you off to fight for things you have no idea what it's really all about. You never get told the truth. And when you come back from these wars, the ordinary fork have either lost their jobs or work other firms or whatever, and nothing is ever the same again. Then you get another one, it's the same kind of thing over and over.

But in between that you're global. I remember back in the 90s talking about this. I said, eventually you know we'll, because they kept talking about global this and global that and how it was the greatest thing since sliced bread, and we'd all be happy under globalism. All the companies were putting out this rah-rah thing, the governments were putting rah-rah, and hands-across-the-sea, etc. Then they came out with their real plans, which was international free trade for the big top corporations, so they could really send their stuff all over the planet, from all countries, and have the citizens back home in the first world countries paying for it all.

Do you ever wonder why you can order things from China for peanuts? for cheaper than you could even post a letter in your own country to your neighbor? You're paying for it, that's why. That's called free trade, that's part of the deal. And it isn't just China that you're paying for their postage to you. [Alan chuckles.] It's quite a few countries too. You can look up the list of the nations, including some in the Middle East by the way, you're paying the big, the bulk of their postage on whatever's getting transferred around the world. Free trade, eh? Great deal for the corporations, isn't it? And you pay for it all.

And at the same time you end up with no work back home. Because your own governments, again, all kinds, you've got right wing and left wing in succession all signed onto it and they integrate it further and further as they get in, and end up with no work back home. No factories. No ability to produce anything. You don't even have the ability to make your own basic painkillers, or acetaminophen, the very simple medication because even that's farmed out to other countries. First it was farmed out to China under free trade, that's why it was so cheap for a long time. Then, I think it was last year or the year before they gave the contractor under the new TransPacific Partnership, which they included India in for some reason, and then they moved their base of operations to India and it's way more expensive now. But at home, oh, nothing is made here, eh. There ya go. You can't even make anything to save yourself if you need it. This is the...

Hhhch. I keep thinking back to Britain and World War I and then II. Britain was locked down in World War I because Germany then and Britain as well had submarines and submarines could play havoc with shipping. It was bringing in food, supplies and the whole bit. Especially in World War II, there was far more subs around. And Britain had already given up its ability to be self-sustaining by farming. I've always said it was an odd thing that. I mean, food is one of the most basic things you need. Without it, everything else is a pipe dream. [Alan chuckles.] Everything starts with food, folks. Hm? Food and water. And why would your nations literally make you helpless?

Well once again, it was the big corporations that dealt with the shipping lines. We have had leaders in Canada whose parents were involved in this too, they had their own shipping line companies for transferring food to other countries, etc. And often when they're combined with interest and agriculture, like agri-food businesses, they decide what countries are going to get the cheap food, and who's not going to eat. And they even tried to, and even lobby at home to put laws through to stop you even making enough food at home for yourself.

This is all rigged, you see. There's no such thing as a free enterprise system. It's just the opposite. And it's not new. As I say, Britain almost sunk in World War II because they couldn't produce food for itself. It was completely, almost completely dependent for a long time on food coming in from the US. And a lot of that ship eventually was in trouble after 1942 as well. They had all, you can actually look up the old videos on 'wartime farms' for instance. You see what they had to do, go through.

And the government just expands, oh, they love it during war, they expand socialistic techniques, systems and principles. Government departments just blossom and swell like cancers like you wouldn't believe. That's why they love socialism. Because, and then you do what you're told because it's all for the good of all, you're all in it together, etc. And you all pull along together and do what you're told, for the good of everybody else, for the greater good. It never changes, eh?

During World War II the government in Britain stole farms all over the place off of people.

Because hhhch, here's the tragedy of things. Great Britain, eh, let's be proud of Great Britain, eh. It had been in so many wars all through the 1800s, the country, the people were broke with taxes. And really, even then, they were kept at a starvation level, most of the people. Not the middle class and the upper class of course. But they were.

They had gone through the Industrial Revolution in the 1700s and 1800s. So bad it was that even Benjamin Franklin, this is the truth here, in his own memoirs talked about when he visited Britain and he saw these factory workers coming out of the big shoe factory and boot factory, barefooted in the winter because they couldn't afford to buy the boots themselves. This was reality, folks, you know. There was no welfare system. Folk had to work often 16 hours a day, just to eat, and get a place over there had, which was awful. Often there were 10, 12 or more to a room. It was a horror show.

But again, the wonders of propaganda and so on can displace all that and really tuck it away into the back until it's a hazy thing and it's forgotten altogether. That's how it works.

Then you end up in the 20th century and they're already just had the Boer War, you know, getting waylaid there as they were taking over Africa and South Africa and so on. Again, by the Milner group, Lord Alfred Milner, for the Royal Institute of International Affairs, that private group that was just called the Milner Group and The Kindergarten at the time. They picked youngsters up in university, in Oxford and All Souls, and they trained them. They trained them to be governors of different countries that they would take over. They list all their names of course if you go into their histories, long histories. But anyway, that's how it was done.

And the people end up in these wars, world wars... And they needed, by the way, the Milner group wanted world wars, they mentioned that, because then they could then further amalgamate countries, even competing and conflicting in wartime, warring countries together at the end of it, when everybody's on their knees. That's how you got the League of Nations idea coming in, you see.

Yeah, the past is a horror show.

So anyway, World War II comes along, and Britain had lost so many farmers. And like, you’re talking about dad and sons often, and uncles, all wiped out in some areas, the LOT of them. They would join local regiments, bomf! Gone. The same in Canada and elsewhere, and Australia. Gone. And New Zealand. So that left a lot of them just struggling with farms in the 20 years between, you know, from the end of World War I and the beginnings of World War II in 1939.

So the government, they ordered you to produce and if you couldn't produce enough – because you didn't have enough manpower or of people running the farm or whatever, or maybe it was an old dad left, all the sons were dead from the previous war – the government just grabbed them and stole them. Then they amalgamated a whole bunch of them, you see, here, there and everywhere, and they would give it to these rich characters. Who still own them today by the way, you know. Then they got volunteers, and land armies, that's even better, isn't it, it's smacks of the same kind of thi… you get little smackings or smattering's of the same system down to the present time. Because then you had land army volunteers and all these folk coming in, for the war effort, who were free labor for you, hm. Every square inch of workable land had to be plowed and the whole thing and used for the war effort. We're all in it together once more, you see.

You could get vegetables, etc., but you couldn't get much meat at all, for the general population. Winston Churchill had no problem. They had parties for Winston, they'd talk about it, his secretary talked about it, if you ever bother reading the books on it. His personal secretary wrote about it, and how they had these huge parties in certain parts of London, underground bunkers, huge, like palaces really. In fact, some of them were under palaces, and other ones were outside London. They had everything they could imagine of eating and food, elegant wines, etc., champagne, the whole lot, all through the war. But the ordinary people, being good people mind you, put up with it and the rationing. Starvation level rationing. Until there was no obese people before World War II, pretty well, in Britain because they had been through a Great Depression, in between two world wars and in both wars they had rationing. It's just astonishing what you put up with.

The folk who go off and fight have no idea, they wouldn't even know who Lord Alfred Milner was. You see, you might get his name in a newspaper once in a while, as one of his protégés was sent over to govern South Africa or something like that, you know, or India. But they had no idea who this big... Even Winston Churchill had an argument, it's recorded in Parliament in Britain. Because at the beginnings of the war he had no idea what, that these characters had been manipulating the system to get Britain, he was also getting manipulated by another group to get into the war by the way, an outside group. But at the same token, he was ticked off when he found out that this other group that was, had other plans for the great war, this World War II, you know, and its mission and what they wanted to accomplish. And he argued about it.

Because at that time it was a very secretive group, you know, different names it had at the time. The All-Souls group was one of them as well. It was so secretive, like layers of it, that they had an inner party and an outer party, you know. Just like the CFR still has today for their missions abroad so to speak. Yeah, the folk in Britain, who fought those wars, all truly believe they were doing the best of all to save everybody and in doing it, you know, hadn't a clue what was to come at the end of it. Hadn't a clue that Winston Churchill, and I put up the articles years ago. You should go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com and look at some of them. Lots of the authors use my material. I have stacks of it there. But Winston Churchill literally talked about all of this too as they say. And his desire, he said, this is wonderful... when the war broke out, he says, we might, we shall probably, and hopefully, he says, establish our long dream of a United Europe. I mean, meanwhile he's telling folk on the radio at nights, you go off and fight and die to save your culture, your way of life. Meanwhile, he's talking, and his secretary recorded all these things, eh. M-hm.

A United Europe. An old idea. Now, if you told that to the British folk at that time they would've been completely bewildered. What's he talking about, a United Europe? We're fighting to keep our old way of life, we’re quite happy with it the way it is, you know. It's never perfect, and it's pretty bad for a lot of people, but it's better than what a lot of folk had even in Europe at that time.

And every culture likes its own culture to an extent, don't they? Because it's familiar to you [Alan chuckles.] if nothing else. But it's also, part of it, and it's across the world, people who will fight and die for their nations, or the plot of land they live on. It's a natural thing. You feel tied to the land, it's in the soil, it's in the genes almost. You have that bonding to it.

I remember reading a poem by a Scots guy that wrote about the 1930s and 40s, maybe into the 50s. A miner, and he talked about having to leave. Because Scotland, like parts of England too, and Wales, because of this corrupt system that always ran you, was often, couldn't afford, that's what he said in his poem, a country like Scotland, they couldn't afford to feed its children, you know, so you had to move. Meanwhile you had the richest folk concentrated in London. The richest folk in the world at that time, concentrated in parts of London, especially in the City of London. Of course the migration helped, you see, to expand the Empire, hm?

So we're all used and abused and most folk haven't got a clue it's even happening at the time. Instead, they're given what they've got in the States at the moment, they've got the front groups. The BLM groups where the heads of them, it's no mystery, it's not conspiracy theory, they admit, and they’re out there admitting, there's even the video of them admitting that they are trained Marxist organizers who know exactly what they're doing. Where Marxism always has front groups and gets them all battling with other groups.

Then you have the Antifa groups, there's no mystery there, that's got quite a good history of them, long history. Then the reorganization of them back again in the 90s. Because they use them. They used to send them into the anti-global meetings that were going on at the time. The anti-globalist meetings were awfully going at the time and folk came across from the countries to protest these meetings, where they were, again, planning to offshore all your work and your factories off to China and the Far East. But in would come the Antifa group and jump in on the bandwagon and start throwing their usual Molotov cocktails at police cars, etc., and give everybody else a bad name, you see. They actually say it in their handbooks, you see, that, they piggyback upon certain events that will cause, that are plausible, and are emotional events, jump on top of them, end being the champions, but then steer it off into your revolution. This is how they do it, you see. Well funded too.

But once folks’ emotions get up they seldom think very clearly. It's very interesting to watch the phenomenon. I’ve mentioned it before, that the tremendous, the terrible things that happened in Rwanda with the genocide in Rwanda. You had the eventual completely, complete unleashing of many years of utter hatred against this other tribe that they'd had skirmishes with over 100 years, 200 years even. The hatred had boiled up and boiled up, and it was really institutional, and they let loose. Literally the chopping up of people went on for weeks. You could actually hear it on the audios from people who were there at the time with cameras, you know. From reporters from abroad you could actually hear it. It went on. It was terrible.

That's what happens when... When clever folk can utilize the hatred and stir it up and actually augment it, really thicken it you might say, intensify it, and then they use it for different purposes. Big coffee plantation growers were involved in this too, outside the country. Because there's always other reasons for what you see in the news. Always. And always other interests behind anything to do with skirmishes or wars. There's always economic interests lying deep, deep below on behalf of those who understand resources and how to use them. And who want them.

Rwanda reporters were on the roads, it was like... It actually… I always think of these, whenever you see roads full of people, you think of the number of refugees is one. Like, I always think of refugees and carts in Europe and so on at the beginning or even during World War I and then World War II. But then you get the other refugees, that really are promoted to come into countries, now. These are, like the massive invasion across Europe, that was all, that took billions of dollars to work all that out and to finance, and even train them. Some of them coming in were telling you they had all been trained in advance for purposes of taking down European countries. And we know some of the folk who were behind it because they even put videos out themselves about it in some of these countries. Unashamedly, eh. And then down the road you use them, eh, to take down the nations. This is standard warfare techniques. Migration has always been used for this kind of purpose.

Migration was used in ancient times. You have biblical episodes of it. And pre-biblical too, because not everything happens in the Bible, obviously. But you had different groups that would remove people out of where they lived and transfer them to other nations, in order to destabilize their power, and dethrone them from over their own people, so’s that the people could be used by the conquering people coming in, you see. So there's different ways you can use migration, mass migration, by law.

The Soviet era was awfully interesting I always think. Because in the Soviet era they used very old techniques, very, very old techniques. You get whisps of it through your lifetime, and this is why it's important to try and always remember as much as you can per day as you're living through things, you know. Because real history is inside you. You live it. Forget the books that are written later that would change it all and so on. You're living in history, and you must use your own perception. Don't be given it by someone else, you know. Anything that you're offered, investigate it completely to make up your own mind.

But the Soviet system is just like the Norman system. They sent troops in of course to different countries, like Latvia. You had Latvia. You have articles coming out, you know, years later in Latvia after the so-called Soviet system collapsed, which it didn't really collapse as such, you know, not the way it was presented. But yeah, you had Latvia and you had Ukraine, you had different countries where the Soviets had tremendous influence in the Soviet pact countries. And they had troops into many of these countries, training them and so on, and they stayed in them with full-time barracks. Much the same as the US does today across the Middle East, and even Beirut at one time and so on.

But the Soviets were given extra money if they would marry the local women. The idea, to breed themselves into society, which would help dilute the cultural homogeneity of the people. It's much harder down the road 20 years, 20 or 30 years down the road for the entire people to stand up and throw you out when about by that time at least one third of them are part Russian, you see; it's all through so many folks' families by that time. That's how it's done. That was a deliberate policy, they paid the troops extra if they would settle in the areas by marrying girls in those areas where they were stationed. Very old system, a very old technique.

It's smacks, as I say, of the same kind of thing that happened with the Norman invasion into England, or Britain, or England really. Even the Romans tried this too at one time. And after the Romans really collapsed, the same kind of thing, they went back home to Rome from England. They did leave a lot of people back in England at the time, and we have histories of them from monks, very interesting, of certain families who still stayed behind, and they were very old Roman families.

But again, the Normans when they came into Britain, they had 'prima nocta', which is 'first night' of course. The nobility would literally, um, if a maiden was going to get married in the local areas, the Saxon areas and so on in England, they'd just take the right to have sex with them, in hope that they'd get pregnant and so now you've got relatives within the local community, that you'll groom to be in charge of the community. An old, old technique, really, nothing new about it. I'm sure it might still go on in some parts of the world today. It wasn't just first night and the whole thing, the idea was to breed themselves into the people. Even their offspring would become future leaders over those peoples.

In Ireland's you have an interesting situation where some of the Fitz-, like Fitzsimmons and so on, often had noble parentage. They were illegitimate but they were still given a legal standing, you see, and so hence the prefix Fitz- part to their names, Fitzgerald, etc. So that's still stood today.

But again, this isn't getting off the topic, really. What it is showing you is that great powers manage us all. And it doesn't come from little people in every generation just reinventing the wheel. These are sciences that are recorded and understood over many, many, many centuries, many, going way back to Plato and even before Plato's day. Some of these philosophers in ancient Greece were awfully interesting because they were interested in what was happening around them, and they like to put it down, especially in their schools, and the leisure class came to them. They were getting trained into this, and philosophy wasn't just there for passing the time.

Although, 'school' came from the term really 'leisure', you know, wealth and leisure. You had leisure. Because the ordinary people hadn't time to learn anything except maybe a trade or something. But those who ruled, the ruling classes, or maybe even castes for all that in Greece. And Greece is a huge area. It wasn't just a little, there's so many hundreds of miles in fact involved too. But some of them, again, were actually condemned by the state, some of these teachers because they wanted to overthrow the system and bring in this new system. Socrates of course wasn't just offered his poison because of that. There were definite charges laid against him.

It's interesting, in the Enlightenment era they always resurrect Socrates and his teachings. Interesting teachings, absolutely. And a good mind behind it. And maybe a better mind between the translators, because you can fudge an awful lot of perhaps better thinking by translating in a certain way. But anyway, you find that Socrates was also charged with literally trying to subvert the youth. It wasn't sexually, at least it wasn't promoted as such, or part of the charge. It was to train the youth to overthrow the parents and the system, to be revolutionaries. That's what it was about. When it was brought out into the open, the parents and the nobility just lost it. They had no idea. This came out during the inquiries. It was so bad that many of the students had to flee for their lives because they were trained to be revolutionaries. Plato had to disappear for a while. And he did. For quite a long time.

They had this interesting similarity to different groups that even, like the Essene’s that came along too in the Middle East as well. They had lots of things in common. Where you would get groups in, that you would have an initial meeting groups, like an open day, put it that way, every so often, where folk could come in and listen to the lower exoteric teachings. They would say that's rather pleasant, etc., I wouldn't mind joining that. Then if, yeah, one of the youngsters came in to join it, and probably paid by the parents who thought it would give them a good education, then if they had the right stuff... Because they have levels and degrees, just like later groups had too, of induction, all the way up as I say, to the Lord Alfred Milner group that has an inner party and an outer party. That's where the idea came from, George Orwell's 1984, the inner party and the outer party. And the circle of friends, etc., and that's the CFR. So that's how. Very old ideas.

And all elitists, you see, going way back to even Socrates... It's all to do with elitism. Through the various dialogues that they would have in their teachings, they'd always have a discourse, a kind of fantasy discourse with someone else, as a teaching tool. If I said to you blah blah blah, what would you reply or think? Then you try to guide them into what you, the way you want them to think. But it's always to question what is. What is… what is this and what is that? And not really to enlighten you as such, maybe partly. But then to take you off and reshape you into, now think about it this way... You know. Well, that's how people are recruited today for the most horrible things on humanity.

Oh, what d'you think of all these little people? It's kind of like The Third Man, eh, the movie. One of the best movies ever made, The Third Man. It was so well directed, and written and directed and filmed. Old black and white movie. And the location was fantastic, during actual, really, occupation of a country that was post-World War II, where you'd still had, and they still had the Russian and British and American and French quadrants in these big cities, that were by the allies as they say. And all these displaced peoples, hm. None of them wanted to be grabbed. If they had a background and would come from a country that was now owned, run over, ruled by the Soviet Union, the Soviet Union could take you back, just demand that you, even though you weren't in their country at the time, you were in Vienna and so on, they could demand that you go back there, you see. Horrible things happened.

But in the movie the villain Orson Welles is up, he’s meeting his pal. His pal came over to see him. And his pal thought that Orson, you know the third man, was dead because he had a fake burial, then he found out he was alive, and he came up to question him. Orson Welles had been really looked, had been sought, the reason he pretended death is that he was sought by the police and the Allied forces at the time, the military police. Because one of his scams was getting penicillin and diluting it, and then reselling it for big money. It went to children's hospitals, and they were dying of meningitis and things, of course the antibiotic was no use, it was too diluted. All these kind of things, these scams did go on by the way. Scams [Alan chuckles.] in medicine have always, right up to the present time as you well know, I'm sure.

So Orson Wells meets the guy on a carousel, a big, one of these big round wheels that goes up and around and so on. They go up in it and at the top Wells talks to his friend that had come over to see him. He says, look at all these people down there. Because his friend was saying, well, you know, you've been accused of this, is this true, you know, your medicine is now killing children? Orson Welles looks down and he says, look at all those people down there. And he says, do you really think that the system thinks anymore those people, you know. He says, the state calls them the proletariat, you know, I call them masses and so on, and the Communists call them the masses, and I call them that. In other words, they're just little dots, he says. How much is each dot really worth to you?

That's how a psychopath would describe humanity, the victims of whatever. They're just, you know, whatever, they're nothings. And that's how we're really ruled, folks. You have no idea [Alan chuckles.] of how many layers of psychopaths are, all are churned out of academia and selected for the qualities as psychopaths, their particular traits to do dastardly things over the general populations. They are generally arrogant, well-paid, trained in either psychology or behaviorism, often both, and persuasive techniques so folk will be convinced to obey them. Right down to even giving up your own life, you know. Are you really worth the money your government will spend on you? Why don’t you just sign this little thing and decide, yeah, I've had enough, I've become a burden on society… and you end up with eugenical euthanasia.

It's here folks. It's been here and I did the talks years ago when it was brought into Canada. I did talks years ago when they'd introduced it into Holland, a big test case there. That's what they, a trial bed for it all. And yet the public, just like getting, drifting into war, and drifting into everything, and never figuring things out because the media is so powerful. Like the Rockefellers said, how many newspapers and magazines do we have to own to create basically all the newsworthy themes, we would be in charge of it all? That was back in the 1930s. And they did it all.

Tonight I'm going to put up a link to the Plandemic video. This video is part of the Plandemic series, so you can have a look at it. It's really good. It's well done. It really is well done in the way too they show you clip by clip on one side of the screen, the sequences of introducing a plague to the public basically, under the actual exercise Event 201 they had. They show you the same, here's the topics, here's what they say, and they have these actors doing these things. On the right-hand side you see the exact same things done in reality when Covid broke out. Exact same sequences. Well done, well worth watching.

No conspiracy here. I mean, you're seeing it. [Alan chuckles.] It's right from the horse's mouths, eh? Right down to, during the exercise, I've mentioned this before, before the movie was made. During the exercise Event 201 they said that we'll have to deal with fake information about it, and we'll start with just censoring this and censoring that, and then they'll end up arresting people if need be and blah blah blah. And that's, we're just following the script, folks. Yep. And some other things too, to do with other agencies that Bill Gates' Foundation run. That sound, you wouldn't know they were his really. But they're all, it's a small group really, with the GAVI and all the rest of them, the groups to do with vaccinations. And the WHO, he funds a lot of that too, maybe three quarters it's been said of the funding that goes to them. So it sounds like all these official sources are saying the same thing, they must all, it can't, it has to be true. Until you realize, they're all getting it from only ONE source. All of them. All these big agencies.

But the news organization's just parroting... It's done, again, well in the video. You see them all parroting the same lines, like verbatim, word for word, regardless of the name of the news company. Because they're all on board with it. That's the beauty of standardized information coming from the same source. You can rule the world that way. Plato said something similar by the way, that also mentions it in the video, [Alan chuckles.] that the storyteller controls the country, you know. That's how it's done. Anyway, I'll put that one up. It's a must see, folks. And who knows if it will be up for long or not. It's in Bitchute right now.

PLANDEMIC INDOCTRINATION (FULL) - bitchute.com / 19 Aug 2020

And Bitchute too apparently is now having an onslaught against it and succumbing to censorship, etc. in certain areas. So that's the way it goes. I said years ago before I had a computer, and I was giving talks, because I would never use a computer, initially. I only got it eventually simply because I was on full-time radio at the time. But up until then, no, I could, had stacks of books. I had good libraries. I had all the information I really needed to know what was going on.

But I knew eventually, I knew that obviously the whole idea with the Internet, from the very way they really launched it to the general population, both to children and adults, it's awfully interesting. Because in the 1990s they started dumping books out of libraries. They called it 'weeding'. I've done talks on this whole process called 'weeding.' You can look it up in your own areas, they're weeding books. First, they started with books that they didn't want the public to read. A tremendous censorship was happening, and the folk hadn't a clue. Then they started dumping books, like generations of books that were built up, just dumping them. In the countryside I saw stacks of them getting dumped in a local garbage dump. That was happening all over the place. But most folk haven't got a clue that it even happened.

Then towards maybe the middle of the 1990s, maybe around 1996 or 97, about the same time, I think it was 95, where it was announced... Now remember, in 1995, most folk were kind of sailing along. All you had at that time was the free-trade deals and so on, you're losing all your factories abroad, lots of folk were losing their homes because they ran out of places to work to pay their mortgages off. All signed, signed and sealed and delivered by the politicians in every country. Every country was on board with this, the politicians were.

But the 1995 when all this was happening, I think it was the Toronto Sun, I can't remember if the name's, it's like Gratin or something, I can't remember the guy's name. He came out with an article and he said they'll tap, they'll tap our phones, I think it was tap our phones to please Uncle Sam. It was an agreement that had been made with Canada, just made with Canada and the States to literally insert backdoors into phones. It wasn't just like cell phones. It was ALL phones. And they said, ALL communication devices. It was fax machines, everything, had to have signatures so they could trace who they were blah blah blah blah. And they couldn't sell any phone, from then on, or fax machine, without these things inserted, or any communication device. Of course the early cell phones were the same.

Everybody was saying, well, what's going on here? Nothing was, you know, we weren't under terrorism at that time, except from the government. Then of course it was a few years later, not long, maybe 1998 or so, 97 and 98, that Allen Rock who was the Attorney General of Canada passed, I guess he drafted it or something, but at least he passed the whole thing, it seemed, by himself to do with, it was an omnibus crime bill. At that time you had some reporters who could actually ask questions, and dared to, and they said, what on earth is this? this isn't just a crime bill, this is an anti-terrorism scenario, a whole omnibus thing... Where you'd be held indefinitely, for different purposes, without charges, and all that kind of thing. It's all in there. Before 9/11 happened, remember. So you're building up to this whole scenario, that had been PLANNED BEFOREHAND, folks. All of it.

Then towards the end of that decade too, they started bringing out, initially they tried to get police to wear combat gear, the Army gear, with Army colors and so on. It didn't go too well. They had scenarios of, here's little SWAT teams that are, they dressed like military and the green combat gear in the streets of Toronto, going out to get, investigate shootings and noises of gunshots. But they never, it was all PR stunts to get the public to try, to test the public, would you accept this in your streets? And you had the smiling guys posing, really, you know, like models. Which they probably were models in fact. All smiling, showing off their teeth, and you say, oh these are young healthy guys you wouldn't mind talking to in the street, they look like pretty decent characters, you know.

Then they started to show you, suddenly saw them dressed in black gear. From the old light blue shirts, the sky-blue shirts and all that, and gotten it from the police you could approach, to suddenly, I mean, they had four at a time coming down little streets in country towns and so on. The country papers actually said it, you may have noticed in the last week or two, the new look for constables, as they display their new gear off to the public. Here they are with combat gear on that's black, with, you know, the tucked in bottoms of their parents in the combat boots and the whole… These weren't cops. They were all preparing for what's happening today, folks, waaay in advance. Waaay in advance. They had the wars arranged, for 9/11. The PNAC group published it, the countries they wanted to get taken out. It's the same list they're still working on today, they haven't finished it all yet, but it's the same one.

Anyway, Allen Rock did that, the Omnibus crime bill. Then he went off to work at the United Nations, eh. A real... And I think he just came back recently. And Bob Rae, the other communist that's been sent over to the UN to represent Canada. [Alan laughing.] It's quite interesting.

So anyway, it's fascinating to live through this system and to watch it all. And you have to remember these things because you catch on really quickly that nothing happens by itself just spontaneously. It doesn't happen that way. Anymore than the Covid idea happen spontaneously. I could go on like for days talking about just the disease scenario and how they got it all prepared years ago with different parts of it. Not just the Event 201 and so on, there's many, many ones before it. But all connected from the same sources. M-hm.

That's what you're living through. Long-term planning. Big scripts. 5-year plans for some parts. 10 for others. 15 years, 50 years and then 100 years for other parts of it. That's how we are run and ruled.

Getting back to this Black Lives Matter, the present face of communism, and Antifa. It's interesting. I mean this is interesting. Come on, you can't say it's not interesting. These front groups that are busing them across all different US states for the riots. Including, and I'll put the article up too [Alan chuckles.] with the big, massive bus, specially equipped supposedly to feed them, that was caught just the other day there going in there and filling up stacks of gasoline cans, to feed the... the demonstrators, they call it. And it's all paid for by a spontaneously created NGO nonprofitable organization, eh, a charitable group. A huge bus. You should see it. I wouldn't mind that myself. I could live in that quite happily.

But yeah, this is how it's all done, eh, and you’re supposed to think it's all just happening by itself. Then you have all, ALL, all the signs and symptoms of the world war on the go. What do you get in a world war, hm? You get restrictions of movement under it. So Covid brings you restrictions of movement. In world war they couldn't even make you all live in your own homes permanently without going out, eh. Some of the Soviet era places, they did have lockdowns and curfews, for sure. And yeah, in Britain they'd have certain curfews at certain times of the night in certain parts of the countries and so on. So all this was tested out through world war scenarios.

But also, you had to have papers to travel outside your own designated area. That's all coming with your immunity passport, eh. In World War II you couldn't get gasoline, for most folk, for vehicles, if they even had vehicles, unless you were essential, again, essential business, essential part of the system. That's going to come to, probably this winter as they go further with it. This is a wartime scenario. So remember, we’re on wartime scenarios. What d’you get next?

Well, in World War II you had rationing, you see. So you're going to end up with rationing. They've already trained you for getting use to nonmeat diets. They've had big articles out about it, praising it. Oh, this is going to end up, get rid of those methane created bovine product, cattle, etc. Which also means the end of your calcium and vitamin D. But let's not talk about the nasty things, side effects. And all the agendas that they wanted to get through, which they admitted to by the way, the Club of Rome, how they're going to get all the sustainability goals through, that were getting ignored, by using Covid. Look at their own site, the Club of Rome, eh.

So in war, too, so you get rationing. You get restrictions of movement. You have, you couldn't get transportation, and it will mean too, you won't get transportation in buses and things, even if you have them in your area. It's all going to come down that way. So in World War II you had more folk bicycling here and there, you see. They've got all these articles out now, it's wonderful, sustainability, with all these bicycle paths we're going to create. The same old agenda they tried 20 years ago, and they've been at it ever since. But that doesn't matter. Of course there's a whole generation kicked out of it because a lot of folk are too old to bicycle, you see. And you can't really do much bicycling in the winter in Canada, which is awfully long and heavy with snow.

But that doesn't matter. You're going through war scenario. In a war scenario you also, so therefore you have complete spying on all information, telephone calls and everything, right. So we had all that since 9/11, that's what brought all that in. And as I say before, the Omnibus crime bill in Canada and late 90s, already had that stuff in it basically, all preparing for the coming wars.

Then they came out with, again, standardizing of information. Computers more so, more efficient computers for the public. And again, as they were dumping all the schoolbooks, you can go into the library, and I went to the library quite often in the town I lived nearby, and there's all these computers there. If you went in there in your lunchtime it would be FULL of youngsters. I mean, really young school children, even Junior school, all of these computers, you see. I says, it must be awfully interesting. Well, they were in, a lot of them, to watch pornography, the librarian told me this. And sure enough, you saw it. You had all these articles in the papers in the 90s about, there's so much pornography on the Internet. That was to get adults as well to look into this stuff. That's what got a lot of the folk in and involved, I want to see the pornography, my God, and away you go. Because sex is a weapon and sex is awfully good at destroying societies too. Especially when you’re restructuring society and destroying the old, like the family unit, which is awfully important for those that rule the world. That you think, you probably think they're all just communist. No, no, no.

As I said before, at the world meetings for the future of the British Empire, for instance, eh, in the 1930s, run by the Rockefeller Foundation and paid for by them, who also paid for their book printing, and had the Council on Foreign Relations there, and the Royal Institute of International Affairs. The Milner group. They went through this kind of stuff, and they had communist leaders there, they had all kinds. Carol Quigley talked about it in Tragedy and Hope, and he said it too, he says, we have all kinds, we don't mind if they're fascist or communist or whatever, there's all kinds. Because they're all leading lots of groups, you see. It's beautiful, most folk join groups, they never lead them. All you have to do is create the leaders for them, and the groups, and they bring all these folk behind them, you see.

Look at all the Black Lives Matter in the States, the looting and rioting. Are people following it thinking it's free shopping time and that no one's going to touch them? Even the mayor, some of the mayors have come out and said, it's okay if they're looting, they probably need it, to steal the stuff to sell it because... And all these excuses, you know. But they really don't, are not into ideology, you know. But the ones who are leading it all and promoting it all are well-trained Marxists at the top. Leaders, and they know who all the people are. There's no doubt about it. There's no real secrecy about this. They've got them all sussed out, who they are and where they are and who move somewhere and so on. So they are allowed to do this. This is part of the big agenda right now. The restructuring of everything. And through destruction as well. Volumes have been written over many, many centuries on this technique of restructuring and rebuilding societies, reshaping them, by those in control.

A lot of folk are completely puzzled right now looking at the US especially and saying, what are they doing here? You know. And then they'll come out with, oh it's kind of complicated, the US system, that it can't really be involved in, they can't bring the military in to quell the riots. Well, they brought military in before when New Orleans was flooded, you know. And under insurrection laws, yeah, they can use the military then. It's a different thing when you're seeing a revolution inside to overthrow the existing system. Not that it's the greatest, put it that way, because we know it's corrupted at the top. And to replace it with what? It will be the next part of the same corrupt group, the next part of rulership through the appearance of a different system. But it's all planned in advance.

I haven't seen the richest folk in the US fleeing the country. In fact, the richest folk in the world, in the US, have been financing these revolutions. They've even put lists of their names out, and publish them, who we’re giving money to terrorist organizations. If you donate to a terrorist organization, you'll have a visit right away and be charged under the insurrection too for aiding and abetting a terrorist organization. But how come the CEOs of these big… the biggest corporations are funding this! Come on here. Wisen up, folks.

And the folk who are at the bottom who are doing, who are the followers of this, better start thinking too, what's the score here? What's the score? You can't rage against a system when the folk who own the system are paying you to riot. Something’s wrong, isn't it? Again, and youngsters too, who don't think too deeply, they can't see the future, a lot of them. They really think they're on the cutting edge of something big. They really do. They have nothing to replace it by. I mean, if you asked them what they want, they can't tell you. Yeah, well, everything should be free. Well, you know, how long will that last? Until we're all, you know, starving? And, no one will work again. The utopia on earth, eh? Yep.

Well, as they say, that went out with the Garden of Eden, you know, because the Garden of Eden supplied everything supposedly. But we don't have that today. Nature is pretty nasty. You know, we have a war against nature all the time. You see how this thing about sustainability and living with nature... We don't live with nature. We conquer nature in order to live. Because nature will conquer you. Nature doesn't give a darn about you. And it's just not going to change its own seasons to give you free crops of everything every year, and everything you need will just drop off of trees. It's not going to happen.

In the coldest countries, you know, it's a battle all the time to survive. Under sustainability they want to cut back what? All your heating options, until one corporation probably will own electricity, that's all they're going to give you down the road, and then you're going to have brownouts because then they're going to control you that way too. Everything is to do with CONTROL and profit. They profit off of having totalitarian monopolies. The monopoly men, eh? That's how it's done.

So yeah, the computer came in to, again, standardize all information. They already had all the interests of humans, and every age group was catered to. It is today. Who are the youngsters involved, what do they think about…? We've all been through it, if you remember it, you know. And, let's get them lots of occultic stuff to make them interested... And in amongst it all you start to insert little bits that alter their thinking here and thinking there. Everything is weaponized.

The computer is completely weaponized. The computer, remember, was created as a weapon against, in the Cold War, you’re talking about military games and so on, all that was played through computerization. And the viruses were all created then too. Waay, waay, waay back, eh? And they've trained the people in no time at all not only to accept no privacy with 9/11 happening, with phone calls and everything else and texting and so on, well, we got to find out who you are and when you're doing what, why you're saying this, and all your… yada, yada. Then again, a lot of folk actually believe anyway they've got privacy on the Internet. There is not a company out there, that if you've got anti-spyware or whatever, that isn't, even if you're paying for it, that isn't selling off your data. They're all at it, folks. They're all part of it. And they'll sell it to, the biggest purchasers of it all are government agencies.

This is a total war scenario. Total war. Again, restriction of travel. You'll get rationing systems down the road. You won't get a card probably; it will be an app on your phone. You've already accepted that, that phone that you buy now is like a manacle already that you carry with you. You pay for it all. You pay for your chains, eh? And your immunity passport will be on it, oh my goodness, isn't it wonderful, lucky I bought this phone, eh! Aargh. N-n-n.

What else do you get during warfare? Again, we get all the propaganda, we're all in it together, for the common good. They get the police coming, getting more powers to invade people's privacy, again, and make them conform to whatever the laws are. Put that light out, Dad's Army, you know. APR Warden, put that light out. Yep. All these fines and that if you’ve got a chink of light showing... anywhere in the country at night, eh? Oh, German planes could see that from so many thousand feet, you know. Well generally they weren't flying over most of the country. [Alan laughing.] But that didn't matter, facts don't matter, you see. It's obedience, obedience, obedience.

Again, going back to, what would you get during it? They've always had scenarios that have got nothing to do with reality. Again, hm? Quigley talked about the British system preparing the public of Britain to get in to a war. You're always prepared in advance, most folk don't realize you're being prepared. It's bits and bytes of information that you don't really think through too much. But back then he said, he said that the media barons, that all members of the Royal Institute of International Affairs, from the Milner group, they owned all the media in Britain, got together in London and they said, well the people are going nonchalantly about their usual business and just disregarding all the propaganda about the coming war with Germany. So they decided to make it more realistic to them, to get them frightened. So they got them all digging outside, in big public parks in London and so on, and big propaganda blitzes, because they owned all the media, right, all these barons. You saw these guys digging trenches and so on, in these fields for the coming air… Now, what good is a trench [Alan laughing.] when you're going to get bombed from the air? [Alan laughing.]

But you top it off though, and again they've got massive publicity to make it real. The first thing you gotta do is not just lying to the public, you must get the public on board with it, you see, or there's going to be no war at all. And for goodness’ sake, you don't want that, you want a war, right? So they said, oh, those Germans are going to gas you all. So, next thing you know, everybody, oh, they must get, and they had little propaganda pieces on Path News. They'd have these women, oh my baby, what will I put on my baby? Don't worry ma'am, here's the, we have it right here. And you have this buckle thing and you can stick the baby into, that'll be/act like a gas mask, a respirator too. But the rest of them had to wear gas masks. So you can see the women dressed with her gas mask on, and they had to carry that with them at all times, with a tin hat, you know, but a gas mask was compulsory. You had to have it with you wherever you went, and you little tin hat and all that, in a haversack, you know.

They'd have practice drills of you putting on your gas mask. Now, Germany had never said they were going to gas the people. But the propaganda from the media barons said that they were. Just to terrify the public so you'd start to hate them. I hate those Germans; they're going to gas us all. Look at those poor children in that ad we just saw there, you know, having to put on those masks and everything. So they make you do strange and silly things that have got nothing to do with reality, you know. As I say, what good is one of these tin hats when you're going to get bombed from the air?

What you're doing here today is facemasks. With the same, you know, compulsory things by police ready to hit with batons if you don't comply, you know, in some countries. Australia is incredible, you saw them choking a woman, a strangling, it's like strangling a woman in one of these videos. Just amazing. Aargh! But anyway, never trust the authorities, folks. Never. No.

You'd hope we'd learn down through the ages you know. In the US they used to say that freedom required perpetual vigilance. The people who are vigilant about it are the ones who are ruling over you. But once you get fat and lazy, and oh well, you know, experts, experts run us, you know, we've got experts, who am I to argue with an expert? And then you give it all up so easily, don't you? Yp. By tricks.

So yeah, in World War II, gas masks for everybody. You had to have it with you at all times or it was a fine, you see. And they could lock you up if you persisted. Here you have facemasks, but for a disease, which even the CDC said in May on their website, that the masks wouldn't stop you getting it or stop anyone getting it from you if you wore it. So there ya go. You can buy the things and the packets will tell you that too, the micron size of the Covid is apparently even smaller than the N95.

But facts don't matter when there's big, big propaganda things afoot to change society and terrify it. And if you don't wear a mask, you see, and people saw that in the summer for maybe a month or six weeks or something of mask-free in some countries. They started to just forget about the six-foot distancing nonsense and went around healthily about their businesses. You see, language, human language isn't just speaking. It's little gestures and nuances from the facial expressions and so on. That's all part of communication. When you see everybody doing it, you see, whether you know them or not or even like them or not, it doesn't make any difference. The fact is that it's all messaging to you everything's okay, I'm okay, you're okay, blah blah blah, this place is okay.

Once you're masked, that goes out the window... and you're a constant threat, you see. You don't know who or what is, or maybe, you know, maybe YOU are the threat, you don't know it yet. Maybe if you choke yourself enough and suffocate yourself enough, because that's the only function they have is to suffocate you, and to make it seem terrible, there's a big deadly menace out there. Eh? That's what it's for. Put it away and folk go back to normal.

And they can't have that because this whole idea is to change society. It was planned for years and years, going back to 2010, the Rockefellers scenario, eh, with the Lockstep, etc. All the way up to the present. I've got stuff going further back to 2003 and 2006. Always the same scenarios, getting ready for it. By again, the big players. The players by the way who rule us are the same players who have invested, financial interest in the vaccine companies and antivirals. Isn't that [Alan chuckles.] a criminal gang right there, folks? …who are also involved in terrifying you with propaganda? M-hm-hm.

So yeah, wartime scenarios. Can't travel the same way. You can't heat yourself the same way, probably down the road. Canada, it will definitely come to that. And you can't use gasoline engines, you must get the electric ones only. If you can afford one. It isn't just getting the electric car. It's so many thousands of dollars to have your electric supply to your house fixed so's you can charge it at your home, especially if you're in the country. It's quite a few thousand dollars. Then every few years you have to spend about half the price of the new car to replace the batteries, that won't hold a charge in subzero temperatures, or in very, very excessively hot temperatures either. This isn't conspiracy, this is from their own facts. [Alan chuckles.] But facts don't matter when you're dealing with those who give your realities and unrealities in the psychological warfare programs.

So yeah, the computer, again, personal computer, eh. You'll say, my God, look at all the things you get on it. As I say, every age group, every age group is certainly catered to. And as you’re watching this and watching that, just like the TV sets a while back too, Samsung came out with one, it was the first one to admit that it was watching you, and watching what you're watching, and watching you as you watched it. [Alan chuckles.] To, you're being studied constantly. You're paying to get studied, folks, like little ants. Hm? Now everybody buys their Alexi’s and different programs or hubs, so’s that you're completely spied upon. You do it voluntarily. You pay your money for it. Isn't that beautiful. Isn't that beautiful, hm?

In the old days, you know, slaves were manacled together, like prisoners in chain gangs, still, you know. But at least that was free. You're paying for it today. Isn't that amazing what they can convince you to do? You know? And you smile about, you watch the ads, and the people in it, oh they're talking to their Alexa and so on. And Alexa says, sure yeah, report it to the police. And you say, oh no Alexa, don't do that. Bu-dut-dut-dut-dut-dut. Ha, ha, ha, eh? Technology is imprisoning you in so many ways that you haven't got a clue that it's even happening. It's so professionally done. And you'll adapt so quickly to everything that's wrong, [Alan chuckles.] simply because it's there and everybody's doing the same thing.

Now remember folks that you can go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com website. List all my official sites. I always say this because sometimes things happen, and I know a lot more is going to happen as they go through this wartime scenario and their censorship departments. And things happen. I mean you wouldn't... Last week I could hardly, I was up until five in the morning uploading because suddenly a computer had just started doing an oddball thing. And it's only used for uploading, that's all. So yeah, things happen that shouldn't happen, and it takes a lot of time to fix or whatever. And I accept this pretty commonly, this kind of scenario. Because yeah, you will get hammered in lots of ways. They don't just come after folk and sue folk and so on. Electronic warfare is an old, old technique. They were using it all through the Cold War with each other, the competing countries who were all in conflict with each other.

At least in the old days you had to buy the propaganda, you bought it through newspapers. No matter what you're were into, you could buy it. I mean, the Communists have their own ones out, and if you couldn't get it locally you could send off for it. You had different flavors of Marxism out there competing. You had pretended right-wing ones, groups, you know. And then often owned by the same media barons that owned the left-wing groups. If you followed through the subgroups and sub companies that they own, often they were owned by the same media barons with all sides of things. Quite interesting, isn't it, to realize that [Alan chuckles.] everything you're, that you're... And again, you look into it because there's little interesting pieces in it. I like this paper because it has this, and it has that. And we're creatures of habit, we adapt to things very quickly and we want familiarity with something. I read this paper, I'm familiar with that, these authors and these writers and so on, eh. Never realizing that often the same writers are getting their sources from a common, common hub you might say, and parroting the stuff, by paying a fee for it. That's very common today.

The Internet is actually a bit worse than that. Some sites you go into, it will only link to stories, which they have paid for, they don't tell you they've paid for them from other sources. But when you look at the sources, they keep going back to themselves, so that you look at the same site over and over again. Rather than tell you, here's where it really came from in the first place, you know. I try to get ones from all over the place rather than just going around in circles pretending it all comes from me or something. But this is how we're controlled, and folk don't know it. They really don't.

So we're creatures of habit. We like familiarity. And we adapt to things very, very quickly. Some women, again, because I did talks many years ago on the surveys that were done on people as they were studied. I think back in the 90s, up until the 90s, the late 90s, was it 97% of magazines at the time, or, 95% were aimed at women. Because you change society primarily, as all psychologists will tell you, I've been through their training, and behaviorists, through the female. They're quicker to adapt and try something new that's suggested to them, and so they will change the culture much, much quicker. They're getting used. They don't know they're getting used, but they're getting used. Because it doesn't dawn on them where this is supposed to go toward, where this is supposed to lead to, this particular behavior. Whereas the guys are, generally men are generally a bit more conservative. I don't mean politically, I mean by nature. They don't like change so much, you see. So you change it through the female. This has been an old technique that's always been understood.

Getting back to cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Remember you can donate to me by PayPal or sending cash or check, and there's other ways to get money to me as well. You can buy the books and discs if you want @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Or just straight donations. That helps me keep going because as I say I've got costs as well. Believe you me, this is a full-time... hhhch, this would be a full-time job for quite a few folk if I had them. But it's just me here so... I try to keep going as long as I can. Because believe you me, I haven't had holidays really for 20 years. Because this is a full-time, this is a war. It was war before you heard of 9/11 coming along. All the way up to the present time. It's a war to try to get information, to find information, and to record information for posterity, because it disappears so quickly.

Things are just disa... You'll find that too, in this particular video, that video I'm talking about putting up there. Grab it quick before it does disappear. Because things are changing so quickly. The things that were discussed even a few weeks ago are disappearing like crazy off the Internet. All the evidence I put out of the CDC saying this and the whole bit, boom, boom, gone, gone, gone, gone, gone. Replaced, almost replaced by something that's diluted or whatever. Or completely different.

So again, cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Donate to me and help me tick along because this is a FULL time war we're in, folks. The future is not going to be bright at all. Remember, they're talking about depopulation on a large scale. They've been talking about this for years and years, before I was born even. And they really mean business. Out of that, the more chaos they can create in the streets and with businesses getting destroyed and homes getting destroyed and all the rest of it, they'll come out when you're on… If they can keep going, this is the whole idea of this, if they can keep it going, it isn't just an end what you think was America, that will submerge into the system that it has been pushing across the rest of the world for a long time. Then if you're all on your knees, they'll say, well here's what we've come up with. And it's a completely new way of living. That's what the World Economic Forum is all about with its Great Reset, the Global Reset.

…of everything. It isn't just the economy. It's everything that comes under the economy, which is pretty well everything. Your way of living from birth to death. Will you even have children? Should you have children? Look at all the, as they resuscitated it's the same old ideas and say, here's people now who, this is news again, eh, of people who come forward saying they don't really want children because it's too unruly a time and a scary time to have children. And also, it's not economical. And also, it's bad for the planet. The same stuff they keep rehashing over... repetition, repetition, repetition. And you can always find the paid actors to do it, folks. Always.

So if they can get people on their knees, because remember, a war, as Quigley said too and others have said as well, and it's taught at Officer Training Corps and Colleges, it's taught that if you bring competing nations who are at war to their knees, it changes the culture and society on both sides, it doesn't matter who wins and loses. So you can actually plan the changes, you see. And implement them. And actually sometimes before the wars start, sections within each country are in on the big act of doing the very thing in the first place. This is a fact, folks.

So you change society through conflict, massive conflict. So if you have a war scenario with, oh, it's Covid, oh, you know... and they've got riots going on at the same time... Just coincidentally, eh, it's all coincidence it's all happening at the same time. No, this is planned warfare. And the big corporations are funding it. As you say, who's going to benefit? The big corporations again. What did Quigley say too, that the new system that's going to be brought in is a new feudal system where the feudal overlords, the CEOs are the new feudal overlords of the system. And you're seeing the CEOs fund all these things, including the riots, and getting away with it, as places get burned down and so on?

Now, the agitators in front, even the Black Lives Matter, these are white! Have you noticed that? It's the Antifa groups that are running them too. You saw one of the places where they were torching the cars at night and smashing them up and so on in a used car dealer's place. You see these white guys dressed in black pushing the young black guys out of the way, and smashing, and showing them how to do it, then handing the clubs back to them. These guys are the bosses. They're getting funded. They get paid for this. Big time.

So out of the ashes, again eh, the Phoenix will rise. The Phoenix is the new system. When everybody's so sick of it all, if they can keep on through a whole winter into next year, and the economy gets dumped, and there's hunger, and there's rationing and all the rest of it, and again the big propaganda machine, OH, thousands have died today, you know, propaganda, then the hope is you'll eventually accept the new system through terror and fear, just to get by. Oh, bring some kind of thing back, some, at least give us the food back and yada, yada. You see, you'll accept and accept. This is total warfare of the system on you. The war is on you. I hope you understand, you are the target of the war.

The saddest thing is that certain organizations that pretend to fight racism are actually the ones that are the propagandists by the people who are the real racists in the US. I'm talking about well-established institutions. Some of them have come out, again, it's interesting, the same ones came out back in the 2001, leading up to 2001, about the greatest threat. They had the FBI out too because they're paid for as well and owned by the same groups. Intelligence services too, they're all owned by the same group really. [They were] saying that the greatest threat to America was the white folk and militia's. This is back in the 90s leading up to 2001. And everybody's scratching their heads saying what d'you mean the greatest threat to America was that?

Then the PNAC group got their little war, just luckily because they're good at guessing, you know, if they just have the right kind of thing, a Pearl Harbor event to get the public on board for the list of countries they wanted to go to war with. They got 9/11 and bingo, off they went. And they were still saying that the greatest threat to the US was these militia groups and whites, you know. They keep, they have resurrected the same nonsense again this time. Absolute nonsense, you know.

As folk are, [Alan chuckles.] as Antifa [Alan chuckles.] and BLM going through the streets doing their shopping, it's fascinating to watch it. Isn't it? Really? Come on, you're all quite fascinating to watch all that stuff. And for them to tell you that it's just protests, eh? No, protests are selling forms and, you know, and traffic and so on and honking and the whole bit, and signing letters, putting your name to letters that get sent to the government to protest, etc., all that kind of stuff. That's protesting. Torching businesses and people's homes, and in the black neighborhoods too, it's just incredible! Folk have got nothing left. And then the media, again, this clique, this small clique that owns all the media telling you that it's just protests. Come on here! They're at war with the general population, the people who own America. Obviously. Really obviously.

And I don't trust the FBI at all. Not at all. No. Because they've already shown, especially this whole thing with Donald Trump. [Alan chuckles.] And I'm not political when it comes to politicians. But there's no doubt about it, I mean, they were completely all out to get Trump and to set him up and all the rest of it. So how can you even have an institution, that again is private, it's a private institution and the government takes it on as an agency, but it's a private institution. If you can't trust them, you can't trust them on anything. Honestly. I mean, that's how I see things. If something is so corrupt, they can target people that they're told to target and bring down, when they've done nothing wrong, just because they're targeted for political purposes or something, then should you have it existing at all? Really, hm?

And they cannot tell you who the target is. But again, they're completely in bed with other supposedly antiracist groups that are the real racists. The real racists. We know this. And how come none of them mentioned, as I've said before, the lists that are published of all the big corporations that are funding the people who have spoken about overthrowing America? [Alan chuckles.] How come the FBI isn't investigating these CEOs of these companies and these corporations and so on? How come? YOU would get a knock on the door if you, you know, were associated with a terrorist group.

If folk can't go out of their homes because of terrorism in the streets, that's terrorism. Terrorism is terrorism. It's not protesting. Protesting doesn't terrify people. So reality gets changed as it happens. Everybody's getting gaslighted by the media. Oh this, and you see, [Alan chuckles.] there was one where you see the fella talking, a young guy talking about, is just general protests, he says, and behind him there's buildings and cars and everything burning, you know. That's not protesting.

And all this nonsense again by some of the mayors saying, oh well, you know, they've all got insurance companies. No, they don't. And insurance doesn't pay everything out, either. So let's not even go into this nonsense, you know. But when you see people who literally are not wealthy, you know, a lot of them you wouldn't even call middle-class with these small places, you know, standing in front of ashes. AND getting attacked by people if they try to defend their property, that old fella, 70-year-old, eh?

They don't care about people. These are terrorists. These are homicidal terrorists when they do that, that's what you're watching. We all know it. We all know it. Of course we do.

The world is watching America and you come to the conclusion that this is meant to happen. Because so far nothing much has been done to stop it. The police have been told to stand down by mayors. In fact some of them were told not to even have pepper spray on them. So what are they left with? The National Guard is getting muzzled again too. And you have to say to yourself, is America really so weak now? Or are we watching some kind of prearranged play on the go, like a drama? Like a fictional drama where everybody plays their part. I mean, you've got Pelosi there [Alan chuckles.] saying, and Hillary too, that they're not going to accept the election if Trump wins. Well, that again is insurrection. You see?

The whole idea of having ANY pretense of a democracy, even though it's a republic, it's a Democratic Republic, you're given a vote, but the pretense of it, right, is that two, at least two parties, the biparty system, can debate and slanging each other, but you always have negotiations. That's how. It's not open warfare [Alan chuckles.] like it is now, eh? So when you've got open warfare and they're telling you there's no debate here and we’re not going to go along with whoever appears to win, then what are you going to do?

The whole world is watching this. It will be interesting because I've mentioned before these generals in the US, a few of them, but they're all on the payroll of the military-industrial complex when they’re retired or semiretired and so on. So they obviously know that, regardless, the world will morph into another part, like a combination of countries, again, with maybe America doing a lesser role. But they'll get well-paid by the… Because the military machinery will continue for manufacturing weaponry. It's a big business, you see. And you can always stir up countries to saber rattle and fight each other if need be, you see, you can always do that. So are they in on it? Is this all part of an act?

Because as I say, I'm looking outside, from outside looking inwards at the US. And I know lots of people in the States who are completely puzzled by it all, outside these burning cities. A lot of them too are still watching the news and they sit and hear of protests, they're kind of out of it, as they protest and protest. They don't even know what's going on, some of them. Really. Because the mainstream media will make, will gaslight you totally. Completely gaslight you. M-hm. Until you'll doubt your own sanity if it comes down your street. That can't be what I'm seeing, no, because the media would be mentioning… well, it's just a peaceful protest.

But no, again, even the leaders have come out, of these organizations, and we know what they're, they've said what they are and what they want. It's overthrow. And the youngsters following them are shouting revolution, revolution, revolution, eh. And since you haven't been given a manifesto, like a logical manifesto of those who are the revolutionaries that want to take over, then well, they don't have something to replace it with as such except, everything is to be free. I mean, come on, this is a childish thing. It's meant to go off in some other direction obviously. It has to be. The people in the streets are not the bosses of this thing. There's much higher, higher actors above all them. So they must know where it's supposed to go.

Interesting too that they had the article in the paper about Syria, northern Syria, where the US is still in there. Some special forces or Marines maybe, or Green Berets, who are in a military vehicle and they were kind of nudged or just dunted by a Russian military vehicle. And the impression it would give to the world is that the big boss is losing its power. It's kind of a macho thing. I don't fall for these articles. It's meant to make you think that the US is kind of falling behind and becoming not so much the big swaggering guy, you see. It's a macho thing. But at the same token, it's true about northern Syria. And Donald Trump said it a while back remember. He says, when they were taking some of the troops out, he said, well we've still got the oil.

Well no, they're stealing the oil. This is Syria's oil. They've been stealing it, you see. Which is generally what the military is used for, is for corporations to steal something elsewhere. Because it's true, that's what the military is used for. The US isn't asked in by the Syrian government. They're there illegally. And the Russian vehicle's policing it, they ARE invited in by Syria. That's true.

I don't think the folk in America or anywhere else have got a clue of the carnage... and the horror... and slaughter... and destruction that the US has been at since at least 2001. But before, as I say, even with Desert Storm with countless folks losing their families, starved to death... bombed to death... can't get any peace. Years, can you imagine most of your life having no peace? And afraid of getting bombed out? And it's all at the hand of American forces. Why are Americans over there anyway?

Long-term planning strategies. I gave the talks many years ago about when Ronald Reagan brought on to his staff, was it, Jeanne Kirkpatrick. She was a trained communist. She went to the communist school in New York City. Yeah, they had communist schooling in New York City. That was the headquarters for America. He brought her on board because he liked an idea. So here's Reagan playing the right wing, bringing her on board to staff because she said, rather than the US going off to intervene in different countries and then pulling out and going back to another country and pulling out and back and forth, let's just make permanent basis across all these different nations. And that's what they did.

So he brought a communist on board, who obviously [Alan chuckles.] had a communist agenda, if you like, communist agenda, that just suited the right wing. Isn't that amazing? So it makes you question everyone. What is your right wing? What is the system of left-wing? Who runs both sides, eh?

Then they become the policeman of the world with all these permanent military bases across the planet. Who's benefiting? Nevermind that, well sure, that communist corporations all over that benefit. But also, the big banks are too. The big banks are benefiting. Of course they are. If you can control every nations Federal Reserve system, if you like – which isn't, like the US, it isn't even theirs, it's owned by other folk, they're privately owned – then you control the nations, and the flow of goods, and the costs of goods because you decide what the cost of their currency is going to be by the day for purchasing power and transactions.

We live so simp... we really are in our own little cocoons, aren't we, of, in little bubbles of ignorance, eh? And you can't blame society. Again, it's, they always talk about evolution and how we’re not used to really advance circumstances, we still think in small town tribalism in a sense. And that's quite natural. So because we're still small town tribal, as an example, everything has to be on the up and up. Otherwise you'd go nuts with paranoia, you'd crack up if you really know the real truth – [Alan laughing.] that's why most folk can't really handle the real truth – and how devious everything really is. Incredibly devious. And how little of what you just take for granted is there for the reason that you thought it was there, or even exists for the reasons that you think it's there in the first place.

It really doesn't, you think your education system is your governments attempt at giving you the opportunity to make a career for yourself? Do you really believe that? When there's agencies that literally pick children at school and decide who future leaders of your nation will be. Not just in politics, but in civil service jobs and in pressure groups and even nongovernmental organizations, they pick them young and they trained them. Like the Common Purpose organization based in England, but it's for the whole of Europe. So you have people that you're going to vote for that are preselected as children who are trained to be devious, and to live quite happily without blinking to the cameras and be awfully pleasant. They're given acting lessons too. Then you vote for them. Then you wonder why they go off on some strange tangent like agreeing to sell your country out to amalgamate it with some other country. [Alan laughing.] You never quite fathom it out, do you?

That's how the world is, because we still think very simply, like a tribal little village, eh.
And it's so complicated and devious you can spend your whole life looking at your multilayered system of deception. And it's, some movies they put out, mind you, are awfully good, where they do come out with tricks of the trade, and how everything is negotiations. Including like a chess game, everything is, we want this, so we'll give you that, and they can trade off little bits and pieces, or even chunks of countries, eh, in negotiations but never tell the public the real truth. Never tell them the real truth of what's going on. You're left with the results and the mayhem and the chaos, but you'll never know the real truth.

If you look at, hhhch, the Communist Party of America, I did talks years ago on how they use different groups to try to foment revolution. The Communist Party, I don't know if they still do it, they probably do still churn out books from the printing presses in New York City. I've got some here from the old days, you know, going way back. Everything, in fact, that was printed in Russia, they'd have English copies printed in New York and distributed from New York. And there was no shame by them on what they were doing and what their goals were. Which is, the complete eradication of existing systems, it's always the same thing they tell you, to put themselves in charge, to rule you, you see.

Not to make things happier or better for you, but you rule you properly, you see. Where you just jump to and, like Technocracy, it's awfully efficient, get things done, experts rule, you obey, and there's a whole system in place to make sure you obey. What tyrant would not lust after that idea? I mean, that's what it's about. But they always have to get the public on board. As they say, the first casualty of war is the truth. Always. So communism of course was going to make a worker's paradise, eh, and give you a utopia, it's always utopia. Everything's going to be free or cheap or whatever, and it's nothing to do with the truth. But they're told this.

By the way, I've got the old books, and they actually tell their operatives and organizers to tell, to promote this infantile projection of a happy utopia where everything is just wonderful, and you all get whatever you want and blah blah blah blah blah. But the higher-level groups are let in on the inner secrets. Because the general public are [Alan chuckles.] despised by those above them, like a real class system. That's the truth of it, folks. Utterly despised. They get into the real truths of, again, it's really Technocracy, that whole system of Technocracy, which is efficiency by a planned society run by experts. No democracy, there's no such thing as Democratic voting or anything. And no parties, just THE party. That really is the idea behind it. Of course what it comes to, everyone according to their needs, then, if you're part of the upper strata of the Politburo, your needs are obviously greater because your brainpower is greater, so you should have a lot more of everything else, you know, it's wonderful.

So that's the kind of stuff they always push. But it's interesting to see the different levels of, it's a secret society. Really. You know, an outer propaganda for the general population, yeah, the working person is going to get, you know, better wages and… Then you get up to the next strata and, well, like George Bernard Shaw said, the working guy, because that's who they appealed to in the early 20th century, the working guy. He's got a lot to learn, says Shaw. He says, he wants to bring more money home to his wife, he doesn't realize he probably won't have a wife, we're going to get her into the workforce too to serve the state. You see? So he was cautioned to shut up a bit and go back to the primitive, oh yeah, it's all going to be a utopia and... [Alan laughing.]

They tried in Germany big time too to get the revolution there. And they were so disappointed. The same people who had brought it for the Soviet Union, for Russia, were trying and trying to get revolutions before World War I and towards the end too. They tried it, in fact, and it failed. But they didn't stop there. They had to change their tactics, and they wrote a lot about it in the communist books, that they were so disgusted by the working people of Germany, so disgusted that they, because they says, why would the working people go and fight the working folk of other countries? That they still had this thing in them that would serve the state, this idea of the nation-state and the people, instead of just joining the workers revolution of the world?

That appealed to a lot of people. Even after World War I, absolutely. Because why the heck were they throwing people, whole nations together? But then you go into the writings of, about, from the Lord Alfred Milner group, they wanted world war. They says, through world war and conflict we shall be able to bring the countries into a global system, after you've weakened them all and they'd be so sick of fighting. HG Wells was a propagandists of them, he talked about it quite openly in his books, that war was a necessary technique they would use to weaken people and to make them disgusted about their, and make them question their value systems until they give up and allow themselves to be guided into a preordained new system. You see.

It's never stopped. The people at the top really are not doing it because they love you. Not in the least. They are Malthusian types. They are eugenicists. The Soviet system really, when you really go into their own writings, you talk about a class system. Woah! And the Bolsheviks hated, hated the common people. A lot of the Bolsheviks remember didn't even, they weren't even Russian. Hated them. So hhh, it's interesting to watch, sometimes the descendants of revolutionaries, their great grandchildren perhaps, doing the same thing in the streets and across the US. Coming from the same sources, in Chicago as an example, where a lot of them had books out. Some of their parents had books out who were revolutionaries in the 1960s in the States and they put books out, talking about their... They love to put their memoirs out, you know, when they’ve raked in the millions of dollars, these communists, and talked about them being ‘red diaper papers’, that's a common expression they use, they were raised on communism, the idea of revolution.

So it's always been there but as they say their idea of communism is a deception. It's a deception. Communism is full of fronts.

And in itself it is a front in fact for something else.

Anyway, I've prattled on about that for quite some time. Getting back to the point is, we are under a war scenario. Covid is the war. It brings in rationing down the road. This is going to be a bad winter, folks. War brings in restriction of travel. You won't be allowed to travel very far, if at all, if you're not essential. That's the same techniques they use under warfare in Britain. You had essential workers. You had reserved occupations they called it too. If it was necessary for the state, like miners didn't have to go to war, coal miners, because they fuel the country. All the heat then even was coal and powered the factories for munitions and all the rest of it, and the ships. So they could be exempt, although a lot of them did leave regardless and lied about their occupation and got into the military. Because again, they felt patriotic, which is a natural thing, in any country.

So we're in a war scenario now, you must curtail travel, gasoline for fuel for traveling a vehicle, a motor bike or a car. Again, replace it with bicycles. Which are fine for youngsters, but even they can't travel too far on them, you see, it helps that way. You couldn’t go like 50 miles a day unless you're a super athlete. And even then, you won't be allowed to travel outside certain areas in wartime scenario. This is a wartime scenario. It's a war against the great Covid.

Oh, you've got to wear facemasks instead of gas masks, you see. And you've got a be with it, it's gotta be with you at all times or you’re going to be fined or maybe put in prison if you refuse to have it with you. You know of course that's what they did in Britain, you had to have it with you, here we’ve got to wear the mask. It cuts off our communication with other people until everybody's on edge. Because you're supposed to, communication is also visual, as I say, with the facial nuances and so on that puts you at ease in any environment you're in as you go along through the day. Without it… With the mask, the first thing is, oh something dangerous is going on. Everybody looks furtive and... This is all psychological warfare, that's the whole purpose of it, and compliance, you see.

And it's awfully good at suffocating you, you know. That's really what it really does awfully well. Your nose is there to bring in oxygen. If nature wanted you to be suffocated, it would close off your nostrils. So they give you masks to do it instead. And if there's a real disease out there, you'd all have it so badly. If it were a really bad disease, like a real deadly killer, high killer, it would be terrible. Because no one can wear a mask, you can go into any store and watch the shopkeepers and everybody, their fingers are at their nose the whole darn time, back-and-forth, back-and-forth. And if there's any bacterium going through in the moisture of the cloth, or the paper, and it does, it travels that way, it's capillary action they call it, an osmosis kind of thing. It will, yeah, it isn't just moisture going through that mask from your breath to the outside. It would bring in bacteria or viruses with it. You see what I'm saying? This is known it's a dangerous thing if society wore this. You go into stores, even food stores, and you see their hands of the people are at the nose the whole time as they're handling the foods. They can't help it. They pull it away all the time because the moisture blocks up the pores in it and they can't breathe. It SUFFOCATES you. So it's a complete joke and a lie for a different purpose of compliance, you see, subservience.

Warfare, and in warfare you get rationing. Well, this winter will be BAD. They shut down the meat plants because they want a post-meat world. They want, really, a vegan society if possible. Although again Bill Gates and others, the same characters, it's always the same characters, have got the patents on your veggie burgers and things like that and meat substitutes. Even some of the companies that did the actual lab grown meat, eh, that we talked about for years, and here they come into play again. And the wealthy will have everything they want as always. Just like Julia mentioned in 1984, those bar stewards have everything at the top.

Nothing changes, eh, during deception. Wartime scenario. Restrictive diets. Restrictive travel. Restrictive freedoms. Snooping by all government agencies. Orders that you must follow all the time.

Another thing I mentioned too, about this winter of discontent, it's definitely getting... I mean, Hancock is already doing his nonsense in Britain, this, this disgusting critter of a politician doing what he's told. And he's, you know, he said, oh you know, there's going to be a massive spike happening this winter... He's getting them all ready for it in Britain. I'm sure every country has got their Hancock ready to do the same thing, or maybe even starting now. Because they're all getting their orders from the same conmen, you know, the big gang at the top.

But one thing I'll tell you, and this you can take to any bank that still left standing, or open. I live near, very near train tracks. These trains, this is the main tracks that go North here in Ontario. I have never seen so many trains. It's been so slack in trains for years and years and years because of the financial systems and the crash of 2007/8 and so on. You might get two trains a days. Sometimes it was none. They really slowed right down to nothing. In the last six weeks I'd say, maybe a bit longer, maybe seven weeks, seven or eight weeks, I've been getting dozens a day. And they're the heaviest trains I've ever seen. I'm used to, I've seen the doubled-up containers on trains before, sure. And I've had, years and years and years ago I know that I had heavy trains. These things are miles long, and they're so frequent, and the house shakes with them. And these trains are going north.

Now, it's not because there's a massive abundance of sales on the go. You know that everything's collapsing. It is not because there's a special sale on whatever, it’s not because of a special sale on some store in Sudbury for instance. It's going way beyond Sudbury. These trains, a lot of them have refrigerated units. And also, the heavy goods units. And also, whole trains of propane for fuel. These are going to the big base way north in Ontario. There's a few in the north of Canada, but there's a BIG one in Ontario. There's a huge center at the top too for the NORAD group, hm, and North Com as well.

But also, it's like they have underground places reserved for them. These are underground cities. Just like the ones under, what's that big airport in the States, there's other ones as well in the Apache mountains, this one. But they definitely have a huge one up north. They’re stacking them up. For continuity of governments. And for VIPs. You're talking about something that's planned, that might take years. This isn't just a Covid thing. This is something much bigger. It could be preparation for it. Regardless, they’re certainly doing it.

This is not going into a place like Sudbury because of something like sales were on all over the place, which they're not. The stores, some of the stores in Sudbury, they've got The Source for instance. The Source is a subsidiary company of what used to be RadioShack. They don't sell much except just the gadgetry now, I mean the actual finished gadgets as opposed to components and things. You know, a little place like that, you could have maybe three of a staff, and there'll be only two people at a time in to walk around the store. You know. And no one goes in because of it. Lots of the stores are the same. So folk don't enjoy going out or walking around with masks on anyway, and then being watched, and then folk shouting over Tannoy systems and supermarkets saying, like, stay in line, and, 6 feet apart. Yeah. Etc. Brave New World, eh? [Alan laughing.]

So yeah, these trains are really stocking up somewhere big time for a long, long-term existence of somebody and some peoples. Of the important folk. Not for us, of course. Because it's continuity, I can remember they did that years ago too when Margaret Thatcher was in. They've done it a few times actually. They have these places and they had a few in England. At the time in Britain, at least they talked about them during that particular time that Thatcher was in. Folk don't realize there was a big push on then with Thatcher and Reagan to try and bring an end to the Cold War with the Soviet Union. That's when the movies are put out, called Threads and so on, and continuity of government during...

They showed you documentaries too, because the US was, had big basis put into Britain. They put in these massive, fortified places around Loch Ness – [Alan chuckles.] to destroy the countryside and things like that – for the military to try and remain actually after, to get through a nuclear war. And Scotland was going to be sacrificed pretty well in the hope that they'd send a lot of missiles there rather than send them towards London. That's how they worked out the strategy. [Alan chuckles.] They had all these different programs on the go of sustainability after a nuclear attack, and how many they would even allow, peasantry they would even allow to stay existing after an attack, you know. No kidding you. But the whole country, it would be allowed to fall, completely, if they realize they couldn't stop an invasion at Britain that might eventually go to America.

So they literally, they had the U.S. Air Force and the military practicing all the time in Britain for these events. Well, it got to supposedly a crisis point, because they build up crisis points, they always blame the enemy, or the supposed enemy, to start it. But in reality, they started themselves. It's really propaganda for the public and to get into the newspapers, then the Soviets read, oh my God… The Americans read it again, you know, in your papers you get the opposite story.

I can remember when, that Britain was on high alert and they had harrier jump jets, these are these vertical takeoff jets that the RAF used. They would, some of the two-men ones could pick up a couple of people, they could cram them in if you're careful. But they had lists of VIPs, very important people to pick up in Scotland and England and Northern Ireland and Wales, all over. So they all had their lists who to pick up. And helicopters to pick up other ones too. And deliver them to select underground bases. Which by the way, they used to all be on the maps. At one point they were on, they had naval ones too, but they were on the maps at one time. Then after I think about the year 2000 someone went around looking into these bases, that had all been taken off the maps. But they still existed, they still were manned.

But anyway, the one for Thatcher, she was questioned about it and says, oh, we're all going to get sacrificed and you guys are going to end up getting taken into these huge underground bases. Some of them actually had, literally were set up to last 10 to 15 years. And longer. With foodstuffs, energy supplies. Some of them had small nuclear reactors, I think Toshiba made them. The company Toshiba, they were tractor-trailer lead, they could keep the place going for years. And you could wheel them away and replace them again. Like transport trailer size, eh.

But Margaret Thatcher was quiet, she says, yeah, she says, so what, the important people and continuity of governments must continue and so on. Meaning that all of the folk, the ordinary folk were going to be sacrificed on the surface, eh. That was a different story again what was to happen then too, that they would have select military in gear occasionally going out there and destroying folk who were looting and so on, in case the ones down below the ground had to come up and get anything extra that they had missed or whatever. But yeah, it came out in the papers that, yeah, after Thatcher and the rest of the captains were all inside these bunkers, and the VIPs were inside, then special forces would guard them until they themselves would come inside as well.

That hasn't changed. That really hasn't changed. So it's the same with this one too, you see, this exercise with the Covid. These bunkers are completely stacked up, and some of them are five levels deep you know. They're really underground cities. Whatever's planned, as I say, whatever it is, this is a major change. It's a wartime scenario. They're using Covid to terrify the public. They want chaos in the streets, there's no doubt about that. And they'll get it, obviously. You won't need the Antifa to do it. If you go through a winter of massive rationing and restrictions until there's no food and... You're going to get your street riots. Sure you will.

I'm just wondering if that's the game here. Because there's something else on the go here. There's no doubt about it. I've never seen so many heavy, heavy, heavy trains. With, some of them are miles long. With quite a few engines stuck in between, slave engines, you know. So hhh, yes, something is on the go. Because there's not much north of me. [Alan chuckles.] Heavy, heavy, heavy guys. So as I say, the winter of discontent.

When you see the incredible wartime scenarios, to even bring out this Covid wartime scenario on us, and all the folk involved in it... The standardization of ALL media, all propaganda, complete on board agenda here. This is a big, big push for a massive change. You've got to understand that. And often as I said with intelligent services and how, what really runs the world, it won't be what you expect. You've got to get this out of your head that your government is there to look after you. I hope you got rid of that long-ago. [Alan chuckles.]

I think that's the one thing that Ronald Reagan said that was really true. He said, that serving Americans, in his day, and he says, that the most feared thing that Americans worry about ever happening to them, was for people to come to their door saying we're from the government, we're here to help you. Because it doesn't work that way. It doesn't work that way.

What's happening now is some very, very big, it's a planned change for society. Big time. Whatever's to come out of it is intended to be a different world. A different world. It's a world order, remember. Kissinger said it too, it's a new world order once again, eh, a few weeks ago there.

Kissinger: Failure to establish post-COVID new world order ‘could set the world on fire’ - lifesitenews.com / 7 April 2020

So anyway, we're living through big, big changes and most folk don't get it and don't know it. And they'll never fathom it out because they listen to the media every day to keep them in a state of temporary suspension of reality, where you suspend your reason and your incredulity, you know. You just go into, oooo, oooo, zombie land. And then you react, you panic. That's what they want. They'll have experts come in all the time to lie to you. Anybody who says the facts, even when you're simply repeating what they've said themselves from the media, if you bring them up and point out contradictory facts, put out by officials as well, then you're a conspiracy theorists. They actually go through that in their training exercises at Event 201, talking about how they'll label folk conspiracy theorists and fake news.

Aaaah, what a world, eh? No wonder the public really don't have much of a chance most of the time, when they are decent. Most of the people are decent. I don't care who they are, what ethnic groups they belong to, most folk are pretty decent. There are no, there's no ethnic group out there that's all decent, obviously. And you have psychopaths in all ones. You have dysfunction in lots of people too, and lots of families. Because this war on the family has been across the board and it's been on the go for an awful long time. The public are just as ignorant of that. They thought they were just evolving, and progressively, as they call it. [Alan chuckles.] Oh we're evolving, you know, we don't get marriages often as we used to.

When I was a youngster too, my generation was pretty well dysfunctional with that because we were hammered as well with it. That was the, oh, suddenly the birth control pill. Which oddly was called the contraception pill. It really was an anti-contraception pill. The scientists had worked for years and years using tax money to bring it in in time for the sexual revolution. Once they had it they launched the sexual revolution. Then you had the National Health Service fulfilling its real goals of abortion, that was all over the place. Folk don't even know that was a big, big part of it.

There's always another reason for things to happen. Even the good things, you know. Always another reason behind it. The general public think that, they truly believe that everything is there to serve them, that society is there to serve them, that governments are there to serve them. No, no, no. Nope. Not at all. Np.

I think it was in Canada, the head guy who started up the push for the health system in Ontario here, or in Canada, it was again another kind of communist who also was up for depopulation and abortion. Yep. In Britain at the National Health Service they had specific days in each hospital, each hospital in different areas would have their days for routine operations. For instance, leg ulcers, peptic ulcers and things like that. Something in the morning and something else in the afternoon, so their days were fixed. But each hospital had their, and eventually had their abortion days coming out. That's when surgeons would be there and they just sit there and scoop the bits into buckets all day long, one after the other. That's what they did.

That was your, that's your tax money at work there. Because from the elites' point of view, you're always the problem. Above any system that you think is there to serve you, there's always this whole, what is it really there for? You're being managed. Like, farmed. As I say, they always farm you up when there's big long-term wars scheduled. And you're killed off. And even then, World War II, you know, they had the meeting in the last year of the war in Britain in London. I think they even had the King presiding over it as the kind of head, titular head for the meeting. It was to do with population control. He said, the war wasn't, they knew then that the war wouldn't kill enough people off. Even with the aftermath of the war. I mean, across Europe, certain countries were shattered with war. Shattered. Just like World War I too. And massive damage in cities and famine and all the rest of it.

Again, I've already mentioned what happened with the British farm system, how it was destroyed pretty well, and it imported most of its food, how ridiculous was that. They had to farm every little bit of available gutter, or sorry, every available ditch or whatever in Britain to grow vegetables. Still, they were exporting stuff to all the other countries that had been in the war. The British folk were starving up until well into the 1950s.

So you've got to realize that as I say that those who rule you are always Malthusian at heart. One of the proponents for massive depopulation, and open, openly about it, was Prince Philip, the head of the Sierra group and many other groups as well, all combined together to love nature. It's a guise. They take the best farming lands in some countries across Africa and other places and turn it into reserves. Which causes the food shortage, you can't get the best grazing lands and so on. Then you don't give these countries much of a chance to become stable.

Remember they want, the first thing you do for a country, to destroy the country and take it over, destabilize the country. That's what the communist revolutions are used for too, you see, destabilize the nations within. Then keep them on edge. The US at the moment is still a big nation, right. But you take enough, if they have enough cities, if they can bus, even fly by the way, some of the top organizers back and forth to these different areas, because they're so, they've got millions of dollars behind them in funding. [Alan chuckles.] If they can keep it going long enough you'll start to destabilize the different cities.

I mean, destabilize them. You won't get them finances coming in from any business at all. And then they've got a lockdown with Covid at the same time, right. This is the destabilization process. This is what it's called. Once you get to a certain point of crisis all over the place, you aren't going to get it ever building back again. People will not move into an area where they have fled from fear of their lives. Because of the authorized chaos. And I'm saying, and it is authorized when you've got mayors and that joining them at times and saying go ahead and loot and the whole... Well of course people are, that's the end of you. That's the end of your city, folks, or that area of your city. That's the end of it. Who's going to go back there and live to wait for it to happen again? Or build up another one to watch it burn down too. It's not going to happen. It's destabilization with a permanent future plan, you see, by people way above the rioters, as to what's supposed to happen.

Wartime scenarios, you're living through them. Massive psychological warfare and gaslighting by all on the TV. Oh nothing much happened, and there's fires behind the guy and gunshots going off. So they're not going to stop here. Something big, much bigger is planned, much, much bigger as I say. I'm sure that there are people in the States and other parts of Canada who have noticed if they live close to tracks at all, this massive, massive movement now of transport of goods going somewhere, one directional basically, still going north of me.

If you are, get in touch with me. Email me, let me know what you're noticing. This is how you get real intelligence, is from people. You know, you have to get their own observations. That's the most important stuff, is your own observations of differences, things that are happening. Very, very important. Because you're not going to get truth from television, that's totally complicit, the TV, in every country, in terrorizing its own population into the same agenda. We've all, we're all going through the same lies.

They used to show you this in comedies, you know, or talk shows, like the Jay Leno show or something. Where they show you someone in a newscast, saying about three sentences, blll-lll-lll, then they'd flash to another station saying the exact same blll-lll-lll, and one after the other to show you how standardized they all are, regardless of the names of the company, or television company, all getting this, parroting the same nonsense. Again, standardization of news, of information. All from a singular source and repeating it over and over and over. It must be true, you know, it's on TV, Wag the Dog.

So you have to really think about that, the whole war, it's an ongoing war. It didn't just start. Different phases of the same war really and different techniques being used. Yeah, at the end of World War II, okay, not enough folk were killed. Well, what do you do then? They immediately started off with propaganda, oh there'll be baby boomers. They even called the name back then, right, baby boomers, before they were born. Oh there'll be baby boomers, and so that in 50, 60 years’ time there'll be a tremendous burden on society trying to cope with illnesses and old-age problems and stuff like that, you see. This just escalated as time went on, the same kind of propaganda.

The message is loud and clear, there's too many of YOU. TOO many of you. How do you get people to stop breeding? Well, you've got to, and remember breeding is a part of it, you know. Anyone can have sex but to actually breed children is a different story. That was the goal. Well, you create promiscuity. And you'll say, well that's the opposite, that's going to... No, promiscuity. Without bonding. They said it in the different schools of thought that were put together to create a new culture post-World War II. Actually even during World War II, they amalgamated some of these organizations, including the Frankfurt School came over from Germany before the war and they were all for that too. Because they were masters of psychological manipulation and propaganda. But they merged with the Macy group, and they were given permission, along with London, to create a new culture.

What did they do? Well create promiscuity. If they get the youngsters mating early, you see, for sex, they wouldn't mate and bond. Just give them lots of partners, they wouldn't bond once they hit their 20s and get married and have children. That was the idea behind it. So you create, it's so amazing that this is how psychology works, isn't it? They do the opposite of what you think they'd do. Rather than say, just don't have sex, you see. It was much easier to say, no, go ahead, yeah, listen children, have sex, enjoy yourselves. That's what they did. They give you pop music, you see. Before that it was the Teddy boy stuff, the Elvis Presley stuff. Then they brought in, so they sexified guys for the first time. Elvis Presley was called Elvis the pelvis. That was his nickname. It was almost like a guy going through gyrations of strippers, the later strippers. And it was all taught to him as well.

I remember watching a documentary years ago where they, the guys who trained guys like Elvis Presley, and a few other people besides him, I think Johnny Cash was one of them, there was actually one guy trained a whole bunch of them and made them… It's a star making machinery. They decide who's going to be a star and they make them stars. Big money to make you a star. They showed you a counterpart and even a friend of his, of this particular producer/trainer in England, who taught Cliff Richard and a few other people as well, Brown was another one, and some other guys in the 50s I guess, and made them stars. Using the same techniques, they sexified the guys for the first time with techniques in deportment, that at one time would have turned people off, [Alan chuckles.] including guys off, watching guys behave like that. It was really interesting to see how it was done.

So they sexified the guys. So you give women, young girls, eh, impressionable young girls the whole idea of having these guys. That's how you see young girls crying, going hysterical, I love them so much, you see. These are all the fans, and yeah, they would've done anything. So this is the ideal guy that they want. Not the guy they could get and marry down the road, but this guy here, you see, this fantasy image. They even did good documentaries years later on some of this and how it worked, without telling you what they were really doing it for, the real reasons they were doing it for. It worked awfully well.

The Frankfurt School said that, that they would, that they intended through promiscuity to end the bonding process, if they could separate the sexual act with bonding, then they would have succeeded. Because then the women wouldn't bond and have the child with anybody. Then of course they offered them abortion down the road. And that's where we are today, they have many other ways of contraception naturally. But the whole point is not to mate and bond.

HG Wells was way ahead of his time. I've mentioned this before. Because he mentioned it long before anybody else, that promiscuity was the technique that would be used, and people should, to end the marriage. Along with the Communists. Communism wanted to end the marriage and the family too by the way. The same agenda down the road. It's astonishing that folk can't see. If it's the same, it's the same, it's the same, it's the same, it's the same as the capitalist group, what really is the difference? Or ARE they really different at the top? Well, you'll find out they're not really, no. It's the one group running them all.

I used to really wonder too when MI5, as an example, and I know that the OSS that was there during World War II, up into World War II as well, you already had the Secret Service, you know, in Britain and special operation unit, operations executive [inaudible] but the OSS in Britain at the time, and they brought in Communists from Europe that spoke the languages of Europe and so on. They worked with the group, the Secret Service in Britain and what became MI5. George Orwell was part of that, he was a member of it. Lord Bertrand Russell was a member of it. The author of Darkness At Noon was a member of it and quite a few other people too. They were members, actually sworn members, they were inducted into its official secrets act. They had to obey by the rules to an extent and so on.

But sometimes they would have parties, you know, like dinner parties amongst themselves, things like that and they'd meet their wives and all the rest of it. Bertrand Russell was always hitting on other people's wives. He was a real egotist, the type that would taunt people and actually get them angry, make plays for their wives at the same time, a real one-upmanship type character, a very psychopathic deviant character. A nuisance at these do's that they/he would go to. But Arthur Kessler used to get ticked off and arguments would start and the rest of them would try to separate the almost ensuing fights as Bertrand Russell made plays for Kessler's wife very openly, things like that.

So here you have socialists, this strange British aristocratic socialist Bertrand Russell, socialist in regard to the, he liked the class system, but he thought, again like Technocracy, that he and his own kind should rule it, you see. Kessler was really on the communist side of things, and he is working with the aristocratic socialist, and is working with the capitalists in the same groups.

You have George Orwell, Blair, who himself was, had been, what would you call him really? He invaded another country, Spain, with other groups to overthrow their government. Only to find out that the communist faction that he thought was their friends, of socialists, had other ideas. And eventually had him marked down for assassination. Because Orwell himself, or Blair, they tested him out. Communists always test people out, and if they're good strong speakers, etc., and they have enough communist tendencies and stick to the rulebook they can use them. But if this person has the same ability to speak and can attract people, and sway people's minds, but isn't totally on board with the total communistic agenda, then he will be an enemy. So they don't wait to see it happening, they eliminate them first. So he was marked down for elimination. That's when he managed to get out of Spain when he got tipped off they were after him.

But anyway, you have this mixed bag of people all fighting, what was then a common enemy, right, which was national socialism in Germany. That's the difference in Germany, it was national socialism as opposed to the front of communism in Russia, Soviet Russia which was an international socialism. Even though in reality a lot of it became eventually very national socialistic in Russia, very nationalistic movement.

In Britain remember, and they worked at the BBC, this group that I'm talking about, for propaganda purposes. They were all given different jobs to do. I think Orwell himself, or Blair, was put in charge of the India propaganda and other things domestic too, even right down to convincing British housewives to, again, you're seeing it today. Isn't it amazing how they don't change anything? Orwell said his job was to convince British housewives to do these certain recipes they'd come up with, and to eat things that possibly, and tell them it was so good for them, but in reality, they shouldn't be eating it at all. Nothing has changed. Look at all the same propaganda they're using now, oh, during the Covid lockdowns, eh, you might not get all the food you need, now here's recipes and you can… Same techniques, just unroll the old scripts, eh, and away you go.

So anyway, here you have the post-World War II, they've had their meetings, depopulation. You've got all these characters, the social leaders out there in front still trying to get the public into this new system, which the Communists hope would be more socialistic. In reality, I really think, I mean, here they're all working together, right, how could you possibly allow, I even thought this with Karl Marx, how could you allow them into Britain to start with? And then say, what is this manifest of yours, Karl? Well you see, it's, and he goes through the planks of the manifesto, and talks about the elimination of the family units and things like that, the complete overthrow of the bourgeoisie, you know, and the system, the ruling caste if you want to call it that way and bring in the new form of the workingmen's paradise, which is just a terror show really of compliance and scarcities.

Why would you allow them into a country, and then work with them? How could you work with them when you know that they're going to... kill you? Ha! Literally wipeout the ruling... They're not going to try to convert you, they're going to wipe you out. That's what they talk about, wiping you out, eh. So you have to start saying wait a minute here, are they both working together and it's a different thing on the go? Is it the same group running both sides?

I'm certain that's really what it is. Absolutely. More so, I'm getting way off the track, even if there's any track left to stand on at all. But this is what I'm trying to say here. There had to be a top commander running both sides. We know that the Hegelian dialectic uses both sides to create a change, which is also a formulated planned change. You got to have two sides to make the change. You had the Milner group running everything up there. The Milner group itself is a very strange shady organization, that became the Royal Institute of International Affairs, a private organization with a royal charter to run and exist. With its inner party, outer party, and the higher party of course that is secretive as to the real agenda.

So they ran, the higher party runs MI5 and MI6 after the war. Just like the CIA branch in America. They shared their plans and their work, supposedly against the Cold War. The same group that had communists in it during the war, supposedly share information, CIA, MI5, MI6, right after the war. They still got members who are communists in it. And they're going to fight Russia and the Soviets? It doesn't make any sense. Does it? It really doesn't.

So what's it's really about has got nothing to do with whatever you’ll figure out. I've said it before that the top government agencies in all countries are all one today. They really are. You can’t keep secrets from anybody. You can’t even keep people out from another nation, it would be discrimination, you see. So you can’t keep the secrets. Obviously. So it's all one. So you manage it as one. That's what you do. I think that's what it was planned to be.

Yeah, we're supposed to be pals with communists, and at the same time they've told you, communism isn't there to be a coexisting part of the system. It's a part to be THE system, they eliminate all the rest. Like physically. Could you possibly work with them and coexist? You can't. They tell you in their manifest you they're not going to exist with you.

So something stinks, as I say, when it comes down to what's happening in America today. There's a bigger plan at work. Obviously. And it takes cooperation with all the top media moguls, who are also part of the funders of the organizations that pretend they're just having peaceful protests across America. And this is not, and I'm not going to even go into this groveling denigration of the purpose, or the whole point of folk getting shot by cops. No, that's not what I'm talking about here. It's the ones who hijack it, because they wait for these incidents, and this is the year they picked for it. At the same time they're having Covid? Come on, that's a bit more. Why not every single year the same? No, no.

This is a wartime scenario with riots in the streets, lockdowns in different areas, your facemask thing, your loss of privileges and rights and the rest of it. That's a wartime scenario, folks and it's been hijacked by people who were told to hijack it. That's what I can see. Especially when they're getting financed by the big corporations, that are the only big corporations allowed to still function. Everything else is closed down during this Covid thing. Isn't that another little coincidence there, eh? Hm?

So no, something, this is a big change for society, and as Kissinger said, a new world order. And don't think, hhhch, when he says new world order, don't relate Kissinger to you saying, oh he's an American. Don't think that for an instant. You have no idea how these guys work. They're like aliens, really, in the plans that they'll have, it's so far, far away from what you'd expect.

Bertrand Russell said it back in the 40s and 50s. He said that, when he was talking about the people, through incredible indoctrination techniques and managing the public through diet, injections and injunctions, he said, that's how they would control the people. He said eventually, he says, rebellion against those who rule them, who really rule them eh, he says, rebellion would be unthinkable, as unthinkable as sheep being able to complain about the price of mutton. That's his flippant way of putting it across. But he said, eventually with selective, not just breeding, special breeding between the upper classes, and education of reality, the real, the true reality he's getting at, for the same class, he says, they'll be pretty well a separate species of humanity, those who rule you.

All these professionals, you see, being trained in all these techniques, who understand what's really going on. You're at the bottom level still living in, reading romance stories if you're, you know, as a child or something like that, and believing it all. I mean, that's what he's really referring to. But he said that, yeah, they'll be just like a separate, almost be classed as a separate species. Because they'd selected for their good genes. And successful genes, put it that way. You remember what Darwinian theory was about too. It wasn't just the race, you know. It was about those that had smiled on selective races, as opposed to some other races, eh. Most favored nations and favored races. So you've got to understand it’s still going on.

A separate race. Well, look at the elite today. Look at these creatures that come forward like Bill Gates. A man who's got this great, the big machinery that creates the stars that runs the world created Bill Gates. He is not an inventor. He's a businessman. He inherited everything. He bought over everything else. He's a front man, like Zuckerberg and many others before him. And you’re supposed to just give in onto your knees and ask this guy to save you all from something that either he created or his group did? [Alan chuckles.] His group would create it probably. And they're certainly going to benefit from it all.

But it's for a massive complete world change. Obviously. You've got to think about this, folks. And I sit and think about China. I says, now, was China sitting playing its part here? ...by terrifying us before we're supposed to, and then they give the nod to Fauci, you'd better get them going in the States, now it's time to get them going and get them terrified, and away they went? Hm? Because Fauci, remember, and his organizations that he runs in the States authorized the transference of that coronavirus over from North Carolina University to the Wuhan lab. Fauci gave the okay for it to get, to pay them as well to get on with it when they stopped, when they said it was too dangerous to go any further with it inside the US with this gain of function, give it to the Chinese to complete it. Well, they did complete it, it would seem, eh.

And isn't it amazing, all the newscasts that verify this information, the actual official sites, right, like the big spokespeople of the planet, hhhch, went along with this agenda and admitted to all the stuff initially. Then they suddenly all retracted it. Oh no, it probably just developed by itself. That's the modern, that's the new statement now, eh? That's also in that Plandemic video.

That's what you're living through. It's incredible deceptions on every possible level. But yeah, a wartime scenario. Different, different… Look at the hammering at different groups inside the States and across the planet with drugs. The government can come down like a ton of bricks on anything you do that's supposedly illegal, but they just couldn't stop the drugs just flooding into the country. Meanwhile, the same governments have their secret service agencies in Latin America getting all the coke that they can get, and they're bringing in the heroin from Afghanistan, remember the Bush era, and selling it on the streets of America and elsewhere to get money for black budgets we're told. This is not conspiracy stuff. Remember the Oliver North fiasco? Drugs-for-guns, guns-for-drugs and so on like that. [Alan chuckles.] Hm? That's only part of it. And it still going on, all that stuff with drugs. Big black budgets. That's also a great way to create destabilization in certain neighborhoods in America. Of course it is.

And that's the illegal drugs, supposedly, illegal drugs, right. Then you have the legal drugs. Look at the Canadian family that owned massive, you know, OxyContin drug type system, oxycodone, etc. And the fact that they knew years before during all the testing that it was going to be HIGHLY addictive, and they had planned on getting sued and the whole bit down the road, but they could rake in billions on it. And they did. That was legal and that's prescribed all over the place.

They targeted places in Virginia with it, remember, and brought in doctors from India to prescribe it in different places. No matter what you went in with you'd come out with a prescription for oxycontin and oxycodone. Isn't that astonishing? Diane Sawyer went there I think, did a documentary on it too. Then they had the other one too. Diane Sawyer's documentary, I think it was called, Hidden America: Children of the Mountains, worthwhile seeing it. Another one too is a documentary called Oxyana where they were flooding the different parts of the same areas with oxycontin and so on. It was all deliberate too.

I mean, I did the articles at the time where different agencies were investigating the fact that little towns in those areas were bringing in millions and millions of doses every other month. [Alan chuckles.] And no one questioned it. It was all deliberate of course, to bring down and destroy. These are tactics you use to destroy areas and societies and cultures, and different parts, both white areas, and then the African American areas as well. That's standard technique.

It truly is amazing what we live through, and we can’t put it together. When your own FBI [Alan chuckles.] doesn't go anywhere near that, don't touch it? When you see how many children destroyed, of all different ethnic groups too, specifically targeted, and the drugs flow in and you watch the chaos and destruction and deaths. This is war. These are techniques of war.

For folk, if your system really wanted peace and stability, these things would stop. Then you would have programs of PURPOSE into these areas. You need purpose to exist. When you take away purpose and self-respect you go down the tubes fast. You'll do anything to get a few minutes of forgetfulness, forgetfulness, complete oblivion... That's why they pay for the drugs, you see. That's what you get. You see, these are war techniques. Massive destruction. All planned. And people profit from it way, way above you, including intelligence services and agencies. Nothing new in this, folks. Nothing new at all.

Then I can remember what Aldous Huxley talked about. Aldous Huxley was a member of the inner group. He knew the agenda. He sat in on planning with his brother. Julian Huxley was a big planner in all of the stuff. Aldous Huxley talked about it in Brave New World. It wasn't some fantasy that just came into his head. He talked about it. And Julian Huxley, the brother was a bit more out with it. Because he worked for UNESCO and he was all for Planned Parenthood, you know, start killing off the lower classes and so on, and shape society under the guise of socialism and we are here to help you, ha, ha. But he also said that, we are part of the scientific class.

This is the order, this is how they see society. You have the ones at the very top who are the financial elite, that they are the true financial elite. These are not the guys down below who own a whole bunch of houses and streets in cities. No, these are the ones at the very top who own nations, that's what they're talking about there. You have a dominant minority, that's how Aldous talked about it, a dominant minority.

Beneath that you have what helps the dominant minority are the workers, the real workers. The workers are the managers on behalf of the dominant minority. So the dominant minority have all the finances and so on. They just give occasional suggestions and it's all put into place by managerial classes that work and make it all happen. Make it so, as they say, and they make it so.

Then you have an academic elite working with the scientific elites to manage all the general populations. And Huxley said, we are part of that. That's his family's purpose by the way. He says, we're part of the scientific elite. So his brother is into UNESCO and social engineering and family-planning across the planet and things like that, you see. You can go back into the Huxley's and Sir Thomas Huxley was ‘Darwin's bulldog’ who took over eugenics, you see, and evolution, the theory of evolution, which went right off the, it was really completely tied with eugenics from the beginning. Of course it was.

So we’re run by all these different managerial classes who are intergenerational, and they boast about it quite openly. Politicians pretty well are just picked because they will do what they're told. They're well rewarded. They’re psychopathic to start with, they have no qualms about lying to the public or deceiving the public or even doing the dirty on the public, at all. But they’re used by the ones at the top. They are all blackmailable too, the ones below them in politics, the political sphere.

You saw that with Epstein. Epstein was part of a big, massive intelligence program. Of course he was. Of course we even know who the guy above him, who funded it all, the kind of manager inside the States is too. We know this folks. You're supposed to just think that Epstein is, back to the original story, he's just a horny guy. Well, sure, y'know. No. Massive, and these honey traps are old, old techniques. Well-funded. The Maxwell family were into all that kind of stuff even when they were in Britain. So it's an old, old technique. The politicians are favorite game for them because these are, if you want, if you've got big plans and you want favors from politicians it's much better to get these favors complied with, like offers you can't refuse, by having a bit of blackmailable data on the different people involved.

And not just them, but generals as well. That might be another reason why some of the generals in America are a bit kind of hesitant to back Trump on anything. Not that, you know, Trump's a great hero in some ways because... A bit like Ann Coulter in some ways, she's been quite vocal about the fact on, this guy Trump doesn't seem to know what he's doing. He really isn't. He could read his scripts when he's told to, but I mean, he hasn't fulfilled, try to fulfill… You remember what he ran on the first time? And folk were so sick of the corruption in politics at the time that he won with a landslide, you see.

Now, all political parties always vow to help some things, that you must, you if you want to get in at all, it doesn't matter what party it is. But Trump himself did mention in his speech before 2000 and what, 2016 was it, leading up to it. He said that he would allow pharmacology, or the pharmaceutical companies to skip a lot of tests and bring medicines to the people much faster, to help the people, you see, things like that. And I thought, what's going on here, why this sudden skip? And also of course they managed to keep the same brand names for different drugs and put inferior drugs, substitute drugs or ingredients into them and they still maintain they would have the same response. But that didn't really happen. It's true, you've got to get the original ingredients to make things really, really work.

But anyway, he said, the big thing was he was going to start bringing the troops home. The folk in America were sick of this ongoing war that happened, that started as I say with the Desert Storm, and then continued right through, and then really got going on steroids with 2001, all the PNAC group, eh. Then it continued through Obama, after Bush, so much so that Rumsfeld congratulated Obama for continuing the wars and the same list. [Alan chuckles.] What can you say here? I mean, it's still going on yet. And the troops are still over there in northern Syria. The Syrian people, the horrors that they've been through with proxy warriors going against them all paid by the West and trained and funded by the West all these years. It's astonishing.

Then the West working with groups that are always marginalized across those different countries across there. They used them against Iraq too. The Kurds, they use them against Iraq as well. They used them against Syria. And yet the group that they're using against Syria, and funding and all the rest of it and armed, is also a communist organization. So d’you really think they care about who they work with at the top? You'd better get your act together, and says, who's running it inside the States right now? Think about it.

Also, the followers to all this, you'd better start thinking about it too. Who's running you? Who's using you?

Another thing too just to cap it off before I go into the topics here. If you look at some of the clips of the screaming at the Republican National Convention there or whatever it was called that they just had a couple of days ago there. You see these screaming people in the faces of some of the politicians and Rand Paul and different ones, and the threatening. The screaming women are there too. These are not people who are there to negotiate anything. They're not even expecting answers, they wouldn't even listen for an answer to anything that they're screaming at the politicians. These are hostile, aggressive almost murderous people. I hope you understand that.

No system, no system, when you bring up the nihilists and the atheists, and that's what they were called by the revolutionary party when it was called the World Revolutionary Party. When you unleash them on the public, they know they can only use them for the initial destruction of everything that is. And then the elite themselves who run the system get rid of them. Because you can't fix them. They're so far gone that when you start your, bring in even the new system like the communist system, you couldn't allow them to continue. Because then they've got to shut up and stop that behavior, and they can't because they're nihilists. They're damaged. Heavily damaged. When you see people who are screaming their heads off in utter rage, utter, utter rage, you can tell right off the bat that there's nothing going to make it, make them happy. Nothing.

Supposing they had an overthrow of a system. Supposing they use guillotines, like these guillotines they're so fond of parading in front of people's homes now. To again, terrify mainly the public as opposed to the people who live inside the houses. It's the general public they're after, to terrify you. Remember, most psychological warfare is to terrify you into doing nothing. Hmph. But supposing they actually use them, these guillotines, and they brought in their system. The first thing even the Soviets did, once they'd eliminated the competition, and everybody else they wanted to eliminate, they then had to put across to whoever was left, the general population that they want to dominate, right, we're good now, we're here to help you and take good care of things. Well, then they had to get rid of those people who were doing the screaming. Because they know that no matter what kind of system they are under, such people, they're not happy within themselves to begin with, that's the problem. Hm? No system is going to make them happy. So they would do the same with whatever system is there, and they’ll scream against the rules and regulations no matter who makes them.

Because inside they have no contentment at all. There's nothing inside them that gives them peace. Remember too, it's like suicide, suicide is rage turned inwards. And when you see them screaming like that, they’re murderous, that's rage turned outwards. It's the same thing, there's something wrong inside to start with. Something wrong. That generally they can't even verbalize really what the real problem is.

But you look at society today. It's been under total war. I've mentioned before, people need purpose. Often the purpose isn't verbalized at all, it's expected. It's like generations and generations right up until the 1960s, folk just got married. You had the mating imperative there, as they say. People would bond through sex, they'd have children. That became, that cemented the reason for being too, it gave you purpose. Whether you liked it or not, because they weren't always happy marriages naturally, but there was a level of contentment there and purpose. There's no doubt about it.

You take instincts, you see, we still get all the same instincts even though they've been warped by interference. Oh, just have lots of sex and lots of partners, then you won't bond. Well, there's never been a time where children have sex early, as early as they do now. Of course they want to eliminate even any barrier for that age amongst themselves or even other genders. They're calling it ‘intergenerational sex’ now, not pedophilia. But there's never been a time when youngsters have sex easy at school, and continue it, lots and lots of partners, there's no taboo at all.

But you go through life, the same instincts are still there, and they're not getting fulfilled. They're getting lots of sex but there's no bonding, you see. Most of them aren’t have children, at least not live children. So the instincts are there but they're not being fulfilled. Therefore purpose is absent, you see. The purpose is absent.

It's like going through the motions of something that has no purpose anymore. It becomes meaningless eventually. And from the meaninglessness comes rage. It becomes rage because they can't even verbalize what's wrong. They'll rage against anybody who says, well here's the problem. [Alan chuckles.] You know. Because they think they're free because they're doing what they're doing. But they're not free at all. They're not free at all and they don't know it. They're just full of rage.

I remember at even one of the anti-globalist rallies that they had, one of the big meetings with the globalists were all meeting for their, make their plans of using our tax money and taking the factories abroad. One of them, there was a clip out on television at the time back in the 90s, late 90s. One of the people who was attending it, I don't know if he was a politician, I know he wasn’t a politician, he was the CEO of a corporation. He said, but look at them all down there. He says, has anybody asked them what they want? And he did, he went down into the streets and there's all the banners and someone in there screaming and yelling and they're chanting their chants. Because you always give them chants to chant. That's what's four legs good, two legs bad is, you know Orwell's Animal Farm.

They're given chants. Eventually they can't even, they don't even remember what they're chanting. It's almost, it's automatic with them. When you've lost your personal identity, that's what you do, you're part of the mob getting used by somebody else you don't even know is using you. But he went down, he talked and he says, what is it you're really after? And they couldn't finish a sentence. They couldn't verbalize what was really wrong. Because most of them, they couldn't, they didn't know. They were just completely unhappy, unfulfilled, etc. etc., they couldn't really...

Well, it's what I'm saying here. You don't just stop thousands of years of existence, maybe millions, who knows, you don't just stop it by changing cultural values by design by those who rule you. You still got the same instincts on the go. And nothing is a substitute for those same instincts. Nothing is. And even mating, because mating isn't going to be some happy utopia either. There's always going to be arguments and all the rest of it in relationships or marriages or whatever. But generally the folk go through them and by them and there's more bonding goes on than disagreements. And children of course.

Look at the mess with all the children. You keep giving these fake systems to try, like Band-Aids, as substitutes for families, and they create these big foster homes, or other homes to the deal with wayward children who just are all screwed up because of single-parent homes or folks on drugs or whatever. Total warfare has been going on and the public don't know. They don't know. Yuri Bezmenov went through some of it, others before him that came from the Soviet Union talked about similar things too, into the more detailed techniques that were used. But it's total war you're living in. And it wasn't all the Soviets that were doing it. There were plenty inside America all working. [Alan chuckles.] Hollywood did a great job, you know, on destroying the system and the family unit.

But as I say, nothing, nothing really, nothing takes the place and fulfills the roles that are there. And society is so screwed up because if you've got a man and woman, and they get hitched, and they've already been brought up by watching TV... TV is not there to make you content with something. TV even from the advertising is to make you discontent until you, you're supposed to want whatever they're showing you, whatever product it is. But the entertainment is the same thing, it's to make you dissatisfied with what you have.

So you've got nothing but really soft porn soaked into everything. It used to just be the soaps but now it's soaked into everything, and it is always erotic porn, and way beyond anything most folk will ever experience. So therefore, the fantasy sticks in their head. It will hyper-sexualized them until they'll never be happy with their partners. By the way, that goes for all the other types out there too, and whatever sex it is, it's the same thing. You’re chasing rainbows. Literally, you know. Because you can't get to the end of the rainbow.

So when basic, basic forces and instincts are tampered with you've got masses of fallout. And eventually the folk can't verbalize anything. They'll make, they might, they all have their affiliations and things they want to belong to, and they'll feel that they're traitors if they start to admit how they really feel.

But the fact is, there's a war on the go. Long-term war. You've got all the instincts looking for something, and that's what you can't verbalize, what you're really looking for. But the instincts are there. And they're not being fulfilled. They can't be fulfilled. And it's used, this is used by those who rule the world. Believe you me, they understand all the things I'm saying here.

Now remember once again go into cuttingthrough the matrix.com. Buy the books and discs. Or straight donations. To help me tick along here to keep all my sites on the go. List the sites in case any of them go down. Hopefully I can keep going for longer as we go through this. This is the most crucial time you'll probably experience in your lifetime for most of you. This is history in the making, what you're living through here. It's overt warfare. Very overt on society.

Mass, I mean, complete, aaaaaaaaaaaa..... The media is so disgusting in its openness to lie to you. It's just disgusting! Where the media itself is complicit in labeling anybody with an opinion as a conspiracy theorist. What disgusting behavior! You know, hhmph. It's a pity folk will not remember this later on. They won't, they'll go back to listening to the media again. No one was listening to the media before Covid, they were so disgusted and sick of it. For years. Especially after the Levinson inquiry in Britain, Lord Levinson where they brought in the new laws and rules on journalism and so on, until it shut everybody up. And they did the same thing in Australia and in other countries too, all followed suit.

It was just dead... and they kept giving celebrities, this is news. No, that's not news. These are all fake people, celebrities, created by a machine, [Alan chuckles.] the star making machine. That's not news. Who cares, you know? But they're disgusting with their conformity of destroying society. It really truly is. This is war on society, complete open warfare. So go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Send a few bucks my way, hopefully, and I'll keep ticking along as we go through this war. And it's not going to be pleasant. It's not going to be pretty.

Because as I say, total psychological warfare is being used upon the public at the same time to terrify you. That's the point of it. We've been through the disclosed information that came out of the SAGE programs in Britain and the behavioral insights teams and so on, the ones that nudge you into conformity. Including what was put out by their group, psychological warfare, by the British establishments, which they published and told to the different media companies to intensify and even exaggerate the Covid idea, because folk were not complying so they'd have to increase tension and anxiety in society.

What disgusting behavior. Your tax money is paying for this so they can create anxiety amongst the public? They should all be tried for crimes against humanity here. I really mean that too by the way. All of them. In every country. And the big gangs that are going to profit from it as well. This is open warfare on the public. So send a few bucks my way, hopefully I can keep going as we go through this war. Anyway, here's some articles here now. Have to touch on them because time’s running away. I don't plan these talks and time does tend to fly, doesn't it. Now, let's see, I think there's one here...

[Alan chuckles.] An article about sad old Scotland. It's funny that because I talked to a guy recently, a young guy who’s thinking of going over to Scotland. He was descended from them. And he was a so eager and young, and I thought, you know, what a shame to tell him the horror of it, what's happened to that country. Not just recently but even before then.

Depopulation in 'mainly rural and island council areas' - bbc.com / 27 Aug 2020

This is a study in Scotland. It goes through the different areas in Scotland and the communities that are being destroyed pretty well by depopulation. Again, that’s Agenda 21, get them off the land. But really, I always think back to the Highland clearances. [Alan chuckles.] They’ve been depopulating Scotland for an awful long time, and accelerating it after it lost its place for just breeding soldiers for the British Empire. Which it did for a long time, they were awfully useful. And still are to an extent too but not as much as they used to be. Then they go through the different age groups in Scotland as well. Because again, like every other country, youngsters aren’t having children, aren’t getting hitched and having children, so the populations are dropping as well. But they're bringing in lots and lots of migrants to replace them all from different countries.

Also this article…

What is Gilead's role in the war on hydroxychloroquine?

americanthinker.com / 26 Aug 2020

(Alan: Gilead, as you know, is the one organization that Fauci promoted as, for its antiviral properties. Because they've been working with them, and the US taxpayer has been funding them for a long time through all these different tests and so on. But anyway it says…)

Attacks on the drug have been continuous ever since Dr. Didier Raoult used this quinine derivative to save the lives of COVID-19 patients last March. (A: …and that's true. That article is here, the link is here too.) The first attempt to discredit HCQ was a hastily compiled Veterans' Administration hospital system study last April.

(A: It's true, they're all getting funding from the same sources, the ones that have come out against it.)

After deep flaws in the V.A. study were exposed, Surgisphere (A: …a different organization.) came to the rescue in May with a "15,000 patient" megastudy allegedly compiled from hospitals all over the world. This strategy succeeded: following its publication in the Lancet and the NEJM, all outpatient use of HCQ was severely restricted in the U.S., Australia, and most of Europe.

So they show you who's been bashing hydroxychloroquine and they're all basically related back to the ones that fund the Gilead, the one that's been promoted. [Alan laughing.] But that's the way things really work, isn't it? I'll put these articles up for those that want to read them. Then you've got…

UK lockdown was a 'monumental mistake' and must not happen again – Boris scientist says

americanthinker.com / 26 Aug 2020

(A: That was published on Wednesday, August 26. There's a bit of a video on it too for those that want to see it. I'll put these links up. It says…)

Mark Woolhouse said lockdown was a “panic measure” but admitted it was the only option at the time because “we couldn’t think of anything better to do”.

(A: That's quite a… a very lame excuse, isn't it, eh?)

But it is a crude measure that takes no accounts of the risk levels to different individuals, the University of Edinburgh professor said, meaning that back in March the nation was “concentrating on schools when we should have been concentrating on care homes”.

(A: Argh.)

The professor of infectious disease epidemiology said that the Government must now focus on increasing testing and striving to unlock society safely rather than restricting it further.

Prof Woolhouse OBE, a member of the Scientific Pandemic Influenza Group on Behaviours (A: ...interesting group, and behaviors...) that advises the Government, said: “Lockdown was a panic measure…

(A: These are part of the groups actually said give you all the propaganda that terrify you in the first place.)

“I never want to see national lockdown again. It was always a temporary measure

(A: No, it wasn’t.)

So I won't believe his excuse either. You get professional liars who then come out to make excuses. But the fact is, yeah, they admit there was a monumental mistake. Not really, it was planned that way. They knew what they were doing, eh. In April it was pretty well over, you know that, with the peak as they called it, the peak. But the testing is so bogus with the testing measures they're using anyway, as you well know. I think some basketball team or some NFL team, I can't remember which team it was, tested positive in the morning just recently, and they tested them again and they were all negative by the evening. I guess they had games to play, probably, that's what money does. But it's such a bogus, bogus, oh the testing is so bogus and awful, it's just such a joke.

Again don't forget they've got, it's not just to do with, the disease is meant to bring in a whole new system of permanent vaccination tests and permanent vaccination records, for apps and all the rest of it. Through your whole life. For every generation from now on. You'll be a pincushion for big pharmacology to make billions of dollars off. If you live that long with it all.

And again, what I mentioned two months ago is the experts now are putting, they're giving plasma for Covid 19 treatment. It says…

Experts are divided over FDA approval of plasma for COVID-19 treatment:

Virologist welcomes therapy as 'great news' while Harvard epidemiologist claims Trump's boast of 35% fatality reduction is inaccurate

dailymail.co.uk / 24 Aug 2020

(A: It does matter what Trump says. It makes no difference anyway because their job is to hammer him, regardless of what you think of him.)

Convalescent plasma therapy is when the liquid portion of blood is taken from a recovered coronavirus patient

It is transferred into a sick patient in hopes they will develop the antibodies needed to fight off the infection

It actually puts antibodies in, actually. It works awfully well for most things and it's not new at all. I'm surprised it took this long to actually… Actually we know too that they were already doing it from the beginning for the very, very wealthy. So they were getting their blood too from the Red Cross. Also this article here is…

Anti-mask group speaks out against Sudbury's (A: … and this is in Canada.)
health directives

cbc.ca / 5 Aug 2020

(A: They had a big, as you well know across the world there, Germany and Britain and Canada, groups came out against wearing the masks, you know, the suffocation masks that they give you, or you're told to get or wear. Everybody's really ticked off with it all. Because it's disgusting! It doesn’t work anyway. And all [Alan chuckles.] the scientific evidence admits that too, right. So...)

The online group has grown to include hundreds of people in the region

A new online group is advocating against public health directives surrounding the use of face masks in public spaces.

In recent weeks, the group Sudbury Ontario Freedom Keepers has swelled to include hundreds of members.

Those listed as members of the group include people from Sudbury's healthcare sector, education system and hospitality industry.

While face masks are not currently mandatory, Sudbury Public Health & District has instructed that businesses have policies requiring masks or other face coverings, and to make efforts to ensure people wear them — including through signage and verbal reminders.

(A: But the fact is though, you see, and these stores, it's always the big stores too that, oh, you've got to wear a mask, got to wear a mask. It doesn't do anything. Except make people sick. And even as they said before, the CDC itself said in May that it doesn't stop your contracting a disease, this particular disease, or giving it to someone else if you're wearing a mask. It doesn't. Np.)

Tena Jones is a founding member and administrator of the Facebook group.

She says the city's health directives to wear face masks while indoors and in public are in violation of people's freedoms.

...and so on. So there's folk coming out against it, sure. But that's only part of it. You have to go a lot further with all the reality of this what it's supposed to do.

Global rally against COVID-19 safety measures comes to Parliament Hill

cbc.ca / 29 Aug 2020

(A: …that's another one too.)

Online misinformation about pandemic safety measures thriving, experts say

(A: ...you know, these experts, eh? Online misinformation about the pandemic, eh? So...)

Flouting public health guidance to wear masks in public areas, avoid large gatherings and practise physical distancing, hundreds of demonstrators gathered on Parliament Hill Saturday to protest pandemic safety measures they say infringe on their personal rights.

(A: And they certainly do. Remember, this was all discussed right off the bat before, before they actually, when in their trials you know, their Event 201 and beforehand, and the Lockstep, that it might be harder to do it in the West. Even in their fictional talks during their tests that they had, these were tests that they actually had for the big organizations that were to run it if it ever happened in reality. They said that it wouldn't work so well as it did in China because in the West, you see, they've got these individual rights and that can be a problem for governments to enforce things. So here you've got it, you know, how it's worded here... infringe on their personal rights.)

The group behind the rally is part of a wider movement of people across the globe venting their frustrations over science-backed measures…

...designed by computers. Remember the girl, the schoolgirl whose daddy worked for the military industrial complex, who created a computer program for her, to get her into a higher schooling, you know, or into college, and they came up with 6 feet. Based on nothing, right, 6 feet apart. Even though in some parts of Europe it came down to 3 feet, eh. Somebody says it is a different intelligence in that particular country, that obviously the viruses have got a different intelligence there, you see, they say they can manage at 3 feet. You know? [Alan chuckles.] Nothing to do with reality at all. So you'll be a called conspiracy theorists regardless. And that was all, by the way, in the Event 201 they said they would call anybody who came out with any contradictory information a conspiracy theorist, even if it was factual.

A World at Risk, Annual Report on Global Preparedness for Health Emergencies.

These organizations were on the go before Event 201. All related to the same groups, mind you. Getting you already for it. Remember the Bernays techniques, create one or two organizations, or even one main one and they get subsidiary ones with different names, but you're all just one big circle putting out the same information, so it appears like there's lots of specialists everywhere have the same idea, to convince the public. So here's a world at risk, right, from the...

The World at Risk - Global Preparedness Monitoring Board -pdf

apps.who.int / Sept 2019

(A: So Bernays, eh? That's exactly out of his playbook. They come too and...)

We extend our deep appreciation of things to the director general of the World Health Organization and to the president World Bank group (A: Oh.) or having co-convened (A: I'd say Covid-convened.) The Global Preparedness Monitoring Board, GPMB.

It sounds very important, eh? Yep. So they go into it too. But they've got a World Health Emergency Programs, and Johns Hopkins University... All the same little clique, isn't it, spread out under different guises, and they can't ALL be wrong. Really? Well, it's all from the same sources, eh? There ya go.

And this article is from Scotland I believe...

Health secretary Jeane Freeman faces questions as leaked letter reveals pressure on hospitals to send patients into care homes

dailyrecord.co.uk / 23 Aug 2020

Jeane Freeman is facing further questions over the decision to move patients from hospitals to care homes during the early stages of the pandemic amid claims SNP (A: Scottish Nationalist Party.) ministers were "deflecting responsibility" on the issue.

(A: Well, socialism always does that. It passes the buck, eh.)

A leaked letter revealed the health secretary wrote to NHS bosses in April urging them to free up hospital beds to ensure wards had sufficient capacity following a spike in Covid-19 cases.

Hundreds of patients would be transferred to care homes - where more than 2,000 residents would die during the pandemic - without first being tested for the virus.

Very much like New York, eh, and Cuomo, same kind of thing. That's what socialism does though. You see, once you're at a certain age anyway you're just a problem, you know, because you cost money to the system, and they could use that money. Like Obama said when he was talking about, was it his grandmother, you know, when he ran for election. Yeah, that money could have been used for better purposes than keeping my old granny going. Yep, eugenics in action, eh. For profit, mind you. For MORE profit. They've already got plenty of profit. They've got lots of profits for wars. I mean, they can always spend money for wars. So they're not short of cash. But they don't want to treat the older folk, just kill them off. That eugenics. After all, now that we've got countries like Canada that gives them euthanasia, eh, ft, why not just do it, why not just prod them along to accepting it, for goodness sakes. Hhhhh, individualism and rights, oh what a nuisance.

So anyway, that's Scotland. Scotland's just a mess with its Scottish... [Alan chuckles.] the joke is calling it Scottish National Party, it really is. I'm not kidding you. It's very much like Ireland what, you know, same kind of thing in Ireland too. It comes out of, the rule of southern Ireland ruled by England, or Northern Ireland. Or, the old Ireland really ruled by Britain. For centuries and they started to get bits of independence in parts of it for a little while, for some years. Then eventually they give it all to Europe, the European Parliament. So they emerge from being lorded over by England, to being lorded over by this big communist organization with its secret commissars at the top that run it all. [Alan laughing.] Then they're in a worse state than ever before.

The National Health Service in Scotland is just the same. Because it was it was a socialist party. And socialism is no borders, as you know. It's just communism, no borders. That's globalist, the globalists run it all and own it all so why pretend that it's... The only reason they call it Scottish is so's they can tax you, you know, that's about it. Then they use the money across the planet for reasons you'll never fathom. It's corrupt, totally corrupt. Yep.

So anyway, there you go, they've been killing the old folk too. And in England it says…

NHS managers told care homes to put blanket 'do not resuscitate' orders on ALL residents at height of Covid crisis, report shows

dailymail.co.uk / 24 Aug 2020

Professor Allison Leary MBE, wrote the report which found that one in 10 care home staff were told to change resuscitation orders for patients, in some cases without consulting family members first.

(A: Well, that is socialism, oh to heck with the public for goodness' sake, you know.)

The Queen's Nursing Institute found one in 10 care home staff were told to change resuscitation orders for patients, The Telegraph (A: …that's the newspaper...) reports. In some cases, they didn't consult family members first.

The orders mean doctors will not attempt to restart a patient's heart with defibrillators or cardio-pulmonary resuscitation (CPR) and will be allowed to die if it happens naturally.

Professor Alison Leary MBE, an expert in healthcare and workforce modelling at London South Bank University who wrote the report, said she was surprised to see so many people come forward about the 'do not resuscitate' orders.

(A: This is the arrogance; they're SURPRISED to see folk coming forward about that.)

She told the Telegraph: '10 per cent of the respondents raised an issue, because they were either blanket decisions for whole populations, or they were imposed without discussion with the care home or the family or the residents, and that is really worrying.'

(A: Is it worrying because they came forward? I'm not quite sure by the way it's written here, and she was surprised about it.)

The report comes after the chief of the NHS in April told hospitals and GP practices not to request the orders en masse, banning the use of blanket forms.

Stephen Powis, boss of NHS England, wrote to staff to ban the forms after it was revealed that doctors in Wales had asked elderly patients to agree not to call the emergency services.

I remember that. So there you have, and I remember it when it happened, when they did this, they sent forms to old folks, they had lists of who they are and so on, put blanket forms out across certain areas, probably through the post, telling folk of certain ages not to call emergency services if they were ill, stay home ... and pretty well die. That was it. Then the ones in the hospital were told by the staff, don't resuscitate these people.

But they've had that for such a long time. I did talks on this years ago, where you take your life in your hands in the hospital, honestly, in Britain. Because they're rather cavalier with their do not resuscitate orders. For years they didn't tell the relatives what they were up to, with their little coding they'd have at the end of the bed and so on.

Aaargh! Everything's so corrupt today. So corrupt. And deceptive. Isn't it? For the very folk who pay for it all, you know, they get no truth at all coming out of these organizations. Just disgusting! But that's socialism for you, isn't it? Socialism was just a more perfected form of capitalism, where you obey, and you do what you're told, and it works awfully well for those who rule you. [Alan chuckles.] That's really what it is.

Now...

Coronavirus conspiracy marches are held across Europe as Berlin police break-up 18,000 marchers for failing to socially (A: I guess they meant ‘distance’, they don’t have the ‘distance’ there, they missed it. I guess it got wiped off with a disease of some kind like Covid.) while droves of anti-maskers storm Paris and Copenhagen

dailymail.co.uk / 29 Aug 2020

Berlin police have broken up protests for failing to wear face masks…

The demonstrators, who were calling for an end to coronavirus restrictions, flooded into the square in front of Brandenburg gate before marching down a main street.

They blew whistles and brandished placards declaring 'Merkel must go' and 'stop the corona lies!' as they called for a return to pre-lockdown life.

(A: And so they should. Quite right.)

They were joined by hundreds thronging the streets in London, (A: …actually, more than hundreds, actually.) where they declared coronavirus was a 'hoax' invented to establish a 'new world order'.

(A: Well, that's what it is.)

And 200 more in Paris held an anti-mask rally alongside hundreds more in Berlin.

The angry march comes as Europe prepares to enforce lockdown restrictions to avoid a second wave, (A: [Alan chuckles.] There ya go, a second wave…) as the number of cases recorded kicks up

Well, the more tests you do, the more positive, even though they're fake, it makes no difference. It's very important that we all go under. Because the elite have backed everything on this, they've put everything they've got on this, this big con. Can you imagine what's going to happen if it all falls flat? They can't back off now, they've got to go the whole way with you. They've got to.

And they will.

If you let them.

Another one too is, I was going through the old Silent Weapons For Quiet Wars, and in there too, it's awfully interesting as well. Whoever, who cares who wrote it? [Alan chuckles.] This is a good read. It's a good read. And we do have, you know, quiet wars and so on and silent weapons in place. You've got lots of lasers now that are, you wouldn't believe the abilities that they have from satellites, to zap places and blow places up on earth. You've been getting some examples recently too. But it does go into different biowarfare techniques, etc. and how to manage society through it all too. It's interesting stuff. Most of these kind of things come out of different people who've been involved in think tanks and preparing things for the big boys at the top to work on. Techniques in other words.

Now…

France to make face masks mandatory everywhere in Paris

reuters.com / 27 Aug 2020

PARIS (Reuters) - Face masks must be worn everywhere in the French capital Paris from Friday morning in order to curb a surge in coronavirus infections, police said on Thursday.

(A: From Friday. Interesting too, that whole thing with the yellow vest. That's another color resolution, they go on and on and on. You have the same groups, Antifa, some over there actually, from North America working over there too and vice versa. They travel all over the place. The founders actually went through the techniques before long ago, years ago in Antifa. They even put themselves up for higher, you know, at one point too, and for training revolutionaries in different countries. You could fund, you could pay them to come over and train you.)

(A: We know who everybody is. It's the same with those that fund them, we know who they all are too. How come no one's getting arrested? Have you ever thought about that? As I say, under the antiterrorism laws, if you fund terrorism you're put down as a terrorist, insurrection is part of it too, and you're charged. Well, how come all the big corporations can fund them and nothing happens? Something... It's telling you a lot about the system. The system you never thought existed. It's different from the one you did think existed, when they can fund them, hm? [Alan chuckles.] It's quite something. And it is quite something, isn't it? You're always learning. It is good to have these little puzzles to figure out. Because that's how you do learn, is working it out for yourself by using the data. So anyway, there's France going at it…)

The measure applies to all pedestrians as well as cyclists in Paris (A: I guess the cyclists can suffocate faster.) and its suburbs in an area that includes three neighbouring departments that form the Petite Couronn inner ring around Paris, a densely populated area with a total population of nearly seven million people.

Motorists will not have to wear a mask inside their car.

(A: Isn’t that nice, eh, isn’t that awfully nice?)

“The deterioration of the health situation...has led the prefect to take this strong measure in the interest of the population,” the Paris police prefecture said in a statement.

Earlier on Thursday, Prime Minister Jean Castex said the government would order the mandatory wearing of masks across Paris but he did not give a deadline or specify the area.

“The virus is spreading all over the country... The spread of the epidemic could become exponential if we do not react quickly,” he said.

(A: I guess he must have probably waved his hands a lot when he said it, to make it more like Bill Gates fashion, you know, make you excited and afraid.)

(A: Oh, they've got these, again, fictitious thing…)

The reproduction "R" number of infections in France has risen to 1.4, Castex said, meaning that every 10 people with the virus will infect another 14.

You see how they work it out, eh? That's what they do in America, and in Canada too. For every person that comes up positive with that stupid test, that swab test, which is completely bogus, they add about 15 on it in America, in France they at 14. It's just a fictitious computer model. [Alan chuckles.] Nothing to do with reality. It doesn't mean that anybody is sick with it either by the way.

Pandemics: The Need for New Thinking on Security

cigionline.org / 24 Aug 2020

Early warning was vital to meet an unprecedented global pandemic as COVID-19 emerged in China and began its lethal spread. But there are many signs that traditional warning mechanisms did not function as expected in this situation. Media reports indicate that the Canadian Global Public Health Intelligence Network (GPHIN), (A: They should call it Gophin, you know.) a critical early warning system run by the Public Health Agency of Canada, meant to serve an international clientele, including the World Health Organization (WHO), effectively "went dark" in May 2019, (A: Hhhhhh.) seven months before a pandemic alert system would be needed most. International understanding of the potential severity of the pandemic was further hampered by early problems in reporting on the outbreak from China.

Ttt. Hhhh. Sounds like such a, oh, my God, I'm breathless already just reading this stuff, it's just amazing stuff, eh. It went dark, eh? Oh! The need for new thinking on security. How to terrify the public.

And then this article here is Western Australia…

WA Police have enjoyed extraordinary powers amid the coronavirus crisis. But will they last?

abc.net.au / 24 Aug 2020

…Western Australia is beefing up its hardline approach even more by preparing new rules around the electronic monitoring of people in quarantine.

Key points:

Fast-tracked laws have given WA Police sweeping powers in the pandemic

Legal experts have raised concerns about parts of the extraordinary laws

Some residents are frustrated about a perceived lack of transparency (A: [Alan chuckles.] Sure.)

Few people would realise that under fast-tracked changes to laws in the early days of the pandemic, WA Police have the power to make every person in quarantine wear an electronic monitoring bracelet.

(A: Well I think it's time to, maybe it is time to overthrow your systems, folks, eh? If it's coming down the pike like that, eh? What d'you think? It's not there to serve you, is it? Electronic guard, so technology is the master of us all right now? I don't think so. No. For those who own technology and profit? No, no. No way.)

Last week, WA Premier Mark McGowan said he would like to see potential criminals entering the state being forced to wear the bracelets.

(A: [Alan chuckles.] So if you come into the state, right, they're going to make you.)

"If we think someone is a flight risk or a potential criminal (A: If we THINK there is, eh. That's good law, we think someone…) or a former criminal, well they're the sorts of people they would go on," he said.

'Borders save lives': The case for a hardline stance

Well, how many folk have died with it? Hm? Can you tell us that, will you tell us that, folks? Who actually, not who tested positive with it when they were dying of other things, how many folk actually died of it? …OF it? Hm? You won't get that answer anywhere.

Immunizing the public against misinformation

who.int / 25 Aug 2020

(A: MISINFORMATION... Here you go with that disinformation.)

“We’re not just battling the virus,” said WHO Director-General Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus.

(A: This is a real communist, eh. Who was a terrorist actually in his old country, he belonged to a terrorist organization. You can really trust this guy. That's why they picked him up. He's not a doctor either by the way.)

“We’re also battling the trolls and conspiracy theorists that push misinformation and undermine the outbreak response.”

Proliferating misinformation — even when the content is, in a best-case scenario, harmless — can have serious and even social and lethal health ramifications in the context of a global pandemic. In some countries, rumours about impending food scarcity prompted people to stockpile supplies (A: …like the government does, eh? Just like north of me.) early on in the epidemic and caused actual shortages. In the United States of America…

Fft. So, there you go. I, this, you talk about disinformation by a guy, whoooooooooooooooof. This guy is a crook. This guy is a crook, folks, that's why he was put there, you know. That's why he was put there. He's not a doctor. He's not trained in medicine or anything. But he DID definitely, he actually is, this isn't, I'll, I might put a link up about him later and you'll see a little clip when he belonged to the terrorist organization in his home country. N-n-n-n-n. It's so awful. And again, the WHO is just a subsidiary now of Bill Gates who does tremendous funding to it. So they're all totally compromised people.

Columbia Journalism Review Explains How The Gates Foundation Manipulates The Media Narrative

zerohedge.com / 26 Aug 2020

Most of the feature stories published by the Columbia Journalism Review, a mostly-digital biannual "magazine" published and edited by the Columbia School of Journalism and its staff, is sanctimonious media naval-gazing filtered through a lens of cryptomarxist propaganda, written by a seemingly endless procession of washed-up magazine writers.

(A: Doesn’t that say it, eh? … how the Gates foundation manipulates the media narrative.)

But every once in a while, just like the NYT, Washington Post and CNN, even CJR gets it (mostly) right. And fortunately for us, one of those days arrived earlier this month, when the website published this insightful piece outlining the influence of the Gates Foundation on the media that covers it.

(A: So they go into it…)

LAST AUGUST, NPR PROFILED A HARVARD-LED EXPERIMENT to help low-income families find housing in wealthier neighborhoods, giving their children access to better schools and an opportunity to “break the cycle of poverty.” According to researchers cited in the article, these children could see $183,000 greater earnings over their lifetimes—a striking forecast for a housing program still in its experimental stage.

(A: [Alan chuckles.] Again, it’s all worked out through computers, eh.)

If you squint as you read the story, you’ll notice that every quoted expert is connected to the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation, which helps fund the project. And if you’re really paying attention, you’ll also see the editor’s note at the end of the story, which reveals that NPR itself receives funding from Gates.

[Alan laughing.] It’s just astonishing, everything about Gates is put out by Gates through different organizations that he funds and owns. Ahhhhhhhhhh. It really is something isn’t it. Everywhere you look, you know, lift a stone and there's Gates. If you cut a little bark off a tree, look in there, there's Gates. Everywhere you look there's Bill Gates, eh. As I say, and the companies, drug companies, there's Bill Gates. And the vaccine companies, there's Bill Gates. And Fauci. The same… It's just astonishing, that, isn't it? It's kind of like Gnosticism, lift a stone and there you'll find me. There they are.

This is the one with the NFL that I mentioned earlier…

NFL's positive weekend tests come back negative

espn.com / 24 Aug 2020

The NFL has cleared all individuals who tested positive over the weekend for the coronavirus, after what its testing partner called an "isolated contamination (A: [Alan chuckles.]) during test preparation." All of the original test results have been classified as false positives.

(A: I guess it's okay to say it for them, but for everybody else, you know, you can't say it, that's conspiracy theories.)

Eleven teams were affected by the mistake, (A: …you see, it's a mistake…) with sources telling ESPN that 77 individuals had positive tests, leading to some anxious moments and altered Sunday practice schedules -- but ultimately no evidence of an outbreak. Buffalo Bills quarterback Josh Allen was among those whose initial test resulted in a false positive, forcing him to miss the team's Sunday practice, according to ESPN's Adam Schefter.

According to the sources, the NFL retested the original 77 samples, all of which had been processed at the same BioReference lab in New Jersey. All of the retests came back negative. The league also conducted quicker, point-of-care tests Sunday, and all of those tests also were negative.

So, you've got a happy ending for the players, you see. Now, if they had been in the general population, you'd have been confined to your house for a couple of weeks probably and persecuted by cops if you try to venture out, stuff like that. Maybe you couldn't get to work, and you suffer financially and stuff like that. But it's okay if you're on a sports team. There you go. So prayer does work, you know, when it's backed up with you know, wads of cash.

This one here also, this is a different one again...

Major New Survey Of Care Home Leaders Confirms Severe Impact Of Covid-19

thecareruk.com / 24 Aug 2020

The Queen's Nursing Institute (QNI) has published a major new report on the effect of the Covid-19 pandemic on the UK's nursing and residential homes.

It's the same kind of stuff over and over again, you know. Over and over again. Remember too when they were denied other care? There are treatments for this kind of thing, even for the flu, for viruses, for other coronaviruses too. There are treatments, folks, without sticking ventilator tubes down your trachea. They found too with other tests, I've read them here, I'll probably be called a conspiracy theorist even though they came from legitimate health sites, where doctors said that they had better results treating the people just with standard oxygen therapy, hhhhh, where they're not forcing it, like under pressure down their lungs, and they had far better results and they were recovering. But again, that kind of news is not welcome when you have a big agenda at play.

Dr. Fauci Snubs President Trump - Reinstates Grant with Company Connected to China Coronavirus - After Trump Demanded an End to the Contract in April

thegatewaypundit.com / 28 Aug 2020

(A: It's true enough, Fauci is so compromised into this thing, up to his neck in it.)

Yesterday it was announced in a press release that the ‘non-profit’ firm EcoHealth Alliance had been awarded a grant of $7.5 million by the National Institute of Allergies and Infections Diseases (NIAID) which is run by Dr. Fauci.

Far left Politico reported in late April:

The Trump administration abruptly cut off funding for a project studying how coronaviruses spread from bats to people after reports linked the work to a lab in Wuhan, China...

So, I'll put that one up too. This one here is a link to YouTube for, you see someone who really gets, what they get…

Just for walking in Melbourne... - youtube.om / 28 Aug 2020

...in Australia, and I think how four cops come to this woman's door, [Alan chuckles.] like 3 or 4 cops cars do, to ask why she been out for a walk. So cameras everywhere are watching them. You can actually hear her saying that she didn't have a cell phone with her or anything else, blah blah blah blah blah. And they wouldn't tell her how they had found out she had been out at all. I'm sure just like the Stasi. Because you see, they track and trace things and all the rest of it where the cops are just the new Stasi system. That's what it is, folks.

In Portland's last night, Saturday night, a guy from the Patriot Prayer group, I don't know who they are, were part of the pro-Trump support apparently going through Portland in Oregon.

Apparent Antifa member in Portland overheard saying she's 'not sad that a f---ing fascist died tonight,' after Patriot Prayer backer killed - foxnews.com / 30 Aug 2020

Man killed in Portland was supporter of right-wing group Patriot Prayer - msn.com / 30 Aug 2020

And the assassinations now have started a tit-for-tat kind of thing, now they've got killings on the go, more openly that is. So you'll find this is standard communist technique as well. When they tried to get the revolutions going in Russia, it went from 50, 60, 70 years beforehand, they had, there were assassinations going on all the time. Kind of hit-and-run techniques, with the intent of having a massive backlash and then you would hope to get support to go against the system then, with the support you'd gather, as the system became heavy-handed. That's the idea behind it.

This is even in the kind of comedy that was called Fight Club. They showed you a scene in there where they tried to goad passersby into, and by attacking them physically, well, verbally and so on – just like you're seeing in the streets for the last few weeks in Portland and elsewhere – and to get people to actually physically react. They said the hardest thing, in the comedy, was to get people to actually physically retaliate. Well, once you get it going of course it can escalate, and that's what they want at the moment. This is all obviously staged and planned, for those who haven't figured it out.

I've mentioned it before that Trump is guaranteed to get in by the goings-on here. You couldn't plan it any better, really. And then that's going to have the Civil War going. Which is really planned. It's to bring in a new system afterwards. Where the elite who fund it all, the ultra-ultra-elite of the planet who own the big corporations and so on, and they own international money systems and the banks, they fund it all, and they'll be ruling it with the new system, it's more efficient for them, what you call Technocracy.

There's another article too...

We Witnessed The Kenosha Shootings. Here’s What Really Happened - dailycaller.com / 27 Aug 2020

This article goes into what they saw. But by people who were there, by the way, about the shooting, etc. Then you find out too, from another article here, it says…

Shocking Video: Anarchy broke out on the streets of Kenosha, Wisconsin - republicanfreedom.com / 25 Aug 2020

They mentioned the ones who got shot, and the fact that they all had records, by the way. It's interesting to see who actually they were too, quite interesting indeed. These people who are leading some of the riots. And they are very aggressive people at the same time. One of them had a gun as well who fired them off and… I'm sure too... I saw, you actually see someone running across, the guy who was shot, picking something up and running away. So they've actually worked it out, if someone gets shot too, to get the weapon away from them, so that they'll say it was an innocent shooting, you know, even though they maybe shot first. Hmph.

Another article…

How To Survive When You're The Target Of An Angry Mob - zerohedge.com / 29 Aug 2020

It's a good little article. Because yeah, if you get a mob like that, you can see them going after the Republican convection when they're coming out, just old folk too, and these folk are ready to, they're ready to tear them apart, literally physically tear them apart. I think it was Rand Paul said that it wasn't for the Secret Service around them, he would have been destroyed. His life was saved by them he says, so he knew what was going to happen.

This is not democracy of any kind.

They're guaranteeing that Trump's going to get put in. Just guaranteed, folks. So I think what's guaranteed is a massive riots, ongoing, to try a potential overthrow of the total governmental system if Trump gets in. I think that's what they want, you see. And who knows if both, both sides at the top are really playing it. It seems that way to me.

In this article here too is, yeah, the young guy who was at the center of the shooting in Kenosha was 17 years old, right. He went there, he lived 20 miles away and he went there to protect business owners and citizens being victimized and being abandoned by their state government and police. This is how it's worded here, and think about it. It says…

Kenosha: All Three Anarchist Rioters Shot Have Violent Criminal Histories

unz.com / 27 Aug 2020

A 17-year-old boy was charged with murder in the first degree after opening fire on three anarchist rioters in two seperate incidents.

The accused, Kyle Rittenhouse, is from Antioch, Illinois, just 21 miles from Kenosha, Wisconsin.

Rittenhouse traveled to Kenosha with his AR-15 in order to protect small business owners and citizens who were being victimized after being abandoned by their state government and police.

Footage obtained by anti-extremism watchdog AntifaWatch shows the first shooting. In the video, a masked man named Joseph D. Rosenbaum is shown chasing Rittenhouse and throwing what some have claimed may have been an improvised explosive, but this has not yet been confirmed. Rittenhouse then shot Rosenbaum in the head as he charged and tried to take his rifle,

(A: …and you actually see the scuffle in some of these videos when trying to get off, the rifle away from him. There’s actually earlier video too of Rosenbaum getting in the faces of people, real aggressive character. Yep. Yeah, you actually see it. This has got links to it, this article here, I might put it up.)

After Rosenbaum was shot, a mob of anarchists pursued Rittenhouse as he attempted to flee. The young man then fell to the ground as the “antifa” members began attacking him. Rittenhouse opened fire against two of the attackers, one who was armed with a handgun.

One member of the gang, Anthony W. Huber, died after being shot in the chest. The armed assailant, Gaige Paul Grosskreutz, suffered a gruesome gunshot wound to the arm but survived.

The media has jumped into action to paint Rittenhouse as a white supremacist domestic terrorist and the anarchists who were shot as innocent “peaceful protesters.” But the facts bring this narrative into question.

According to public records, Joseph “Jojo” Rosenbaum has a long history of violence.

Rosenbaum was convicted in Arizona in 2002 for committing an act of sexual misconduct with a child.

According to his entry in the sex offender registry, he was a level 3 offender, meaning he was at a high risk of reoffending and a general danger to his surroundings.

Arizona Department of Corrections records reveal that Rosenbaum spent 12 1/2 years in prison after being convicted of two counts of 3rd degree sexual misconduct against a minor and one count of interfering with a monitoring device. For sexual misconduct with a minor to reach the level of class 3 felony, the victim must be under the age of 15.

More telling is Rosenbaum's 42 seperate disciplinary infractions while incarcerated. including numerous assaults, committing sex acts and stalking, (A: I don't know how you stalk in a prison.) manufacturing a weapon, and arson.

(A: Hm, he's perfect for the job though.)

According to records from the Wisconsin Circuit Court, Rosenbaum had pending charges for battery as domestic abuse filed just last month.

Anthony W. Huber (A: …that was killed I think, it says…)

Public records show that Huber was in fact a violent criminal with a history of abusing his loved ones.

In 2012, Huber pled guilty to false imprisonment with a dangerous weapon and strangulation as domestic abuse. He appears to have violated the terms of his probation in 2016 and was sentenced to two years in state prison, most of it with time served. Huber was arrested again in 2018 for battery.

Gaige P. Grosskreutz, a pistol wielding anarchist in his 40s who was shot in the arm while attacking the teenaged Rittenhouse, was charged with felony burglary and theft in 2013. He violated his probation just 4 months later. He has another arrest from 2017.

According to a media puff piece, Grosskreutz was a professional activist with Milwaukee based "People's Revolution," a more extreme breakaway from the Black Lives Matter NGO.

Anyway, it's ongoing. But you can see how it's being portrayed here, as the abandonment by police and authority for the general public that's been abandoned. And young guys like this will [Alan chuckles.] just go and take it into their own hands thinking they're doing the right thing. And it's true enough, remember, some of the police chiefs in some of these areas have been under their attack for a while just said to the public, you're on your own. Didn't they? Quite something, folks.

Another one too, another reporter...

Reporter who had gun pulled on him during Kenosha riot credits God for being alive

foxnews.com / 25 Aug 2020

(A: You actually see a photograph of this guy pointing the gun at his head.)

'I don’t think he pointed the gun at me to try to kill me, I think he was one of the stupidest people in the world'

(A: Well, it’s just touch and go when it happens, eh?)

The Blaze reporter Elijah Schaffer told Fox News Tuesday he thanks God for being alive

(A: …because the guy did it. The guy literally, who had the gun at him, pointed the gun at him and says, this is what I’m going to do with the cops, that’s what he said. He had the mask down so he could actually… [Alan chuckles.] The captain was actually watching his face, so he got it all. That’s why he said he was one of the stupidest people he’d seen.)

And…

Kenosha police find helmets, gas masks, more in out-of-state vehicles; arrest 9 - msn.com / 29 Aug 2020

And…

Crime spikes as Soros-funded DAs take charge: 'They're not progressive, they're rogue'

washingtontimes.com / 20 Aug 2020

(A: The district attorneys, eh. It's amazing how Soros has his hands in everything. [Alan chuckles.] Just say it's a small coterie with the Gates and the Fauci's and... the same people over and over again. Isn't it really, eh? Think about it folks, it really is. Supposedly Soros has been putting money into different US states and parts in cities and so on to get district attorneys in. This article goes through some of this and the names of the people and so on. It says for instance, Miss Gardner's office, Miss Gardner is one of them in St. Louis I think was the, I'm not quite sure. But it says…)

Her 2016 campaign received more than $190,000 from PACs to which Mr. Soros is the sole or principal contributor. His PACs have poured at least $116,000 into her re-election this year.

(A: And then it goes one after the other here. M-hm-hm, eh?)

Do you really have to go and start consulting Ouija boards to find what's behind lots of things? I mean, their names are out there, the folk who fund it are out there, the list in mainstream media of who the funders are. Come on, folks, eh!

Another article is…

Woke Capitalism: How Huge Corporations Demonstrate Status by Endorsing Political Radicalism

zerohedge.com / 28 Aug 2020

(A: That's not a bad article too. It goes into the corporations and the media in lockstep with this big, big movement that's on the go right now called woke capitalism. And how they're in there to make money [Alan chuckles.] by using cultural leftism. It says…)

What is “Wokeness?”: Understanding “Critical Theory” and The Frankfurt School

I've done the stories on the critical theory before, critical theory itself. They teach it all through universities and college. It really does away with traditional history of any kind or any reality of any kind. Of course the Frankfurt School was behind so much of it too, right down to the creation of a new language for the public, to destabilize your enemy from attacking you, or even defending themselves. Because you take away the language, you forfeit the language, you make it illegal for them to use the language they must use to defend themselves. [Alan chuckles.] That's the end of any debate, right?

I remember too some of the people at the Frankfurt School said that they wouldn't be happy until, I think it was Theo Adorno said that, until they'd completely utterly destroyed the culture and the systems of the West, right down to the destruction of the family unit and the children and everybody else in it, right down to, they said, even necrophilia and even then they wouldn't be happy until there was NOTHING ever left of the Western society. Yep, that's quite an ambition, there's an ambition for you, isn't it?

I'll put these links up, for some other things to do with YouTube's and so on as well. There's a few, I think maybe two or three to look at anyway, plus that Plandemic was awfully good, I must admit, what I've seen of it so far anyway.

And hhmph, what can you say folks, what can you say when you're living through this massive deception. We've never seen such deception on the planet as we're seeing right now. Never. Even in times of major wars. It's everybody who has anything to do with your reality and your information is all on board with this complete agenda. Isn't that something. Isn't it something, gaslighting folk all the time, when you use the articles they printed a month ago, and then they'll deny that they even printed them, you know, when you use them? [Alan laughing.] It's quite fascinating to live through it actually and see it. Isn't it?

Now, I'm also going to put in an article from the Irish Sentinel by Helena Handbasket. You know where that goes don’t you? It's an interesting one because it's about the Irish Minister for Health, the politician who is appointed to oversee the health. It says…

Irish Minister For Health, Stephen Donnelly needs to be Locked Up for Treason -
theirishsentinel.com / 27 Aug 2020 / By Helena Handbasket

Because he wants to lock the country down again, you see. And from the Irish Times they give you a little bit of the Irish Times. It mentions that there are very few folk in the hospital right now. It says…

Micheál Martin: Executing your authority – The only path to freedom

theirishsentinel.com / 25 Aug 2020 / By Helena Handbasket

ANOTHER LOCKDOWN SAYS STEPHEN

irishtimes.com / 27 Aug 2020

At the moment there is 6 people in ICU, 22 in hospital with Covid 19 and during the height back in March there was 1100 in hospital with 120 in ICU.

(A: So this particular Irish Minister wants to lock them down and hardly anything is happening of course. So they give you some of the career path of Donnelly...)

Stephen_Donnelly

en.wikipedia.org/wiki

Donnelly is a graduate of University College Dublin (UCD) with a degree in mechanical engineering. He also worked and studied in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT).

(A: That's a giveaway there too, by the way that's where they pick them up and then use them later on.) In 2000, Donnelly moved to London, where he worked as a management consultant with McKinsey & Company.

In 2008, he completed a master's degree in Public Administration in International Development at the Harvard Kennedy School of Government. He returned to work for McKinsey and Company, in Dublin, before deciding to run for office in 2011.

(A: But here's the whole point of it. It says…)

The most interesting perhaps is his two spells with McKinsey & Company (A: ...that he worked in.), first in London from 2000 and then again in Dublin from 2008-2011 when he decided to get into politics having no experience of that dirty business.

(A: I don't think so. I think these guys are so dirty they don't notice the dirt.)

He also studied at Harvard Kennedy School of Government.

(A: It says Gates, Bill Gates, right, just happened, wherever you turn over a stone as I say there's Bill Gates, eh. So Gates…)

Tweet

Julia Balluz

@juliaoftoronto

13 Dec 2019

Gates is spent more than $300 million in McKinsey and BCG alone between 2006 and 2017.

Do you think the guy's maybe still working for Bill Gates perhaps, eh? Hm? So wherever you look it's the same small coterie of people, you know, running everything to do with every country. Of course that's real Technocracy. Take over the financial supply of the world. They… Bill Gates isn't the boss, there's people waay above him. Bill Gates is more of a front man, like lots of the other ones they give you as the superstars. But there he is again, you know, giving big, $300 million in McKinsey and BCG alone between 2006 and 2017.

[Alan chuckles.] So you get these politicians who never are given an offer that they want to refuse, if it will personally benefit them and their pockets. That's how... This is the problem with society, it's soo incredibly corrupt. And folk are just... and every country is the same. You can find them in every single country. They have no problems accepting help, help, you know, from outside sources, you know, in their lifestyles and all the rest of it. That's how the world really is run. And it doesn't matter what system you bring in, it ends up being the same way again, over and over again, you know. That's how it is. So anyway I'll put these links up and there's another article too from Helena Handbasket from the Irish Sentinel you can enjoy that and have a chuckle at the same time perhaps.

Remember folks before I sign off, send a few bucks to cuttingthroughthematrix.com website. You see how to do it if you go into the website. That will help me tick along. Remember too, to tune into Neil Foster Reality Bytes Radio because I will be on it on Wednesday, 2 September at 1 PM Eastern time. We'll have a good chat about the state of the world and the meaning of life and the universe and all that stuff. [Alan chuckles.]

Because we certainly are going to be asking all the big questions now when you're living through one of the biggest changes in society and history, planned for years and years by big think tanks and meticulously worked out as to where it's supposed to go, with all their proper players in place, and all those who fund it in place. And years of training for some of the leaders in fact who participate in it all. So you’re living through amazing history. So again, tune into Reality Bytes Radio Wednesday, 2 September at 1 PM Eastern time.

Remember folks, don't just give in. You're living through an evil time. This is a big war and evil has a powerful sway in this planet. But you just don't crumble to it and give in because…

You have an antidote to evil. You really do. But you must also take a stance. It's always the same thing, you take a stance against evil, or it runs over you. And it isn't just for what's been, and what is, and what's to come. The very fact you’re here today is because someone stood up before you, before you came along.

Evil is a tremendous evil bully, it's a bully, a massive bully, destructive bully. A screaming child that's spoiled rotten who's actually mentally unstable that doesn't know what it wants. Because it can't verbalize what it wants so it must project its problems on to everybody else around them and blame everybody else for it. That's what it is.

The last place a person wants to look at when everything goes wrong with their lives, especially when it's repetitive behavior, is themselves. I really mean that.

Now, the system we're in is corrupt anyway, it's completely corrupt. It's been corrupt for as long as I can remember and getting worse all the time. And as they go into this ultra-capitalistic corporative agenda, where they want to rule us through Technocracy, meaning in other words they're going to do with any rights for you at all, just do what you're told. They've decided to bring in a communistic system for the general population, while the at the top are untouched by it all. I mentioned the same story 20 years ago and it hasn't changed.

So you've got to stand up against it because it's utterly evil. And it won't stop. If you allow it to continue it won't stop. It will get worse and worse, and you don't want to see horror coming down the pike.

You can’t stand by either and watch the health organizations killing old folk. Do you understand, when you're seeing folk being killed, that's you they’re killing? Because one day you're going to be there. They'll start off with the older folk, then they start bringing it down and down and down. These countries like Canada already have euthanasia, all credibility of being there to help the people went out the window as soon as they started that. Absolutely. They'll never recover from that. Never. The profit motive in healthcare, it's not supposed to be the same as any other branch of business. Not at all. Not like it is today. It's utterly corrupt. That means the system that again was based on the US, that spread out everywhere else too, the system, a lot of the hospitals in Canada are partly owned by American companies. Some of them wholly.

So remember folks as I say, don't give in and don't give up. I hope you're still keeping in touch with other people around you, a few. Don't get many, just a few. Try to make sure they're real people. Pledge to help each other out down the pike. Because things will get worse before they get better. It's planned that way.

As I say, this system with the Covid, they can't back off now, they've gone soo far. This is like the big gang that runs the world all colluding together for the next step of their world order. And they can't just back off now.

Because you'd have to, you'd have no option but to bring in a real, a real functional system that is run by you. And you'd have to arrest them all for what they've done so far. You really would. And they know it. [Alan chuckles.] They know it.

These are the same people who've brought you off to wars for years and years and profited from it too, that run everything. The same big corporations. That have their hand in all kinds of things, including pharmacology or vaccine making. Massive corporations. And they know they can't back off.

So take care of yourselves. Keep in touch with me because I do read the emails even if I can't get back to everybody all the time because it's so much, it's overwhelming. For most, for one person it's a hard job keeping up, believe you me, doing all that I do. But I do read them. Because I get a sense of people who... And it's soo important because you get inside people's lives to experience what they're experiencing. They're real human beings, these are beings, human beings.

If you’re just prattling news it's desensitizing you from people. That's the problem with today's technology, most folk literally are just texting and all that, they have no real contact with people. And even when they do have contact, they're not being honest about things. You've got to be honest with yourself.

And everyone matters because what you experience is real history as it happens. Forget the books. You're living it right now.

So I thank everybody who keeps in touch with me. I like to be part of their lives too.

So for myself Alan Watt from Ontario, Canada – don't give up, evil gets conquered, remember, it always does – it's good night and may your God or your gods go with you.

Topics of show covered in following links:

Depopulation in 'mainly rural and island council areas'

bbc.com / 27 Aug 2020

What is Gilead's role in the war on hydroxychloroquine?

americanthinker.com / 26 Aug 2020

UK lockdown was a ‘monumental mistake’ and must not happen again – Boris scientist says

americanthinker.com / 26 Aug 2020

Experts are divided over FDA approval of plasma for COVID-19 treatment: Virologist welcomes therapy as 'great news' while Harvard epidemiologist claims Trump's boast of 35% fatality reduction is inaccurate

dailymail.co.uk / 24 Aug 2020

Anti-mask group speaks out against Sudbury's health directives

cbc.ca / 5 Aug 2020

Global rally against COVID-19 safety measures comes to Parliament Hill

cbc.ca / 29 Aug 2020

The World at Risk - Global Preparedness Monitoring Board

apps.who.int/ Sept 2019

Health secretary Jeane Freeman faces questions as leaked letter reveals pressure on hospitals to send patients into care homes

dailyrecord.co.uk / 23 Aug 2020

NHS managers told care homes to put blanket 'do not resuscitate' orders on ALL residents at height of Covid crisis, report shows

dailymail.co.uk / 24 Aug 2020

Major New Survey Of Care Home Leaders Confirms Severe Impact Of Covid-19

thecareruk.com / 24 Aug 2020

Coronavirus conspiracy marches are held across Europe as Berlin police break-up 18,000 marchers for failing to socially while droves of anti-maskers storm Paris and Copenhagen

dailymail.co.uk / 29 Aug 2020

France to make face masks mandatory everywhere in Paris

reuters.com / 27 Aug 2020

Pandemics: The Need for New Thinking on Security

cigionline.org / 24 Aug 2020

WA Police have enjoyed extraordinary powers amid the coronavirus crisis. But will they last?

abc.net.au / 24 Aug 2020

Immunizing the public against misinformation

who.int / 25 Aug 2020

Columbia Journalism Review Explains How The Gates Foundation Manipulates The Media Narrative

zerohedge.com / 26 Aug 2020

NFL's positive weekend tests come back negative

espn.com / 24 Aug 2020

Dr. Fauci Snubs President Trump - Reinstates Grant with Company Connected to China Coronavirus - After Trump Demanded an End to the Contract in April

thegatewaypundit.com / 28 Aug 2020

PLANDEMIC INDOCTRINATION (FULL)

bitchute.com / 19 Aug 2020

Just for walking in Melbourne...

youtube.com / 28 Aug 2020

We Witnessed The Kenosha Shootings. Here’s What Really Happened

dailycaller.com / 27 Aug 2020

Shocking Video: Anarchy broke out on the streets of Kenosha, Wisconsin

republicanfreedom.com / 25 Aug 2020

Reporter who had gun pulled on him during Kenosha riot credits God for being alive

foxnews.com / 25 Aug 2020

How To Survive When You're The Target Of An Angry Mob

zerohedge.com / 29 Aug 2020

Kenosha: All Three Anarchist Rioters Shot Have Violent Criminal Histories

unz.com / 27 Aug 2020

Kenosha police find helmets, gas masks, more in out-of-state vehicles; arrest 9

msn.com / 29 Aug 2020

Crime spikes as Soros-funded DAs take charge: 'They're not progressive, they're rogue'

washingtontimes.com / 20 Aug 2020

Apparent Antifa member in Portland overheard saying she's 'not sad that a f---ing fascist died tonight,' after Patriot Prayer backer killed

foxnews.com / 30 Aug 2020

Man killed in Portland was supporter of right-wing group Patriot Prayer

msn.com / 30 Aug 2020

Kissinger: Failure to establish post-COVID new world order ‘could set the world on fire’

lifesitenews.com / 7 April 2020

Woke Capitalism: How Huge Corporations Demonstrate Status by Endorsing Political Radicalism

zerohedge.com / 28 Aug 2020

Irish Minister For Health, Stephen Donnelly needs to be Locked Up for Treason

theirishsentinel.com / 27 Aug 2020 / By Helena Handbasket

Micheál Martin: Executing your authority – The only path to freedom

theirishsentinel.com / 25 Aug 2020 / By Helena Handbasket

Sep 6, 2020 "Cutting Through the Matrix" with Alan Watt (Blurb, i.e. Educational Talk): " The Deceit of Elite

Hi folks I'm Alan Watt and this is Cutting Through the Matrix on September 6, 2020. Again of course, I always ask that you hold onto your sanity as we go through these times. I was just thinking before I started yapping away there about The Matrix movie and how it gave you an idea of a system that coexists within another system, and it's all manufactured by outsiders you would say, to serve their own purpose, where people really are raised to be batteries, because you take energy from the people to run the whole system in The Matrix.

It's not too far from the truth in a certain way, that analogy, because everything comes from us. You take all these multibillionaire corporations, and even trillionaire ones they have today, and they really do have multi-trillionaires at the very, very top. All the money comes from us, you know. Whatever is made is made by labor of all kinds. And raw resources, so they take over all resources of the world to make their products and so on.

Including the food, I've mentioned this so many times before, their food supply is run by only a handful of international corporations, the bulk of your food supply. More so now than ever as they've made a big grab for it during the Covid front, you know. And it is a front. That's what Covid is, it's an excuse under a wartime scenario to take over and change the whole system on behalf of those who already really rule it and make it more efficient for them. That's what it's all about.

So really as I say, we're still batteries in a way. We consume because we're alive, naturally. Our basic needs have to be met at the very least. Even to your heating in the winter or cooling in the summer if you live in a hot climate, it all depends on energy. Again, Technocracy that was founded on controlling and running and owning the energy supply of the planet, that humans need to survive, by those who decided that they had the right to rule it all. It's more true than you think, as I say, with The Matrix.

In The Matrix too, in the movies, which are awfully entertaining too, you have all kinds of areas in The Matrix with different characters that are the majordomos of their particular area. You have the key master type thing, the locksmith. All kinds of real good characters that are enjoyable in a sense for being the ultra-bad guys. They can lock you in or out of their particular areas in fact. Very much like the system in which we live. When you really realize that the world is, it has many compartments like the WTO, World Trade Organization, the World Economic Forum, that really is all part of the same structure in fact. They actually, they decide what the UN is going to be doing and what countries are going to be doing, and what all the economies are going to be, or not to be doing, and how we're going to live.

We don't... We call it a democracy, but democracy has got nothing to do with it. If anything, it's a scientific oligarchy at the top, or near the top at least serving the dominant minority, as Aldous Huxley mentioned in his own talks. That's how it really is run. It's been that way for an awful long time.

For the people who really thought about democracy and really believed in it, I feel sorry at times. Because it's a, it's like giving you some, it's a religion really, isn't it? It's like communism is a religion. You have to really believe in it to make it work to any extent at all. Which generally means the populace has to give up all their rights and freedoms and even sacrifice and go into austerity for the greater good, for something way down in the future, which they'll never see and never will see because it's not meant to actually appear. Ever.

That's the trick of all working together for a better tomorrow. It's been done for an awful long time of course, and through the Soviet system in their bloc and communist China. Communist China is interesting because again you have a different culture, a very ethnocentric culture. Very proud of themselves too. They haven't had decades of being taught at universities that they're bad and evil, so they have no shame and no guilt for anything, you see. So they're very proud in their system and they obey it very well. They're more of a collective society.

I might put up tonight actually an article, as I say I don't know how I came across it. It's to do with the Silk Road, you've heard about the big Silk Road idea that again the World Trade Organization and the World Economic Forum have been pushing for years, a massive transportation system right from Russia all through, right through Europe and even having a spinoff part, almost circular part in Spain, and they've designated Spain to be a multicultural society, a kind of hub for the future and they've been working on that.

By the way, that's also part of the reason that China has been pushing into the borders of India because they want to bring in the road through there. [Alan chuckles.] For those that are wondering why it's all about, the skirmishes they've been having with China, that's part of it. The media knows it, but the media are not there to inform you about anything. They're meant to get emotional reactions from you, and to see if you'll swallow the lies, they keep telling you, especially with the Covid that's going on right now.

So as I say, The Matrix is a system where you get your eyes opened with each room that you walk into. [Alan chuckles.] Or go through the doors, it depends, you know, what kind of entrance you want for the audience. But it's quite interesting to see the different, it's not just levels on a horizontal plane, but it's also a vertical, and you can go up and up and up to whole new levels of it and so on and so on and so on. But the idea is, it takes off really from the system in which we live, which is, we are economic units, so we produce things. We're also energy in ourselves, and from it you’ll always have a dominant minority that suck from us, and even force systems upon us which we, we’ll often adapt and adopt very quickly, but adapt into very quickly as well.

Look at the Internet. Well, look at before even with radio and television. These were like wonders to the world when they first came out, in radio alone you know. And I really mean this, because I mean what I'm going to say because it's true. It was a miracle in its day and age when radio came out. I can remember my dad talking about the old crystal sets. The crystal sets literally were, because everything is oscillators to do with radio, or even basic television that was early, you had oscillating frequencies. You have a little oscillator inside your set or your radio or whatever, and if you can tune it to the same frequencies and incoming frequency, then that develops into audio basically, through a bunch of circuitry.

But anyway, in the old days the people could get crystal sets as they called it. Small units. Some of them were kind of portable. But you needed a long antenna to pick up the signal. The antenna was really just a roll of copper wire, very thin copper wire generally. My dad mentioned when he was young, he was with some of his buddies in a little housing scheme. One of them had a crystal set out of the back garden. And it was a big thing, you know, these youngsters are, especially boys too, are interested in all kinds of things of technology and so on. So they got it going and they had to put in a little earphone to listen to it because it didn't have a built-in speaker.

They all had turns at it. One of the little boys, these are boys about eight or nine, right. One of the little boys looks at it and says, where does it come from, the signal? And they said, oh, this is London, it's BBC London. And he looked and he saw the wire disappearing around the house, the side of the house. He says, my, that must be a really long wire. Because that's how children see things, you know. And technically [Alan chuckles.] was logical as well for a young child [Alan chuckles.] to think that way, and oh, that's an awful long wire. He didn't know that it didn't go right to the station, it just picked up the signals from the air.

But that's what technology is. And people went crazy with radio. I think the first radio in the States, or station in the States was, it played music, played kind of country music at that time in the States. But also was set up by real estate, some guy was into real estate, so they had the first advertising on radio. That really took off as well, as we well know.

Then along came television. Television was there a long time ago. In fact pre-World War II. John Logie Baird in Scotland, for those who don't know it, had color television, flatscreen, big ones too, before World War II broke out. They always give you the idea that it was a fairly recent invention, but it's really much older because he had been making TVs for long before that. Technology again is power, isn't it? It's got the power to change society for those that want to change it, which gives them a power to change it.

The trick again, it's like the Internet, is to get you to purchase everything yourself that they need for all information, because then they can control information. Most folk never figure out, they really don't, just like the television, they never know, they never really figure out the TV is not there, really, to entertain them. Entertainment is just, it's like the cheese in a mousetrap, you know, that's really what it is. The real purpose of it is very, very different. It's to standardize opinion and thought of society, no matter what society it is. And it's all arranged by experts and professionals to also change your behavior.

That's one of the main things is behavior change. We have lots of information on that from many, many authors in the past and people who investigated it all, and people who were involved in changing societies as well. Again, Aldous Huxley was definitely up there with the big think tanks in his day, and who belong to a family that was part of the Darwin type clan and intermarried with them in fact eventually, some of the members did anyway. The Huxley's were well involved with those who were changing and directing the thoughts and behavior of societies. He admitted that himself. He said, we are part of, my family is part of the scientific elite who work for the dominant minority. They work with academia as well. It isn't just technology, it's also psychology and behaviorism and how to alter the behavior and thoughts of whole populations of people. What you're living through today is tremendous, massive psychological warfare like we've never seen it before. Really. We didn't even have this kind of psychological warfare during World War I or II. Or even through the Vietnam-era either.

This is a big push for the planet. This is WORLD war. This is real WORLD war. It's psychological warfare backed up with military type force through the police. The police are a force now, they are an internal force, with a uniform like any military, that are generally armed in most countries. Not all but most of them, and the ones who are not armed are often trained in the use of it so they can arm them very quickly if they have to.

So you're living through a world war and this war is the culmination of many years, many, many years, you might even say centuries in a sense too, a very real sense, to bring in a technologically controlled society by the use of Technocracy, specialists and experts in every possible area who are going to rule your lives. They're already doing it, and they've got power to do it now, but they want the right to literally not just start off as a child, with children like they have in Scotland with GIRFEC, and in parts of England too and other countries too with different names of advocating government agents and social workers to work with children from birth right through, no matter if they've got parents or not. It's to do with modifying the thoughts of the child as they grow up to suit the agenda of those who rule you and own your countries. That's what it's about.

Always under a great guise, oh, it's for the greater good, and again, there will be no animosity from people or different ethnic groups and so on, we'll just get rid of all that damage. That's what they claim but it's a big, big lie. Because as you well know, not every ethnic group had been subject to the same incredible indoctrination and standardization, hm.

Those at the top of the world, I've mentioned it before in some, even again in some recent talks as well. But even many, many years ago when I talked about psychopathy, and some people who wrote books about psychopathy were good enough to mention me in their books as to where they got a lot of the information from. But psychopathy is so interesting because when you really meet a real psychopath, you might not catch on quickly, you know. They like to often boast if they've been caught at something. Even in prison, some intelligent ones will often boast about what they did. They like the attention.

However, if they're not caught and they're working freely in society, most folk often can't quite figure them out. Women will often pick up fellas, or will get picked up by fellas or whatever, and they'll pick up fellas that they feel sorry for. Oh, they just need a bit of help, and I'm the person to put them on the straight and narrow and fix them up, you know. Maybe that's the maternal instinct, who knows? But the fact is, maybe it's just plain ego. But it often ends in disaster if it's a psychopath they're picking up.

Because psychopaths on the low level, the low scale of things, the kind that just see something in a window and want it, and they're not the brightest type on the lower level. They still have the incredible instincts of reading people and using them and manipulating them. They're also the kind that throw bricks into the window and grab the stuff and make off with it, and then they get caught and they're in and out of prison for their whole lives.

But as you go up the ladder, and I think the studies that were done in the US and in Britain maybe in the 30s and 40s were catching on, slowly, because there was such a class distinction back then too. It was very overt in fact. It's still there today, but it was very overt back then when they really thought most psychopaths were just working-class types, and unemployed types as well. Until they started to realize that, no, there's a lot more in the upper strata, the middle and upper strata. That's when they went into eventually, it took them a long time to get around to the CEOs of corporations and the big players in corporations that get up there and become the heads of even the military-industrial complex.

Then you find out that those who run the world, financially, again, the dominant minority, you know, a hereditary group, will employ these psychopaths and put them in place as CEO's. These are intelligent type psychopaths. There're more savvy as to what's going on, and they're careful not to end up afoul of the law if possible. But they are dedicated psychopaths. If you pay them well, they'll serve you well. Then they form clubs with them too, and they can join certain clubs. Very important type clubs.

They even get knighted some of them. A lot of them actually did in the past. If you look at the people who got knighted in Britain for the last maybe 150 years, most of them were merchant bankers, most were people like that who, believe you me, in business, in real tough business, nice folk just don't get ahead. It doesn't happen that way. You've got to be ruthless. And there are folk who are psychopaths who definitely are ruthless, who are very successful in the business world by being ruthless. And by again, lending to governments, like, that's how often Britain knighted them and gave them their, in return for it they'd end up being up there amongst the lords and ladies. They would intermarry each other; you see. So psychopaths marry into the psychopathic realm have a good chance, especially in the lifestyle and the culture within the family groups, of raising a good psychopathic to takeover. Intergenerational psychopathy, you see. Very important. And all countries have it too.

So when you realize the world is run by this kind of system, and then in the technological sphere and those who are really into technology who run the electronic systems of today in these massive empires of bits and bytes, etc., and Silicon Valley types, you'll find a lot of them are actually geeks. [Alan chuckles.] Their world is what they do and why they're doing it and so on. They're kind of far removed from the emotions, normal emotions that folk have. Have you noticed that with them?

It was often thought a lot of them were almost autistic/Asperger types. And some of them may very well be. That they don't seem to get on very well with people. And they have no qualms about working with the NSA and organizations like that, where they have no right to be in folks lives in the first place, electronically, destroying privacy and invading it further and further and further. And other ones as well that worked to design the next part of the cultural change, as you get turned into slaves, obviously slaves. You have no, you really don't have much free will left at all, you know.

When choices in important areas are taken away from you, including using cash for instance, just as an example, you're being, you're being, the roads are being narrowed. All the accessory roads that join the main road have been stopped and walled off, and are taking away or filled in, and you're left with this one road that you must be on. The same with medicine and choices and everything else, or vaccinations, or whatever it happens to be.

When you don't have any choices, you are under a tyranny, a totalitarian tyranny.

...which will convince most folk that it's for your own good. And most folk unfortunately because the indoctrination is so perfect… They don't shout at people as they're persuading you. They're professional persuaders, that's what good psychopaths can do by making things appear very plausible, you know, and most folk want to go along with it. Because they don't want to believe the world is rather nasty or it's cruel.

Because as I've said before, regardless of the century you live in basically we're all kind of tribal. We're all born into a little tribe sometime in the past, maybe 1000, 2000 or more years ago, it doesn't make any difference. And in a tribal situation children, they want to feel secure inside the tribe and its expected the elders take care of them and warn them and protect them and so on. So yeah, you might even leave home now at 15 or 16 if you want to, but the fact is, it's still in your nature to be protected by those who are more mature, the real role models. The real people have been displaced in today's technology with propaganda. Rather perfect propaganda. And perfect indoctrination through schooling. So, they're taught to be naïve, stay naïve, and that the authorities, THE experts are in charge of it all and just follow them. Be obedient to them because they're there to protect and help you. That's the sort of mirage cover that they take upon themselves and project to you.

You don't see them as they really are. You don't see the characters in the big board meetings talking about their multibillion-dollar profits for giving you a flu shot for the year, over the, you know, for the nation or a few nations together. You don't see them meeting with members of parliaments or governments across the world, or the World Trade Organization, or again, the World Economic Forum, or GAVI, or all these private institutions, that they pretend they're philanthropies, that have got massive shares in the big vaccine companies, you know, who also lobby government so they governments will take the vaccines that they'll manage to provide. And they all profit from it of course. And that's just one example.

If they could make you just dress in the same uniform, in a uniform that was made by one factory for the whole planet, and they all looked the same, except for maybe degrees of superiority, you know, they have some kind of, there's always some kind of superiority, then they would do it. And they would force you all to wear it and they would say, well because the material is meant to keep, um, keep you safe from scratches and so on from outside things and objects, then it’s going to cost you about five grand each. So you'll be forced to pay it. They would do it if they could get away with it. Yes, they would. [Alan chuckles.] You'd better believe they would.

Look at all the gadgetry they have come out with recently since the Covid idea. I saw something the other day, I think it was in China, where they had children sitting, again, with their mandatory, like 2 meter apart in desks, and they had these plastic shrouds over them. I don't know where the air came in from, but they had shrouds over them, you see, and other farcical things like that. One I saw that was good a few months ago there, it was a guy who took it to the next level, and he got an air filter from a car’s, for a car’s intake. Again it's very good actually. I mean [Alan chuckles.] in reality it would be pretty good, if he needed it. Which you don't. It really is like a HEPA filter, so fine, they keep all dirt particles out from the carburetor, or the intake for the air for the fuel. He had it on his head with, and he had a good chromed top on it. I don't know if he screwed it onto his head or not, but anyway. He had these tubes coming out of it, one to his mouth and a mask, and another one for an expulsion valve to let the air out. So I guess he could patent that, maybe some Corporation is already doing it, and we can all walk around like that for the rest of our lives, eh?

Because that's what it's come down to, utter farce like we've never seen before. I knew this stuff was coming because I'd given talks back in the 90s on the incredible psychological studies that had already been done on us. Other authors long before even Quigley came out in the 50s and 60s on television talking about the studies on the public, that were pretty well perfected. They knew that using techniques, back then, they could really drastically and very quickly alter human behavior and make us do things that perhaps we oughtn't to do or make us accept things that we shouldn't accept. That was way back then.

But today, it's massive. I mean, your own tax money throws millions and billions across the world to these other think tanks and study groups in universities that all do these joint projects with those that eventually grab the patents for whatever they discover, and techniques, they have patents on techniques by the way for those who don't know it, and ways to manipulate you. And they do. And it's very, very effective. Incredibly effective, when you understand that most folk will take the path of least resistance, at all times. Even though...

It's like one of those children's mazes used to get with the little ball on it and you go through the maze. You held it in your hand, and you turn it left and right and up and down and that to make the ball travel in the direction that you wanted it to go. But it was just like a little maze, most folk will go along in it and take the easiest route. Even though at the end, if you had a little hammer at the end, a little, little toy hammer where it would come along and just pop up through a spring, and smash the ball, right, they would still go along that same path, left, right, left, right, left, right, up until they get to the end because it was easier to go that way. That's what people do. Even if you warn them if they keep going the way they're going they're done for, they'll still do it.

I've mentioned it before, there's a freezing of the mind comes into play when real danger starts to seep into your mind that you might be done for. With some folk it is paralytic. With a lot of folk actually it's paralytic. They just, this cannot be happening in real life to me, we live in a civilized society, etc. etc. etc. Hm?

We knew the Soviets killed millions of people. And the Bolsheviks, ugh, the slaughters were incredible. They still know that there's massive, massive fields in different parts of the Soviet Union with layers and layers and layers of bodies that were mass executed. This is the people's, oh, was the people's Army that did it, you know, the people's Army? On behalf of the people, you know? As they, they always take over the same authority, it's for the good of the people, so on behalf of the people we will execute you, because you are enemies of the state, you're enemies of the people.

You're seeing it emerged today with the Covid thing. You must wear those or you're enemies of the people, you know, you're dangerous to them. That's a quick judgment and some baton crashes you in the skull and that's it. That's where you are with this technique. And it doesn't really change too much on that level. But most folk will go quietly to the end without question. That's the sad part.

I can't say enough about what happened with the Soviet system. The Nazis used it again against people who, you know, they saw as enemies of Germany or the people. They have film of folk literally running in, you know, like one group after another, oh it's your turn now, and they'd run into this, into this dug pit, then they'd get shot and down they went. And then the next group, as folk watching it thinking, when it comes our turn, it won't happen. That's what you think, you see.

The Soviets were masters. The Soviets actually sent out cards that were delivered to folks' homes by couriers when they came into a new territory and were taken over. The Bolsheviks, you see, the Bolsheviks were ferociously hated by everybody, you know, except themselves. They sent out these little cards and they were delivered. They went into Poland and did the same thing too. You would get a little card and it would say, you had to attend so-and-so house, it might be the mayor's house or something that was taken over as a headquarters. You'd walk in there, you'd be led. You wouldn't see many folk, because he didn't like crowds or people, and you would just go along the corridor for instance, and a guy would point to this room. Then you go down the steps into the basement, as you're going to the basement, they'd shoot you in the back of the head and that was it. Very efficient. They had pulleys and the whole bit where they just dragged the bodies up through the coal chutes and they would dump them into... There's even old film of this stuff, you know. Very efficient it was.

But every person, they think, well they sent for me, they want to talk to me. That's the first thing, because you will not think the worst, you see, they want to talk to me, and away you go. And yet, you never get anybody to talk to because eventually you get shot in the back of the head as you you've just passed another door, that's what happens. But the same thing with these big pits that they dug in Katyn, you know, that was another one too. Incredible horror story there as well. Another. Like, Bulgaria had it too. Fantastic videos of survivors of some of these camps. They had to work with the slaughtered bodies of their compatriots and... Horrific, horrific things.

This is what totalitarianism brings, what a totalitarian society brings to you.

What we're going into now, you see, is persuasive techniques. I mentioned before with that movie, that, was it, Saving Private Ryan? Where Tom Hanks I think goes, he's in a war movie, but he's looking for his brother, something, I can't remember the whole thing. But anyway, there's a scene where they actually come across, American troops come across some Germans. One of them started firing at them. They catch him alive, decide not to execute him, he gives them some, again, good psychopath too, he gives them some spiel and they kind of let him go. But down the road they meet him in a town. They go into a town and then met some other Germans and they had taken up positions to defend the place. The Americans came in, and one of the Americans goes up a bell tower I think it was, and at the very top of the bell tower, who's waiting there is the same German that they let go before. He was a good talker, a good con man. He's trying to press this blade, this knife into this American soldier, he's lying on top of the soldier saying, just stop struggling, he said, don't struggle. And he's not shouting at him, he's just speaking to him. Don't, it will all be over very quickly, and all the problems will be gone, and it will be quite peaceful.

Well, that's what you're getting right now, folks, with scientific persuasion. The same thing. Hm? Leave it to the experts, they know what’s best for you. They’ve got your best interests at heart, honestly. You know it, don’t you. They're well trained and they understand these things. They had articles remember in the paper recently, newspapers, don’t even question things, just leave everything, don’t think too deeply about it, leave it to the experts. This was the headline on it, you know. Well, here you are with it all and your governments are on board with it because...

Are you surprised? D'you really think the politicians are EVER real? Politicians ARE low-level psychopaths. They're quite happy to obey the masters and be given extra whatever it is, cash, residences, nice residences and owners and stuff like that, they're very happy with that. Because our societies are incredibly corrupt, and they've been incredibly corrupt for an awful, awful long time. It's normal now. And really, really badly corrupt too.

So no, what you're living through now is a managed horror show disguised with hygienic white facemasks on people with white coats, you see, in hospitals and things like that. That's managed that way. The common enemy, again, the enemy of the people is a Covid, you know, like a coryza, a coryza is a Covid type as well, it's a cold, a common cold. But this one is a SARS type, right, and most folk literally are already immune and don't even know they've had it, you see. That's the way these things generally work. Never mind all the lying, I'll touch on that later, the lying, lying statistics, etc., that are now being unearthed, admitted to, reluctantly and all that. It makes no difference though because the agenda must continue.

Because what you're living through today is the culmination of a plan that was set up years and years ago so that those who already ruled the world, this is the revolution, this is the next part of their revolution, to bring you into the more controlled technocratic system, the efficient system that will suit their agenda for themselves at the top. That's what it's for.

D'you realize, getting back to The Matrix where you're a battery, your energy is what it all runs on is your energy. You're a slave, you see, for your energy. It's not far-fetched from where we are now. Because the elite have decided that they're going to bring in the new system, you're not going to get asked if you like it or not. It's already here. They used 9/11 to take away all your rights, not just in the US but across the planet. That's why there was the big, big warning that went off then, you know, alarms went off with 9/11. It wasn't just the fact that towers inside the US came down. A whole different story regardless of what caused it or whatever. But the fact is that's what happened, you saw it, right, they're gone, with folk in it.

But why would the whole world go under a new type of anti-terrorism? the whole planet pretty well? And immediately all the predictions of the military-industrial complex from the 80s and 90s, I've got old articles going way back, I mean, in real copy, hard copy, right, where they said, what will we do in a world of peace? the military-industrial complex characters, you know? Well, surveillance of the citizenry will be the whole new thing, security and surveillance and anti-terrorism. They knew about this a long, long time ago, and that’s where we'd go.

Well, HOW would you, how would you change the society where you're not under constant monitoring by the elite that own you, as far as they're concerned? Well, you need something to happen. Hm? Of course the PNAC group, the Project for New American Century drew up the whole list of countries they wanted to take out anyway, because they had a different agenda from the average Americans. They also wanted to introduce an antiterrorism idea, where they would start selling total security measures, and surveillance on ALL citizenry in the US, and outside the US as well. Britain was in on the act too naturally, you know, London.

I hate saying Britain because the British folk are as defenseless as the rest of us, you know. The terms remember today are real corporate names, that's what these places, they're corporation names. [Alan chuckles.] London has control over what became Britain and the UK for an awful long time, still does. But yeah, this is total, total surveillance of every citizen. And with Covid, oh my goodness, we'll go to the next level now. All the talk and all the preparations to bring in the Smart Cities by the World Economic Forum, eh, the WEF, and the World Trade Organization, all these organizations, all, it's already one club.

It's one club actually and most of the members of one belong to the other as well. This is how it works, you see. Circles within circles, as Caroll Quigley talked about. That's what you have, interconnecting circles. Just like the symbol, by the way, of the Olympics, that's what you're seeing there. You see how they connect? And as a symbol, the five, of course it's always the five, the Five Points and so on, that interconnect that way. And that's how you do it, you need five of them for the different parts of controlling society. That's what it stands for.

So they direct the future. They train the public to be terrified through terrorism, antiterrorism, and now it's terrorism part 2 with Covid, you see. Then they have the Smart Cities that are going to be up and running very shortly. We didn't get to vote on any of that either by the way. That was all set up again with the same characters, with Facebook participating and Google, the massive Google intelligence network setting up the good part of it too, and the Alphabet agencies and so on, etc. to bring in this wonderful system of TOTAL surveillance from birth to death, 24 hours a day on every individual, outside your home or inside your home, that's what's... And the smart hubs and all the rest of it.

And again, lockdowns. If you're a bad boy or girl, you see, and you've been naughty-naughty and you haven't taken your latest vaccination, which is a whole list of stuff they want to give you now. I'll touch on that later, and I touched on this back in the 90s. Again, to me everything is repetition. But yeah, they'll simply lock you down at home. They don't have to give you any excuse. Well, it's been reported that you've been in the vicinity of a person who had a sniffle. You know? It's just like getting banned off the different social media. They don't have to give you any reason for it, you see.

You're under a totalitarian, these are totalitarian tyrannies. They make themselves, they make their institutions that belong to the elite, you see, they make them necessary to survive in today's economy, as an example. And everything, I said in the talks years ago, before I had a computer, I still was giving talks on other folks' shows and so on. I said, everything on the computer would be free and your Internet would be free for a long time, to get you in on it. And there's lots of pornography, they kept telling you that in the newspapers to make sure everybody just dived into it. And folk did, you know.

I says, it will all be free, and the YouTube's will be free, and everything is free, free, and then they start taking it all away from you. And once you're familiar with using it all, you'll go along with it anyway and you might even pay to continue because now it's part of your, you adapt very quickly into systems. They know this. People literally, it's like political parties, you know, if dad and grandpa was in the Labour Party in Britain, then often you'll be the same, even if you're not even in the working class anymore, that's how it works.

Folk don't change so quickly unless it's done through terror and fear, you see, then they'll change very quickly indeed. They have to because everything is being let loose with the terror, you know, if you understand what I'm talking about, so you'd better get changed. That's how things really work. And most folk go along; it works on most folk very quickly.

Getting back to the folk running into mass pits to be executed, you can actually see the old footage on this, if you want to see it. Remember what Plato said? Don't think, don't ever think that somehow you're in an advanced civilization. Don't ever think that. We're all the same people as we were thousands of years ago. Regardless of the technology, we're the same people. We behave the same way to similar circumstances.

Because really, they're not many ways you can react to things as a human. It's either happily, contentedly, quietly. Maybe with a bit of unpleasantness. Or maybe with even anger. But it's always simple things that you react with, you see, and very predictable. And again, most folk will take the path of least resistance. Especially now when you have experts convincing you through, we used to call it pattern merchants in Britain, a good pattern merchant, someone who could prattle off with a good spiel and convince you, a good salesman, the pattern merchants, to go this way anyway, you see, and...

Especially if they've got a title now, like, this person is an expert in blah blah blah, whatever it happened to be. Folk are trained that way, like Bertrand Russell said, I can't remember if it was in The Impact of Science on Society. But he did mention, I used to read on the air some of these books years ago. But he mentioned it, yeah, he said the people could be guided into anything, and the children especially, if you get them young, you can really use them, you know.

I've watched a lot of the symbols, old cultic symbols being adapted and adopted for political purpose right up to the present time by the way. It's interesting. Even the Extinction Rebellion, some don't even know where the symbol comes from. But it's right in front of their faces if they want to look at it. But yeah, folk will do what they're told because you've got a global threat, you see, you've got an invisible enemy, hhhhhhh! It's right out of a science fiction movie. Especially all the sci-fi's that you're seeing for years, you know, the plague, the coming plague, and VIRUS, and lockdowns. All the things they gave you as horror movies, and here it all is.

You're all prepared for it; you've seen it in the movies. You've seen Dustin Hoffman dash about, you know, like a madman trying to save you all in the movie. I can't remember the name of that one but that was one of the big ones years ago. Here we are, and it's all being managed and worked out. When even again, the Rockefeller Foundation came out with the big plans in 2010 and put it in there, the Lockstep part of their plan, it was only part of it, and of course how technology in the future would influence us all and control us. Well, it's all here folks. This is it. You know. It's all here.

The people who brought the whole world to a standstill did it deliberately. Currently, they claim, I don't really believe it all, but this part anyway, they claim that it's another reset, as they say, like the World Economic Forum, this is a reset, you know, the global reset. Like the last 2007/8 crash was a reset, this is the big one now for the whole planet. But not just for money, it's to be a whole new resetting of life, existence, right down to, they said in their own writings because they have an intelligence department in WEF, you can actually see it on their websites. When you go in there you see it, redefining what a human is, is right in there too, you see. Now, you thought you were into sci-fi's; these are the guys who create it for real life, real science fiction. And believe you me, there's nothing they can't make happen, if you go along with it.

By the other token, there's nothing they can get away with it, if you don't go along with it. I hope you understand that part.

Hm? Do you really want to go into a Brave New World where, I mean, the West has already said, and Bertrand Russell said it too, that the sterilization technique was already working in the West, way back in the 50s? And what is the biggest problem in the West now? It's, oh, infertility! I used to give the talks on the sperm count plummeting in the Western male. What got me onto it was, why the interest in Universities, universities were given, and it was mainly women by the way that were giving these tests, to test young men's sperm counts in certain universities. This incredible, again, we are farmed. They have such…

It's the same as our animal husbandry, you've got to know everything about the animals that you own. Any changes have to be completely noted. Well, that's us folks. We're all humans. They would go through all these different reasons for the sperm plummeting and plummeting, until literally I think they had less than about I think 1/4 of the mobile or motile functioning sperm, spermatozoa then males had back in the 1950s they said. Plummeted. And we're not supposed to be worried about that, you see, because they don't tell you why. The reason why they don't say why it's getting down, is because they know what's causing it! It's intentional.

Are you starting to get the picture? If it wasn't intentional, they would be spending billions of bucks to find out what happened to their animals. So they know what happened to the animals, us, you see. Of course they do. That's the horror show you're living in. It's been going on your whole life long and you don't know it.

It's so true with the cancers that came out after the polio vaccine, with the Salk vaccine, eh, Simeon 40 virus was included in it. Because they grow the cultures for the vaccines on kidney cells of monkeys and they couldn't extract the cell, the viruses that were growing purposely on them, and getting mixed with the viruses of the monkeys, and they put them in pretty well blenders at the end of it, folks. If you can't figure that out, I mean, this is real high science, eh? That's how you end up with your different vaccines, eh? But in amongst the vaccines, and they admit that, oh yeah, millions of folk got the Simeon 40 virus. That was just one of many viruses, they have over 110 viruses that they've named so far. It was pumped into humans. And the Simeon 40, it was a carcinogen, because it causes cancer.

That was science, eh? Science did that. Science that says, oh, we're here to help you, eh? The same science, we're here to help you. Hm? [Alan laughing.] It's sad, isn't it, that we're so trusting. And why shouldn't we be so trusting?

You see, hhmph. We normally have instincts that warned us about someone who wants to harm us. But once again, you've been trained in ways by, oh, white coated professionals, mainly on TV and things like that telling you how, and again magazines, to push their objectives. It doesn't mean that doctors are bad. Doctors, really, are trying to do their best most of the time. But a lot of them get hoodwinked as well. Other ones know darn well what's happening with the vaccinations, as an example, they know. Sure they do. And that's a whole field in itself. But yeah, a lot of doctors really are under their own tyranny, of being licensed by big authorities that they can withdraw their licenses if they don't go along with things. It's already happened under the Covid, folk who won’t go along with it.

So, yeah, you live under tyrannies. And when tyranny can't get its way, you end up with, what's going to happen everywhere. You're seeing it in Australia right now. They had a protest, I'll put the link up by the way, it's quite, it's quite, I hate to say funny. But it's very, um, obvious what's going on. The Daily Mail has an article talking about, oh, thousands of protesters turned up in like a riot type scenario in Melbourne. But in reality, very few protesters are to be seen anywhere in the photos. You'll see hundreds and hundreds of fully equipped cops in military gear, and only [Alan chuckles.] a few protesters, like a handful of protesters in any particular photograph. And the folk that they were trying to get to the demonstration, the anti-mask thing, that's what it was about, anti-lockdown, couldn't even get in. They were getting turned away and just, really, they've got checkpoints in Australia like you wouldn't believe. M-hm.

So the deception, and the headlines, how ashamed they should be at the Daily Mail. But again, newspapers have been conning us for years. They’re not there to help us, folks. But any true journalists should be ashamed, thoroughly ashamed of themselves. If they were not psychopathic. Hm? They're getting well-paid to write these lies. I think McPhee was the woman, I think McPhee was the name on it. How disgusting to put the stories with the obvious photographs of something, it was the reverse. You saw an army of cops there, you know, protesting protesters, [Alan laughing.] a handful of protesters. That's what it should have been called, Army of cops protesting a few protesters.

That's how they've been managing us our whole lives, with conology. Conology is the art of persuasion for ill-gotten reasons and gains and things like that. It's lies. It's the art of the psychopath. It's the art of politics. It's the art of coercion and manipulation, you see, conology. As I've said before, you must participate in your own deception, that's a good con. It's like the movie The Sting and other movies they've made about it and things like that, you must participate in the con. Generally, you think you're getting, someone again is going to give you something for nothing. That's the typical type of con. And all you have to do, oh, look at all the ones on the Internet, you know, Prince Abdul of blah blah has left you money, all you have to do is give us your bank account number and put it in for me. The simple type, you must REALLY participate in a con like that, right. And it does happen all the time. M-hm.

You also have cons of folk who go around doors, they'd be dressed in either, as working men, like tradesman, or in business suits. Every year they go around old folks homes and say, we're here to do a free inspection of your home, get it winter proofed and stuff. And they rip off the folk like you wouldn't believe. That happens. That's what criminology is full of, you know, they either go into things like that or in politics, hm.

Because they’re good persuaders. And you might even like the psychopaths. You probably will actually. They're often very pleasant. Part of the psychopathic technique is to make you comfortable, and they could just reel of one joke after another and you'll, wow, ha ha ha. The next thing you know you go to bed and find out that there's nothing, there's no bed... [Alan laughing.] there's no furniture... [Alan laughing.] and there's nothing left at all. And you’ve been had. Yep.

Then you have creative psychopaths, they tend to go into creative arts and so on. A lot of them are con, just pure con anyway. I mean, putting a fetus in a jar of urine, and with a crucifix, and put it into an art gallery, that's what they? Well, that's the psychopath right there, who obviously has a lot of hatred in them as well. And who also wants to destroy the culture that is making us accept and pay for all this nonsense, you see. But you can get a few psychopathic types that can support themselves and sell whatever they're selling under the guise of art as well. That can happen. But when you read their histories, people in the past, they tend to be very not just eccentric, but volatile at times as well, things like that, very volatile.

Anyway, persuasion. Persuasion. Persuade. Can I persuade you, is what they'll tell you, I'd like to persuade you, or they'll say, see it my way? If they can't get that, they turn the cops lose on you. Because they coerce you. Again, they give you a choice of doing what they want, going quietly, or even admitting to something you haven't done, or having your head bashed in, you know, and put behind bars.

It's, people have got mixed feelings, as an example, of Julian Assange. I've heard folk, that I know, who really don't like him. I don't know him to like or dislike. But I do know that he was set up for the present charges. And I do know that there was just a little window during his reign to let information out to the public, but really badly needed information on what your own forces are doing across the world. And how you've got young guys in charge of multimillion-dollar, you know, equipment, organizations and so on, and drones that they can sit hovering in the sky that you wouldn't even see with the naked eye, or they've got these helicopters, and you saw them gunning down reporters... over in Iraq I think it was.

That's what really pissed off the Pentagon. When you hear the chatter of these young guys, yeah let them have it and rut-dut-dut-and-dut. Unarmed reporters, eh? And laughing and giggling about it. No, when you are hearing troops giggle about things like that, this isn't a hand-to-hand combat here, you know. This is worse than a sniper. Snipers generally are not light at all. If they’re found they’re killed. You don't take them prisoners, in any side of any army [Alan chuckles.] Because, even, regardless of the era, and today we don't have many morals left when it comes to slaughtering folk. In fact, we’ve risen a generation, maybe the second actually, on video games, hm, so that they can just go right into the military. I said this back in the 90s, even before that I said, they're raising a generation, never mind the generation too of communist that they would eventually turn lose from the universities. That's been done now of course as you well know. And revolutionaries, and nihilists, and the atheists. The old standard technique. But also a generation of young folk who drift right into the military, “From Xbox to the Military” as I've said, they've had articles about it. All on purpose, for all the wars that they had planned back in the late 80s, hm, the coming wars. It's all been done. Worked awfully well. Xbox to the military.

But again, what I'm getting at here, a whole bunch of points I'm getting at I suppose. We've always been manipulated. You're living through a big business plan where whatever the elite want, and there are some, it's not the Kind and Queen of England, it's not characters like that. It's way above them, you know. Folk above it certainly are, they've got the brains. I mean, Prince Charles, he didn't even get through Gordonstoun. He had to leave and go to I think it was Dower [?] Academy. He couldn't even hack the people. The guys there were tough, you know. It was like rugby on and off the field, it made no difference, that's how it was and if you couldn't stand up for yourself, you're done for. He couldn't even hack that. But he didn't have intelligence either. So it is not Prince Charles; he was the Prince they said back in the 80s and 90s, the Prince without a cause. He had no purpose, you see. So they eventually give him a purpose at the public-private partnership deal, made him a mouthpiece for that.

But he is dedicated to one thing and that's his dad's depopulation agenda. Because Prince Philip is up there in that realm, he's always been up there, about too many people. He's given lots of speeches about culling folk, just like you cull animals. He uses that word, by the way, in his global speeches for the Sierra Club and the different clubs that he belongs to, which are all the same, about depopulation. That's always been the foremost of an elite's agenda is depopulating unwanted people. The useless eaters as Lord Bertrand Russell called us all basically. If you weren't essential to the system, then they shouldn't live.

Again, that's also socialism, for those who, for the poor working classes who've never figured it out. Because you're presented with your leaders, eh, oh don't worry about it, they got the Fabian Society and the Socialists and Labour Party, they're there to stand up for you. Go into the real, the real science behind it, eh. Remember, communism had three levels, that they admitted to. The one for the world and for the new members coming in. One for the managers on the mid-level. And another system altogether that they would bring them into and tell them what the real purpose was. It was a graded system of understanding.

That's what the Labour Party is too in Britain. The Labour Party is international. Why would you vote for a national party that's international, and wants to do away with your borders? Well it's kind of pointless voting for them, isn't it? Then they'll appoint folk into positions that it's got nothing to do with their abilities, as we all know today.

But when you go into the Fabian Society and you find George Bernard Shaw, he was quite open. He opened his mouth a bit too wide actually, on film, old film and you can hear him talking about it. He says, you know, the working class thinks we're here for this, that, and the other and blah blah blah. He says, when we're in power, you'll have to come to us and ask us why we should keep you alive. Huh?!

You see, your purpose is to serve them. The cause. The Soviet Union was the same, you're a cog in the machine. You had no personality anymore. You're just, you were not A person anymore, you're part of the masses, and your purpose was to serve the system.

Again, scientific socialism. Technocracy. The World Trade Organization. The World Economic Forum. It's all the same system, folks.

Don't get misled. When you see something that walks and quacks like a duck, believe you me, it's a duck. You see, the animal kingdom can't help being what it is. They can't pretend they're something else, like some humans do. So it walks like a duck, quacks like a duck, believe you me, it's a duck! Yep.

So don't get confused. Oh, that's the same as... as... a different... Because it's got a different name in their titles and a different, they've got a 'but' in it or 'and'… instead of the straightforward thing from the Worker’s Paradise Coalition to the Coalition of the Worker's Paradise, it's a different one altogether. Don't get mixed up with terms, terminology.

Streams, they used to call it streams as well, when all the different streams would go along different directions. So you'd start off with a stream for suffragettes, you see. And the suffragettes initially, even though you have tremendous propaganda about them, they were generally well-to-do women from families who had come into the countries like Britain, or London. Many of them actually, they're well recorded who they were. They were wealthy, and they were part of the World Revolutionary Movement. Some of them blew up things in London and they did take off to live in the early Soviet Union with the Bolsheviks. If you didn't know that, it's a fact, look it up and read their books on it.

So that was one stream. One for the women. Let's separate the women from the men. Again, George Bernard Shaw said that the workingman will come to us because we're promising him better working conditions, fewer hours... In those days, believe you me, they did work sometimes 16 hours a day, in the early days, eh. But better working conditions, because the life expectancy wasn't that great back then, as a working-class person, male or female. We'll also try to get more money for them and things like that. So they'll come for us because we're promising the things that they know they need. It's very basic, you see.

But he says, when they come to us, the workingman will come to us thinking, well now he'll have some protection perhaps, and they'll have a better working... And he can keep his wife and maybe his family in a better circumstance with a bit more money, to feed them, for basic stuff, like feeding, eh, that was awfully important. No doubt about it. But he says, but the workingman doesn't realize that's not what we're here for. He says, we want, we don't want him to have a wife, we want the women to be out working in the workforce too. That would double the tax base as well, folks. You see? It would also bring down the population if they weren't breeding with each other.

Everything is a stream, one for each part of society. Get a stream going and down the road when we've changed everything, all these streams will come together in the big river, you see. The big river. That can take 100 years. But, we're here folks.

They've altered everything. They've altered the relationship between men and women. They've altered the meanings of families. They've altered the rights of the child now. You've got rights of the child through the United Nations, meaning the parent doesn't have any over the child generally. The state now gives the child their culture and their beliefs and so on, as opposed to the parent. That's what Bertrand Russell said one of their goals was, back in the 40s.

So they've achieved their goals. All these different streams of the different parts of society they try to keep apart, altered, you bring them all together in the big river down the road. And we are here. Absolutely. All done by scientific type systems of sociology. Even anthropology, you need anthropologists to understand the different ethnic groups, even within one nation, you know, how to alter them slightly here and there, even for religious groups and so on, and how to eventually, eventually, eventually you can erode their beliefs, or their behavior, or what they stand for, and again merge them into the big river down the road. It's all been done.

So the next step is to have us all going into the big sleuths gate, eh, where they filter off the ones that they want to keep, for a little while longer, and the ones that they don't want to. I really mean this because Brave New World is part of the system that they want to work towards, or they are working towards. The intelligence system part of the World Trade Organization and the World Economic Forum, as I say, has a whole section on reimagining... When you hear this term now, Bill Gates came out with it, reimagining education. Well, who gave him the authority? The guy's not an inventor of anything. He is a businessman... who works for a very elite body of eugenicists, and the right to rule us all, you see, using technology and other means as well.

But he said, let's reimagine education. He was also involved heavily in the drafting up of the curriculums that would be used for Common Core in the US education. But can you imagine a world of lockdown, where his systems are going to be taught to every child, to standardize all their thoughts, their opinions and everything? WHOAH! There's power for you, eh?! From a monster like him.

A man who can't keep his mouth shut at times about helping folk, as he helps depopulate the world. Would you trust a guy like that who is a eugenicist? Who believes in superior types and inferior types with a real staunch conviction of the religion of a eugenicist? Hm? The humanist, they call them, we're humanists, you see, we don't have qualms about moralities. We have to, we get things done. No qualms, you see. We're efficient.

So Bill Gates reimagining society. Reimagining education. Reimagining policing. Reimagining security. Reimagining healthcare. Reimagining the family. Reimagining communities, for the smart cities, etc. It's all reimagining. It all came from the same group at the top, the World Economic Forum. Well, do you get a say in anything? Do you have a vote in anything at all? Of course you don't. No point in voting for politicians because they're all paid off and bought off by the folk who already run the world. Haven't you figured that out? [Alan chuckles.]

I have to chuckle at times just looking at the massive, massive avalanche of, like, cure yourself of everything, all life's ills, mainly emotional ills and circumstance ills and so on. All the self-improvement books and endless, endless... Back again in the 80s I could see it happening in the libraries, where you used to have shelves and shelves of really good books on histories and philosophers. Philosophers too, I never really get too strung on. I don't need a philosopher to give me my meaning of life, you know. I think you can work it out for yourselves. And schools of philosophy are often used by the elite at the top already. They still get folk at university and try to drag them into their particular, again, stream, they'll get a stream of different types of people and get them into a Hegelian stream or whatever it happens to be, and then you have them merge down the road, after they've served their purpose.

Because most philosophies are meant to be a way of living, to be used by people who give it to you [Alan chuckles.] to suit their purposes really. Or to justify what they already do. Again, they tend to be awfully elitist as well. And many of them were meant to destroy existing religions, you see. And before you start pooh-poohing all existing religions, most existing religions, what's left of them, didn't force you to accept what they were preaching. It was to give you a basic, you all grew up in the left over, the residue of cultures that had been heavily attacked and destroyed by those who are bringing in the humanistic technique, you see, of Technocracy and so on, and religion’s served its purpose, they claim, you know.

It was a big, big battle to get you to give up rights and freedoms, especially to think or to even pray or whatever it is you're really into, and just obey the experts, the REAL religion, you see, that's replacing it all. That was always the purpose of many of the philosophers of… You know, Nietzsche kind of said it too, eh, that God is dead. And he says, well if God, meaning, they were all...

Again, in Germany the big, big push back then, Germany was the first country to turn, elevate philosophy above their old religions. It didn't work with everybody but they, once you start doing that then you end up into horror shows rather quickly, you see. Because as he said, well God is dead. And when you realize that God is dead, then all the things that were unthinkable and undoable, that you wouldn't do before, now are completely attainable, you can do it all. If you have no guilt and there's no repercussions against doing things that before would send you to hell or whatever, if there's no hell then you can do what you want.

Well, you take it from there, folks, then you add on to it science. Well, let's get rid of the elderly, the sick, the infirm. Yeah, boom, boom, boom, eh, no problem, let's just cull off whole sections of society. Boom, boom, boom, you see. All the things that were prohibited and unthinkable become not only thinkable but attainable. And doable.

That's where you are today.

So if you've tossed all the old values out the window, you're going to regret it. Because you should still have that affinity for something bigger than science. Science is a horror show. That's what Bertrand Russell said. He believed in science. He says, there will be a tyranny, and I hope, he says, if there is to be a tyranny, I hope, and he fervently hoped there would be a scientific tyranny.

It would be a horror show. Absolutely.

Do you realize, you have to think about things that you just don't like?

It really started, I say, in the UK and parts of Europe in the 1950s or 60s probably. Long before by using different techniques. But definitely it was launched with the whole force of cultural organization. And by that, I mean it's like fashion, music, everything, pushing for a sexual, and remember the word, REVOLUTION. Don't ever dismiss it as something pithy because it didn't really entail bloodshed as such. It did entail bloodshed; it was a different way of doing it.

So you had the fashion. You had this managed explosion, they called it the British explosion, eh, and in the US that's what they called it. So you had a sexual revolution. They began to sexify the males for the first time. For a long time actually before. They had that in maybe the 1700s with the silk stockings and the wigs and all that kind of stuff. But they really sexified the male. You had Elvis Presley, they called him Elvis the pelvis, of course they did, that was the nickname. He would gyrate on the stage like some kind of guys, the way strippers do probably today. That was the introduction of the sexification of the male, you see.

We all know through music, and that was the sexual revolution, you know, push, push, push, and the miniskirt came on. They'd already revamped what they tried in the 1920s, and failed, with the booze cans and prohibition. They made the booze cans sexy. They had the jazz on the go. They had the dances like the Charleston and different ones, with the miniskirt, you know. They tried out all that stuff, but they didn't have the antibiotics for the venereal disease. And they didn't have, and real disease when it's untreated, believe you me, ends up being a disaster on the victim. Absolute hell on the victims. And the offspring by the way if it’s syphilis.

They did all that and then they went back to the drawing board for a while. Because they had unwanted children all over the place you see. They didn't have the abortion racket on the go. They had backstreet abortions and so on. So you always have fallout as you're changing things and you gotta find ways of dealing with it. So they really put stacks of money into research and development to do with hormones. Part of it along the way was the birth control pill. So they launched it again, along with the miniskirt once more, at the same time, and the sexual revolution. Bingo, you see. It had already had the same fallout, and you already had antibiotics, you see, in the 50s and 60s.

So you end up with, then, the destruction of the family unit. Which again is the same, part of the Communist Manifesto, which is the same part as the socialist manifesto, which is the same as the elites/Royal Institute of International Affairs manifesto, destruction of the family unit. And of course academia at the top and so on.

Always the same agenda.

Look at today. Look at the things, as I say, we're talking about today, where we feel embarrassed at times when abortion became a business, a legalized business, and in the States especially. They were finding the big, and you've got to look at the history of this. We're so... hypocritical. Especially with ourselves. We can't look at ourselves at times. We don't want to look at the bad things, eh? But we are all part of it, in society, by accepting things that we shouldn't. Like Aldous Huxley, how we could be trained to accept things that perhaps we shouldn't, that are not in our best interests at all. The dumpsters are full of body parts for children, babies, eh? That's what they found, they were getting left out and going high in the summers. Early days folks, eh. Now, body parts, and that's what they'll put down as children, or fetuses, or babies, eh, it's called human biological waste. Bio waste, and we accept that as normal. There was nothing wrong physically with them. They were just inconvenient. Because we've all been, everyone's damaged with the sexual revolution that continued to the present day. It's worse now.

Most folk really probably won't get married now, so the elite don't have much to worry about now. Youngsters that you're seeing riot in the streets probably will never have children. Probably will never mate for any length of time either with any one person. It's been very successful. They don't know that it was all part of war on them. They don't know. You can get the victim demanding more of it in fact because they think it's their rights. They don't realize, no, no, you've come to this stage by people you've never met or even knew existed, that planned your reality and your thoughts and give you your opinions and so on.

So we're all complicit in things in so many ways, and most folk don't really get it. In the old Hebrew religion, the old Hebrew religion, they believed that the collective, the people themselves would have collective punishments when laws were broken, when real primal laws were broken. And it's very true, I think we do. Whether we like it or not. Because there's certain things which are just plain, I think wrong. Even though we can commit them ourselves because we've been trained to or encouraged or whatever, but regardless, you have collective punishments come down because you're breaking the basic laws of nature.

And people say, what can we do about it? I mean, what can we do if there's too many people? Well, what countries have got too many people? Because the ones in the West, their own domestic populations have been plummeting, they claim at the Department of Statistics, you know. Every country in Europe's got its own Department of Statistics. That's what they claim. I used to read the statistics off years ago as they kept hammering, there's too many of you. [Alan chuckles.] And I'm thinking, wait a minute here. You keep telling us we're even below replacement levels, aren't we good for being below replacement levels? Isn't that what you want? Oh no, we have to bring in replacements now from all over the planet they tell you.

It's a different agenda on the go here, folks. Isn't there? Because you can't please them. Hm? That's what you're living under. You see, you've been under a global agenda your whole life long and you didn't know it.

Before I go on, I've got to keep remembering too you can help me out by going into @cuttingthroughthematrix.com and getting the books and discs there. You get your eyes opened. It's a long archive. You'd be surprised how many folk at the top, not the very, that top, but the folk you'll know on radio or whatever use it all the time. Because it covers a long span of life and history and facts as well, you know, of the system of conology that we're living through.

So, you can help me tick along too with all my sites I've got out there @cuttingthroughthematrix.com by donating to me or buying the books and discs. But donations remember you can send even cash or checks. I think Money Gram is okay too in some countries. In some countries you can still gets international postal money orders sent. I think in the States they can't do that anymore for some reason. But you can send cash from the States if you've got a problem. And believe you me, the post is probably the most efficient you can get, just basic post, UNregistered. If you registered anything you're guaranteed to have it opened, folks. Just don't register the stuff and things get through okay.

As I say, you could help me tick along. I don't write massive, not these days anyways, write massive tomes, you know, of histories. It's all been done before. You have to start thinking for yourself. It's almost like the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam where what it means, the Rubaiyat, it's almost like reading between the lines. Words should conjure, and sentences conjure up images that then come between the lines, they formed their own invisible lines between the lines to give you this overview of what you're reading as you're reading it. It gives you an inner meaning to it. It's very important too, this was a standard art at one time.

Because a lot of how your mind really is meant to work is with intuition. And intuition has clues. It's like prompting, you get prompting from things you see, hear, or even listen to people chat about certain things, you get little insights and prompts, and these are meant to work with your intuition, and suddenly things just fall into place. As opposed to a standard education and an indoctrination into one particular area of things, you'll find that there are other ways of learning, which are natural. And they've always been here, always existed. Some of the greatest thinkers down through time allowed their minds to work for themselves by using the intuition that comes with observance and thought itself.

You can't really do it when you're really in a thick densely populated city, not so easily. You definitely need peace and quiet at times to ruminate, a good word too, ruminate, you know, about things. Because that's, you might not think you're really learning or discovering something at the time. But what you can think in one particular evening will come back again later, once it's been thought. This is the whole thing, it will come back again later and be part of something bigger, all things fall into place just like a jigsaw puzzle.   It's a very important way of seeing and doing. Because you're just, put it this way, you're JUST as important, eh, meaning you're probably more important, but you are at least just as important as any specialist that's out there telling you how to behave and what to do at this present time. Of course you are.

Of course you are.

A famous person once said, he said, even the top, you know, genius with all the letters behind their names from universities, and awards and titles, still has to drop their pants and go to the toilet the same way as you do. You know. In other words, folk are dressed up in fancy titles and fancy this and fancy that, but they really have no other right to rule you and tell you what to do or how to behave or what to think than anybody else, you see. This is YOUR journey through the walk in the world here on top of the planet. It's yours. Not theirs. Leave them with theirs. But they won't leave you alone with yours, will they?

Now, you also have the mentality of the crowd. The crowd, again, in its roughest sense wants conformity. Especially when they're afraid, eh, conformity. So again, you get people who like crowds. They like to be part of the group, the crowd, and they'll turn on folk very quickly if they're not part of it. You'll see it with these riots in the States... oh sorry, protests in the States... [Alan laughing.] ...with... [Alan laughing.] and the shopping sprees too. Where you see them looking for trouble in the streets and it's like swarming, that's what it's called actually is swarming, where one person will pick on somebody that's... Or even if they've got the wrong kind of hat on, right, you saw that recently, one guy getting shot, or assassinated, or murdered in the streets because he didn't have, he wasn't part of them, you see.

You see, the crowd, especially the fanatical crowd of today of the nihilists and the atheists that they said they would unleash many years ago... This is what they always say, the World Revolutionary Party, by guys who wrote about it, talked about releasing the nihilists and the atheists, and they'll, they don't believe in democracy, they'll just kill you if you have a different opinion. If you wear a T-shirt with the wrong slogan on it that could be enough, or hat, to have you murdered, you see. And they'll justify what they're doing because they're not democratic.

I hope you understand that this is what you're seeing here. This is not democracy or a Republic either. Nowhere in the Republic did they say they would slaughter folk if they didn't agree with them or have an opinion. You're looking at a different system, which is the old Soviet type system, or Bolshevik really. With the same groups being fostered, trained, and let loose on the public, before the big one takes over for them. And they will be used against everybody else as we go through the big change. Until they have the big change completed, which is the smart city set up.

You have no idea of all, you think it's this millions of cameras up right now. You have no idea of what they've already published about what they're going to put in here. And are putting in. And they're going to use all this as an excuse. In a post police world, with all the robots and that, they've got them all ready to go, folks. And with the incredible surveillance that they've got on the lampposts and all over the place right now, never mind your cell phones all tracking you, where you're going and all that. They know who, they know who's killing who, who's doing what.

You can see these little clips on YouTube, from very good video from some of the stationary observance CCTV cameras on lampposts and so on. You see these guys just walking up to people in New York City right now just shooting them at night. Dead. Or dragging them on motorbikes and doing the same thing again, just for the... for the... who knows? ...the fun of it I guess, for them. Because it's a lawless society now they're bringing on. So, the more that this can be foisted upon the public until you are all terrified, the more again you're going to accept, well now we're going to put in this robot in this little area here. It's all been…

You should see some of these gadgets. These are like little tanks, maybe 6 feet long, with rotating turrets and all kinds of, not just tasers but machine guns and God knows what else there’s on them as well. They literally can, all the six wheels can turn on it in any direction, and it can spin on the spot if it wants to, but never lose track of who's in its gunsights. They got all these things ready for the streets. They've been working on them for years. For now. How do you get them on the streets? Well you start defunding the police. It's wonderful, isn't it, really, how they always get what they want by creating the circumstances to get the public, that's enough, we don't want the cops anymore, you see. Well, it just so happens we've got all these things to take their place then, you see. And there you go.

But the video quality of these cameras on the lampposts... that are also, ah, got audio. They get every little bit of chat of anybody standing beneath it. It's all listened to, put in a massive database, across the whole... across the nations, folks.

This isn't freedom.

This is not freedom at all.

You're owned. You have less freedom than the cattle in the field. At least they can wonder about in the field and no one’s staring at them all the time. N-n-n.

You're being redefined all the time. They're redefining humanity at the World Economic Forum and redefining the human, the individual.

It's tragic that school is where it all starts, isn't it? You indoctrinate them early at school, very cleverly too. It's like imprinting, the techniques that are used. It isn't the persuasion of a curriculum, a good teacher who understands the system on how to teach. It's toolkits designed for every age group. They knew exactly how you'll think at the age of five or six in certain topics, or six and seven, and seven and eight and so on. It's so specifically well designed. They know for instance who's going to laugh and tee-hee and titter with certain topics at certain ages, as an example. And who will object to them, and what gender at a certain age, as an example. And how to overcome that so smoothly today, that even the few who won't go along with something can be coerced into going along, and then imprinted with the basic idea of the new thought, the new thinking, the new way of viewing a particular area or topic or whatever it happens to be. And it's with them for life. As they grow up, they don't realize that even entertainment is barraging them with the updates on their initial indoctrination in different areas. Constantly.

Look into the Department of Cultures in your own country, or your state or your province or wherever it is you live in. You see the tax money going into Departments of Culture. Go in and look into see where the money... They also dish out funding to different authors, as an example, of children's books and children's movies and children's TV shows. Again, they've got laid out toolkits of what to implant in your shows, or even puppet shows, to get the ideas across for sustainability. So young children think, my God, the world's coming to an end and I'm only five, and it's all my parent’s fault, they're bad people. Well, if the child at five is getting taught that, what do you think they'll be like when they're 15 or 20? They'll be on the streets like they are now, eh? [Alan chuckles.] It's all by design. It's not accidental.

Some of them have even come out, I mentioned it recently, I put a link up to one of them in one of these groups, in the Extinction Rebellion, whose part of the propaganda in saying that he's ashamed now that he was taught and he was teaching folk to be terrified that the world's coming to an end. Young children, he says, were telling him they have nightmares now. They'll never be normal. Your education is indoctrination for big agendas which you're unaware of. Absolutely.

And you certainly don't want to end up being part of the swarm on the street. You pick on the weakest person, an old person or something, somebody jumps on them and then you see them swarming like a hive, whoooofffff, kicking in the boot and the whole thing. Very, very brave people, eh? That's what the crowd does. The crowd is not something, there's no sanity, it's a primal primitive thing that takes over in the crowd.

I mentioned it too on last week's, well, that was, I was on with Neil last Wednesday I think it was, from the Irish Sentinel. They got hacked big time and the streaming got cut short, because they didn't stream at all in fact. Luckily, I managed to record on my end and eventually put it up. It took a lot of work because I used an old, old system I hadn't used for a few years to do the recording, so it wasn't the cleanest. But yeah, I've had the same problem with my computer systems too. If you speak out about what's happening today, you're hammered. Even my Internet provider hammers me and throttles me and chokes me off. Absolutely. Until literally when you're at stalling speed, when your Internet should cut out altogether, it crawls. It's worse actually at times than dial-up. And when you phone, there's no point in phoning them up, they'll give you the runaround. But they've been told to do it, of course they are.

You don't speak, you can't speak your mind today. There's no freedom of speech. You're under a totalitarian system. If you look at even the Event 201 that came out with the warm-up, and one even two years before it they had too, had the warmup to the present so-called pandemic. But the same players attended at the Johns Hopkins rehearsal you might say, dress rehearsal. They said they would attack folk eventually that wouldn't shut up and were trying to say something else to the general public. They went through the scenarios of the event having false news out there, two years before it happened. All prepared for it. Here's how we treat them all. They'll block off your money, your income. Then they block off your ability to talk to the public. Silence you. And you've seen it all happened to lots of people. I get the same kind of, I've had the same thing here for years before the pandemic. But that's what happens. You don't live in a free society AT ALL, you know. [Alan chuckles.]

You'll be left alone if you’re just watching pornography and stuff that they want you to watch and do things that they want you to do. Of course, they'll have no problem, you're no problem, you're safe then. I can remember [Alan laughing.] again years ago an old preacher in the States. And he was a kind of a character, you know. Very few characters amongst them, they're all rather like peas in a pod, but he was a real character. He said, you know, he says Satan will leave you alone if you're just one of the crowd and doing like everybody else. He says, it’s only when you start to say there's something really evil with this system, that you'll start to get problems. That's pretty well how it is, isn't it? Your left alone if you’re one of his own, as they say. But if you're trying to break away then, now you’re a target. Because you're beginning to see, you know, you're beginning to see.

As I've said before too that, and I mentioned it last Wednesday during that talk that eventually I put up myself for the Irish Sentinel, about the absolute comparison of the psychopath with demonology. And I have no problems talking about demonology. I don't care who pooh-poohs it. It's like everything else, you can pooh-pooh everything unless you've maybe experienced it [Alan chuckles.] at kind of close range at times. So, who cares who pooh-poohs it and wants everybody, oh, scientific?

Look at the incredible deception you're under right now with science. [Alan chuckles.] You're going to parrot that all day long, eh? Well they said Covid's real and we're all going to die if you don't take a shot, you know. Yep. And you watch cops beating up folk and strangling folk because they wouldn't put a mask on in some... I'll put some of these clips up too @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Quite a few little clips. I don't use YouTube too much. I can't get any speed because I'm getting so heavily choked, but I get little bits sent to me and so on. I'll put them up. Even one from a doctor, another doctor, a woman who's pretty good and she's straightforward in what she's talking about. I think her name is Majed. I'll put her up as well.

I have no problem talking about demonology. I mentioned that Malachi Martin was one example. It's so paradoxical, really isn't it, how at one point he definitely was paid, and I say, he was paid by a group inside the US to really buildup ammunition for an enemy of Vatican II, who wanted to use it for their own agenda. He was on the payroll, and he wrote something about it under different names, Brother Serafin he published a book, and hit his own church, that was used against the church and the church never recovered. I don't say that church was ever, ever perfect. The church like every system became corrupt long ago. Long ago.

It doesn't mean it ALL became corrupt. But we know for even during the Communist years in the 30s and 40s and 50s, during the un-American activities commissions that they had, they found a woman [Bella Dodd], I remember talking about her years ago. She admitted her job as a communist organizer was also a selector, she would select people for different projects inside America. They put them into politics naturally. But they also had other ones to go into the priesthood. She was picking particular ones of certain persuasions to go into the priesthood. And that did come out by the way. This is not happenstance or hearsay, this is, you can actually look it up and read the actual inquiries about it at the time. She put hundreds of people into the priesthood, that shouldn't have been there, that ended up having their cabals that are still affecting [Alan chuckles.] the reputation of the Catholic Church to this day. Really, y'know.

But getting back to Malachi Martin, as I say, he also talked about the CIA. You can see an old documentary by, when he was on as a guest being interviewed by William Buckley Junior. Now, William Buckley Junior, it was admitted after he died that he was also in the CIA like many folk in the media. But in the actual interview Malachi Martin talked about the CIA being awfully, and he talked about the same thing when he was on the Art Bell show, that the CIA used lots of priests as intelligence sources because they were across the whole planet into countries that were also communist and enemies and so on. So, I'm pretty sure Malachi Martin was well involved in that too.

So, here's a guy who eventually, as a Jesuit, ends up doing what many Jesuits have done, which was damaged the church. In one big way ends up writing books about possession and demons and demonology. Awfully good book to read by the way, even if it's just psychology they’re into, you can certainly get a lot from it. You can get Hostage to the Devil, awfully good graphic observations, interpretations of mental states at the very, very least, right, in behavior. Which a psychiatrist will put it down as mental illness, to the bitter end. It would matter what happened, it would be to the bitter end, it would be mental illness of some kind or another.

But you've got the other side of it too, it's a derangement by other forces.

But when you put them down side-by-side, the possession, like perfect possession is one category of possession which is when a person is completely at home with the spirit or entity that's within, that's IN them. They're content and they can work well together. The problems in standard classical demonology is where a person fights, is still fighting and not completely taken over by the entity that's in them and there's a bit of resistance still there. They're in definite anxiety all the time, maybe erratic behavior, of all kinds. In the process too, often similar to see the old bipolar or manic-depressive disorders as well, that's very similar. Sometimes. But odd behaviors always, you see.

When a person has deliberately taken an entity on board, and sought it out, it's a different kettle of fish. When you have an elite, not all of them, who knows how... If you have an elite group that literally maybe intergenerationally have taken these things on board, definitely they put out suggestions that some of the organizations they're into through the last century and a half, in the occultic sense with it, or even in the last couple of hundred years in fact, or more, some branches, especially French Freemasonry they had some branches within there and in London of course with the Hellfire Club. You definitely had this idea of eugenics, number one, of selective breeding, special breeding, mating for different purposes than just being horny, put it that way. But to actually create a type of a child, you find it going way way back even to John Dee and the magical child, and that was eventually repeated and repeated all the way up to Crowley.

So, you're looking at something a bit different from that, from the usual horror movie interpretation of it. So, eugenics is definitely involved in it to an extent. When the Hellfire Club like some of the top Masonic groups in Britain had brothels attached to them, not any old brothel, it was just for certain members. Some of them were selected because, and they were called dollies. The dolly is a carrier, a dolly, just like anything that you push to carry luggage on is a carrier, they carried the genes, the particular genes of higher families and so on.

Part of the upper admission into some of the – and I'm not making this stuff up, this is from their own books and so on – was that you would be given permission to mate with a particular woman until she was pregnant, and then she would have an offspring, you see, from one of these dollies, the carriers of the right kind of genes, you know. I could go on and on about that because it's an interesting field of eugenics. We also know too that Charles Darwin was the offspring between the Darwin family and the Wedgewood family. Because they had been doing it already for a few generations, and after him too, still doing it, just intermarrying with the same one family for special genetic breeding of what they claim is the better traits make them special. That continued right up into the 20th century, and I'm sure it still happens today with certain groups of them.

That's documented. It's not conspiracy at all, it's just documented history. I think when his wife died, I think he married, was it his mother's sister or something? It was something, it was real, real inbreeding for sure. It's often thought that's part of the problem with the Darwin's because they ended up having tremendous headaches, it's hereditary. Then when they cross matched into the Huxley family as well later on, which they did intermarry eventually that way, a lot of them had tremendous headaches and they were bedridden with them at times, and depressions coming out. So, these are hereditary traits that would be passed on you see, more so with inbreeding.

So yeah, you have that. But now supposing you've got another level though, where you want to bring in the spirit? Just like the ancient Egyptians talked about too, the opening-of-the-mouth ceremony and so on. Where you could, they believed, it was a strange way of looking at things. It wasn't just reincarnation. It was, it was, um, transmigration of souls. Wherever a father died, Pharaoh, and the son was nowhere near, he was off in a different province maybe examining the province or something like that on some business, then they couldn't just, there had to be a proximity factor to transfer the spirit to the Pharaoh.

One of the parts, they have a five-part soul, you see. One of the main parts they put it into the son. So they would go through an elaborate ceremony where they would say that they could still store it in the mouth, you see, the opening-of-the-mouth ceremony, in a statute and they do the same thing, and then transfer it to the son when he got home. Like a safe, put it in a safe [Alan chuckles.] for a little while. They had very elaborate ceremonies about all these kind of things. It was very important to them anyway because they had so many different parts of spirit and soul in Egypt.

But that became kind of popular, this idea really fascinated people in the 1800s. They got into it, some of the different occultic groups. We know too that Yeats and different people were heavily involved in the occult in their time as well. Much of the poetry in fact he put out was actually ceremonies, for those who don't know it. It's quite interesting when you can actually understand what they're about.

But anyway, the idea was to bring something more important than you into your body. That's what Alister Crowley was into and he had a big following remember, and lots of aristocracy were involved in it at that level too. And the artistic community as usual as well were involved in it. It didn't quite die off, and then they had a revival in the late 1800s with Theosophy, that they tried to bring more and more and more of that in and blend it with India.

But there's always that element of the higher groups that go through elaborate ceremonies, even today, to bring a higher entity into certain, some people. Remember, there's branches of masonry that are pretty well atheistic as well, remember that as well, eh. But for the occultic groups, certain ones went all the way. Often as an excuse perhaps for free sex as well and all the rest of it. But some of them still believe there was a higher, that these were entities of superior beings they could bring into themselves, of people who had lived long, long before them.

Some of the groups saw these entities as gods, ancient gods, you see. It wasn't a unique idea at all. It flourished in ancient times, and the Middle East, and even in ancient Hebrew and into Judaism, early Judaism too. They had this idea, a different view on, of good and bad, right and wrong, as they have today, it's different again, different changes. But when Judaism took on Kabbalism and really pushed it, the early ones saw these entities that could be used. Today in Christianity you'd look upon these things as demons. But in Judaism they were entities that you could call down if you knew their names. Again, it was very Egyptian in a way as well, or taken from Egypt and other areas around that area. Even previous to Egypt in fact I'm sure, many, many thousands of years old, these ideas proliferated and were copied by different cultures down through time.

But the idea was that, especially when you worship people as God's, like Pharaoh's, and it was unthinkable often for the people to believe that the Pharaoh's body died so therefore what was in him, this powerful being inside him, the spirit was dead too. So, they would say that, they would think it went on, and as I say, could even be transferred to the son of the Pharaoh. Therefore they were looked upon as God's, immortal gods. Even if one body died, they'd have another one to enter into. So, you're into the same area as demonology.

As I say, John Dee was really into this. He learned the Kabbalah, and Hebrew. He was a real devotee. The idea was to call down these entities and use them, and not to be afraid of them, you see. With the idea that you could do, if you knew the right almost codewords you could maybe, like passwords, like computers, you could make them do your bidding. That was the idea behind all magic. Of course Alister Crowley took the same idea, that he didn't invent, and pushed it into more a practical, into more practice, physical practice into his little society he had around him.

That's continued up until, and then had another big explosion again with the New Age as they call it, the New Age in the 1960s onwards, with the hippies they introduced all the stuff again. And again, the Theosophy idea of blending spirit with science, which Madame Blavatsky boasted about that was their goal. Odd thing to say, isn't it? Until, and it struck me when I was looking at, again, the World Trade Organization and the World Economic Forum. They're all the same members by the way that run all these things. And again, reimagining humanity. In it of course they have the whole idea of life extension, which they do have today. They've had it for quite a while.

I remember watching little clips that someone sent me, and it was from Israel. It was someone, it was a scientist, a well-known scientist over there. And in a general talk, there's lots of people coming into the room as he’s starting his talk and they were kind of [Alan chuckles.] yapping away as the man was trying to speak. But he said quite casually there, he says, of course you know that if you've got a spare $7 million to spend, we can keep you alive until you're 140 today. That's what he said. So nonchalantly too, you know. No, he didn't elaborate and say it's with lots of transplants and so on. It would entail a lot more than that, I'm sure. But it can be done.

I remember years ago too, I think it was David Suzuki mentioned it too in one of his TV talks when he was on about, the same guy who compared humanity as levels of parasites, or really living off the dung of the ones above them, that's what he said to his students, the droppings of the ones above them, that's how he classified society. But anyway, he mentioned too at one time that they could pretty well stop the time gene, the clock in the genetic structure in telomeres and so on, at that time, that was years ago, if they wanted to.

I'm sure many folk have had it. We know that old man Rockefeller died when he died there a few years ago, I think he was 103. That he was still giving talks and traveling the world up until the end, you know. He didn't seem to have the old-age illnesses like arthritis or stone deaf or blind or whatever, and he was able to stand and give his talks. I think it did come out he'd had a few heart transplants, maybe three of them or four, who knows. But I'm sure they had a lot more to it then that, because they don't come down, if you notice, with senility either, eh, where their arteries are cleaned out, cleaned out and the blood flows good, etc. Anyway, that's a whole different parcel of it, area to itself.

But the thing is, this drive for immortality, and don't think I'm getting off the topic completely about demonology. The drive for immortality as I mentioned on that last Wednesday's show, Neil Foster and Reality Bytes Radio, was that a demon, a demon is a bodiless entity. It has to, it can't experience anything unless it's inside a physical body. Then you have a whole range of senses that come into play in a physical body. That's heaven to a demon, you see. Otherwise it's like an enclosed off, it's like something floating in the blankness of space, and it's living in its own mind. But if you put a demon into a body, then suddenly all this, all this, all the wonders of sensation and experience comes into play, and therefore they don't want to leave it. You see? Or if they leave it, if they’ve killed it, the host is, if the host is fighting and they kill it, then they want to move into another one immediately. So, heaven to a demon is the physical world.

For people who live in the physical world, their heaven is away from the physical world. It's the opposite, which is interesting to me anyway. It's like what they have Jesus say in the New Testament. He says, my kingdom is not of this world. So, a whole religion is based on a different world for spirit to go to, you see.

But a demon wants the opposite. It comes from another world, another realm, and wants to exist permanently here. Well, look at the elite and look at their drive, using all your tax money for experimentation for the last couple of hundred years, at least, big time, for life extension for themselves. Right down to possible, not just even creating clones for each other, that's been a big drive for a long time. Oh my God they said in the 90s, we could probably create clones for ourselves and just keep them for body parts. This is how they explained it to the public. They had big pushes on this by the way. And don't think they had never done it.

Laws, the laws that you... they're not... They don't go by the laws they give for you. They have authorized institutions for themselves way above all of this. Then you had movies like The Islands to do with them even cloning body parts, getting, you know, I'm sure they had a good chuckle at all that kind of thing. Not to be confused with, there's other old, old movies called the island, that's a different thing, that was from Dr. Moreau's island, you know, an old idea of experimentation. I think it was HG Wells did it too, The Island of Dr. Moreau.

So anyway, a demon wants to live forever in this world. You look at the elite and the drive they have to live, permanently, and stop the time clock in this world. They've had so many articles out, and there’re books as well, not just magazines, and for general television and so on. So many articles about that very thing, that it would be wonderful for them to live forever and just stop the time gene, maybe at about the age of 25 or something, you know. So, you'd be at the peak of health and you'd never age. You would never come down with old-age illnesses. Your eyes and your eyesight should be as good at the age of 500 as it was when you actually hit 25 and they stopped the time clock.

What you're looking at is what a demon would want. To live forever in the physical world. Isn't it? That is its heaven. So, you can toss things around all you want, and I don't mind tossing all these ideas around in my head, I have no problem with them at all. I have no problem with folk who will ridicule you either and saying oh he's a fanatic or a nutcase. I don't care what folk think about it. It's something to think about, isn't it?

When you see the similarities, as I said before, when things quack like a duck and walk like a duck, it's generally a duck. So regardless of what, how you want to define it, it's the same process that something is after, for the same reasons, isn't it? Psychopathic, mental illness, demonology, it's so similar, isn't it? And so I wouldn't pooh-pooh things that easily if I were you.

I really can't imagine the people who formed the Bolshevik slaughter teams, that are well documented, by themselves, and by the orders put out by Lenin to these groups as being basically just pure, if that's what human is, you understand, we're done for. If humans are the cold-blooded humanistic types of psychopaths, call it that eh, that are atheistic, they have no problems, eh, that God is dead, therefore everything that was impossible is now possible hm, if that's what humans are, we're in big trouble. And the more you start to believe that that's, that is their sciences, you know, that is the science is humanism is the new religion, it's a good thing, you'd better say God help us. Because nothing else will. Because you will go along with their terrible plans. I really mean that.

The Bolsheviks as I've said were given instructions, just like Antifa right now. At the moment you're actually seeing very carefully and constructed Bolshevik techniques being used right now, by design, it's not by accident. Lenin said, to get the little farmers all on board here, to terrify them into submission and to give up all their crops and all their rights, and their property, and their religion and to accept us as the dominant force of government, he says, just go into the little towns and villages, pick people who have more say or who were looked up to, they don't have to be wealthy or even the average peasant, just pick them, a few of them, maybe five per village or more and horribly execute them. And order that everybody must attend their execution.

What they did, they cut the intestines, the small intestines, the lower part where it attached to the large intestine, and brought it out of the abdomen, they would tie them to posts in town and make the person walk around and round and round as it unraveled. This is un......... This is the truth, folks. I know it's unpleasant.

But you understand something, horror always repeats itself unless you're willing to look at horror in the face. Otherwise you're not going to stop it happening again.

That's how, and they watched them until the people just fall down dead. Horrible, terrible pain and horrible. Believe you me, that technique had everybody on their knees to communism very quickly. Horrible, isn't it? This isn't made up. This is, you can find the old writings, disclosed stuff from the old communist archives too in the Soviet Union.

That's where humanism will get you. Because there's nothing else to elevate humanity as something special. Regardless of what religion you're looking at, religion always appealed, especially to young people, when you're willing, you're not jaded with the drudgery or the nastiness of everyday life by those who rule you, you know, it wears you down. You're optimistic perhaps because you're young, you feel great and you're healthy. You hope. But you do know that there's something beyond all of this.

Every child goes through it, I think, almost every child goes through it, they used to, where they'll look into areas that were looked down upon by the general religions. That they would at least look into them and say, what if, and maybe it could be blah blah blah. And you just know because your intuition, and it isn't just intuition at that stage. There's another element. Where you'd sit with your buddies, hm, and you'd start singing the same line of a song at the precise moment that the other person would start singing it. Out of the blue, hadn't thought about it all day, it would just come out, things like that. Then you'd look at each other and laugh. That's so common when you're young. You forg... Unfortunately with this system, it's knocked out of you so quickly by the system.

Because it's a clue that there's something else beyond the basic two and two equals four here. There's another element to it. And it's the same element that would guide you into the deeper truths to do with a belief system that accepts something called the supernatural. And it's the supernatural that accepted and gave you rights as a human being. A human being wasn't something that would just be slaughtered because you were in the way of progress like it is in an atheistic society. You understand? In humanism there's no reason why an authority shouldn't eliminate you if you're in the way of anything. There's no morality there.

Morality comes from your acceptance of something bigger than yourself. And if you accept something bigger than yourself, that YOU are aware of, then you're aware that other, that this bigger thing gives the rights to other people as well, other humans as well. That's part of the affinity you have is a human being for others.

Don't forget, Julian Huxley, you should read what he wrote about for UNESCO in his speeches too he mentioned them. He talked about society and how, he says we will have to knock humanity off its pedestal as being a superior species on the planet with all of its rights, in order to dominate and change society and guide it. Who's the we he's talking about here? Hm? This is the same guy that was a cofounder of Planned Parenthood. Hmph, but we shall have to, we. Knock us off. Well, once you’re knocked off and they put you, and they tell you and convince you through the countless TV programs, eh, with the furry animals that you're just another furry animal, maybe furry, if you're not bald. But yeah. And once you start to believe it...

You, I'm sure you all know folk, even in maybe college or school or even afterwards that went along with someone, well you know, we're just animals. And these same people you know would never be upset if someone that was being abused by a system in their own or other countries, it wouldn't upset them. It's just so… Because that's what you end up with when you're just, when you accept and you've come to conclude you're just an animal.

Well, animals don't do this to other animals! ...what humans do. Don't forget, animals generally don't even kill other animals in a fight. And what they will fight about are very basic things. Very basic things. Mates, you know, for mating. Food. Very few needs, you see.

But humans are not the same. We plan, we can plan wars, wars that go to almost a level of extinction sometimes, because we have a different brain. And we can, we're awfully good, we're awfully good at finding, creating things, machines of destruction. Oh, we're awfully good at that eh?

Look at all these Covid ideas. Look at what broke out of the, the information that broke out from all the labs, eh. I was giving these talks years ago. I said my biggest fear is not the atom bomb, it's the biowarfare industry. They really do have things which really could wipe us out if they... The only reason they don't really give out the really lethal stuff is because they don't want to kill themselves either. Even if they have real vaccinations against them, which they actually have created by the way at the bio labs, you can't do one change in gain of function from one part to the next and next without having an antidote at each part of it. That's something they don't tell you in the media these days, eh? They used to. That's a law, but they still don't trust it even for the elite themselves in case the thing did mutate afterwards and still kill them.

So that's the only reason these things haven't been let loose en mass. They've been well tested in different places across Africa, I'm sure, that a lot, where a lot of them breakout, supposedly just breakout, eh? [Alan chuckles.] And can be awfully easily observed. And contained. And kept quiet often too, through bribery.

The world is a nasty place. Because the people who rule it, you have to ask yourself, are they really just, just people, or are they again, okay, you say oh fine, in an atheistic society they're just atheistic humanists that see no problem with, and add a bit of psychopathy in there, and have no problem eliminating enemies or folk that stand in the way to get their big agendas through.

Now, the studies on psychopaths also is well understood, that when they're ruling societies, and they've taken it over even long ago through the intermarriage, you know, conquerors would marry the daughters of conquerors, and then you end up with awfully good psychopathic conquerors, right. But you end up with, in a materialistic system where you elevate them up to be ultrarich and you worship them, then you've got a massive media which they also own, that constantly praises them and say how wonderful… Most folk already worship the celebrities, not because they're any good at anything. Because they're rich, they're just stinking rich.

So, you've been given a materialistic culture, based on materialistic religion in a sense, it becomes religion, and it's humanistic, and they are important. You realize what you've been conditioned to see, these people are important, as you go down the scale to little old you, then you're not so important. Eh? Are you getting the point here? It's quite easy to condition the public into that mode of being, eh, I'm not, I guess I’m not so important after all. Then your choices eventually when you're laid off from work, and because it's all been given by the elites to China and the Far East, then you end up on the street somewhere, hopefully in a warmer place because it would be murder in the winter, or you can take drugs and speed up your death that way, which they make sure are well supplied.

You're living in an amazing system, you know. Look at the police forces of the world let loose upon people who might not want to wear a mask, or they can't wear a mask. Not that it does any good. It's got nothing to do with it working. Cops like to beat folk up who won't comply with the herd. It's a uniformity. You don't just wear a uniform, you become uniform. It's the uniformity of society, so they don't like anything that doesn't comply. And when they're given permission to beat you up, they go with it with gusto, y'know. Sometimes they'll enjoy their work then. That's the kind that will go and apply for those kind of work. Especially today, they've been brought up on the same Xboxes as the generation that goes into the military, don't forget that. There's no moral questions in wargames in Xboxes, it's just how many folk can you kill and can you win, that's it, end of that problem, eh.

So yeah, they'll get let loose on folk when they won't wear a mask. You can see what's happening. They'll strangle them. They're beating them on the head. You'll see, I've got another video I'll put up, a guy in a subway I think it was and he had, he said he had, like most of them, they have permission NOT to wear a mask because they've got bronchial problems and asthma and different things. It makes no difference to these cops. Np. Because you see, they pick on easy prey. The same cops won't go near a Black Lives Matter revolution, ha, across Britain and other countries that's got nothing to do with what happened in America, [Alan chuckles.] and it's getting used for other purposes, as you know, these cops were nowhere to be seen.

But they'll pick on some lone character in a subway, and they'll jump on them and beat them up and damage them, and that's okay. Or some woman in Australia, you see one where she's getting strangled. Another one that was trying to organize an anti-mask and antilock down movement, they busted into her home and grabbed her and arrested her too. Another guy did the same thing too, who didn't go to the meeting, he eventually tried to call it off. They busted into his house with a battering ram.

Dozens of arrests as Melbourne's anti-lockdown protest turns violent with more than 1,000 angry locals defying attempt to cancel event - while demonstrators gather in huge numbers in Byron Bay - dailymail.co.uk / 4 Sept 2020

Pregnant Aussie Mother Arrested for Allegedly Inciting Coronavirus Lockdown Protest - youtube.com / 2 Sept 2020

Pregnant Australian woman arrested in her pyjamas for creating Facebook event to protest lockdown - telegraph.co.uk / 3 Sept 2020

Coronavirus: Investigation launched over anti-mask arrest - youtube.com / 11 Aug 2020

But when it came to other big [Alan chuckles.] peaceful demonstrations, let's call it that way, nowhere to be seen. Nowhere to be seen.

What works through them, it's the same herd mentality. It's the crowd again that would jump on the easy victim. It's the same thing with a woman who gets followed to be raped by somebody. The rapist somehow sense the personality that they're after, maybe, who knows, maybe the way they walk, or something tells them they're not so confident or something. I haven’t really studied it. But you see these different articles on studying the victim and what makes the people pick that particular woman. Right down to pheromones and things like that.

But it's the same thing with the crowd you'll see in in Portland and Kenosha. You see these folk at night, with skateboards too, you notice they have these skateboards, these are the guys that scout around looking for targets and things like that. They pick someone that's easy to pick on, and immediately you see a bunch of them just moving in for the kill, you know. That's, they're cowards on their own, but it's a swarming, they call it swarming. Cops can do the same thing again on the general public when they're given permission, you see.

So, you have to really stand back and say, what kind of world are we living in? What kind of world do we want right now? And what's running this world at the top? At the very top? Hm?

You remember, and it's not laughable, I mean, there's no such thing as conspiracy theory when you have the facts that the media themselves, the same ones that call you a conspiracy theorist, come out with them and tell you about it. I can remember years ago when Prince Charles talked about being part of the Olympians, he was an Olympian he said. Like, he wasn't talking about running the mile. Charly couldn't run 10 yards. But he's an Olympian.

It's a big group, a group of the, you know, the higher gods, the idea of the gods, back into the occult. Alister Crowley is an example where, and back in the ancient Hebrew, where they could bring down a demon and use them for their own purposes. A god, they believed they were gods, you see. That's still in the occult religions of today, the idea of bringing down gods. For different reasons, the gods of just, air, fire and water and so on. It's gods, specific gods for specific reasons. These are old, old religions. They really believe them. They don't believe there's any right and wrong, you understand.

It's a matter of knowing, the coding in Kabbalah, in deep Kabbalah, and then into the really higher occult of demonology is, as I say, they called down the right kind of entities for the right kind of jobs and purposes, to be used by you as a magician, on other people. They still have them through talismans today. If you go into Israel, you'll see [Alan chuckles.] certain rabbis actually really are dedicated to this particular field. It's interesting. So much so that their rooms are covered in talismans to protect them. Just like any Magi in any area in any religion in any era, your big fear is bringing, having things come back on you by other Magi that are opposing you, or maybe you've opposed them in the past. So, you end up in a paranoiac state where you're terrified to just go to sleep.

But you do have the people at the top to join these elite clubs, and they believe that they’re, who knows what kind of ceremony Charlie boy went through to come out as an Olympian, eh. Because the old idea of the Olympians were the gods up on high, like the Zeus and so on that looked down, they used to have Hera there and they'd look down the little people and they used the little people beneath them as playthings or chess pieces. If we look into ancient times, we'll find there's always stories and religions and histories about those who seek immortality. Generally, from the upper crust, because they have a life of luxury. They love life more than most folk. They have much better health generally because they get the best food and warmth and accommodation, things are taken care of by managers on their behalf basically.

Just like the modern ones too, the multibillionaires and trillionaire's have estate managers and business managers. All the problems are dealt with for them, they don't have to worry their little heads and go get stressed out about things. It's all done for them. So, they love life more than most people, you see. And they have life extension. They don't get the old-age problems because they have advanced medical treatments for things for themselves. More than anything else, they love life more the most folk who were beaten down and worn down with it, or sick as well. Therefore down through the ages it's been kind of similar, therefore the elite, the ultra-elite have always sought after immortality. They have it written into stories and folklore and folk stories, and along with religions as well.

So, it's still here today. So, you can take the atheistic point of view, the humanistic point of view, that it's just part of human nature to want that forever. But what I'm pointing out is, is there more to it or not? Because as a psychopath who really loves life, who is riding high on the backs of everybody else, they love, they certainly do love life. They don't want to get off this planet here.

Then you have the other ideas to do with religion and demonology. I like to compare all these different things. Regardless of what you want to believe or think about it you should always look at all the different avenues to bring you to the same, the same questions. As, they're still doing the same today, aren't they, as they've been doing for thousands of years, by using us all for their own particular agendas.

Including, you know, Julian Huxley and trans-humanism. He came out with the term in his own writings at the time and it's been copied ever since. Merging themselves, through all the sci-fi movies you'd seen, merging themselves into the computer system, the Internet system, like The Lawnmower Man. Even transferring their whole intellect, their whole awareness, their being with engrams in their brains into computers. It's all the same agenda, isn't it, by the same kinds of people.

You have to ask yourself, what really does drive them? Because they don't see themselves, I don't think they ever have seen themselves as a part of general society. Like Bertrand Russell and, his ilk, and he said, that eventually the elite will be pretty well a separate species from the rest of the population. And here we are. So, take your pick what you want to think about it. But don't rule out anything at all. That's the kind of characters you have.

Then you got the guys like Bill Gates who is so full of himself. What IS in this man? What IS in, they used to say in literature, what possesses a man, eh. And it's maybe more [Alan chuckles.] to it than you think. But what makes him think that he’s got the right to reconstruct the world? And on whose behalf? Because he's a front man too in his own particular field. There are certain ones that are front distributors of big money to different NGOs and other organizations and corporations, and he's one of them, as a distributor mainly than anything else.

And a promoter of one particular area for himself which is GAVI and vaccination. He's said quite openly in his talks that it would also help reduce the population by giving vaccines out. So, if you want to take vaccines, this man's been, had a finger in stirring up the vaccine pot, hubble, bubble, toil and trouble, and good luck to you if you still believe it. What a terrible thing to do is just to go ahead and accept it, when he said it himself, eh? N-n-n.

And yes, once again I'll mention the articles that have been in the newspapers, and I had them up on my site years ago and gave the talks on it. He and Oprah and a bunch of them had, they called it, nicknamed it The Lucky Gene Club as well. But they were there for eugenics. They talked about overpopulation problems in the world.

You see, most ordinary folk would feel embarrassed about even going near a topic like that. If a group got together, eh, just your friends and acquaintances and you just casually chatting about all kinds of things and then, well you know, there are too many folk in the world, you know. Well what can be done about it? Well, you know... You always end up going back to square one where you just don't know what you could do about it etc. etc. If you meet someone that says, well I know what I'll do if I get any power. Then you should really start to perk up and say, wait a minute here, who are you? And who gives you the right to decide, eh? Hm?

Don't forget that Kissinger put that ruling through for that, it was not a bill as such, but it was something to do with the state of the nation. [National Security Study Memorandum, NSSM-200] He said at the time, he says, the greatest fear we have and the biggest enemy to the state is overpopulation. They put the bill through. It was mainly aimed, folk thought at the time, towards Third World countries. And that included not feeding them.

Now, this is a big... this is... I mean eugenics comes up with these topics, will bring you into these topics, if you even go near the topic, should you feed these folk or not. That's what he said. He says because folk are starving, it's not itself a good reason just to feed them. He was talking about not just overpopulation, but places like Bangladesh, which at that time were heavily influenced by communism. So, his idea was if you feed them, you breed more communists. You see? Everything's a weapon, isn't it? Everything you need is a weapon I mean, like food, I need food, therefore, you know, okay, therefore, therefore. That's how it goes.

And guys like him who work for a different agency then you'll ever imagine, that are way above the CIA, the top ranks of the CIA, just above it actually, go off on tangents that are nothing to do with helping you as a country. Folk who are in the CIA and have been in it, none of them have figured it out themselves, on the middle and lower levels, as to why they've done so many things that did not benefit Americans at all.

So yeah, you're living in, with a different system over you. But yeah, eugenics is an amazing field. When the top, when you get rich folk who are awfully rich, who also belong to clubs, that know that they have authority because they're so secretive, and has everybody who's anybody in it that's got any kind of power at all in the financial area of the world, like the World Bank and the IMF and so on, and here they are discussing eugenics and ways to reduce the population. Well, when they say ways to reduce the population, they are including you all in it. I hope you understand. They're not saying, oh, they don't mean me. [Alan chuckles.] Oh, YES, they DO. And it isn't just about YOU having children. Because when you're saying, oh they don't mean me, because you decided you're not going to have any children. No, you're a useless eater, that are eating and using up the earth's resources. And they come out with all these different equations as how much carbon you produce in your lifetime, just by existing, little ole you, eh.

These are the monsters, these are the same monsters by the way that sat back and helped create the Soviet system, the revolution that slaughtered millions in Russia. Right through it's whole existence. The same people, and Quigley goes through it is one branch of it, the Council on Foreign Relations, the helper group I'd say, and the outer circle of friends and so on. They were fascinated at the Royal Institute of International Affairs by the setting up, and when they called it the Milner group at the time, that morphed into the Royal Institute of International Affairs, but they were fascinated by observing it as a big experiment on a good part of the continent, this communist idea.

All the slaughter. All the folk who had any power, the middle class, just wipe them all out and replace them with a different middle class as you know. Then wipe out stacks and stacks of farmers to create famine. That when folk are starving you can dictate to them and they'll do, they'll jump, if you offered them any kind of food at all they're going to jump. That's what they did.

But they studied them. The Bolsheviks were financed, they got, and they trained a lot of them in America, that had run to America years before, these revolutionaries, what they call the International Revolutionary Party. They had big meetings in New York City, in the open air. Read about it, you can see the old photographs yet. They were trained on Standard Oil property, some of them, as the warrior class, the fighters, the Army, then send them over to Russia and let them loose. And then observed it all. Mass slaughter.

They called it the second great experiment. The first was America. The second one was a different system, it was to be, oh, a communistic system. And they studied them. And we fed them, because they starved themselves. We sent them clothing. When the World Bank was up and running, it financed them for its entire existence. We paid off a lot of their debt, for its entire existence, in the West with our taxes. Big experiment. How many millions of folk were slaughtered for this big experiment, eh?

Well, you'd better get it through your heads, it's the same people and their descendants who run the Gates group and the foundations, who run the World Economic Forum, who run the World Bank, the Bank for International Settlements, the IMF, the United Nations. It's the same group who own it all and run it all. You're all part of the present big experiment as we go into the next technological postindustrial and post consumerist society, into austerity, forced austerity. You'd better start to understand what's really going on here.

Because these people at the top of this lot, or even who are not at top like Bill Gates, they are higher, much higher than you. They have no problem dictating how they're, what they're going to do with you all… And how you're going to be pincushions for vaccines, by law, which they run, that they're claiming, or you're not going to be allowed to ever live the same way again. You can't go out of your home. You can't go out and shop. You can't, you can't do anything. It's their way or NO WAY. Huh? For the rest of your life? Whatever kind of life you're going to have.

They're going to make you wear identity bracelets, electronic ones, if you won’t go along with it. And if you've got a smart phone, then you've got to have it with you everywhere you go, because it could have the same function of monitoring you all the time. Total spy network system. They mean what they say, folks. Who gave them this right? Who gave...? Are they... These guys obviously believe that they are the Gods that can dictate to the rest of us, and they can either let your uniformed official cops like Australia’s doing, let them loose in the general public with full force. Or in the West they might just use revolutionary groups of youngsters that are again the misfits most of them, who, they're getting paid to do it too, a lot of the leaders are, definitely the leaders are, they get paychecks for it at the NGOs. At that level they get well-paid. The followers don't, I don't know, although they're getting their unemployment money [Alan chuckles.] to go right now. It’s quite astonishing. That's what they can use on the general public as they bring down America.

Don't forget again where they want to bring America down to. They published it all, and so did Britain, with their strategic think tanks to the military Department of Defense. They want to bring it down to the city-state, get rid of the nation. So, there will be a few city-states in America. Huh. Remember that? Does it all go through your ears and out the other one again and gone and lost in a trail of exhaust or vapor, vapor trail?

How do you think we're going to get to that stage? Do you think they just imagine things? Whatever they write in these programs, they plan it. And to plan it means you make it happen. You only think it's unthinkable because to you it's unthinkable, you would never do that. But these are the planers we're talking about. How would they get you to the same system, and I've mentioned it before, isn't it odd that the Communist Manifesto has pretty well been completely, the planks of it, fulfilled? Eh? With the starting off with the elimination of the family unit, as an example. Then the youngsters are owned by the state, the state gives them their value system as Russell said and others said too, etc. etc. all the way down to eventually the withering away of the nation state.

That's exactly what the Royal Institute of International Affairs wanted, the Milner group that ran the British Empire. Isn't it rather coincidental, d'you think eh, it's all the same endings that they have? Freemasonry, Albert Pike, the end of the family unit again. The end of private property. What a coincidence, eh? Hm? End of private property for all you lot, but not for the elite at the very, very top. I always love that little statement by George Orwell, because Orwell goes on about utopias. They always give you utopias, it's easy to get you to go along with it. He said, some are more equal than others in such utopias. Well, that's always the way it's been. And that's always the way it will be.

Why should the ones who bring you carnage and destruction, for the good of all and the good of the people, not live better than you? Hm? That's the first thing that they'll tell you. [Alan chuckles.] …and eat better than you, and so on and so on. Never ending.

Remember again, my website @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Send me a few bucks before you forget. These are long talks, and I had one person, and one person only, and I know what he means. He's in England, he says it's too long for him. I think he's older maybe. But he said that it's often harder for him to find out where he left off if he wants to continue the talk maybe the next day or something later on that day. And I know what he means. But at the same token, these are emergency times, and these are emergency broadcasts in a sense.

Because I always knew it would come to this. I always did. As I've said before, we're going through incredible history. That this is more profound than even World War II by the way for the changes that the system wants to make on itself, on behalf of those who own it and rule it. And who are quite confident about it.

Until you all stop going along with it. They can't do it without, again, the greatest con, you've got to participate in it all, for your own destruction.

Without it they can't do it.

I think it about it too in Australia, well, the problem is everywhere. Television is the BIGGEST weapon, it's so weaponized to terrify the public. Everybody who watches it, they can't believe it's a big show to terrify them for no reason. So, their sanity is questioned, you see. They can't believe that those that control it, that they think they elect, and they think it's all there, they think the TV is there to serve them. Can you believe that? Whoa, whoa, whoa! [Alan chuckles.] They really think that.

I can remember old miners in Britain, there was a park there and they'd have the seats there and the guys would, the old, retired guys would sit there and chat away and smoke their pipes and chat about articles in newspapers at that time. You'd have youngsters generally running around and playing all over the place listening to the chitchat. They knew everybody who owned the newspapers, they knew who the moguls were, by name, by their families, by their history and what they were all about and what they pushed and promoted. Today, no. Everybody believes it's all real, it's all genuine, it's all there for their benefit.

Zbigniew Brzezinski said, eh, in his book Between Two Ages, he says, that most people, at the moment, and it's intensifying, and this is in the 1970s he wrote the book. He says, most folk can only repeat for topics of conversation what they heard on the previous night's news. the time will come where they'll not only depend on that for information, eh, and can be fed the information, he said, but it's coming very quickly that they'll come to expect the media to do their reasoning for them. Not just their thinking, but their reasoning for them. Oh, I won't worry about working that out, they must have a good reason for doing it, you know, that's what folks say, oh yeah. And if the media doesn't tell them, warn them about something, they won't think about doing anything themselves to save themselves either.

They really believe it's an appendage to their brain. Like a little extra box attached to their brain, that says, be careful of this and go along with that for your own safety, so they'll go along. That's what it's like today. They're so brainwashed, and with the incredible terror that's pushed into them, that IF, if the cops were told to be as cruel as they are in Australia and overboard with it all, then the folk will sit back just brainwashed, well I guess they deserved it, you know, they're putting us all in danger. What an amazing psychological warfare that's going on right now. Hm? N-n-n.

And if you could delay it or subvert it in some way, and wake people up, enough people up, you'd have to deal, and I really, this is not just me coming to these conclusions. You would have to deal with the war league on top of all this that created all this. It's a war, remember, on you. That includes politicians. It includes the Bill Gates and all these characters that are mandating that they're going to turn you into a pincushion, to take their, you know, corporate vaccines for corporations, that are going to make you change your whole way of living with wearing prisoner's bracelets in your own homes if you won't comply and so on and so on. You'll have to go and try them on.

And they've crashed the world's economy. Millions of folk are suffering here across the planet. There's folk dying, not because of Covid, but to the reactions to it all, you see. You'd have to literally deal with these people as war criminals because it's deliberate. The collusion is incredible. That goes for all the people in the media too that are pushing all this stuff. No excuse for this, for what's going on. They know what they're doing. They know this is a war OF terror ON the public by the media. And all the help they get from experts and psychologists and so on. And that's a fact too, with your tax money that's being put to these behaviorists and the behavioral insights teams and the SAGE groups in Britain, I've read, put all these articles up before, where they gave money to them to even advise on how to advise the media into terrifying the public even more if they're not complying. They want to terrify you and increase anxiety? These are the words they used, to increase the anxiety of the public, don't be afraid to put the pressure on and hype up the fear. These people have to be tried in criminal courts as enemies of the people. Because that's what they're doing.

This is the danger point because now that folk are knowing this and realizing it and understanding it, this is when horror get stepped up another notch by those who have the most to lose. This is history, folks. That's what happens in history. This is the danger time, when they realize that, no, the people have noticed them, we've noticed who they are and what they're up to, and what they've done, the consequences of what they've done. So, they have to become even more horrific, or go into Plan B, C or D, which might be even worse.

But regardless, it has to be stopped.

They plan to destroy the whole world's economy, bring everybody to their knees. There is definitely famine breaking out in different parts of the world. I said this would happen way back in February. What do you expect? You shut everything down, and you just wait to see what's going to happen? Come on here. They know what they're doing. [Alan chuckles.] Yep. Quite something, eh?

Then you get folk in the States who think that if Trump gets in they can fix it all. They don't even understand what Trump is even about. Who does? I said in the last election, the Americans had nobody to vote for in any party that's really American. But Trump ran on the idea, he got backed by the big Pharma companies, he said that he would decrease the time for experimental drugs and so on, and they would cut the time it would take and the years it would take for experimental testing to go on. And this is when he ran the first time that he said all that. Have you ever listened to his talks? I did.

I also listen to Obama's talks when he ran, when he talked about the money that was spent on his grandmother who had a terminal illness was a waste of money, they could have used that. Getting folk ready for the idea of euthanasia. Why waste money on old folk who can, we got better things we could use it on, you know, etc. etc. We're living through a horror show and the folk don't recognize it. It doesn't fit in with your cozy idea that's been created in you that the world is. It's not cozy at all. It's fake. That's a fake idea. This is not Andy of Mayberry. Nothing is.

A sentient creature, like a fox, and foxes tend to go the same kind of routes every other night, you see. I can tell in the wintertime. I know some of the foxes, one of them came to the door couple of years ago. And I've seen him since by the way. In the middle of winter, it was freezing, and I fed him. But anyway, they tend, you can tell by their tracks where they've been in the winter, and they'll come the same roots looking for the same, maybe a grouse or something, something that still in the ground. But if anything is changed, if a tree has fallen or even a branch has blocked a road or path, they'll stop dead, if you watch them doing it from a window, and you see them going around it and watching it, carefully, and looking all around.

That's a natural way to be. That's called survival, using its natural abilities and instincts for survival. It doesn't jump over a branch, it could maybe land in a trap for all you know, eh. This fox is going to survive. That's what animals do.

We have been tamed down until we ignore all the signs of our own destruction.

You've been taught that, nah, leave it to the people who's running you, they know better, they're trained to rule you and manage you. And a lot of folk have succumbed to it. I can remember back in the 90s when Bill Cooper, and myself later on, actually about the same time when he said that one. He said a lot of people will come to love socialism, not all will be against it. Because every decision that you have, you'll be coerced into making, will be given to you what to choose or what to do. And that's true. A lot of folk, that you give up your freedom bit by bit, and your independence bit by bit as you're being trained to, oh just sit back, put your head on that little velvet pillow there and let us do all the work for you. We'll do it. Don't worry about it. We'll make all the right decisions. All the things that annoy you that you have to decide for yourself, we'll do it all for you.

Well, here you are. [Alan chuckles.] Here you are. And you might survive, but you will not be living. You'll be maybe, maybe existing in some form or another. Maybe. But that's where we are today with all of this stuff.

So, as I said before, a wartime scenario, you get famine. You get all kinds of factions ready to fight you, or riots in the streets and so on, of all kinds. You get… This is not all happening at the same time by itself. [Alan chuckles.] And then you're going to defund the police? You know, a few years after they said, well we've got all these robots we want to put into the society. We've already put in all the parts to do with monitoring the public, from poles all over the place, and their cars can monitor them too, and their cell phones are a fantastic monitoring tool. They've already bought the hubs for their homes so's we listen to everything they're saying and doing. And we've given them the smart TVs to sit and watch them as they're watching us. Yada, yada, yada, ya. They've done a whole stack of it already.

You've given up your freedoms and your ability to think and do for yourself like that little fox. One piece of convenience at a time, is no convenience at all. You've been disarmed step by step by step. And you've succumbed to being ruled, not just governed but RULED, a ruler over a good chunk of your life, folks. That's where you are. As long as you can have lots of sex, with lots of partners, no bonding, all the problems taken care of, of any fallout from it, then you'll be quite happy as a child until you just perish. That's how it's going to go, you see, perpetual childhood until the end, however long or short it might be.

But a wartime scenario. Rationing coming along. Wartime laws and rules, regulations where you just hop and obey to every order that's demanded of you by forces and so on. That's wartime scenario. Well, under emergency, well, that's when 9/11 happened too, it's emergency. Oh, you can't have privacy anymore, that's impossible, you can't have that, no way. The next thing you know, you can see these old ladies in the airports getting stopped and searched and saying, a little old American woman, you know, what have they got to do with 9/11? Nothing. NOTHING. And what do they say from the media? Well you might not be a terrorist, but you know, you might become one one day. What?! [Alan laughing.] You might just wake up one day and you’re a terrorist. Well, gee whiz, you know. There you go.

Totalitarianism, eh. There's never been a system like this in place before that even had the means to implement it all, electronically or any other way. Here you are. They've never had the mass of psychological warfare techniques that they have today, and technology to go with it, to convince you to go along with it. It would've never happened in previous times.

So therefore, those that have a problem downloading it all, or listening to it all, just try and divvy it up into one hour at a time, at least take a note as to where you stop, and you can always start it again. And download it, you can always download it from my site if possible @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Or you can find it on Bitchute as well and other places too. You can always go into @cuttingthroughthematrix.com and you see it getting put up every Sunday. And I really mean it, there's a tremendous work here that goes into all of this. Even uploading it and getting it ready for uploading, and all the sites that I have to upload it to, remember, my own sites. You'll see them listed @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Make a note of them because if anything does happen, this is war that's going on remember. I mentioned what happened to the Irish Sentinel there and they've been completely, all their bandwidth was chewed up immediately last week there. Like, I don't know how many gigs it was, just whooof, overnight, that was it, that's how it was done. It's happened twice so far I think with them. You're under attack.

With me, my... they know exactly when I upload generally, and they'll cut me down to a trickle. It would be faster trying to upload it all to the different sites with dial-up. I'm not kidding you. This is in this day and age; this is what they do. It's deliberate. It's not accidental. It's a war that's going on. So even uploading it all to each site it takes time, each one, for me. Sometimes it will take five hours uploading, or six hours. That's just up the uploading part of it to the different sites. So yeah, it, I do it all in one go because, can you imagine doing this, splitting it up into four hours, and putting it up to about five sites, of my own sites. And doing it for, you know, an hour at a time and each one is four, it's 20, there's 20 uploads it right there, just that alone. So, I'm sorry to do it this way, it's just the way it is because there's no one else here to help me. I do it myself. I don't depend on other uploaders at the moment. I have other folk who will upload on different sites for me that are not my sites and that's nice of them to do it. But even they take time doing that. That's a lot of work.

I'm not part of a corporation or a company that's financed by bigger powers than me. [Alan chuckles.] And I'm not part of any front group for anything either. Most of the, you're living in a jungle of warfare of information, you really are. You often don't know the real stories behind different people who supposedly guide you. You just don't know what's been going on behind the scenes. And it's horror stories again. And I don't go into the details of things but be careful. Be very careful. You're supposed to think for yourself.

The reason you're in a mess is because you always vote, and you got folk coming in that literally have no intention of doing what they say they're going to do when they get into office. Then you go and vote again for the same parties and the same people.

But the US literally, I see it as an internal war between one group of people, you could almost call it a family, one person in the family mentioned it, described it that way. [Alan chuckles.] They actually said it didn't even concern most Americans, it's an internal squabble. In a sense it's probably truer. And the general public haven't got a clue about that at all. They're still thinking in left and right paradigm. And they're still thinking in Labour versus whatever, you know, labor classes versus...

Just like Britain, you know. What a joke that is, isn't it? Especially now when everybody's unemployed, [Alan chuckles.] because oh, it's Covid, you know, it's this unseen enemy. As they keep revising the statistics, and down to about 6% that actually died of it, even less than that in fact, of what they said before, of actual Covid. And even that would be probably wrong too. It makes no difference. Reality doesn't matter because it's a huge wartime scenario. And as I say, if they back off now, they'd have to put them on, at least put them on trial. Wouldn't you? For destroying thousands and thousands and thousands of small businesses. And thousands, maybe millions of jobs, gone, across the planet. Deliberately. Knowingly.

For the great reset of a new type of economy, eh, they decided to bring upon this, this, all of this? Whoah. Whoah. Arch criminals indeed! These are bigger than some of the tyrants you've had in the past, folks. I really mean that. None of them stopped the world dead by ordering the folk to stay at home. And got away with it. No, that didn't happen. [Alan laughing.] It took science and technology to make it all happen with the war of terror on the public. By your own authorities. Who work, who are just the lackeys of those who rule the system way above them, though they are well rewarded certainly.

There's also another video I'll put up by the way. It's from Spain and it’s got English subtitles. You'll see this doctor and there's a split screen on it. The doctor, he's been asked, he's being interviewed by a woman who is an interviewer from a TV station. You see her prattling off the questions to him. He’s smiling and shaking his head and he says, no, we're not getting massive deaths, no, our hospitals are pretty well empty. And she's prattling on too trying, because she's getting paid to terrify the public, right, and he's one of many, but you see him looking at the ceiling and shaking his head and as she prattles on and tries to counter everything that he's saying. He's on the front lines, he's in the hospital. She's not. [Alan chuckles.] Then her producer jumps in eventually and hammers at this doctor because he won't go along with it. But the doctor stands his ground, you know.

There's lots and lots of exposés going on right now. But again, facts don't matter. Because there's folk getting paid BIG money to terrify the public. There really are lots of them like that. And they should all be put on trial, absolutely, for what they're doing. And the tricks they've been pulling, never mind just fudging numbers, and lying through their teeth, but knowingly lying through their teeth. They know they're doing it.

I tell you, it's something else. This is quite something. This is real history you're living through. And it didn't take fleets of bombers dropping bombs over cities to make this happen. It just took an elite who had already taken over your thinking for you, like Brzezinski said, you expect them to do your reasoning for you. Hm? The media? Well, they own it all. They've got all the professionals on board that are experts on LYING. Psychology. Behaviorism. They know how you tick. They can make you think and believe anything by lying, lying, lying and present it in the most terrifying way, and you believe it. You've been raised watching TV. You've been raised listening to their documentaries and, would they lie to you? [Alan chuckles.] Perfect, eh? Absolutely.

So yeah, it's going to get worse because they are not going to just back off. The more that they're exposed, the more they'll double down. Because the option is for them all to be put on trial for incredible crimes against humanity. ABSOLUTELY! Whoah! So, it's not going to get so good.

But again, it comes down to what? Let's just take the humanistic side of things and look at it that way. Okay, we're all just, just blobs of protoplasm, and with preconditioned genes and so on, that keep repeating themselves until their telomeres dry up and shorten and you just die off eventually, yada, yada, yada, ya. We're just animals, okay, that's the next part. We're just animals, and just like animals, you got basic needs and the whole thing, so allow those, who are better animals, like Suzuki would've said years ago, to manage you all, you see, because you're just feeding on the poop from the higher animals that are dropping down onto you in the class system.

Then if there's too many of you, all grazing on the same planet, and they claim there's too many, and you know, you're ruining their resources. And you're, it's unpleasant to look at you. I'll give you an analogy here, it really, that's how they see you. They'd like to have this, their ultra-high high-tech future city for themselves here and there, you see, they can go to. And they'd like to have a world they can just travel around in, super aircraft that they can land on a dime, and you know, yada, yada, very advanced things, and go for walks and hikes and be completely free of noticing the peasantry around the world. They just don't like that. There's too many of you. It's their world, remember, they own it all. Everything that you live on, they own it. [Alan chuckles.]   They took it off you long ago or stopped you from getting it.

And here you are, you know, this is what it's all about. I was thinking today about some of the big, big churches in Britain, the old ones. Britain really, I don't think they'll ever get rid of it, it's a class system. You have people who are somebody's, and the folk who are nobodies, you see. Most folk are in the nobody category. If you understand how societies developed, the peasants were the peasants, or you were called the villains as well, you're a villain or a peasant, you see you're a nobody. And... [Alan chuckles.] I could go deep into it but I'd better not.

Here's the thing too, the peasant class, we're stuck there. They believed, right into the early 20th century the eugenicists and the Darwins had taught that the peasant class, the stock would never get any better. That all the ones who could evolve through thousands of years had already done it by marrying and selective breeding and so on. They had done it already. They only married their own kind at the top. And all classes were the same so the middle classes, then the lower classes, the bulk of the population were lower classes, and they would always be the same, so they couldn't improve their stock at all. That was going to be, ah, permanently, so therefore there's no problem in starting to decide on who should live and die, or even give birth, or how to sterilize them, etc. Always a big topic with eugenics, you see.

That went right into the early 20th century. In fact, into the first quarter of the 20th century you had Eugenics Society Darwin group in Britain, you know, eugenics. It changed its name eventually. It's still on the go today. You had the groups inside America too with the Cold Spring Harbor group and the Rockefellers funding it. They brought in the Farmers Association, for cattle breeders actually, and tried to apply the same cattle breeding techniques to improve the herd stock and apply it to humans, and came out with their Better Societies and Better Families for America, etc. All that kind of stuff on the go on the go on the go.

Then sterilizing of people who had little problems, like a deafness. You know, you weren't retarded in some way, you would maybe be a little bit deaf, well, they'd sterilize you anyway. They did a lot of that inside the States. But they did a lot of that in Britain as well. [Alan chuckles.] And in Germany, because they were the first country to adopt all these. They looked at Britain and Hitler actually admired what they were doing in Britain with the Darwinian eugenics, and also in America with the Cold Spring Harbor projects and all the projects under the Rockefeller guise and so on. He started to implement it too with the so-called ‘unfit’ for racial hygiene. So, there’s retarded folk, you see, must be retarded because it's hereditary, therefore they would just annihilate them. That's what they started to do.

Of course, by the way, I mean it was actually, even Alexander Graham Bell, for those who don't know this. [Alan chuckles.] Alexander Graham Bell, he still thought almost to the end, changed a little bit towards the end, he still went along with the eugenical idea that deaf people could only produce deaf children. It was actually really a firm belief at one point. But there's nothing to back it up at all. Deaf parents can have normal children who are not deaf. A lot of deafness are caused by different things like meningitis and so on at birth when they're young. But that class idea really was prevalent right up into the 20th century, and into the 20th century and especially in America and Britain.

But up until the 20th century too, folk don't realize, in the biggest churches in Britain, eh, and I've visited some of them, some of the old ones from, you know, they were beautiful abbeys and so on. But in the Protestant ones it was rather more profound, because they had an aisle going down the middle as you know in a church, really, and in some of the bigger abbeys there, but they had parti... They had, you could see where the rails were up along the top, you know, the ceiling. They had high ceilings, but you could see them high above anyway, maybe 15 feet high, the railings. They used to have curtains on them so's that the wealthier folk didn't have to look at the peasantry, you know, scratching themselves across the way there, with their knees poking through their clothing and things like that. It was just upsetting to them, it just upset their happy thoughts in church. And that's a fact, folks.

It's so class ridden.   Where was your, help your fellow man, and, have compassion for your fellow human being, there? The hypocrisy that exists in a society, and I know and understand in different levels. Understand too, if you're only given the strange money system, hm, which will always guarantee there's folk above who control the money, right, so it seems, and you can alter the cost of the purchasing power of the money at a moment’s notice anytime they want, so one day you're okay and the next day you might have the same amount of money to buy half the loaf with it instead of the whole loaf. That's what the power of money, of monopoly money is, eh.

Rothschild said the same thing, I don't care about politics, he says, give me control of the nation's money and I don't care who you put in as prime minister in Britain. And he didn't, because he'd put them in. [Alan chuckles.] He put in the right folk. Because the money buys everything, including people and prime ministers, and backing for them too, eh. Or the politicians that need money to run even, or get their name mentioned in the paper, which you will own as well. That's how it works, you see.

So, the money system immediately, at least, at the very least intensify that which is self-evident. Here's very poor folk who are in rags, and here's the folk who are a bit better and they can afford to buy the cloth or the patches to tape or to stitch their holes in their clothing, and there's the better class of folk who are showing off the brand-new stuff over here. That's how that comes with the money system like that, you see, it's just inevitable. It's not like an old tribe where you're all wearing the same skins or something. It immediately fosters this thing.

So in an uncertain system of finances where poverty can happen very quickly, if you're sick for instance, if you're just living day to day or week to week and you can't work anymore, then you can end up being amongst the ragged people across the aisle there very quickly. So, there is a tendency to look down on the people because you're terrified of becoming one of them, you see. That's how the system actually works. So, their own fear, rather than say I'm scared to be joining those folk, they start to condemn the people. You condemn that which terrifies you. You see? That's how it works.

But yeah, they had these big curtains so's that the wealthier folk wouldn't be upset by seeing the poverty of the people across the aisle there. Isn't that really a sad statement on society? And on ourselves? Don't just... forget the churches, on all of us, it's a sad state, isn't it? It's a human thing and it's part of all the problems of humanity. But it's a sad thing to realize that this is, you can all be that way very quickly, you know. It's the same technique that happens, terrify the folk who won't wear the mask. Oh my God, you know, oh, ugg, ugg, ugg. And you gotta be applauding the cops that come along to punch them up or choke them. That's a sad statement on humanity. It really is.

But at least at that time you still had charities and things, and the folk who are terrified of becoming poor at least would donate to charities, because they knew deep down somewhere they've got to, you know. It was a SIN not to help fellow humans, really, it was a sin, and you felt it. But you do away with that, you do away with that, with all of its hypocrisies and foibles of humanity and human problems and so on, you do away with that and bring you into a humanistic society where there's nothing except existentialism, and here you are. In come the scientists and in come eugenicists. And in come the property, the real property owners because they own everything you need to live on. The food of the world, everything, they own it through their middlemen. You put them to work, and they'll have no problem because there's no, there's nothing to hold, there's no guilt complex in them for not helping their fellow humans. It's a practical thing, there's too many of those... those critters, you know, get rid of them. And it will be done.

As I say, we've had examples of it with the Communists and then when the Nazi system came in with its racial hygiene ideas and so on. And it was already happening in the West under capitalism, with even the blessings of some of the religious groups inside America. Better Families, eh?

Hmmmm? And that's where you end up with it, folks.

When all compassion is tossed out, and science becomes the new God, you're in for a tough time of it. Very tough indeed. Because nothing, again, like Nietzsche said, now that God is dead, nothing is impossible. Don't you ever forget that. Hence the war on any kind of God or deity or any belief system for such a long time. It might have been you're only saving grace for a long long time actually, or a lot of you wouldn't have been here otherwise. The elite didn't just start this idea of the world is really just theirs in the last few years. They've been at this for an awful long time. Awful long time.

So, you see it with certain movies. One of them was Rob Roy. I think it was Liam Neeson, that ascended so well as an actor until he did Kinsey, then destroyed himself as far as I'm concerned. I heard him prattling on about the glory of Kinsey, and my God, you should really understand what Kinzie was all about. Hoh, a real pervert this guy was too. But anyway Liam Neeson played Rob Roy, he was good in that part. Rob Roy did exist, in Scotland and he lived around the Trossachs area, they called it Trossachs by calendar and beyond, I think it was Ettrick Forest as well he used to. His group were the McGregor's, the clan, Rob Roy McGregor.

At that time England used to send people up, and had regiments in Edinboro and Sterling, they sent them up to Ettrick. They would take their taxes by stealing your cattle, you know, just headcount your cattle. That's where that came from, the headcount, was also heads of cattle. They would steal them, and pigs and everything else and foodstuffs if you had no money. They would take them down, they would drive them down to the lower, the Midlands, or lower lands, or around the Sterling area and auction them off or else give them to the Army. One way or another end up as cash for the King of England.

Rob Roy used to go down, after they'd been up through the Highlands to steal the cattle, Rob Roy would send his guys after them and they'd steal them back again at night. He was a kind of, Rob Roy was also a Robin Hood character you might say for Scotland. You can actually see the places today where he stole the cattle and he'd work them into a place in the forest where this waterhole was, a big, oh, it was a small lake really but surrounded by heavy, heavy trees. He used to hide them in there part way to his journey back up to the Highlands.

There's also the famous soldiers leap, when he was on foot, and he was getting hunted through the forest and he did jump out a good chasm and survived. The troops started to jump after him and went down there. It's still there today. Eventually he was buried next to his wife in a little church yard up in the Highlands. It's still there, you can go see it.

But anyway, Rob Roy was a character you might say. In the movie version of it he's up against a guy who’s awfully good with the sword. The different clans leaders would employ different mercenaries to use the sword in gambling, you see, and put bets on them. They'd bring in, I think the actor, his last name is Roth, he's awfully good, and he played the kind of bad guy, the kind of pompous dandy type of the era. Eventually he’s put up against Rob Roy McGregor in the big battle scene. Good movie actually, it's entertaining. But what happened in the movie actually did happen in real life, you know, that's how bad it was back then when you had no real rights as such unless you stole the rights back again, by force often, that's what you had to do. You see them coming in and slaughtering folk and slaughtering families who wouldn't go along with the orders of the King. That was pretty typical.

But one little bit in the movie was where Rob Roy has to go to the local Lord, the clan Lord for the area. And the Lord was a Lord, he was no different than English lords. In fact, they were often intermarried. That was Scotland's downfall too where they would intermarry with English ones, and even give them titles of land in England. That's how they pacified a lot of the clans in Scotland was buying off the clan chiefs and giving them lands in England as well. So, you really, eventually you're bred in with them too.

But in the movie, he has to go to this Lord to explain what's been happening and how the deceptions have been happening and how he had been blamed for something that he hadn't done. The Lord explained something to him and says, you know you should do this, and you should do that. What it did show you in the movie is so true, is the Highlanders had a lot, a big sense of honor. I mean, they were so stubborn with it they wouldn’t even give in to save their lives at times. But at one point, Rob Roy wouldn't admit to something to the Lord. And he was asked why. He says, because it's wrong, it's not an honorable thing to do. And the Lord says, my goodness, he says, Roy, you're almost are like, and what he was getting at, you're almost like nobility. Because at that time the class distinction was so bad only nobility had honor, and the ability to even gain honor, never mind keep it.

So, if you're a villain you're a nobody, you see. You're untrustworthy, and never could be trusted because you're, you would blow with the wind on any particular point of value. That was a telling point in it because that's really how it was, the nobility would see you as a commoner, untrustworthy, like a villain as they say. That's how it really was, the class, the heavy, heavy class system.

I think that they used to have in school even when I was in Scotland was you could hear the term occasionally, mind your place. It was bad enough when your family would say that, you know, or somebody in the family, or even neighbors, mind your place, when you’re getting a bit cheeky or whatever. But it was also meant, it was meant by different classes, mind your place. If you over spoke or spoke when you shouldn't speak in particular company of your betters, you'd be told to mind your place. That's how bad it was. That's the pecking order of society as they say. But yeah, it was in the churches too. Anyway, I’ve prattled on too much about that.

I think now I should really start putting some of the articles out there for those that want them, you know. Because the articles are so profuse now you can't get away from it, there's that many of them. As I say, there's no lack of facts as opposed to opinions to do with the Covid thing. Facts don't matter anymore.

They're really ramping up, like I said before, the idea, in the 90s I said this, eventually you won't get into a grocery store without your up-to-date vaccinations, electronic things will go off as soon as you walk in. Because in one way or another you're going to be chipped or something. Of course, most folk even have it on their cell phone now. But they will go to the chip eventually, or the tattoo, the digital tattoo. They've pushed it through all the different, you've had it from MIT pushing that thing, they were working with Bill Gates on. That wasn't conspiracy theory, it's been published by MIT themselves. It would be like a digital tattoo as they called it. They want to take you eventually to that stage. Up to that stage the media have been told to pooh-pooh it, until you're there, then just ignore it. That's how they do everything else too.

So, we're really at a place where most folk don't, they don't even know where they are at the moment with this. With the tyranny of shutting down the world's economy, destroying millions of small businesses across the planet, putting a relentless poverty upon the public... You're now into austerity, planned austerity, folks. I gave these talks literally in the 90s and then later again, even around the time of 9/11 happening, how you'd bring in step-by-step, austerity. You're into it now. This is the big push to bring that whole system in, postconsumer society as well, you see.

Here we'll go with the articles before it's too, the night is gone, or the day is gone. It will be the night before I get it all up. Actually, it will be the next morning before I get it all up. [Alan chuckles.] It takes that long with my choking of my speed by my provider as they call it, that I'm paying for. Now, this article here, let's see now, I'll start off with this one here. And I'm going to put up some videos as I've said too, so go into @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Download the latest talk and you see all the links there. I always put the links up for the articles that I read to show you that it's not just conspiracy theory when it's coming from their own particular sites.

Here's your insanity. We've already had the CDC come out from their own website and say that the masks don't stop the spread of Covid. Right. That was in May they put that upon their own site. I think millions of folks took copies of that, because you know everything disappears now down the memory hole so quickly. But it was there. We know that they don't stop you breathing in this particular virus, or breathing it out, Covid viruses, right. So the Fed chair now, his name is Powell...

Fed Chair Powell: Wearing masks can lead to 'enormous' economic gains

finance.yahoo.com / 4 Sept 2020

(Alan: Can you believe it, here we are. So…)

“There’s actually enormous economic gains to be had nationwide from people wearing masks and keeping their distance,” Powell told NPR. Powell added that short of a vaccine, such measures enable people to “go back to work and not get sick.”

(A: Well, most of the work's been shut down, and we're losing it all the time what’s left of it. Thousands of businesses said they can’t even open up again, they're done for. So, wear a mask and it will all be fine, eh? There you go. Isn't that wonderful?)

Powell also spoke about the August jobs report, describing the addition of 1.371 million payrolls in August as “a good one.” The Bureau of Labor Statistics reported the new numbers on Friday morning, (A: And the links are here.) which also showed the unemployment rate falling to 8.4% — below the street’s expectations.

(A: Absolute BULL, isn't it, absolute bull. You really are in The Matrix, folks, where they give you a new reality depending on what room you walk into at any particular time. Statistics are meaningless as you know. It's all rubbish, eh! So anyway…)

Powell’s remarks on Friday mark his third media interview since the COVID-19 crisis began. On March 26, Powell appeared on NBC’s “Today Show” and in mid-May, CBS’s “60 Minutes” interviewed Powell.

The Fed Chairman’s remarks to NPR will be the last from Fed officials as policymakers head into a media blackout ahead of the Federal Open Market Committee’s meeting on September 15 and 16.

A media blackout, 'eh? From your Fed chairman and the rest of them, eh? Isn't that amazing, eh? But they're telling you, the feds tell you that even though you're all bankrupt and you're going into poverty, and you’re under tyranny, then don't worry, wear your mask, it could be a fun thing and a good thing for you, enormous economic gains he says. There you are.

Another one too…

Coronavirus: Pregnant Victorian woman filmed arrest

news.com.au / 3 Sept 2020

(A: Isn't that astonishing? How disgusting these giant cops that they hire over there in Australia, eh? Nnnnnnnnn. So, she was arrested for planning an anti-lockdown protest. You see, they're watching all your media now. Thanks to Facebook and the rest of them and all the algorithms, catching you as you start to, you just, I thought just starts to leave your head and you just type it into something. Bingo, a light goes off on a little board somewhere with your address on it and you're picked up, eh. Thank you, social media, and thank you government, eh, for spying on you all. N-n-n. Quite something eh.)

28-year-old pregnant woman live-streamed her arrest on social media after detectives descended on her Miners Rest home armed with a search warrant.

A pregnant anti-lockdown protester, who live-streamed her arrest on social media…

Zoe Buhler, 28, was yesterday charged with inciting a protest against COVID-19 restrictions in Ballarat's CBD.

Ms Buhler has since been banned from posting on Facebook as one of her bail conditions but has been doing the rounds on media this morning.

Speaking to reporters outside her home this morning, Ms Buhler claimed she "didn't realise" the protest wasn't allowed.

Well why should it be? These are the same cops by the way that when they had Black Lives Matter protest over there, even though nothing had happened over there, it all happened inside the US, it made no difference, the cops were nowhere to be seen. But here they are going to a pregnant woman's home, in force, there's a bunch of them that arrived there too. Quite something eh? There's brave for you, brave people, eh? There ya go. Quite something. And then…

'Covid dissident' VIOLENTLY arrested after backing Melbourne anti-lockdown protest, but tells Facebook followers not to go (VIDEO)

rt.com / 4 Sept 2020

(A: This is the guy here, the second one…)

James Bartolo, a former soldier…

(A: I love how they put them down too, because they're PROTESTING, eh? Because they said he's even believed that people didn't go to the moon. What's that got to do with it? What's that got to do with it, MEDIA, the disgusting prostitute media, eh, what's that got to do with anything, eh? As they try to run anybody down who's against this. N-n-n. Quite something. They actually used a battering ram to get into his home.)

He was charged with "incitement, possession of prohibited weapons (A: I think it was, they called it samurai swords because he was into that kind of stuff, samurai sword…) and two counts of resisting police," Victoria police revealed to the media.

So, there you go. But no, he should've just dressed up as Antifa or BLM and tell them he was protesting, and they wouldn't have come near him. You see. There you go.

This one here is so disgusting, never mind the person who's promoting it all from the top in Canada, really, it's just, aoooh. Who's also on the board of the WHO by the way for Canada's health, and also the top consultant for Canada. A bit of a conflict there I'd say, since Mr. Gates apparently funds the WHO with three quarters of its cash at least. So definitely a conflict. So anyway… Canada's top doctor, what a joke that is...

Canada's top doctor: 'consider using a mask' during sexual activity - ctvnews.ca / 2 Sept 2020

I won't even go any further with this one. I was thinking of putting up, where it's going to go with safe sex. I remember even, I think it was Fauci mentioned it too, didn't he, that certain sites where, for hookups, just for sexual activity, oh it would be okay if you did certain things he said, you know. But anyway, I'll put up one that's from a comedy movie where you see them having real sex, safe sex, this little clip from a particular movie. If I can find it again, I'll put it up to show you where it's supposed all really go. For those that want to really follow experts' advice.

Leslie Nielson - safe sex scene - youtube.com / 31 May 2019

Also I'll put up from the CDC's homepage, you know, their homesite...

Weekly Updates by Select Demographic and Geographic Characteristics - cdc.gov / 2 Sept 2020

...and so on, and how they go through the actual, [Alan chuckles.] the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, where they actually tell you that most of the so-called Covid deaths are not Covid deaths at all. Only maybe, maybe at the most 6% they say, and it will be a lot less than that, of what they've told you with Covid, now are getting revised to be only 6% actually died of Covid. So it's way, tiny, down there, eh. Yep. And it brings you down into age groups and sexual groups and so on, it's all in here. Again, facts don't matter because... they've got the whole mantra started. Facts don't really matter.

You see, I've mentioned this before, it's the same with war, physical war, when you send off troops and so on. You always use an excuse to attack what you've already decided to attack before it started. Like 9/11, don't forget they had troops ready to go into Afghanistan before 9/11 happened, hm. They already had it on the list of the countries they wanted to be taken down. Iraq was one of them. They wanted Iran eventually too. But they wanted to go right from Iraq, and another country to kept telling them to go into Iraq, don't stop your troops there, send them in, all the way to Syria they said in fact. These are all the countries on the list and they're still going through them today.

BUT the fact was, it didn't matter about using an excuse to attack Iraq, as an example. Any propaganda will do. Once the troops are in, it doesn't matter whether it will be exposed that it was all lies, all the excuses they were given to get in, all lies, it didn't matter. It's the same with Covid, you see, it's the same with Covid. It doesn't matter that all the facts are coming up that so much of it’s bogus, they completely fudged and lied about statistics. They told the media to terrify the public by using psychological warfare, from the psychological warfare units in Britain. It doesn't matter.

These are all admissions, folks, in mainstream media. But it doesn't matter. They've got it started and it's on the roll now, you see, regardless of, facts eventually don't matter. And they can't back down now or you to have to, well, at the very least prosecute them.

Another one…

Atlantic Council has many links to latest anti-Trump coup

worldtribune.com / 25 Oct 2019

A globalist Swamp think tank is at the very heart of the latest impeachment coup against President Trump. And it’s uncanny how many prominent anti-America First dots are circling its orbit.

(A: This article goes into the different characters too. It's amazing the gang that runs the whole system of America. And other parts of the world. They mention the usual culprits...)

…George Soros, the Clintons … CNN and Reuters…

(A: But they're all connected with the Atlantic Council, that's committed to globalism. That's part of its agenda, you know. It says…)

The Atlantic Council‘s commitment to globalism is at the core of its mission statement.

Preserving the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) …

NATO, right, which was set up during the old Cold War with Russia and the Soviet Union. Meanwhile they've had NATO into all the other countries too, and Africa in different places since then too, and they still call it NATO. It gives you part of its agenda here, its charter you might say, and the different characters involved with it, and different newspapers involved with them too, and how they're involved with Ukraine, and yada, yada, ya. It's just... Kurt Volker and the different characters that are parts of the senior advisors to the Atlantic Council. The cabals you run across of crooks, in a, what you think is your legitimate system is astonishing. It's nearly everybody. They're really crooks, folks. They're not there to serve, they've never been there to serve you or your welfare.

I'll also put up another one from YouTube. It's 2020…

BERLIN Thousands gathering right now...to protest the end of the lockdown measures -

youtube.com / 29 Aug 2020

Another one is YouTube from Berlin is Robert Kennedy Junior speaking.

Legendarische Speech van Robert Kennedy Jr. tijdens demonstratie Berlin 29 Augustus 2020 - youtube.com / 30 Aug 2020

You'll hear him talking English and you hear the translator too in German translating his sentences. It's a good speech he's giving them. I wish we'd have more of it in maybe the West in fact, this Far West. Because we certainly need it. But yeah, a lot of Germans have caught on to this con. It's good. They're generally very logical, Germans tend to be very logical and methodical and they're seeing through this nonsense too.

Back in May there's an article here and it's from Boris Johnson's homepage. The government actually. They actually record who he talks to and so on. This one here is gov.uk.

PM call with Bill and Melinda Gates: 19 May 2020

gov.uk / 19 May 2020

(A: It's Prime Minister Johnson and he's on a call with Bill and Melinda Gates on 19 May. He's pretty well getting his orders in a sense, if you can read between the lines. It says…)

Both parties expressed their hope that a viable vaccine will be found as soon as possible.

(A: Of course, Gates wanted to make sure that the UK's contribution, eh...)

They discussed the UK’s contribution to helping countries around the world tackle coronavirus (A: …meaning buying the vaccines for them and so on.) and the important work of the Gates Foundation in this area.

(A: Hmmmm. And their commitment to GAVI, you know, that organization, the vaccine alliance that Gates runs.)

Argh. You talk about gangs of crooks. I'm telling you. That's his job, that's what Gates’ job is, eh, is part of the eugenics agenda, as he said himself, to help people, and also reduce the population. Well, figure that one out.

Another article, it's quite good actually. It's about the cultural Revolution in China. I mentioned this before too.

Get Ready for the Struggle Session

peggynoonan.com / 7 March 2019

The Chinese Cultural Revolution was a bitter thing, a catastrophe comparable in its societal effects, and similar in its historical feel, to the terrors of Stalin and the French Revolution. No one knows how many died; historians say up to two million. But what I find myself thinking of these days is the ritual humiliations, the “struggle sessions.”

(A: Comparing it to what's happening now, eh?)

In the mid-1960s Mao Zedong, suspicious of those around him, wary of the moves of erstwhile Soviet allies, damaged by a disastrous famine his policies had caused, (A: They always bring in massive famine, you know. You're going to get the same thing now by the way.) surveyed the scene and decided it was time for a little mayhem. The problem wasn’t his disastrous ideology, it was, he wrote (A: …himself…), “feudal forces full of hatred towards socialism . . . stirring up trouble, sabotaging socialist productive forces.” (A: …against them.) The party had been “infiltrated” by pragmatists and revisionists. He wrote—it is the epigraph of Frank Dikötter’s “The Cultural Revolution: A People’s History, 1962-1976”—“Who are our friends? Who are our enemies? That is the main question of the revolution.”

(A: But it goes into what they did. And you're finding similar things happening inside America and the West right now by the way, similar things. Where it isn't good enough that you acknowledge there's wrong against different groups, including your own, [Alan chuckles.] but you've got to really admit it and feel rotten and bad about it, you see, as though you had something to do with it. This guilt, you know, this guilt admission nonsense, eh, that's part of it. Anyway…)

He would find and purge his foes, the usual suspects: intellectuals and other class enemies, capitalist roaders, those who clung to old religions or traditions. In “Mao’s Last Revolution,” Roderick MacFarquhar and Michael Schoenhals tell of a Ministry of Higher Education official brought up on charges of enjoying a “bourgeois lifestyle.” He’d been seen playing mah-jongg. (A: Hhhhh! You see.)

But it's true, they told the youngsters to turn on the older folk that were contaminated, that was the Soviet term too, it was contaminated, in the cultures, they weren't as ideologically indoctrinated as the younger generation, you see. That's again Trotskyist ideology, as they're getting more and more communistic by purging yourselves in every generation, maybe even twice in a generation, to get more fanatical groups, you know, in charge of everything. So that's what they did in China. They tortured folk and teachers and beat them up, a lot of them were killed too. Even their parents they were told to turn against as well, because they were contaminated with the old ideas. So I'll put this article up. For those that… I find these things interesting even though you already pretty well know them.

COVID19 PCR Tests are Scientifically Meaningless Though the whole world relies on RT-PCR to "diagnose" Sars-Cov-2 infection, the science is clear: they are not fit for purpose - off-guardian.org / 27 June 2020

I've done these articles already, so many times from different sources. Even from the guy who founded the test, is that it was not meant for diagnosing in the field. It's meant for work in a laboratory only for a different reason. So, they are meaningless. All they do is pick up particles of viruses. And that's what they're diagnosing you, if you've got particles of the viruses, then they'll say you've got the virus. No, you don't.

Your own immune system will kill most of it off in your nasal passages by the way. But they'll find the particles in your nasal passage and put you down as positive. It's a complete farce. They know it's a farce. It's well understood now, it's coming out more and more. This is a good enough article I'll put up for sure for those that want to go through it all. Even I think it was the New York Times came out with it, talking about it, the same kind of thing, that it's useless. It's useless. I'm telling you. It's not fit for any purpose of diagnosing, for this particular problem.

Another article too is again the Covid deaths. I'll put it up again, the real percentage of them as opposed to what they said. Until you're left with 6% probably had Covid and that was what killed them, as opposed all the rest of them that died of other things.

CDC: 94% of Covid-19 deaths had underlying medical conditions - nbc25news.com / 30 Aug 2020

Australia…

Coronavirus: Australia extends ban on people leaving the country until December - news.sky.com / 3 Sept 2020

Can you believe this, eh? Lock down… I remember after 9/11, I remember they were putting in naval boats on the Great Lakes between Canada and the States. I joked about it at the time, I says, it's probably in case Obama... Amazing eh, Obama and Osama in the same time, who could dream that stuff up, eh? But Osama bin Laden, maybe he's got a special forces team that can have swimming camels, they can jump on them and cross… It was so farcical, this whole... I said, what it is, is to lock folk IN your countries. They still have all these boats and that and so on to lock down borders and so on. It's to stop you getting OUT, folks. That was back in 2001 they started all that stuff.

So there's Australia, extends ban on people leaving the country until December. Now folk, refugees can still get in all the countries. You know that eh? [Alan chuckles.] That's okay. This is a very political virus, eh, it can suspend its virility and contagious ability instantly depending on the purpose and the place and the time, you see, it can just, well, it's a protest, it won't contaminate anybody there. Or, it's refugees coming in, that's okay. But nobody's getting out. Hm? There ya go. Whoah, whoah, whoah. Isn’t that astonishing, eh, Australia. N-n-n.

Yeah, the New York Times…

Your Coronavirus Test Is Positive. Maybe It Shouldn’t Be.

nytimes.com / 29 Aug 2020

The usual diagnostic tests may simply be too sensitive and too slow to contain the spread of the virus.

(A: Hm, there ya go, that's the excuse for it there. It's almost like a cover piece too, trying to make an excuse for it. Because it's out in the open now that it's a useless test. Don't forget other teams, a basketball team, or was it a football player or something last week there I mentioned, who were tested positive in the morning and negative in the evening, the same thing for all of them. So, it's a complete farce.)

Some of the nation’s leading public health experts (A: Oh, these experts again, eh?) are raising a new concern in the endless debate over coronavirus testing in the United States: The standard tests are diagnosing huge numbers of people who may be carrying relatively insignificant amounts of the virus.

Most of these people are not likely to be contagious, and identifying them may contribute to bottlenecks that prevent those who are contagious from being found in time. But researchers say the solution is not to test less, or to skip testing people without symptoms, as recently suggested by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Instead, new data underscore the need for more widespread use of rapid tests… (A: …of these USELESS tests.)

I said the useless part here, not them. But that's the answer to everything. It's just absolutely, it's beyond Alice looked down the, you know, Alice in Wonderland. It really is, isn't it? It truly is. This is just disgusting the lengths they go to of total mind warping as they play with your brains. N-n-n. Isn't that something.

World Economic Forum…

WEF Strategic Intelligence

weforum.org

How can you decipher the potential impact of rapidly unfolding changes when you're flooded with information—some of it misleading or unreliable?

The World Economic Forum has developed its Strategic Intelligence (A: Very interesting, you've got to look into it) capabilities to help make sense of the complex forces driving transformational change (A: This is the century of change I've been talking about for ages, that they talked about in academia, bringing in this new system in, this century of change, transformation...) across economies, industries, and global issues. Strategic Intelligence can help you to:

Explore more than 250 Transformation Maps including the latest publications, video and data for these topics.

(A: And it really is so elitist. They're trying to, you know, attract the young wealthier crew into them, you know, the way that you'll be a SOMEBODY, you know, you'll be part of us, we're EXCLUSIVE, eh, exclusive intelligence briefings, eh, oh, there ya go, be one of us.)

Join a community of high growth organizations that master future business models and emerging technologies

That's right, really terrorize your general public and manipulate them and use them for your own benefit, you know, be one of the elite. I added that last bit myself again, naturally. I'll put up the link to their site. You should look into it and see their partners too. Some of the ones they'll admit to that is, the rest of them they don't. But they do admit to quite a lot of them in fact. This is an organization that goes way back too, in order to create a new type of society on behalf of the elite. Because they, they always said they'd use democracy, but they never believed in it, it was just to fool you. [Alan chuckles.]

Video, another one by Michel Chossudovsky in Canada. A good article and he's got a video there too.

Video: Covid-Gate, The Political Virus

globalresearch.ca / 3 Sept 2020

(A: He goes into…)

The national economies of 193 countries, member states of the United Nations were ordered to close down on March 11, 2020.

(A: And that's true, 193 countries, eh, just, CLOSE DOWN!)

The order came from above, from Wall Street, the World Economic Forum, the billionaire foundations. And corrupt politicians throughout the world have enforced these so-called guidelines with a view to resolving a public health crisis.

Millions of people have lost their jobs, and their lifelong savings. In developing countries, poverty and despair prevail. We are told the it is V the Virus which is responsible for the wave of bankruptcies and unemployment.

The unspoken truth is that the novel coronavirus provides a pretext and justification to powerful financial interests and corrupt politicians to precipitate the entire World into a spiral of mass unemployment, bankruptcy and extreme poverty.

Well, I was giving these talks out 20 years ago, more than that. And that’s the truth of it. You're going to get brought into absolute austerity, which is poverty, folks. I'll put all these links up for you to peruse yourself and the videos too, I'll put up the links for them.

Covid-Gate, The Political Virus - youtube.com / 29 Aug 2020

Oh this one here is by, I was wondering too, about how you're being censored on Google and YouTube and so on, well they own, the Alphabet group owns another, they're becoming the leader in healthcare information, you understand. It's called Verily is the company they own. So as they censor everybody else's point of view on it, because you found out a lot of facts and so on, they're the biggest propaganda ones that are censoring you for saying anything. But they own Verily, this company here…

Making information work better so that healthcare works better.

verily.com

The transition to preventive care will help people live happier, healthier lives and lower the cost of healthcare for everyone.

(A: Ah, don’t you love these benevolent people out there? I used to think they were just greedy folk that wanted to get ahead and own everything. But when I realized that they're really there to help us... hhhhh... I guess... On TV years ago, they used to have one called Perry Mason by Raymond Burr and he was the actor. He eventually was, he lost everything because he was chasing a young boy in a hotel, naked, stark naked he was, down the stairs chasing this wee boy. That kind of ended his career. But anyway, in the movie version, or the TV version he was a lawyer who couldn't sleep at night because he just worried about his clients, often he'd work for nothing. He did. M-hm. So that was like the real gold test there for lawyers in the fictitious world, they just couldn't sleep because they had to get right done for you on behalf of the client. So, that's the same with these people “making information work better so that healthcare works better.” Because they want to give, make, give you people, make them live…)

… happier, healthier lives and lower the cost of healthcare for everyone.

(A: Thank goodness these big multibillionaires exist, eh. Hhhhh.)

I'll put these links up, and this other one too. It's to do with an auction that went on recently that folk don't even know about.   This auction is called Auction 105. It's to do with bandwidth and the Internet system. It was the Federal Communications Commission that held an auction. They sold stacks of these licenses to folk to go into the 5G in America. They already have a lot of them in the 3.5 G. They're taking the 3.5 G, I haven't read it all, but somehow, they can boost it up to the 5G. And it's part of the, again, the World Economic Forum's Smart City projects as well. Isn't it, all these big private corporations are going to monitor you from cradle-to-grave, everything that you do is going to be on record, folks. That's what it's about. Every penny you spend, yeah, electronic or otherwise is all going to be monitored. Almost every thought that you have, and eventually they want to get to the thought, for those who haven't figured this out, they want to, they're already predicting what you can do because they know you better than you know yourself. Minority Report type movie, you know, idea. But they want to get into your head so they can actually have you and know your thoughts, literally within milliseconds of you thinking them, if not in real time.

So they go into the 5G…

Auction 105: 3.5 GHz

fcc.gov

(A: So they go into the …)

5G Mid-Band Spectrum auction

(A: That's a news release.)

Winning bidders of the 3.5 GHz band auction

(A: ...as well that can get boosted up to the 5G. Those are the companies that got it.)

Denial of request for waiver of auction

Up front payment deadline

(A: ...is very... It's a secretive auction, isn't it?)

Qualified bidders

(A: It tells you who they are, etc. etc. and all the companies involved in it, who bought this particular bandwidth type thing, this system inside parts of the US and across the US.)

Auction 105: 3.5 GHz

(A: ...up to the 5G, you see.)

Also another article here too, is the World Economic Forum. Again, there's nothing more important than the WEF. It was set up to eventually outpace this idea of democracy, by using democracy in its early days, you know, and pretending it was all Democratic, to take over, gradually wean you off the idea, through crisis mind you, because you need efficiency in a crisis, like a war scenario, you can't have democracy and rights and that. So, you've got to be ruled by experts and that's what their job is. That's why they set it up a long time ago.

Improving the state of the world

weforum.org

The Forum strategy is simple and effective: bring together the most relevant leaders from all sectors of global society, (A: So they decide who’s relevant, you see.) and identify the best ways to address the world’s most significant challenges.

It works. For almost 50 years, the Forum has been the catalyst for global initiatives, historic shifts, (A: There ya go, historic shifts. You’re going through one right now, right.) industry breakthroughs, economic ideas and tens of thousands of projects and collaborations.

The Forum is improving the state of the world – find out how in each of our Impact Stories.

(A: They have impact stories they call it.)

Building awareness and cooperation

(A: There you go.)

Financing

(A: They mention the financing. So they say…)

We are making the world's electricity ecosystems more cyber resilience.

(A: They're taking over ALL electricity across the planet. That's what they're doing, folks.)

Forum-led G20 Smart Cities Alliance will create the first global framework for smart city governance

weforum.org / 15 Nov 2020

Forum-led G20 Smart Cities Alliance will create the first global framework for smart city governance.

(A: Oh, there you are.)

44 of the most advanced manufacturing factories in the world are lighting the way as learning beacons.

(A: Oh, isn't that clever, eh?)

Global businesses launch partnerships for LGBTI equality in the workplace.

(A: So, they're always PC, to protect their, they really are all in the business of just wanting to please everybody, except the majority of the public.)

The world has entered a new era of pandemic responding with strength.

(A: ...they say, eh?)

It has set the world into an unprecedented era of pandemic risk.

A coalition launched at the forum's annual meeting in 2017 (A: Just coincidence, eh.) is responding with strength.

(A: Aaahhh.)

The global network is preparing humanity for the Fourth Industrial Revolution.

The network is working with governments technology experts NGOs, (A: Nongovernmental organizations.), and leading companies around the world to enable emerging technologies to be used for the greater good.

(A: Which of course they decide what the greater good is, you see, without you voting or having a say in any of it. Isn't that wonderful. In your democracies, eh? [Alan chuckles.] I-yi-yi. And into Africa.)

Africa

There are 100+ organizations governments have joined. It's to accelerate block chain responsibility across supply chains.

(A: So they're taking over the supply of everything across the whole planet. And again, they did it all without any input from you, do you mind? [Alan chuckles.])

From poverty to prison to a global shapers platform, a young Brazilian brings unprecedented change

(A: WOW! There ya go.)

From poverty to prison to a global shapers platform. Two decades of impact of social entrepreneurs have improved 622 million lives.

The Schwab foundation for social entrepreneurship is advancing social innovation worldwide.

(A: Yeah. And then the big one that they do at the World Economic Forum, they create your leaders of the future. Because most of the leaders we've got today were created by them too. Ha-ha.)

A group of Young Global Leaders (YGL) (A: Isn't that wonderful?) is working with refugees and Kenya's Kakuma refugee camp to realize their economic potential.

Well, are they going to use the refugees for economic potential or what, I mean, what are they trying to say here? But yeah, they create the global leaders. They pick them when they're youngsters at school. Just like the CIA did too and MI5 did, is they tap folk when they're at high school, even at later high school, you know, the last years of it, or first years in college generally. The same with top civil servants get picked that way. Yep. But leaders, yeah, anybody who's into any kind of networking in school or even the local school newspaper, they tried to tap you and bring you into social justice, which is how to manipulate the rest of the general public by using real problems, ah, for personal gain. [Alan chuckles.]

Press release…

Flu Vaccine Now Required for all Massachusetts School Students Enrolled in Child Care, Pre-School, K-12, and Post-Secondary Institutions - mass.gov / 19 Aug 2020

So there ya go, they're getting you as a pincushion, lifelong pincushion. I've got articles here; in fact, I'm looking at one right now. It was vaccine schedules they want all adults to take, and this was done 20 years ago and put out by the WHO. But yeah, they're doing it now, it's quite interesting, eh. You get to… All your say is nothing. It's their way or no school. Isn't that wonderful? As I say, you know, when they take away choices, you're under tyranny folks. And you're seeing them all the time now, eh? Old plans, mind you, but most folk are just hearing about them now.

Darwin's 'Smart City' Project

This is where they got all the cops right now, protesting about the small group of folk turned up to protest the lockdowns. Because that's all you see, is an army, in the Daily Mail, an army of cops. And I mean it. And a few protesters. [Alan chuckles.] It's just amazing what you're seeing there, it's like an army of policeman.

Darwin's 'Smart City' Project:

The Intersection of BLM, Big Data Tech and Climate Change (A: Oh, this sounds very PC to me.)

sydney.edu.au / 17 Aug 2020

In the context of global climate change and the concurrent need for increased sustainability,

(A: Again, that sustainability, eugenics and all that, too many of you, eh. Because that was the whole point of climate change, was to convince you there was too many of you, and it couldn't be sustained. That's, they picked man as the enemy, that's what they said. They PICKED him, that would FIT the bill, the Club of Rome.)

adaptability and resiliency, 'smart city' technologies are hailed as "intrinsically sustainable" urban development and management solutions.

(A: Maybe they'll start putting us down the garbage shoots in high-rises, eh, maybe that's what they mean, sustainability. They'll say you're just not essential, under Covid.)

Moreover, cities are eager to present such solutions as win-win (A: Oooo win-win.), improving "quality of life for all residents"

(A: Don't you realize, this GUFF, this GUFF that you get fed all the time by these persuaders, professional persuaders, don't you get sick of it? Don't you want to throw up with it? They're all out there to improve, as they lock you down and drive you into poverty, cram you into overcrowded cities, they want to IMPROVE your quality of LIFE for all RESIDENTS?!??? Arghhhhhhhhhhhh. They should all be put on trial, these characters, hm? HM? This is put out by...)

By Barton J. Quilkey, Bachelor of International and Global Studies, The University of Sydney…

(A: Well, he's got a career mapped out for him, eh? Mmmmm, they've got…)

Darwin's new technologies include environmental and noise sensors to monitor weather and climate changes, microclimate sensors to collect data on CO2 levels,

(A: I wonder if they'll have any of that to do with, if you're suffocating inside of your mask, eh?)

and water and energy monitoring sensors to improve efficient resource use.

Everything's electricity and sensors, isn't it? EVERYTHING. But it's all to do with monitoring YOU and YOUR consumption. Hm? Because you're going to go into quotas for everything, folks, and rationing for everything. That's what it's really about. For the greater good... of those that own it all.

Here are two articles from Ireland. One of them is to do with…

'This is about making sure there aren't rogue traders' - Health Minister defends new rules on keeping records as Data Protection chiefs say they comply with law independent.ie / 4 Sept 2020

The Data Protection Commission (DPC) has said that rules that require pubs and restaurants that serve food to keep a record of their customers and what they are served complies with the law.

Publicans asked the DPC to urgently review new guidelines that require them to keep such records for 28 days and the measure has also sparked a political backlash.

This afternoon the DPC said its role is to monitor data protection law and "in this case, the legal basis is sufficient".

(A: So, they can say anything that they pass is sufficient, right, and doesn't really interfere on your rights and all that rubbish. I love how they always tell you it doesn't, as they are interfering with your rights [Alan chuckles.] that it doesn't make any difference. Well, it doesn't if you allow it of course.)

Details of meals of a dining party will now be added to that contact information under the regulations.

"The interference with fundamental rights in this case is not significant and the data collected and the purpose for its collection (ensuring compliance by pubs/restaurants with the regulation) mean it is unlikely to result in any significant risks to the rights of an individual," the DPC statement said.

I’d say it did. Of course it does. It’s got nothing to do with the government at all or authority of any kind what you’re eating, when you eat it or anything else. It’s nothing to do with it. Isn’t that disgusting, eh?! And they just decide, it doesn’t really infringe on any of your… Rubbish, as they actually do it. I’ll put that one up. And from Helena handbasket, also in Ireland, right…

“Spill the Beans!” By order of Stephen Donnelly, Minister for Tyranny – “We want to know what you had for breakfast!”

theirishsentinel.com / 4 sept 2020 / By Helena Handbasket

When you think the insanity surrounding the Covid scamdemic can’t get any more insane, you can always trust in the Irish government to come up with another idea based on nothing more than the madness which seems endemic to Irish politicians; totally corrupt politicians mind you, and certainly never to be trusted on anything other than the guarantee that they’re corrupt. But it seems that the madness never ends with Me Hole Martin and ‘Ben Dover’ Varadkar etc. (A: [Alan chuckles.])

The list of intelligent attributes associated with the Covid-19 vanishing virus currently includes, knowing the difference between imperial and metric measurements, what time of day it is across the world’s time zones, (what will it do when the clocks go back?) where it can and where it cannot hang out to infect unsuspecting persons, which premises require masks, which types of businesses it is allowed to live in at any particular time of day, how to give false results in tests, whether you can drink or not, and now finally, what you’ve had for your latest snack, if permitted, in a certain premises with plastic screens, sticky labels on the floor and masked zombies mumbling their way through a menu.

https://www.independent.ie/irish-news/authoritarian-and-unnecessary-backlash-as-pubs-and-restaurants-told-to-keep-record-of-all-orders-39502663.html

Yes folks, it now seems that Covid-19 wants to know what you’ve eaten to determine whether or not it wishes to infect you. Perhaps garlic will keep it at bay or even a nice thick slice of bacon and black pudding; time will tell.

But joking aside, this is apparently being done to assist with contract tracing. (A: This is the excuse they’re giving for it, eh, they want to know what you ate. Do they think you're sharing the food, like, from mouth-to-mouth or something?) Perhaps they wish to round up meat eaters or people who just eat junk food and then fine them later for not conforming to veganism or the consumption of locusts on a stick.

(A: Because they want to actually push these locusts, eh, as a substitute for protein, as you go into austerity. I'm not kidding you. It literally will have something to do with that too. They've been doing studies to see what you're actually eating. Eventually it will go into, can we, let's just try a vegan special today and see what happens. You eat these ants, they're dry ants, but they'll be okay. Then they'll tell you, well some folk have eaten this for thousands of years. Well, that's fine for some folk, but not for the rest. That's how they push it across on you, all this rubbish, eh. So, it says here…)

But the only way this can possibly be implemented is with the complicity of restaurant and bar owners actually doing as they're told and infringing even more so on the rights of their customers to eat and drink in their establishment free of any interference in what is supposed to be a leisure activity and which keeps the owners and employees in business and paid work. Not to mention that Ireland is supposed to be (A: Well, [Alan chuckles.] it's scrawled out...) a free country (A: ...and put...) prison camp.

The only solution to this and all other criminal government mandates surrounding the Covid-19 scamdemic is for all parties involved, restauranteurs, publicans, non-corporate shopkeepers and other private businesses to completely ignore, across the board, every single law put in place to diminish the rights and freedoms of the Irish people, under the guise of stopping the spread of a common cold, and to get back to the normal they want rather than the Draconian authoritarian future being imposed upon them by their criminal and evil government.

So, there you go, you can't even have peace to eat and chomp away in private, or semiprivate, you're always getting watched of these days. They want to know what you're eating. Maybe they want to know have you enjoyed it or didn't like it. Or maybe try this, try these fried ants or something, you know and then they'll show you a little happy video so's you can look at people in other countries washing down these fried ants and appearing to like it, you know. Who knows? That's just the way it will go, folks.

Ireland is weird though, with a strange, it's kind of off-the-wall rules and regulations that they just come out with. But for a long time it's been such a socialist country, really, with the oddest people that go into socialism, the real fanatics. They're beyond normalicy with their decisions and how they look at society and people in general. You can't really...

It's, so is Scotland to me. Scotland really is almost on a par with it, with its ridiculousness. Right down to, remember too, with that GIRFEC, for every child to have a kind of guardian put out there by the state to monitor their upbringing. To make sure they have no bad ideas about other groups or peoples or something, that they just decided they don't want to like, you know, they want to rectify you before it gets to be a problem. Literally, that's what it's about. So yeah, and you're all paying for it. It's just, it's madness. It's absolute tyranny. ABSOLUTE tyranny... on the people who never even had much peace for a long time. They really haven't because of outside forces always hammering at them. So there ya go...

“Spill the Beans!” By order of Stephen Donnelly, Minister for Tyranny – “We want to know what you had for breakfast!”

Actually, eventually, you'll be lucky to get breakfast, eh? There ya go. Or maybe they'll say if you had breakfast in a pub, what time did the pub open, eh? Hm, there's a thought.

Louisville removes downtown King Louis XVI statue at Sixth and Jefferson streets - courier-journal.com / 3 Sept 2020

So they must get rid of them because they've been defaced and that by peaceful protesters. There ya go. And...

'Shoot On-Site': Chicago Gangs Form Pact To Execute Cops Who Draw Weapons On Suspects, Says FBI

zerohedge.com / 1 Sept 2020

The FBI has warned Chicago-area law enforcement (A: Is there any left there? I don’t think so, they’ve probably all been laid off, eh.) that nearly three-dozen street gangs "have formed a pact to 'shoot on-site any cop that has a weapon drawn on any subject in public'," reports ABC7.

(A: Well, there’s free… freedom to do whatever you want now, eh?)

As I said, it's astonishing looking up the clips even. I can't even get them so much on YouTube but maybe a few segments here and there. You see folk in New York City at night there just walking along the sidewalks and people driving up to them and shooting them dead. Just for the, I guess the thrill of it or whatever they get off of it. It doesn't seem to be like gang things, they're just like picking anybody that happens to be walking around. To say they've killed somebody I guess, that's the whole… I guess it's a whole thing from Xboxes and that, you're not really killing real people. They want to do the real thing so they can be a... real professional player.

Another article hear is about…

College Students Across America Are Being Subjected to a Horrid Psychological Experiment: 'Sentenced to Isolation Prisons'

humansarefree.com / 2 Sept 2020

(A: …talking about how bad it is at the colleges now. It says…)

College, long a fun and liberating experience for many young adults, has, as The Ron Paul Institute's Adam Dick details below, become a dreary and oppressive experience for many students living under the weight of a multitude of restrictions imposed at American college campuses in the name of countering coronavirus.

It's just, well, everything is.   Forget just the colleges. It's a whole new way of living. Or existing. I don't call it living anymore. You're not going to live in the system, you're going to exist in it, for a little while.

Invisible Policing: Smart Technology in Law Enforcement

smartcityexpoatlanta.com / 7 July 2020

The police killings of George Floyd, Breonna Taylor, and Rayshard Brooks have sparked outrage around the world. Thousands have protested in every U.S. state, and more than 60 countries in support of the Black Lives Matter movement against police violence. Demonstrators are demanding policy changes related to police misconduct, excessive force, and racial bias.

As cities become smarter

(A: So back into the smart cities again...)

As cities become smarter, what are the consequences for policing? More cameras, sensors, and data mean more surveillance of our communities. License plate readers pinpoint thousands of plates per second; predictive policing software estimates where future crimes could happen; and facial recognition technology can identify a single person in a crowd.

Policing Without the Police

Law enforcement agencies say these technologies streamline and enhance police work to help keep us safe.

(A: Thank goodness everything's here to keep us safe and happy and better and all that, eh? Isn't that wonderful. Don't you feel nice and fuzzy, that everything around you is there to keep you safe and happy, and for your own good. Without you having any say in the matter. It's all done for you, just take their word for it.)

But social justice activists, citizens, computer scientists, and even companies that develop surveillance tech worry about invasion of privacy and wrongful arrests.

(A: Well, the robots won't care, they'll just gun you down. And try and sue them. [Alan chuckles.])

Ruha Benjamin, associate professor of African American studies at Princeton University and author of "Race After Technology: Abolitionist Tools for the New Jim Code," says with technology, law enforcement agencies can "police without the police." She warns that calls to defund police departments could lead to more surveillance through the use of technology. (A: Well, I'm glad she's caught on to that one because that's the purpose of it folks. This article goes on and on.)

ShotSpotter has deployed its gunfire detection technology in more than 100 cities…

(A: That's been like that for a while that one I think.)

"Less than 1% of the population is responsible for two-thirds of the shootings nationally," said Sam Klepper, ShotSpotter's Senior Vice President of Marketing and Product Strategy.

There's another article somewhere too, that I've mentioned about the cameras on top of all the lampposts now and how incredibly much they are used by the authorities. It's just astonishing, folks. Just astonishing. Used all the time. Except for when they've got these guys walking around at night or driving around on motorbikes just shooting folk for the fun of it, they seem to never catch them. Isn't that the way it works?

This is an interesting one…

'I am a culture leech': African American history professor at George Washington University admits she's been pretending to be black her entire career in online confession

dailymail.co.uk / 3 Sept 2020

(A: I thought this was a joke when I read it but it's not.)

Jessica Krug revealed on Thursday in a bombshell Medium post that she has lied about being black her entire career

Krug, an African American history associate professor at George Washington University, admitted to deceiving her friends and colleagues

She said in the blog post that she is white, Jewish and was raised in Kansas City

It is reminiscent of the scandal involving Rachel Dolezal - a former NAACP leader who was exposed in 2015 as a white woman pretending to be black

It goes on and on. I tell you, some folk catch on very quickly where the wind blows. They can get good careers, you see, it might be the only careers folk can get eventually, these kind of things, unless you belong to a particular group. I really mean that. I've said that for years.

Another one too is...

Woman accused of paying schoolboy for sex unmasked as ex-government analyst

dailystar.co.uk / 4 Sept 2020

Dr Kathryn Hopkins was formerly a Ministry of Justice researcher but is now employed by HM Revenue & Customs and is currently accused of paying a schoolboy (A: He was the age of what, 11 or… No, maybe 13 or something, 14 and 15…) for sex

So there's the government woman. I guess it's okay when women do it, though, because they don't make a big fuss about it. I guess the guy couldn't pay his taxes and she was just getting it off the kid or something, who knows, I mean. There ya go.

In San Diego, ‘Smart’ Streetlights Spark Surveillance Reform

bloomberg.com / 6 Aug 2020

Camera-equipped street lamps were supposed to gather traffic data;

(A: Who's kidding who, they were supposed to gather traffic data...)

Instead, their video footage went to police. Now lawmakers are pushing back.

It's a good article about it and how they're using it constantly, all these cameras, and listening to what you say too, yada, yada, ya. And they always have these privacy commissioners saying, it's not really a good thing, you know. But they always say that, as they keep expanding them, eh.

Downing Street plans new digital ID cards for British citizens as Dominic Cummings bids to transform Government's use of data despite privacy fears - dailymail.co.uk / 1 Sept 2020

Well, if you can't fight back folks and say no, then... you've had it. Hm? They tried to get this through by the way, Digital ID, after 9/11 happened in the States. They tried to get that in Britain too at the time. But here they go. They always get what they want eventually. Get the right crisis, and you can’t get the right crisis you simply create it. That's what you're living through right now, folks.

Now, I'm not quite finished yet but remember go into @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Again, I always say this, hopefully once an hour, to remind folk, because I lose track of what I'm saying too when it comes to asking for help or donations and it is necessary that I really get them to keep going. It really is. Because believe you me, I don't have time for anything else. And I'm not selling you anything. I'll put these articles up as I've mentioned. I want to also just mention some, if I can find these links for other YouTube's here...

As I mentioned before, their PALs Auction, which they called it too, that one for the FCC and for the 5G and so on and 3.5G as well. It wraps up, raised more than $4.58 billion at the auction it says.

I mentioned this. I'm putting that one up too.

Video: Covid-Gate, The Political Virus - globalresearch.ca / 3 Sept 2020

Covid-Gate, The Political Virus - youtube.com / 29 Aug 2020

Also the one from the World Economic Forum.

Improving the state of the world - weforum.org

And the one by the doctor, this woman doctor who I think her name was Madej. Was it…? I'll put it up regardless and you'll see it. She's a good talker and puts the facts across quite openly about Covid 19 and the farce of it all too. Again, that's another one, one of many, eh?

"Human 2.0"? A Wake-Up Call To The World - youtube.com / 17 Aug 2020

And…

"Why The 'Covid Lockdowners' Are Gunning For Dr. Atlas - ronpaulforums.com / 3 Sept 2020

There's another one too, this is a new doctor, by the Ron Paul Forum. I'll put that one up as well.

Also, you actually see [Alan chuckles.] an interview with a guy, who shot the guy with a Trump hat, you know, he murdered him in cold blood. He says in an actual interview, before he was killed himself by the cops recently, that he acted in self-defense. Well, they actually show you the video and it's up there too. And no, he went up to the fella and just shot him twice in the chest, it wasn't self-defense, you know, he went looking for him.

And…

Man Pepper Sprayed And Arrested On Train For Not Wearing Face Mask - youtube.com / 3 Sept 2020

Again, the one I mentioned before. It’s awfully good to see the Spanish Dr. telling the facts on the television, as the TV folk who are trying to get him to go along with it and get angry at him. It was quite interesting to see that.

Spanish Doctor Tells Covid Facts on T.V. - youtube.com / 19 Aug 2020

Another guy on a subway I mentioned before, there’s soo much out there you could actually spend your time on YouTube, if you’ve got good speed on YouTube I guess you could just spend your whole life just watching stuff. And that’s not what I want to do. But I like to get some of them at least to show you what’s going on. And these are your police, remember. If you ever went to a different system after this, which is doubtful you’ll ever get to any, anything resembling normalicy. Fauci said it right off the bat back in February remember or even January, it will never be the same again. He knew what was coming because it was planned this way, years before, hm. This is not, Covid is the excuse for this, a big change for your entire way of living, folks, the global reset, right. So, don’t forget that for second.

And another con too, this is a beautiful con, when the media in Australia is on board…

Polls show Australian public wants a 'COVID jail' - msn.com / 25 Aug 2020

So they have these percentages with a poll, eh? Oh sure, they did. Show us the proof. Show us the people who really signed it. You know? Nonsense, absolute rubbish. And again as I say, you'll see that one pepper sprayed and arrested on a train for not wearing a facemask. That's your cops for you. The cops will never, if you ever get out of this with any, under, or come away in any different system, you must never forget what the cops have done. Never forget. And these folk must be found and fired. Actually, fine them, at the very least fine them. Even charge them for bodily harm on people and fine them too and put them in prison or something. Because you can't let them off for what they're doing.

It's the same in the military. In the military if you know it's an unlawful order, soldiers have the right, they will suffer for refusing to actually follow an order that they deem under humanitarian reasons is not lawful. Like going to just slaughter a bunch of folks that are prisoners. I mean, you could say no. And yeah, you'll suffer.

But it's the same in the police too. The police have no right to go in and just, the same police as I say that have ignored hordes of people going through streets toppling statues and attacking buildings and so on and have stood by and did nothing. While a horde of cops will turn on one person here and there. Just like the folk, as I've mentioned before, that they want to go and follow a woman and rape her, you know, they sense something about them, they're helpless or whatever, I don't know what it is. But it's the same with these cops. They're just like the gangs you're seeing jumping on old folk and so on. It's the same mentality at play here. Easy targets. Hm?

They should be utterly, utterly ashamed of themselves for what they've been doing, and what they've not been doing when they should have been doing things too. It's disgusting. But again, we're living in an utterly corrupt system. I'll put all these links again tonight.

And I hope you all hang in there. Don't give up, folks. Don't forget, it's not over yet. They haven't won.

You do have the right to say no. And you should start saying no to a lot of different things that are going on, you've got to start doing. The very least you can do is voice your opinion of things.

You've got to start doing it.

Because what's coming down the pike is a horror story. It's not going to be a way of living anymore. It will be a way of existing but not living. Because your new masters, your masters actually, they've been here for a long time and kept it may be quieter in the past. But now they’re in the open demanding you follow their strategies that they've all planned for you to follow. And as we all die off basically.

And yeah, they've got time to allow us, they don't have to kill us quickly. They can make it vaccinations, and you might see there's a very sudden increase in cancers. They'll keep that quiet too because the press are all prostitutes anyway. Utter, utter disgusting prostitutes! They really are. Disgusting!!! These people should be caught too eventually and tried for the incredible deception that they've purposely and deliberately played upon the public in collusion with the tyrants above us. Absolutely, folks.

The horror that's been inflicted is... it cannot be forgiven. No, no way.

But remember as I've said before, make sure you have a few people, not many, you don't need many. You swear and vow to help each other out no matter what happens, as times get tougher and tougher and tougher, with all the restrictions that are going to come. Because very few folk are going to get out of this just on their own, you know, or through it on their own. You need a few people.

And you've got to start finding other ways to communicate with each other. Because you're all, just like in Australia where they're watching all social media, they're watching their emails and their chitchat and their texting, and then go in to arrest them. Some of the women, I mentioned that last week, where you saw one, they came to her home and she open the garage door and she says, how did you find me anyway? Because you see, sure, they're watching all your texting and everything.

You’re in a totalitarian system that you very quickly adapted into thinking it was normal. And it was given to you for the purposes that you're seeing NOW. It was given to you from the very beginning for the reasons you're seeing now.

So start using your meatloaf, as they say, your head. It's awfully important because hell is coming down.

Back to the old demon idea, you can decide what they are for yourselves. I don't see a human as being someone as arrogant and just physically, on a humanistic level, utterly evil as they are without seeing something else in them. There's something definitely there, folks. You can decide for yourselves. They're just evil people. That's up to you.

You are seeing openly the tyrants of history all combined right now in your face. Some of them are hidden behind psychology and we're here to help you, etc. Others are just straightforward telling you you're going to do what we tell you or else. You're seeing all of it now.

But evil is. It's tangible. You can feel it.

And it's up to you to stand against it.

Evil needs your cooperation triumph.

What was it Cuomo said, the man who sent who knows how many old folk to their deaths by threatening all the aged homes to take in infected patients, therefore infecting all the rest. To get the numbers up. And the money of course, fantastic money. There's a cutthroat evil person right in front of you, right there. Right there. But what did he say afterwards when he was asked about this during some little, it wasn't even an inquiry, it was a press meeting. He says, well, don't get me wrong, he says, I can't do anything, I can't make you do anything. He says, I didn't make you and I can't make you do anything. He's right there. It's just that you all went along with it.

Hm-hm-hm. So there ya go. So stick in there. Don't give up hope, folks. And definitely there is, if there's evil, there's always another side, hm, to evil, utter evil. Of course there is.

Of course there is.

You all know that.

Obviously, they're afraid of it too. They've been trying to ban it for centuries [Alan laughing.], their opposition to it, of course they have.

Don't forget that, don't ever forget that you're never really on your own, you know.

So, take care, and I enjoy reading the emails that come in here. And floods of them. I don't get back to every single person always, but I do read them. Because this is just, there's a massive avalanche of email, and it's how I get, it's very good intelligence coming from all over the world and what people experience themselves. It's very interesting.

For myself Alan Watt from Ontario Canada, it's good night and may your God or gods go with you.

Topics of show covered in following links:

Fed Chair Powell: Wearing masks can lead to 'enormous' economic gains

finance.yahoo.com / 4 Sept 2020

Coronavirus: Pregnant Victorian woman filmed arrest news.com.au / 3 Sept 2020

‘Covid dissident’ VIOLENTLY arrested after backing Melbourne anti-lockdown protest, but tells Facebook followers not to go (VIDEO)

rt.com / 4 Sept 2020

Canada's top doctor: 'consider using a mask' during sexual activity

ctvnews.ca / 2 Sept 2020

Leslie Nielson - safe sex scene

youtube.com / 31 May 2019

Weekly Updates by Select Demographic and Geographic Characteristics

cdc.gov / 2 Sept 2020

Polls show Australian public wants a 'COVID jail'

msn.com / 25 Aug 2020 (alternate link provided)

Atlantic Council has many links to latest anti-Trump coup

worldtribune.com / 25 oct 2019

BERLIN Thousands gathering right now...to protest the end of the lockdown measures

youtube.com / 29 Aug 2020

Legendarische Speech van Robert Kennedy Jr. tijdens demonstratie Berlin 29 Augustus 2020

youtube.com / 30 Aug 2020 (alternate link provided)

PM call with Bill and Melinda Gates: 19 May 2020 gov.uk 19 May 2020

Get Ready for the Struggle Session

peggynoonan.com / 7 March 2019

COVID19 PCR Tests are Scientifically Meaningless Though the whole world relies on RT-PCR to "diagnose" Sars-Cov-2 infection, the science is clear: they are not fit for purpose

off-guardian.org / 27 June 2020

CDC: 94% of Covid-19 deaths had underlying medical conditions

nbc25news.com / 30 Aug 2020

Coronavirus: Australia extends ban on people leaving the country until December

news.sky.com / 3 Sept 2020

Your Coronavirus Test Is Positive. Maybe It Shouldn't Be.

nytimes.com / 29 Aug 2020

WEF Strategic Intelligence

weforum.org

Video: Covid-Gate, The Political Virus

globalresearch.ca / 3 Sept 2020

Covid-Gate, The Political Virus

youtube.com / 29 Aug 2020 (alternate link provided)

Making information work better so that healthcare works better.

verily.com

Auction 105: 3.5 GHz

fcc.gov

Improving the state of the world

weforum.org

Flu Vaccine Now Required for all Massachusetts School Students Enrolled in Child Care, Pre-School, K-12, and Post-Secondary Institutions

mass.gov / 19 Aug 2020

Darwin’s ‘Smart City’ Project: The Intersection of BLM, Big Data Tech and Climate Change

sydney.edu.au / 17 Aug 2020

Louisville removes downtown King Louis XVI statue at Sixth and Jefferson streets courier-journal.com / 3 Sept 2020

'Shoot On-Site': Chicago Gangs Form Pact To Execute Cops Who Draw Weapons On Suspects, Says FBI

zerohedge.com / 1 Sept 2020

College Students Across America Are Being Subjected to a Horrid Psychological Experiment: ‘Sentenced to Isolation Prisons’

humansarefree.com / 2 Sept 2020

Invisible Policing: Smart Technology in Law Enforcement

smartcityexpoatlanta.com / 7 July 2020

In San Diego, ‘Smart’ Streetlights Spark Surveillance Reform

bloomberg.com / 6 Aug 2020

Woman accused of paying schoolboy for sex unmasked as ex-government analyst

dailystar.co.uk / 4 Sept 2020

Downing Street plans new digital ID cards for British citizens as Dominic Cummings bids to transform Government's use of data despite privacy fears

dailymail.co.uk / 1 Sept 2020

“Spill the Beans!” By order of Stephen Donnelly, Minister for Tyranny – “We want to know what you had for breakfast!”

theirishsentinel.com / 4 sept 2020

'This is about making sure there aren’t rogue traders' - Health Minister defends new rules on keeping records as Data Protection chiefs say they comply with law independent.ie / 4 Ssept 2020

Dozens of arrests as Melbourne's anti-lockdown protest turns violent with more than 1,000 angry locals defying attempt to cancel event - while demonstrators gather in huge numbers in Byron Bay

dailymail.co.uk / 4 Sept 2020

Pregnant Aussie Mother Arrested for Allegedly Inciting Coronavirus Lockdown Protest

youtube.com / 2 Sept 2020

Pregnant Australian woman arrested in her pyjamas for creating Facebook event to protest lockdown

telegraph.co.uk / 3 Sept 2020

Man Pepper Sprayed And Arrested On Train For Not Wearing Face Mask

youtube.com / 3 Sept 2020

Coronavirus: Investigation launched over anti-mask arrest

youtube.com / 11 Aug 2020

&quot;Human 2.0&quot;? A Wake-Up Call To The World

youtube.com / 17 Aug 2020

Spanish Doctor Tells Covid Facts on T.V.

youtube.com / 19 Aug 2020 (link broken)

&quot;Why The 'Covid Lockdowners' Are Gunning For Dr. Atlas

ronpaulforums.com / 3 Sept 2020

Forum-led G20 Smart Cities Alliance will create the first global framework for smart city governance

weforum.org / 15 Nov 2020

Sep 13, 2020 "Cutting Through the Matrix" with Alan Watt (Blurb, i.e. Educational Talk): "Government Dares to Care

Hi folks I'm Alan Watt and this is Cutting Through the Matrix on September 13, 2020. Now before I get started and I forget of course as time goes on since they're long talks, just remind you to go to cuttingthroughthematrix.com and find out how to send me a few bucks my way, and that will keep me going hopefully. Because as I say, this is full-time, full-time really. There's not much time to do anything else when you really investigated all the stuff that's going on. I have to remind people because they get lost in the talks as well, as I do [Alan chuckles.] because they're long, and people forget by the end of it to send me a few bucks. Remember, I'm still here because of you and if you want to get the information just feed me a few dollars here and there @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Thank you.

As always, I hope you're all hanging in there during our trials and tribulations that are pretty well endless, aren't they? Of course, a lot of them are manufactured by the powers that be, especially in this day and age. Because big changes have to happen really rapidly to get a massive agenda, a well-publicized and published agenda that took them years to work on. And who's they? Well, you know who a lot of them are, the guys who implement them, the front people who talk on behalf of them, all the different organizations that work with United Nations, with the Council on Foreign Relations, Royal Institute of International Affairs, and the Asian-Pacific partnership group too, which is also part of the same group as Britain and everywhere else. Because they have names for different areas in different parts of the world but it's all the same one group, a very old group. They also work circles within circles as I've mentioned before.

Quigley talked about that too, that certain ones that are high profile can mix with the other circles, you see. That way you can really keep information to the minimum spread amongst the public by having particular circles to begin with, and then people who are involved with maybe two or three of the circles of groups, keep it pretty well mum so only their own circle knows what they're intended to know, it's intended that they know, and nothing else. That's how it really works.

We also, again, it's a different reality, completely different reality and the more you get into, say, anthropology, anthropology was hijacked a long time ago. It was actually started up by those that wanted to prove eugenics worked, you see. They sent people across the whole planet to measure folk's skulls and their bodies and study them. They'd go into little tribes and they'd watch what they did here and there and all the rest of it. But the whole idea, they even use them to, and I've mentioned that years ago when the US and Britain went into Iraq. They actually softened up the people to an extent by using anthropologists they sent in before, and with the Army later, to guide the Army on how to terrorize the public. Because each culture has particular terrors, you know, so they knew what they do to torture them, the things that are really, really taboo that would frighten them. They used them in Iraq of course and you saw a lot of that coming out from the prison camps that they had there. So yeah, these were all, they were helped by, again professional people who are awfully good at earning lots of money and working against the general population and the welfare of the planet. That's the problem with it across the board, isn't it?

We're going through an agenda as I say that has to be completed, a good part of it has to be completed this century, and preferably in the first half of the century, that they're working on right now. So all, what you've been softened up with for about, oh, 50, 60, 70 years for environmentalism and all of that and too many of the populations of the world existing, population reduction, it's all to be really worked out to a really workable program of managing the population as it dwindles and dwindles and dwindles by design up to about the year 2050, and then into the next phase thereon.

The elite have us almost farmed, I've always said this, like Charles Fort, he said it too. Because we're bred up when they need big amounts of people for wars, major wars. And these weren't just wars of countries saber rattling against other countries. These wars had other intentions. You'll never get the real truth to do with any war ever, EVER. Like the CIA as an example, the people who worship things like the movies and the CIA or MI6 in it, they have no idea of what real intelligent services are about. The people who work and who are operating in the different countries often don't know themselves. That’s how tight and compartmentalized everything is in the reality of the system that runs the world.

If soldiers really knew why they'd been used for the last hundred years, there wouldn't be a World War I or II, there's no way it would've happened because the people had no idea of the real intentions of it. But people above them certainly did. And very private secretive organizations, or semi-secretive organizations certainly knew by incredible archives of information of the study of populations across the world even then, they knew exactly where they could take the world.

Then you have a gangster operation working amongst them too that controls the money supply of the planet, that believe that they literally have the right to rule it. It's quite amazing. That was touched on this week with other groups and newscasters and so on and the Mega group of course. Epstein was on a lower level with that too, but the guys above him that I mentioned certainly are all part of it. They also work with the World Bank, if not directly own it. That's power for you, amazing power. And they've always been into population reduction for those who don't quite get it.

They are the biggest white-collar criminals on the planet. But for themselves, they don't believe they're criminals. They have the right to do what they're doing. It's always for a good cause, you understand. That's how things are done in this day and age, lying to the public, the noble lie. As the PNAC group also used it, telling the people a noble lie, you know, it was worth it, it had to be done, for the good of all, you understand.

With the Covid idea that they hit on eventually, and obviously worked out for quite a few years, we definitely have all the evidence of it working up to the present day, that was sitting waiting to be used. Because the last climate change accord kind of fell flat. They admitted they didn't have the public support to implement the same agenda that Covid's bringing across here and fulfilling for them. They said they'd have to do more drastic things to make the people do, basically conform and do what they were told, hhhch, and stop consuming. A postconsumer society. Where you live to buy and purchase and consume, that had to be done away with. Well, welcome to Covid. And that's the whole thing.

It's interesting, just this weekend I was thinking about it because I was asked to go on different shows leading up to 9/11, the anniversary again. And I honestly didn't have time, I had so much to do here. And it's been raining here like floodgates opened. This is what they do generally, they bring the water up through San Francisco, they bypass a good part of California, they kind of divert the water in the air and up in the Jetstream, right up across the Great Lakes to where I am and we get downpours here but you get nothing down in San Francisco or California or the West Coast. That's been done before. It's always had a few of us scratching our heads how it can be done so easily and efficiently. But is anything really impossible in this day and age? Especially when they go public in their geo-engineering reports of what they could do if they ever wanted to do it, and they admit all the stuff, IF they ever wanted to use it, right. And they call you a conspiracy theorist if you actually quote their publications where they, again say that they know it works IF they wanted to do it, right.

You're living through amazing times with science at the top. Science is the big magician of course that, the closest thing as Arthur C Clarke once said, he said that to primitive people... Now, you're primitive, whether you know it or not. You understand, they say that you are primitive. You say, well that's not true, my great-grandparents might've been more primitive than me because they didn't have electricity and blah blah blah. No, no, no, it's all to do with reality.

Bertrand Russell said, as I've mentioned in many talks before in his Impact of Science on Society and other books on science, he says eventually the elites with particular specialized authorized breeding programs, which they've been into for an awful long time, will become a separate species from the rest of the population. Their children, you see, would be raised in reality of who runs the world, why they run it this way, what wars are for, what was meant to be accomplished, and how you must always lie to the public, and even train the public to be naïve to believe the system that you have given them is all real. This is all admitted to. You're living through the greatest examples of it that's ever existed. It's just right out in your face now.

Again, back to 9/11 too, I didn't have time to go on these shows and it's a shame. Because I went through 9/11, the whole period of it watching intensely and studying it and so on. I knew before it was going to happen that something was going to happen. A lot of us did. Because, again, in Canada, Canada passed an Omnibus crime Bill which the journalists at the time were amazed with it. And at that time the journalists could actually say the occasional truth to the public. They said what is this, this omnibus crime bill that Allan Rock had pushed through single-handedly. It was a complete terrorist bill, you know, war on terrorism and domestic imprisonment without trial etc. under different charges. And that's what they said at the time, this is what it is, under the guise of an omnibus, just an omnibus crime bill.

At that time most folk are saying, well nothing much is happening, Canada was fairly laid-back at the time, what's this got to do with us? Well, you know, three years later they hit the towers, eh, and it all came into place. I mentioned before about the same time as that Bill came through, they brought out the black uniforms for the cops to look like storm troopers, you know, dress them like military storm troopers. And across the world at the same time. This is all planned. You’re living through an agenda.

Again, the PNAC group, the Project for New American Century group that the Bushes belong to, both Bushes, and really deeply too with their business ties and so on. They came out with the list of countries they wanted to be taken out. Then when Bush Junior got into office then bingo, they got their little wish, the Pearl Harbor event they said they would need to get the American public on board and give them support for a war across the world. Mainly across the Middle East and Asia. And even into the Med eventually by the way. Quite a list that they published. And they've accomplished quite a lot of it.

So you're living through amazing agendas with the richest folk in the world behind it. I really think that most folk today in any capacity at all of authority over the public on a high level are all on the payroll, you know, from the same group, and dedicated to serving it. You see it with lots of them in the US military. I'm sure every other military is the same. They grease their palms and they're brought in and elevated up into other areas of prosperity and so on. And they're willing. They go along with it all because this is the culture that we’re in today. It doesn't have a unified culture of belonging to a nation anymore. Except for the general population, what's left of it, that, they're generally confused themselves… well what is our country now?

That's all intentional because you've been under attack for a long, long time, psychologically, and you don't even know it. The children today are in the streets rioting because they've been trained to hate you, by the teachers. And the teachers are all on board with it because they get their palms greased too at the top. It's the same with university professors. The professors who are out there by the way in the streets advocating... murder basically, it's known who they all are. This is not accidental. You'll see the leaders of them, it's mainly white kids coming out. Some of them aren't just kids. Some of them are in their 20s, up to 30.

You've got, some of them are mercenaries. Some of them have been over storming Syria for quite a few years. The really older ones have been mercenaries when they were attacking Iraq and then up into Libya. Intelligence agencies paying, or organizing, it's the same... You saw them going through the Middle East and into Asia and into Syria. And they've been burning cities. Same strategies. Taking down religious monuments and destroying them. And destroying churches. Same thing. This isn't accidental. For those who don't quite get it.

You're meant to be focused on your immediate surroundings to stop seeing the big picture. And it is a big picture because it's well-financed. It's planned by a world authority. A cabal that has ruled the world for an awful long time. A cabal that boasts about bringing through world wars to make it all happen step-by-step. Many of them are known. Even those ones I'm sure, there's higher ones above them. Because the ones that you know are known, are still workers to an extent, they're worker bees. The ones at the top don't do work, they just suggest here and there, and big panels and committees just jump into action to make-it-so as they say. That's how the world's been run for a long time.

But, we live in such a corrupt system that the neuroscientists, the psychologists, everybody's on board with this, of manipulating the public's mentality, physically in many, many different ways. Right down to, the art of creating your opinions is such a precise perfected art. It's very efficient and very quick and simple now the way it's put across. I might touch on some of that tonight if there's time.

But there's no doubt, by the way, [Alan chuckles.] I was looking at a documentary that someone sent me on a driver. Because, by the way, I get really hammered by my, they go for your servers now. If you speak out against Covid your server will throttle you until you have no speed at all and that's what I've got with my satellite service here. Even though they're taking money from the government as well by the way, and I'm paying through the nose for it too, they're throttling me. The only time I get any speed at all is the middle of the night for maybe two or three hours and that's it. This is all deliberate. And it's all done with plausible deniability, well, it could be your equipment. No, I've been through all of that for years with them before and I've gone around all the circles and spent hours and hours and hours on the phone just wasting my time. This is what they do. But right now the pressure is REALLY on because I mean dial-up speed would be a bit faster actually than what I'm getting for satellite, $110, $120 a month.

That's what they do folks. You're not living in a decent and aboveboard world. It's a disgusting system that we live under. The same system that does the dirty tricks like that, in other countries they just kill people. I hope you understand. The same groups, right. That's what really happens. And your own countries at the moment, they've got to play it, they don't want everybody really, really, they don't want the rioters eventually seeing the real people they should be targeting. They must keep you just doing the communist burning and torturing crusade right now.

Because that's part of the communist manifesto, that's their techniques, is burn. Whenever you see burn and the clenched fist, it's the same group. Meant, that's for the followers. But the ones, as I say, that lead them all, they've been across doing the same thing working with the different rioters in other countries and going through Syria burning down villages and killing people and all the rest of it. They have. The same, the same leaders, they're well versed on what they're doing, and they travel from country to country to where they’re told to go. They've been doing this since the globalization meetings back in the 90s and onwards. Same groups.

So yeah, nothing is happenstance. The followers never really know what they're about. Youngsters literally think they're on some kind of crusade to change the world by burning everything down. What Dumbos, eh? Hm? What are they going to live in down the road if there's nothing left? And then the elite who really want all this to happen, and are directing it and funding the leaders... And by the way, the leaders even have pension plans for them. Hm. Do the followers? No. [Alan chuckles.] They don't even think about that. But the leaders have pension plans put out by the big foundations. They won't be touched of course. The leaders won't be touched. If they start going for the leaders, the real leaders hm, that aren't even in the streets, I'm talking about at that level of leadership, the ones who are in the pension plans and who are mercenaries and working with intelligence, it would all fall apart so they'll leave them alone. But the followers, they'll get picked up and charged for different things. It's already happening in fact.

This is what you do, you let them loose in the streets when you want to shakeup and terrify the public, in preparation for them to just stand down and give up. It's all psychological warfare, you see. It's the same technique they've done since the 1800s to the present day, you know. You saw it across mainly Russia and what became the Russian bloc countries. The same techniques used then. Exactly actually.

Getting back to where we are today with the postconsumer society, and all the… The World Wildlife Fund, the Sierra Club, all the different groups that Prince Philip was the titular head of, and who attended a lot of the meetings mind you, and was quite vocal about it, the whole idea is to cull down the populations of humans in the world. The same as I said before with the big group at the top, that Mega group, who are behind the funding and the real big, big Mafia. I think Whitney Webb touched on that too to an extent, and some evangelist well, or Christian organizations who followed it. Never knock the Christian organizations because they've been watching this for years, a lot of them. And the ones that are left, who are not on the payroll now, are up on a lot of the things that have been happening in this world. So don't knock it. Most folk who get lulled to sleep or given good excuses that they fall for, and it puts them off the scent. But you can actually follow the trace of it for many, many years what's been going on.

Getting back to what I said already, 9/11 was the start of the big push for it. It was a massive symbolic gesture. MASSIVE, you know. It was meant to shock the world. And it did. The way it was, you had mind bombing and psychic overdrive basically, psychic driving they call it with the MK ultra idea, where you see the same towers going over. Every, every minute it's going down, down, down, down, planes hitting, down, down, down. That went on for quite a few days on different stations. That's pure psychic driving, imprinting in the brains the actual EVENT, to overwhelm any rational thinking of who really could have done this. That was the point of it.

It's quite extraordinary too because at the time after, maybe the same week, I did a talk that night. But in the same week I did another talk when it came out from, I think it was Canada. One of the news companies in Canada, when they had little bit of honesty back then, a little bit, not much, but they did mention, they could give you a bit of honesty when there's another country involved, and it wasn't them. But they did admit that George Bush Senior was in New York at that time meeting with the heads of the bin Laden family on a business deal. Because you see, their business, one of their businesses, apart from the oilfields that they had in Kuwait and so on. But one of their businesses was literally creating indestructible bombproof towers. [Alan chuckles.] That's a fact folks. [Alan chuckles.] And they had been given the contract to repair this towers in the 90s when they tried the bombing starting with the basements back then. I often wondered after, I thought, did those guys get the contracts go all through the systems there of air-conditioning and so on and different ducting all up, right to the very top, and plant anything? for the future perhaps? Hm.

I mean there's speculation but you... There's no doubt about it, the folk who watched those towers going down floor by floor, boom, boom, boom, boom, it was perfect detonation, you know, and demolition, perfect, military detonations, floor by floor. Then they fell into their own footprint, that doesn't happen the way that they… Nobody believes it today. Most folk never believed it even then.

But again, the psychic driving left its imprint in everybody's brains, and it gave them the justification for the preplanned wars that I mentioned. The PNAC group had the list of countries, in the 90s, drawn up that they wanted to invade, and they needed a pretext for it. They actually said, we need a Pearl Harbor event. Well, they got it with 9/11. Then they went to town. Bang, bang, bang, bang, bang.

I won't go into all the, it's like Covid, you see. You can hash all the facts of Covid, the truths and the lies, not just the untruths but real outright lies [Alan chuckles.] about it. It's meant to confuse people and get you so sick of talking about it that you give up eventually and just go along with it. That's what happened with 9/11. It's psychological techniques they use in psychological warfare, and with 9/11, everybody saw what happens. You had the different dancing folk on, and it was well-documented by the way, in other countries as well, who were there to watch the event of the towers getting hit. They were let go out of the country to their own country afterwards, and all these things were happening, and caught with explosives in the van and things like that, blah blah blah. A lot of dirty stuff was going on. The CIA came in and the FBI came in and just basically told the government want to do and say to the public. It's just disgusting what happened.

Even today, nevermind all the arguments about what caused it and what did it and blah, blah, blah. In Canada, they showed us a list of the people who were supposedly on the planes as terrorists, and then they showed, even had interviews with some of them across there in Saudi Arabia and different, who are still alive and driving taxis and things. But their photographs have been used supposedly by the CIA to say that these were the guys on the planes. It was amazing what was going on. Really. These were verifiable, you know, things, like factual things. But they don't like facts when it comes to distortions, so they try to muddy the waters. Then they bring in other people who come out with all kinds of theories that make it even more bizarre, and that ends up discrediting…

You see, counterintelligence, I've mentioned this before. If you stick with intelligence facts, you see, hard slogging to get facts together, you get people who come out who immediately are elevated by mainstream into the limelight as some kind of leader, that might, they don't call them a crackpot but still give them, you know, they'll say they're pretty eccentric perhaps. But they get unlimited financing, books will just drop out of the sky to them basically every month, and the publishers will have no problem publishing. It's big money that. And all they've done is taken all the information from other books and talks folk have given who've done the real hard work, shove it in the books, like with ghostwriters, and then add in ridiculous things, absolutely ridiculous. So the general public will hear about these characters, with the added ridiculous things to do with these events, and if you mention it down the road again, even if you're one of the founders of information, you'll get lumped in with the other one that's well known now because they've got so much publicity. That's called counterintelligence. It works awfully well to discredit the real factual real hard workers that dig it all up. That's a fact. It happens all the time, it's guaranteed. It's always been that way.

That goes way back to even Aleister Crowley, you know. Aleister Crowley had ties to intelligence service. Intelligence services are incredibly interested in psychology and behaviorism. The intelligence, CIA funded all the Guru organizations of the 60s and 70s and brought them over to California and places like that. And studied it, all the youngsters throwing themselves and bowing to these folk as Gods, because that's what a guru is, you see. And studying them. It was amazing.

It was even the same thing with the Jonestown idea too. CIA guys were all over that place, that organization, studying, studying, studying what you can, how you can make people do things they shouldn't possibly ever do, big crowds of them. All of that has been admitted now. You had the same thing too with Charles Manson. The FBI were all over the place, the place he lived before, his camps, and with cameras, and folk going in and out to record and so on and stuff, and even do videos and so on. This is all recorded. Amazing stuff really. Ronald Reagan, when he was the governor of California, gave Manson the right you go into some of the old folks' homes. And they may have given the same thing to Jim Jones too. Because he said, they could give them, they had really good positive reactions on the old folks in the homes and so on, this is what they said.

You have no idea of the behavioristic psychology experiments that go on, on the public all the time. Always funded from the top. Always. So never toss that out of your head. But Aleister Crowley I mean, he was actually accused at the end of, what was it, World War I or II, because he was, went... But he definitely was like the Lord Haw Haw type at one time for the Germans at one point and got away with it. Well, you can't get away with something like that unless you're, definitely belong to the Secret Service. No doubt about it.

Hhhch, and they do it, sexuality is a big, big part of controlling people, the so-called freedom of sex. You bring, you make folk slaves through it all. Then they're blackmailable slaves especially. You give lots of drugs along with it too, like Crowley did. He also partook of them. And you've got an awful lot of information on different people, a lot of dark matter you might say, you've got on people's characters and it wields a lot of power for folk who have a public image, you know. That's what Epstein was into too.

Once again, you've got to stop thinking about what you believe Britain was back then, or any country was back then in Aleister Crowley's day. Because in that day as well it was run by a different group altogether from the ones that you saw as Prime Minister's and so on. Benjamin Disraeli said it in the 1800s, you know, even in his book, his novel that he put out there. He said, the people who really rule are vastly different, the people behind the curtains are vastly different from the people that you see publicly as rulers. That's how it really is. That's how people will really push it out of their heads, that's ridiculous, that's incredulous, we know what Britain was, and we know… Really?! Really?

[Alan chuckles.] The folk haven't got a clue what Britain really was, who really ruled it, never mind the fact they had no idea how the money system was even managed. You had people who were shellshocked with countless endless wars. Where you had endless cannon fodder from the poorer classes who join the military. Always with the good cause, oh, off to war for a good cause. Because they give you simplistic reasons why you're going to fight. The simplest is just that they're bad people over yonder, like Bush Junior did with Saddam Hussein, and it's good enough. Most folk will believe this. Well, why would your government lie to you? [Alan chuckles.] That's what you think, eh?

But no, it's disgusting what's been... Look at Tony Blair, eh, after 9/11 as well. He was a one-man band, along with actually three or four of his cronies by the way, who had more in common than you think, who also wanted the same war. It made no sense to the British people, why would you go off to get rid of Saddam Hussein? And, of course it came out years later and I remember putting the articles up on a show I did, where Blair admitted, years later of course - because they love to boast about it, psychopaths, they really do - how he got the top of the oil companies in, the CEOs, and they divvied up the map of Iraq, the different oilfields that the Americans would leave for Britain. They divvied them up and decided who was going to get them, but this was before it happened. That's the real world.

That's the real world. Then Bush Junior, because they took out Iraq that was on the list, and Iraq had nothing to the US. Bush Junior during the inquiry, you can see it probably still today if it's still up there, he said, well no, I never said that Saddam Hussein had anything to do with 9/11. Which it was a lie because the media was constantly trying to infer that, after Afghanistan, well, it was probably Saddam. But he says, no, I never said that he had anything to do with it, he was just a bad man and the world is better off without him. So that's your justification for killing about a million people? A bad man, get rid of the bad man? Saddam Hussein didn't kill that many. [Alan chuckles.] But truth doesn't matter. Facts don't matter, right, when there's big agendas there.

But you really are living in an amazing system of incredible trained deception, where it's, today at least you have the Internet. But even then, you're overloaded with such data. Psychological operations admits, I used to give the talks out years ago on the releases that they had for their internal releases for psyops, how they would overwhelm the public with all kinds of information, disinformation, close information as well. Again, like psyops and counterintelligence, it will be close to the stuff that's original fact-finding, mix it together with a bit of bizarre ridiculousness or aliens or something, and then it’s tossed out the window, you see, as folk go oh it's just that nutcase stuff. That's what psychological warfare, or counterintelligence consists of. It's very simple. And it works awfully well though. M-hm.

That happened with 9/11, and before you knew you it, you had rays coming down from heaven doing it all and so on. Rather than just stick to the basic facts, the facts are, who? Who achieved goals through this? Who talked about it before it happened? Who was in power at the time who belong to the same group that talked about it before it happened, right, from the 90s? And bingo, they achieve their goals because of it. Isn't that an awful… These guys would be great if you took them to a casino, you know, just watch what they do and bet on what they bet on, they're guaranteed to win, you see.

Then when you saw all the stuff on 9/11 with the standdown orders, because it was a practice that day in case the towers were attacked, a practice about the towers getting attacked. What an amazing coincidence, eh! I won't go over it all because again it's ad nauseam. Folk can't believe there's that many facts involved. But the facts are documented, and yeah, Cheney and Wolfowitz and all the rest of them, Wolfowitz and you had Rumsfeld all in charge. In charge mind you, they put themselves in charge, over the military and the Air Force and so on, that day, and they told them to stand down when there was reported incoming aircraft, you know. You can't make this stuff up. It's all documented. It's not make-believe, today.

But again, facts don't matter once you've got the whole thing going, the war started, it doesn't matter. The whole point is to get the folk in shock, give them a simple lame excuse full of holes, and once you get the military over there and you're fighting, you see, it doesn't matter how you got them in there because now you've got a bigger agenda to fulfill. Remember what Carroll Quigley said, wars are also meant to change opposing sides, all those who are involved in war from different sides will be changed culturally forever because of them.

Well, it's the same thing on the public, the general public have had the biggest changes of all. They've lost their rights of privacy. Completely. There's nothing you can do now that's going to be private and has been since 9/11 since you passed all those rules and regulations. You really have amazing coincidences, don't you? Amazing coincidences. They unroll all the plans that they had ready to implement in the so-called Patriot Act, where anybody, any politician who complained about it in Congress and elsewhere were going to be declared a traitor to the country for going against it, and just not automatically agreeing with it, where the citizenry would lose all their rights and privacy.

This is the second part with Covid, you see, this is the real intensification of that. They haven't given you another 9/11. I suppose, I'm sure, I'm sure something like that has been planned, or had been planned too, in case, but they came up with the Covid instead. Once they brought in all the different behaviorists on board, oh, let's use psychology and terror tactics on the public to achieve the same goals. Well, what, how do we do that? Well, disease, you know, the threat of being wiped out by unseen enemies, a disease. It's even better in a sense. It really is. Because most folk believe what they're told. They can't believe they're getting lied to.

And just like 9/11 all the disinfo folk come in afterwards, until you've got soo much information of all kinds, most folk eventually will collapse with it. That's part of the intention. Some of the psyops manuals talked about it with 9/11, how you'd have to bring out different people with different points of view and different, until the folk would crumble with all the different answers that were out there and give up and switch off and just go along with the authorized statement on how it all happened, you see. That's what happens. That's where Covid is going as well. I guarantee you. You wait and see. ...and have overload of data, they actually said that we can overload the people with data, all their social platforms until they just give up as well. Have them all fighting with each other… oh no, no, this particular virus does blah blah blah and so-and-so said it does blah blah blah.

You get them all arguing with each other, you see, never knowing that a good part of the time you've got like people, you got the 77th Brigade cy-ops, cyber operatives on the Internet, paid literally like a battalion [Alan chuckles.] of cyber warriors, eh, who are out there all the time. Thousands of them actually. I gave the articles out a few months back, and even a few years ago too, about the group that were involved in attacking anybody on the Internet, using all kinds of tricks, bots and real people attacking you in cyberspace, just twisting your time until it ruins you. Don't answer anything. I don't even bother with that kind of stuff like Twitter and all that kind of stuff because it's pointless. They admit that they bombard folk until the folk are driven crazy thinking it's all real and real people and maybe there's something wrong with me. They'll pick a chink in your armor and get in there and then they'll destroy you. That's the technique. This is happening, folks.

With the Covid warriors who are out there now, paid for by your tax money, right down to the Event 201 and so on, they went through this during their exercises, how they would attack people who would disagree with the coming disease pandemic, right, the COMING one, [Alan chuckles.] they just knew. And different stages, 1 to 5 I think it was, of implementation. The first was just to try to counter them with people who would, and who would appear to be against them, until you would just change your mind, oh maybe they can't ALL be wrong, so you change your mind. That didn't work, you go to the next step. Then the third step, you start fining people for putting out disinformation. The fourth step, censoring them off the Internet. That's where we are right now, you know. They also did, basically imprisoning them, in the next step down there. That's what it is. You see, in prison it's too fascistic you see, especially right now, they don't want to be so overt about it. But you're going into the same system as North Korea. You know? The countries that they always show you that you're better than them, look, oh, we have freedoms. No, we don't have freedom, we're losing them all. We've been losing them all since 9/11.

And NOW you really are losing them all because now the police are going crazy in some countries. You know that. And the police in every country will be the same way when it gets started. Especially when they've, it's the same people, kids who are, the people who are cops now are like the same ones that are on the streets burning places, the same generation. The ones who are cops are the same ones, and didn’t go in the military, a lot of them have been in the military, and as I say, from Xbox to the military, that was all intentional too. Xbox was put out BY the military.

Years ago, the companies that did the programs for all these different video games for the children for war and so on, were actually part of the military-industrial complex from DARPA and so on. They worked with the Japanese and funded them too. All well documented stuff. Not conspiracy stuff. It was documented and admitted to, programs that were designed to desensitize troops from killing people. Because people don't normally kill folk. Unless you're a nutcase, you know. But people, so decent folk, and most folk go into the military are generally the working-class people, most of them, and decent people. They found that going back to the Civil War, studies... It shows you how we're studied through everything, eh?! But the Civil War, American Civil War they found out that maybe for every person who actually shot enemy troops, actually shot to kill, maybe 15 to even 30 you know, alongside them, who wouldn't, they would fire in the air a little bit higher or whatever. It's not natural to just shoot, especially when you don't know them. You know? I mean they've done nothing to you generally. So from then on, they've had all these different techniques being instilled in troops to make them more deadly and efficient because their job is to kill people.

So they came out with these Pavlovian techniques of just instinctive shooting, to kill, and videogames have been the most successful of them all. They admit that, through all the studies, they're VERY successful. Because the children don't see the characters as real living humans, but close enough so that if they're given a gun in their hands they will shoot the same way, you see, AT the person, instinctively.

There's nothing out there that happened by chance. Nothing at all. So they become the military, or they become the police. That's why you're getting such itchy fingers now with the cops, you know. In some places in the US you can't, you can't fault a lot of them because I think anybody would be nervous going into some of the neighborhoods today with the incredible drugs and problems. Again, it's all intentional. Hm?

Put it this way eh, [Alan chuckles.] think about it, and some of the articles I'll touch tonight to do with your contact tracing programs and apps and all that, they're showing you already that they know who everybody out there is. They already know every opinion you have in your life about anything and everything at all. Everything. There's nothing about you they don't know, who your pals are, what you talk about, what you chat about. It's all, they don't waste money on you, it's all done with algorithms, daily, and certain ones or programs are set for you. We're all on them.

So yeah, you think about it, you have no privacy. They know your very thoughts. They know how you will behave in certain situations according to the Pentagon. No doubt the FBI gets the same stuff sent their way as well. If they could set you up for anything, they'll know exactly, by using a virtual you, based on you and your behavior, how you would react in real life to most things. And it's pretty well 100% in most cases.

This is freedom? This is freedom, eh?

So, do you really think with all that data and information, the same people couldn't have stopped the war on drugs, just like stop the drugs [Alan chuckles.] if they wanted to? There's more drugs flooding into the country than ever before. But again, we've had the exposés before as well on the drugs, well documented of who was behind it. Again you had the big, the same big organizations, what you call your intelligence agencies behind it. Part of the same big cabal again that works with other cabals in other countries. Personally I think it's just one big intelligence service now. Again, you have the Mega group as well who deal with all the different money systems across the world.

That's the real world you live in. But yeah, they couldn't stop that? But they now, if you are going to do something tomorrow that they don't want, they could stop you instantly, before you’re out of the house, you know. [Alan chuckles.] They come and arrive too; we understand you're going to see so-and-so today and to do something. Well, how on earth would you know that? Well, we predicted it. Minority Report, eh, they nip in the bud before it happens. Unless they want it to happen. Maybe, they might even have subconsciously, you know, through other techniques, suggested it to you, you didn't even know, you don't even know that, whatever it is you're going to do. That's how perfect things are today.

Going back to near the beginning of my talk, I mentioned that someone had sent me a driver with some experiments just that were done and shown on I think maybe the BBC in England or something. It was to do with electromagnetic energy being applied to people's heads, you know. You can touch the head and you don't have to touch the head actually with it. We've already heard about the Corban Helmet and of course the Persinger, Professor Persinger, I've talked about him over the years on and off. He was right into this kind of stuff on a bigger scale. Whatever they show you, they’re way ahead of it in the military applications of these things.

On the basic show on television the idea was to show you how good this equipment could be for altering certain problems, like perhaps neurological problems in the brain, or even forms of epilepsy. That was the idea behind it at this low-level expose that’s showing it to be wonderful, you see. The guy, the interviewer gave himself as a guinea pig to the people who had the little gizmo, the little gadget. It wasn't very big machinery, you know, compact micro machinery of equipment, electronics. They put it near his head, this little thing and they showed, you literally hear it zapping. It doesn't have to; you wouldn't even generally hear these things at all if they don't want you to hear anything. But you could hear it click, click, clicking. So, he was asked to repeat a nursery rhyme, Mary had a Little Lamb. He was doing well and then you hear it going click, click, click, click, click, and then you’d see his eyes kind of blink as this thing affected the nerves around his eyes as an example. But in his brain, he just stopped dead, it throws you off your way of thinking.

Well, the deeper application I’ve found from the military side of things, and there's lots of information out there, you know, on this applications of electromagnetic energy TO disrupt the patterns of thoughts amongst people. I remember years ago when the HAARP idea was going on. Of course, it was a massive project in Alaska at the time. They had arrays and arrays for creating standing waves from the ground up to the ionosphere. The Air Force I think ran it, the U.S. Air Force at the time. They even put out documentaries in Canada trying to make it almost comical, like, let's go up and talk to the cleaning lady, who just says, there's nothing much going on here and oh-uh, this kind of stuff.

But they did do an interview with a guy who was a public relations, [Alan chuckles.] propaganda right, expert for the military. He was dressed in a suit, so he was like an approachable guy and oh no, he says, there's nothing, nothing terrible about what we're doing here, it's just experimentation. So they spend multimillions, maybe billions on this big array, this complex on a few acres of ground where they could create incredible standing waves that could, they could give you the northern lights if they want to because it hits the ionosphere. But they can also use this to superheat parts of the atmosphere, as a weapon, if they want to. But on a secondary carrier wave they can actually interfere with the human thinking. This has all been documented, this information. That's part of it too.

It's thought that they used this technology when they first went into Iraq, or they bombarded Iraqis with it during operation Desert Storm when you saw all these Iraqis coming out of their dug in trenches utterly dazed as could be. This was in the newspapers at the time, you know, when they were allowed to talk about things like that. Newspapers have always lied to you but occasionally they'd let you know a little bit when it was in another country, you know. So, you saw these folk coming out of the trenches, and they had little clips on TV years ago, just utterly confused and dazed, but they hadn't been under intense physical bombardment, you know. But they were definitely confused, and they couldn’t understand basic, even, you know, the interpreters there, speaking their own language though, they couldn't understand for a while, they were VERY confused.

This was thought to be HAARP, the standing waves they'd been testing out then. They did the same thing again with Operation Iraqi Freedom eh, [Alan chuckles.] to give them democracy. Like we've got it here, eh? So anyway, that's when they used these technologies in warfare, that's when it was an open field then because no one's going to pooh-pooh it or say you shouldn't be using that on people, when they're designated as an enemy, oh, and oh, the propaganda's in full force though. They were doing that kind of thing back then.

So anyway, you take it from there and you say, this is too fantastic for me, I'll switch off now. Go back to Brzezinski’s book, most folk don't read now, eh? Zbigniew Brzezinski in the 1970s in his own book, Between Two Ages, in The Technotronic Era chapter, he says, we can now if we want to bathe a whole continent in particular frequencies that will alter the behavior of every person in that area, you know, or the whole country. Well, take that back to where you are now with the standing waves. And you don't need Alaska for it, they've got portable ones all over the place. They've got an array of them by the way, when you look into the HAARP projects, they had an array of them. It's built up in different universities across the US now. They can actually get together on certain nights and beam the standing waves up collectively, meeting in certain parts of the sky, because of the standing waves, and also bouncing off the ionosphere, and they can just like a mirror, they can actually direct it to where they want it to come down and HIT. They even use this technology now to see under the ground for hideouts and dugouts, and even using it for pipelines and things. It's amazing what they can do with it. But again, don't forget there's a whole wide frequency range involved there, and part of it can be set quite easily, and they've tried it, within the human brain wave patterns.

So, getting back to this little demonstration of the wonderful little portable thing that they had, it was meant to help people in medicine, this is what they said. Yeah, they can make you completely lose your pattern of thinking. That was again, it tied right in with something I'd already watched before about a technique, a technology which they said that they already had too. They tested it out after 9/11 and the idea once again was to try to figure out what folk were thinking. They said if they could just, don't forget that every thought that you have is, goes into electricity and it's transmitted to different parts of the brain. Very fast, you know. That's where you get your, that's how you can use your muscles of your mouth and all the rest of it to vocalize what you're thinking, etc. But also, and you've already seen exposés that came out of the equipment, unlimited funding in research and development under terrorism, eh, anti-terrorism, after 9/11. That's why they love these things, it's all your tax money guaranteed to be paid by the government, whether it works or not.

They showed you people's, people who were looking at certain things in front of them, and then they showed you these gadgets that were directed at the back of folks heads, and they could actually reproduce what the person was seeing by tapping into the energy from the occipital lobe at the back of the head. And it was pretty good. It was a bit fuzzy, but you could absolutely tell what they were seeing, you know. Well, if they could, it's understanding the language of, I gave the talks years ago before it even came on. I said, if you ever could tap into the language, you see, of the eyes, then you could see what they were seeing, the same thing with smell, you know, from a distance. It's all language, different languages and different types of languages for different areas.

But thinking itself, can you imagine that, eh? The idea was to when a person was thinking about something and a computer set up would be reading this in real time what you were thinking, at a distance. If it didn't agree, if it was already programmed to attack and change certain thoughts on certain topics, it would catch your thoughts basically in mid air and transmit them back to you with alterations, until you'd say something, and you'd say, oh, I didn't mean to say that, but you'd say it any way. These techniques are out there, these gadgets are out there, eh. Absolutely.

Some when comes to electromagnetic interference with the brain, that's a weapon, it's a tried-and-true method by the military. And they do have much more portable machinery they can take on backpacks right down to even pocket ones by the way. So, all this stuff that used to be sci-fi, or folk would get locked up and put in prison about, or in the loony bin about, are actually there.

We live in an amazing time. Because for a long time, a long enough time, this kind of weaponry was, you would get locked up if you ever mentioned it. Oh, that's madness, that's impossible. Until revelations come along down the way with it in news articles and science magazines talking about the fact the military had experimented with micro-chipping people before. Then you had DARPA who came out with it, they were leading investigations into it to help quadriplegics and things like that, you know, just putting these little chips in them. Then remotely you could maybe help to reestablish connections in the neurons electronically and get them to move their arms and legs, remotely even. Well, why would you have to even do it remotely? Unless you're testing it out to do on people, [Alan chuckles.] that are not paraplegics and so on. A paraplegic would like to think about doing it themselves, his own thought or her thought should make it happen, but not you remotely, no. That's a different thing.

So anyway, we're tested on all the time and a lot of the stuff now exists. People were put into loony bins back in the 1970s, and before, when most folk even in most countries, the working class hadn't heard of computers, or if they heard about it, it was some big machine they saw in a movie that was six feet tall or something with big tapes going around like big tape recorders. That's what they used to show you. As far as micro components went, they supposedly didn't exist. And yet you had people who, and I knew one of them who had been in the military, who seemed a sane enough guy until he broke down one day and said, it's crazy, I think there's a chip in my spine. I said what d'you mean a chip, a chip, what d'you mean a chip? He says it's for a computer. Turned out that since he had an operation for some kind of cysts when he was in the military, he had that fixation that he had something in him that was affecting his behavior. So, take that as you want, but that was a common thing, it's got more and more common throughout the 70s and 80s when you look up different psychiatric studies of people being admitted with that kind of problem. Before as I say most folk even, you know, didn't have the laptops and things like that. So, things are always tested out years and years in advance before the public ever hear of them.

You look at the old technology that was used in World War II for communication and for even, not just night vision and like infrared and so on but you find that the Germans, the Germans, they still use for snipers, or they did anyway, sniping and camouflage for NATO troops that would... German, old, old German training movies made for the military before and into World War II, they had the most advanced, they haven't really improved upon it. How they had all the different kinds of terrain and how to perfectly camouflage yourself and to lie doggo as they say for hours on end. That's what the SAS are trained in. They lie dead still for hours, if need be, literally. If, you know, there was ways to relieve yourself without you even moving, without even peeing yourself, there's ways they were taught. They would inch forward a little bit and little bit at a time. To the eye watching them you wouldn't really notice it but eventually after a few hours they could be on top of you. That's the sort of thing they were trained in. Well, all that stuff was developed by the Germans. You see them with these little gadgets that look like foldable umbrellas, maybe a foot and half long, and they could literally detect the body motion and heat from a distance with infrared.

So, we take the Germans to, they use microwave communications in certain spots. Very effective. Again, microwave, you can actually direct it with pinpoint, a pinpoint energy to someone. As long as it's in the line of sight. It could go miles and miles if you're in a high spot like a hill and no one would intercept it, you see, because they're not in the way of it, it's a line-of-sight straight. These things were used during World War II and yet the public never knew about these things until years and years later. The microwave for cooking all came from that era really, that technology. You'll get it given from the military, from their uses eventually, they water it down to some other use, because we live in a commercial age, and then they sell it to you for a different purpose.

Well, it's the same with all the different technologies that were kept fairly quiet. They had technological, or Technotronic warfare type things that Brzezinski talked about, they kept it fairly quiet all those years. Remember, that book was written in the 70s, and he said they had already tried it and they knew it worked by then, for altering your behavior and your mood, etc. With different frequencies they can make you very depressed. Like a whole town, city or the continent he said, that it could travel the whole, across an entire continent if they wanted to do it. Or make you excited. Or sleepless insomnia. Or just deadbeat and irritable, you know. It was all tested out, different frequencies to see what it did, and it was very effective. No one disputes that, that was in on all those different testing, in other countries as well. So that's what you're living in today.

Now, just this week I was looking into, again, something to do with that kind of technology. It took me back to what I had already knew, but also into what they're working on now. I mentioned last week about disclosures that came from Pentagon at one point where they even talked about a killer, killer virus. People thought it was an actual virus that would kill the computers and so on. I read it on the air at the time years ago. But they did mention that they could disable people by, again, getting into the language that works your eye. It's like a reverse way of working on things. You mentioned the eye again, and it's all impulses and electrical impulses and how things work, and the cones and the rods, etc., and things are sent back transmitted through all the different nerves in the retina back to the occipital lobe and so on, that works, then different parts reinterprets what it's actually seeing, put it together for you, you know.

We really are amazing. Nature is amazing. Of course, we evolved, right, right from little amoebas. But anyway, you think about that and something interrupting the pathway. It has to be able to understand it to an extent, how it travels through your mind, through your head [Alan chuckles.]. Or anything through your body for instance, all information from different body parts, from the sensory parts, the sympathetic part, sympathetic nervous system and so on. All this has been dissected. All of this information has been dissected for years. With your tax money again. Because the military gets it first, they're behind it, always first. Any spinoffs, that might go to medicine down the road and surgery and things like that to help victims of diseases or accidents or whatever. But in the meantime, most of this stuff is meant literally to be very effective weaponry.

So, I was into it, I was going through all this old stuff again thinking about it too. I thought about, yeah, when the Pentagon admitted the killer virus, the killer virus wasn't a virus that could destroy computers. They've got plenty of viruses all to do that. The one they were talking about at the Pentagon was, and I mentioned last week, it was a way of inserting this stuff to a particular target, it could be one person or a group of people, or even thousands of people at the same time, and altering the pixels in the pixel patterns and rates. Because they know how light effects you through your eyes, and how the light itself will also, acts like a language and it can technically, in a sense, kind of reprogram you. Hm? You understand where it's all going? They had done something and tested it out and they had something they could, through the eyes, you know, that's about it really, through the eyes and maybe through electromagnetic fields which they can push across the computer. Every computer screen is an electrical field. If you get an AM radio and put it around anyone of these, you'll hear it's starting to go pshhhhhhhhhh, and howl eventually, you know. Very powerful in fact. Or if you've got any of the meters that read the voltage in the atmospheric systems, in the air itself, it will definitely start howling if you go near a computer screen.

Well, so there you have your electromagnetic weaponry you might say, if you want it. And you're so close to it, you've been trained to be close to it, then if they put the certain patterns in the pixel rates and patterns there, which you won't recognize or even probably won't even notice, but this language can go through your head. They said they had effectively stopped certain people's hearts from beating. They programmed it so it would stop your heart from beating. That was from the Pentagon at the time. I don't know if it's still out there, all that stuff. I had a lot of the stuff from it.

I thought, my God. It's a scary world. And we buy, we buy the stuff that's offered to us. With the computer you gave away your privacy. With the computer you gave away any right TO privacy. You agreed to it all, you know, okay, I'll go for it, sure, sure, sure, you know, if you agree it says click here and blah, blah, away it goes. Then you get addicted to it, you see. They make it from a little toy initially, y'know, where you see a little, two little dots pinging a little electronic ball across the field, that was how they started. All the way up to high-definition movies and so on they can put on it too, if you get the speed. I don't.

But all along the way the Pentagon and the different establishments like DARPA are way ahead of all the other uses that they have, especially to do with altering and managing people's minds. Not just with true persuasion. I went through this with the articles, I won't put all of them up this week for sure. But it really got me thinking about it, how we have so little thoughts of our own now, nowadays. It's all given to us, isn't it?

Then the behavior of people that have high-definition television, again, like last week I mentioned how the alpha, beta and theta waves and so on and how you can get put into hypnotic trance very easily with the high definition. No doubt about it. Folks, they've done all the experiments years ago before they even gave you the darn thing. They know exactly what it does. So, you're far more suggestible than you used to be, and that was bad enough with the old TV sets. So now you have, you're really highly suggestible. And it really does make a difference when you see ads or promotions to make you think something or believe something, etc. etc. It's far more effective. Definitely.

Plus, you have the better types of psyops techniques used upon you as well. Like there's a University of Arizona that's one of the heads for this for the military and for the Pentagon. It's to do with language itself and how to literally condition people to believe what they're being told by using specific persuasive techniques. There's a whole branch of them and I was going through that and thought, my goodness me.

Can you imagine, you're already getting hypnotized by the TV in high definition, and you don't even know why you're going into this strange state of being? But again, it's just pixel rates and all the rest of it. Your eyes itself, in meditation, meditation, a lot of them from India for instance they have techniques where literally you cross your eyes to put you in a different state, away from the alpha state. So, there's that, you can do it with eyes open, eyes closed, it does make any difference as long as you start that. And it's always through the eyes, eh, generally through the eyes. The ears again is a secondary thing, but the eyes definitely will alter it very quickly. It alters the brain patterns to make you more suggestible, so it can relax you if you're doing it to yourself just in meditation in one way or another, or even just closing your eyes will do it and listen to silence, as an example. Or some really, I call it real music, you know, not the stuff that's popular music. These things are all workable.

So, you get the TV set there, and once again it's the eyes. Then when you see a high-definition TV set, every thing's in perspective. You know, everything's close, it's perfectly clear, everything that's far away is perfectly clear, all on the same view. Which your eyes don't normally do in real life, you see. So, it really throws off your, the brain patterns that you're given. Then you get the movements, movement itself is a language. The language is already getting you to follow this, watch this, and you'll follow whatever you're meant to follow that's part of the movie. You could be led a Merry dance, that you don't even know you're being led into, you are unaware of it. It's a tremendous technology. And it's all conscious by those who design all the stuff, even programs that you're watching, they know exactly what they do.

The words, again, you've got professors getting millions of dollars a year, each, in some of these universities in the States from the Pentagon to persuade you to do things or accept things or just believe things without critically thinking about them. If you do critically think they'll convince you very quickly that you're wrong. Not because they give you more factual information or provable information. But by techniques which persuade you that you’re simply wrong. It's amazing the sciences that are out there now. It really is.

So hhhh, what can you say. You can warn people not to get lost in today's systems. It's very difficult for a lot of people. Maybe even more so now that they're all locked down. Doesn't it all work together, you get all locked down? There's more folk spending time on the net than ever before because of the lockdowns. And they don't know all the stuff I've been talking about here, you know.

Look at all the different companies out there now and providers, and even the browsers. You saw Mozilla representatives, I'm sure the other ones were at the meetings for Event 201, and for the vaxed group, we are for vaccine, you know, from Europe and so on. You saw representatives attend them admitting they are all on board. This is before it all broke out, right, the Covid idea. All prepared that they would be on board. Which meant they'd already been playing with your minds all along. Of course, they have been. To make you think the proper things and look at the proper things and nudge you into looking at things you're supposed to look at and believe and try to divert you off the things you're actually really trying to find. There all, this is, it's been like that from the beginning, folks. I hope you're getting the picture.

You're dealing with a weapon. And it's very effective. When you look at so many people who get all their info from TV and the Internet, and they'll turn on you like on a dime because they've been trained to. They don't even know they've been trained already through the propaganda techniques of perfected persuasion. They don't know and they'll turn on you, like on a dime and report you, or even attack you if you don't have a mask on. They won't even wait to see, do you have a doctor’s note, they say you don't have to wear it because you've got blah, blah, blah, they don't even wait for that.

They're attack dogs. Where did they, how did all that happen? How can a sensible society in a matter of, since just before 9/11 to the present, have lost all their sensibilities? Well, it was mainly to the Internet and the cell phone. I did the talks years ago, because again, don't forget the cell phone already had been well tested and worked on by the organizations working for the Pentagon, before you got them. Just like the computers, personal computers. Don't forget ARPA literally worked with the computers all through the Cold War, from the early days right through.

They were not all standing machines with big tapes going around them, that was mainly for the movies. [Alan chuckles.] Their whole idea was counterintelligence against an infiltration of the Russians, including again trying to get in and tinker with their brains as well.

Getting back to what I'm saying here, you've got a machine there in your homes, or a few of them, a lot of folk have a few of them if they've got a family, and they're all getting hammered with, never mind the Wi-Fi, [Alan chuckles.] which again is a technique that they said they could use to alter your brain waves, as well, eh. But also, you are so close to these electromagnetic standing waves that are coming off the computer and the screens and so on. It's all admitted to that, yes, they can absolutely affect your moods, your thoughts. They can actually, they're working on giving you different thoughts than the one that you have [Alan chuckles.] the ones that you have. Most folk are oblivious to it.

So, whatever you're working with or doing, have a break frequently and do something different. Do something different. Because uniformity of thought was one of the things I noticed in the Pentagon's papers for persuasive techniques. It's all to create uniformity of thought, and then added on to it you have the weaponization of different things, electromagnetic fields, but just persuasiveness itself, was uniformity of thoughts. Nothing to do with right, wrong, or honesty or facts, just uniformity of thought on behalf of those who own you.

I always say own because we’re owned, folks. We are owned. I mean, if you think you're independent, go and try to start up a big garden somewhere. If you even have a bit of land, go and try to plow it up and see what... You'll get a visit quickly from some agricultural authority who says, have you got permission, are you going to start growing vegetables and selling them or, you know, you need a license for this and blah, blah, blah. You don’t have freedoms at all.

Years ago, I can't remember, it might have been Hair the musical called Hair. It was pretty awful music actually, for an awful time in reality. Again, it was launched by those who manage your culture, on their behalf. Everybody grabbed at it thinking they were going to rebel. But the movie, I think it was called Hair, but one of the songs in it was signs... signs, signs, everywhere a sign, keep off the grass and don't do this and blah blah, everything is signs, signs. But you take that into TV land and all the different opinions you're given very quickly, these are signs as well, you should do this, and you shouldn't do that. And all the motivational programs that come on and talk show hosts come on, you should behave this way and do that… It's all the same stuff. You're getting managed, folks. These aren't just all independent folk making money. No, a lot of them are parts of groups all getting funded to do what they're doing.

You've got to start guarding your mind. I mean, it's very precious. It's the most precious thing you have. Without it, what’s the old saying, you've lost your mind... [Alan laughing.] Well, what do you think that means? Who's got it now, eh, who owns it now?

But there's nothing, you're in the middle of an incredibly intense battle that most folk don't even know is going on. They get caught up in the minutia of arguments and with all the counterintelligence mixed in with the arguments to muddy the field and give you different reasons and different answers to everything, until you give up. That's how it's done. It's very simple but it's very, very effective in how it works.

Stick to your thoughts. Don't be sitting staring at the computer all the time. If you've got one, try to keep as far back from the darn thing as possible, hm.

And it shocks me, it really shocks me how, and I remember giving the talk years ago, many years ago with an elderly woman who didn't have all this gadgetry, you know. But she said, we were talking about convenience, and I said, you know, we give up everything for convenience. Again, you study the human, what is a human and what does a human do, what does he not like to do? And the same with the monkey by the way, it's unfortunately true, some of the same traits there from the monkey. And so much over studied you can't believe the countless, countless billion dollars studies on us all the time. We're very important to the Masters that own us, hm, for control purposes and to be used by them. Which again is very much like The Matrix, you're a battery in a sense. It's your energy that they use, because our energy makes everything in the world, you see, we make things. The folk at the top don't, they just own it all.

But we're talking about giving it up for convenience, and I can remember many years ago when they came out with the gadgetry for putting light switches on and off, you know, by clapping the hands. That was, I don't know, maybe back in the 80s or 90s. How folk would, initially get it to show off with, you see. That's how a lot of folk, it's a kind of snob appeal. Oh, I've got the latest yada, ya. You can go back even further with garages. The people who had garages were very, they were easy bait basically, you know, about given easy bait of, don't you want something that will, a remote thing that would open your garage for you and all your neighbors…? That's how the ads were, eh. And your neighbors would see this thing opening up, and you didn't even get out of your car, and you just drove into it and it closed behind you. Again, so, convenience is really predicated on snob appeal. Hm? That's how all these sneakers and all these things are sold, and brand names, eh, snob appeal. Well I've got the latest blah, blah, blah. So, you can count on that to work at any time with so much in fact.

The same thing in fact has been used even under the Covid. When it's to be launched with the vaccinations, you're going to get these folks with extra perks that they're given too. Because you always give out little perks because you're just a little mouse or something in a maze, right, and they give you little added things for doing the right thing. You'll be promoted as a superior being in the community, that's how the ads will run, oh so and so’s got it and his family's got it. And they're all smiling, and their teeth are shining, glistening, you know, bmmmmm. And they have little halos above their heads. And the rest of the people are dull and dirty and ill-looking. That's how they promote things through propaganda.

And shame, shame of course comes into it as well. Aren't you ashamed of having... It's the same thing going back before the Gucci this and the Gap that and all the rest of it. Aren’t you ashamed to have ordinary, you know, older whatever pants or jeans or whatever? Or like-a Levi, eh? It wasn't a real Levi, it was a like-a Levi, yada yada yada. Everything was... is... Until the people became billboards for the brand names. They would buy T-shirts with the brand name on it of snob appeal. Hm?

We're awfully predictable. And it's terribly sad, you know, this drive to... Because the ones who lead the pack and say, oh I got there first, oh I spent 100 bucks on this t-shirt because it's got so and so’s brand on it, eventually with all the knockoffs it becomes passé because everyone ends up having it, right? But by that time, everybody's got it. Conformity, eh, conformity, conformity. Same thing with opinion. Same thing with everything. It's conformity, conformity. What does it say at the Pentagon? The whole idea of persuasive techniques is to get uniformity of opinion. Conformity. Hm? Are you starting to get it? Hm?

Even in Event 201 and the one for the European Union group that met, and I put the link up there for that too before that. Where the same characters all met there as well, you know, V for vax, etc. They had Mozilla and all the rest of them there. They talked about that too, how they would put money out, under the usual channels of giving money to writers for dramas and things to inserted in their series, things that you normally watch, you get addicted to, dramas and serials and so on. They would put in the little quips here and there, until you'd here's the thing from a thousand different sources and you don't know why you ended up with that opinion on some product or pro vax or something, you know.

Well, it's all done to you without you even... Your guard is down, you see, because you're not critically analyzing and thinking about something when your guard is down. You're getting entertained, eh, that's what you think. [Alan chuckles.] So, there you go. That's a part of the talk for tonight and it's spontaneous again because I don't really plan what I'm going to say of the bat to begin with. I'll go into the articles later, if I've saved them at all. Sometimes you got to stand back and just think for yourselves.

Some folk are addicted to getting news, eh. Again, news can be utterly fake. Most of the news you're dished out with is all fake. Or the spin on the events is fake, or the take on it is fake, and what you're told to come away with from the articles is often fake as well. There's one in Australia about the one in Brisbane where literally it says, oh, thousands of folk, anti-maskers and so on, all descended on, the anti-Covid people descended on this park, and the police have a tough time with it. But all you saw was an army of police and a handful of protesters. Complete reversal of reality.

We’ve seen it uniformly across a fantastic demonstration that's still going on where you see in the States the fires behind the commentators on the different TV programs. I get this sent mainly again by, you know, USB drives and things because I can't get the speed. I'm under amazing attack here, and I'm used to it, you know, for saying things they don't want you to say. Especially, and believe you me, and you can't go by what they say, how many folk listen to you. That's been rubbish from the beginning. [Alan chuckles.]   This is the kind of fantasy you're in. You believe what you're told or what you see and things. This is total war on the public. Eh? Total war. If I was saying the same thing as everybody else is saying, whatever it happens to be, oh, there's millions of folk watch me every... But if you're saying the things that are contrary, with evidence to what they're telling you, then, oh yeah, he's only got so many hits a week from watching. It's all farce.

It's the star making machinery you still live under, remember. Do you really look at those film stars and d'you think they're any different from stacks of hundreds and hundreds of others in the same level as themselves? No, they're picked up for other reasons. They'll give their heart and soul for... [Alan chuckles.] to lucifer, put it that way. But the star making machinery is what makes them stars. It's the characters who decide that they're going to invest in you, not because you got special talents or skills. Most of the imagery about you is fake, you know, it's just made-up fakeness. But it's very persuasive to the punters that follow it.

It's the same with the Internet. Of course, it is. Of course. Absolutely. I said years ago, be careful about leaders. Whatever you think you're into, of what you're protesting, they'll supply your leaders for you. They always do. Always. And even when you get the clues along the way, most folk was still disregard it and fall for it all. M-hm. You'll find they're always well-funded, well promoted. Even through mainstream media. And don't forget too, even bad news about them is still propaganda, it's good news. All news is good news, PT Barnum, when it's about you, eh. That's how it's done as well. All these techniques are well understood.

But it comes down to it, I said way back in the 90s, you got to start learning no. And I'm glad to hear folk repeating that now. They're going through my old talks on different shows and saying it, you've gotta start learning the smallest word in the language, which is no. And start saying it. We're so, we like to get along and be happy and be congenial with people. You've got to stop that and start saying no. N-n. Start training yourself to say no. Simple word. Hm. You don't have to back it up with anything, just say no and that's it.

Don't fill in some questionnaire, why won't you go along with that, what's wrong with you, why did you say no, will you fill in this form, let us know. So, they can find a way to get around it. They actually do that, eh. The same with voting, oh, why wouldn’t you vote for so-and-so. They have all these different questionnaires and then it goes off to universities to study it all. They use taxpayers money and the students to do it all, then the corporations actually put it into effect and use it all, to persuade you, to get around all the objections that you had in the first place.

The same with vaccinations, they're doing it. Why won't you want it? Why don't you? Why are you cautious, as you say, cautious about vaccinations? You know, that's how they get around it all. Don't, just say no. Would you fill this in? No. Don't do the clicking on all the different stuff on the Internet, because that's how they're sussing you out, what you're for, what you're against, why won't you go for this and blah, blah, blah. They've got you all pegged. [Alan chuckles.] It's just amazing. And folk will do it.

Getting back to convenience though, hm, from a light switch. I remember there was a doctor, was it a Professor Warwick [Professor Kevin Warwick] I think his name was, or was it Warwick University, I can't remember. But he did shows. He was, again, they brought the star making machinery through to make him into a star, you see. They always give you these guys they want you to follow. Oh, he's clever, so I'll follow him. So this guy, eventually had his followers after a few years, he said, I'm putting a chip in my arm and I won't have to press a button to open my garage door, he says, I can just really think or something, I can't remember what he said or how he did it all. But everything in his house was to get basically activated by this chip in his arm. So, all the locks in his house and the windows would open, everything was controlled by this silly chip, eh.

It must've cost a fortune when it didn't work or it failed or whatever, you know, to get it all replaced. Or maybe they're paid by the government to do all the PR in the first place. But this is what they do. They give them big shows on television and they're generally, sound very energetic, like motivational talkers, you see, they're all picked and specially trained for it, to persuade you to do things that you shouldn't do, like Aldous Huxley commented on the Mike Wallace show.

You're being persuaded with all the time, with professional techniques that you don't know exists. It isn't just someone who prattles fast, that's part of it often, not always. But it's also the star making machinery until you start following their opinions on things, hm. They've been doing this since the days of Einstein, eh. Well, Einstein said… Well, Einstein's talked an awful lot about politics, and something else by the way, but seldom about science. Hm? Oh, I'll follow his opinions because he is a bright man, and it must be better than mine. [Alan laughing.] Take me to your leader, eh?

So, you're living in an amazing morass today of warfare. Most of the warfare is to do with your thoughts, and against your thoughts to persuade you to do other things, and to conform, again, with things which perhaps you shouldn't, hm, perhaps you shouldn't. And now they're going to convince you to take a shot... And people will eventually, most will go for it. I know this. They know it. Because they've terrorized the public so much, and folk who tune in every night to get terrorized...

I mentioned this, this is well understood with horror movies. Even the most awful horror movie, if there's nothing else on, a lot of folk will sit and watch it at night, you know. And even though it's rotten in the horror movie, and it's a pretty bad script, and has got the repetition of so many other scripts, eh, of someone's getting chased as an example... Look at how many movies they made through the 90s and afterwards, you get four students get in the car for the weekend, off to the country for camping and horrible things happen. They're chased by a monster or a crazed person or something. It's just so repetitious. Or a supernatural thing, it never even has an [explanation] as to why the supernatural thing existed in the first place, they don't even need that anymore. It's just a lot of running through the woods and getting bumped off one by one and blood and guts and screaming. But most folk won't turn away.

Because it's wired into your brain this fight or flight syndrome. Even though it's an awful thing, a rotten movie, and maybe even cheaply made or whatever, and you know it's a rotten movie, when a person's getting chased you generally won't look away. Because you identify subconsciously with the person in the movie. It doesn't matter, so the woman will identify with the woman generally, right, and the guy with the guy, hm-hm, generally. They run through the forest. Well, that could be you, and if you turn away for a second something might happen, so you'll lose your train of thought and the thing is going to eat you, it's going to get you and eat you or something like that. So, you'll stay and watch it till the bitter end, and then at the end you'll say what on earth did I watch that for? Eh? Hm?

It's because it's nature. It's nature. That's why you do it. It's well understood. Well, these techniques too are used every day now on television for folk that watch the news. They tune in for their daily dose of terror. And it's called terror by the ones who give it to you by the way, who make it up. It's to create incredible anxiety to make you conform. Again, conformity, eh, UNIformity. So, you go along with the flow, with each nudge you get to conform, conform, conform along the way, along the path. That's why it's done. And if you don't tune in you might miss something, just like the horror movie, that will save your life. That's what it's all predicated on.

You're well understood, I hope you understand. And the evil characters who are paid using again your tax money to terrify you, it's disgusting! Absolutely disgusting!!! When they even put circulars around from the group, from the subgroup, the SAGE group in Britain hires and uses the nudgers and the behaviorists, not just on the net which they control as well with the BIT, you know, behavioral insights teams that nudge you all, but also through all the other forms of communication, and news as well on television. They told all the reporters to step up the level of anxiety to the public to get them to conform, again. This came out from reporters who showed you the forms they were sent, this is all the techniques to use because a lot of the public aren’t complying, they're not terrified enough, so step up this and report it, over report things, exaggerate reporting. D'you get that word exaggerate, hm, like figures and things, eh? To increase the level of anxiety in the people so that they will conform. And you're going to bel...

You understand, when you understand these techniques, you could NEVER believe ANYthing, anything EVER again that the government and the agencies that work with them are reporting. You can't believe a darn thing they're EVER going to tell you. If you're sensible.

The audacity of it. And it's, you know, once it's exposed it's never contradicted, they just go on again as though no one had said anything. [Alan chuckles.]

Conformity, conformity.

And the evil, and I really mean it, I really mean this, evil characters, in the true sense of the word by the way, that are doing it all, there's no other word for them. They're diabolical some of them. Especially when you see their connections with eugenics and the organizations that they belong to to do with reducing the world's population. And they want to take control, have the rights over your body?!! This is a horror show, folks. This is THE horror show. Hm? This is the real horror show. And it is real.

Everything that they've said already that they couldn't make you do with, oh, the climate scare and global warming scare and global cooling scare and all the other scares that they gave you, we just, they knew they were losing their audiences. The folk were just saying, no, we've had enough of this nonsense. Yep. We've had enough. And then guess what, you know? They bring it all back. The Club of Rome says it, all the different sustainability programs we can now push, get underway, under the laws to do with Covid. No business will reopen without sustainability and an ecological survey done on it to see if they even need you or if they're going to affect the soil or the air or whatever it happens to be, you know. Are you essential, nonessential? Getting the picture?

Don't drive cars, Agenda 21. No private vehicles it said in the Agenda for the 21st century. And you have the 2030 one, they want the cars off the road shortly altogether, eh? But in the meantime, we'll give you electric ones. Until you realize that they're no use to you because they're no use in the winter or a really hot summer for holding a charge. And they tend to explode a lot. And they're awfully expensive, eh. And so is charging them. And the equipment to charge them. Yada, yada, ya. And then replacing all the batteries is half the cost of the vehicle often. So anyway, eventually you'll be off the road altogether.

So, all the things, again, sustainability, stop eating meat. Well, all the farms are being hammered and they've closed down stacks, most of the meat plants across Canada are closed. They're importing beef from Africa [Alan chuckles.] right now, eh. They're achieving it all through, under the guise of Covid, aren't they? They can close any meat plants, or any factory that even packs beans together if they want to and say, let's do a test on the factory workers. They're guaranteed most of them will say they've got Covid. Because Covid is a fragment, they're fragments of DNA of dissolute fragmented old cells of died off... You get them all the time. All the time, folks. Of coronaviruses. A cold will give you it. Old cold viruses, bits of it will show up positive. They KNOW this, that's why they picked it.

Flu shots in the past will show up positive. It's the most unreliable technique ever invented. And it's not meant, really, as the inventor said, to be used for diagnostic purposes. But facts don't matter. Every day there's thousands of new cases. So just going to these factories, and if you get two folk that test positive, in their nostrils, eh, with bits, tiny bits of old, old viruses that are dead long gone, or they’re breathed in from some other person's dead long gone ones as they breathe in the air, [Alan chuckles.] it doesn't make any difference, then you close the factory down. Oh, we've got so many new cases, eh. Guaranteed to get them the more that they test, because it's always been there. You've always got these fragments there. Always. Yep. They know this. M-hm.

And as they tell you about all the cases, they never tell you that obviously folk have recovered from them all. Because otherwise they'd all be dead, right? But no, they'll tell you about new cases. I was looking at the ones for the US States, they’re testing lots of students at universities and so on. You see this big spike, oh yeah, the spike's coming for the fall, you know. I said that would happen back in February, you know, they'll give you a couple of months in the summer then they’ll hit you again and say it's spiking, because they want to lock you down permanently. Actually, for years. You don't know that but it's for years to get the whole agenda through.

So, the spiking, yeah, here it comes again. They're getting all of you prepped, oh my God, there's more. Oh, if I had an ability to give 10,000 folk in my area, right now, this night, a test for it, with these swabs, a good chunk of them will come down with it. Oh my God, can you imagine that? So, we can add them too, as CASES. None of them are ill. [Alan chuckles.] None of them have got any problems with it. And because they're fragments, they might never have been ill with it in the first place. It's just fragments. You breathe this stuff in all the time, fragments of everything, you know.

And because, BECAUSE again, you know, the idea with Covid can't be fixed through vaccinations because coronaviruses are all through animal species, of all wildlife as well, by the way, you know. Are you starting to get the picture here? It's a big, big plan going on here under the guise of Covid, that they couldn't...

And they are adamant at the top, there's a club at the top that runs the world, and I really mean runs the world, eh, and it has for an awful long time. They really are fed up trying to convince you to stop breeding, hm, and to stop consuming all of their planet. It's their planet, not yours, and they have the right to rule it, you see that's why they've taken over as guardians of it all. And it's necessary you accept it.

Prince Charles goes along with all this stuff too because he was such a gullible prune to start with. He had no function, the man. He was an idiot at school, literally, you know. They gave him this task, but he took that, all his indoctrination from his dad Prince Philip who is a eugenicist who openly has declared there's too many of you [Alan chuckles.] on the planet. And just like the animals, he says, you know, we have big estates and like all people who have big estates across the world, he says, we'll see what happens when rabbits come in and start eating the grass, and the rabbits are followed by wolves, and the wolves start eating the rabbits, and the wolves start eating the foxes and so on. Eventually, you know, if there's too many deer coming then they'll cause havoc and eating barks of trees and things like that and die off and yada yada. Well, he says, it's the same with humans, you know, we move in, and we take everything over, we start destroying, and you need a good cull, he says, just like in the animal kingdom to balance things out.

You should read his speeches he’s given at some of the meetings, the world meetings for the Sierra Club and so on. And he's not, he's not an unusual specimen of those near the top, you know. They're all on board with it. All of them. As I say, the Fabian Society didn't blame the wages of the workers for poverty. No, they blamed too many of the workers, for those who haven't figured that out. They were quite open about it initially.

In Theosophy Annie Besant, she's one of the founding members of the Fabian Society too. What she meant by women's rights and so on was literally for abortion and all of that, you know. It's all connected.

HG Wells said, you can help the poor and even feed the poor, and he says, and even help them stop diseases and so on by giving them better nutrition, and what do they do, he says, they breed. So, the problem is the fact that you breed, you see. You can end poverty and the poor by eliminating the poor. [Alan chuckles.] Haven't you figured it out, eh?

Of course, when you hear these speeches, and you can actually look them up and listen to them, from the horse's mouths at times, you still say, well they didn't really mean ME.

Really? Oh really, eh?

Julian Huxley talked about it when he says, many will help us bring in this new order, he said at UNESCO, eh, many will help us thinking they're going to get, be brought along up into the upper strata to survive, he says, are they sadly mistaken.

So, they'll use you. All those folks in the streets right now who want to burn the place down, they use them all. Then they have to eliminate them too. Everybody's used in turn because they're so predictable. It's very easy to be predictable because you've been brainwashed from early schooling right through the college [Alan chuckles.] into a function that you didn't even know that you had until they let you loose. But they've trained you for it.

Stalin talked about this technique too. Stalin used to kill thousands of the POWs, the Russian POWs at the end of World War II and imprisoned stacks of them and put them off to the camps. They had thousands of camps, literally thousands of camps, eh, in the most inhospitable places in the country. He said, we can't bring them all in, he says, even... here’s something that is true and it's horrible at the same time.

Here's the Communists got rid of people who they knew that, and they knew in advance because they had spies all through the systems working in government and civil service, they only employed, once they get in, they'll only bring in each other, you see, the different spies and so on. They knew who was who, and who believed what and all the rest of it. That's how they already had lists when they moved into countries like Poland, they know who to go for and who to send for and who to bring in and kill them. Thousands of people. Eventually into the millions across the whole Soviet empire. And it was an Empire, eh.

But Stalin voiced it. He said, the same with the POWs, he says, well, this is why, if you can't, you won't be able to rehabilitate them back into your way of thinking, what you want them to think, eh, as a good Soviet citizen, because they've been contaminated with ideas from the West, even from prison guards he said. And even from meeting other POWs in Germany or elsewhere or by the Germans, but from other nations that were prisoners as well that they'd been sharing values and experiences. You see, JUST knowing things alters you. Just having conversations with people outside your own brainwashed clique will influence you. So, they called it contamination and they would not allow contamination to be brought back into the Soviet system, and so they killed them.

They killed them.

It's...

I can't remember how many troops they had too that were Germans who had fought, who were Russians and fought inside the Germany. Eisenhower decided to send them back, knowing they'd all be slaughtered. And they were slaughtered. It was terrible.

Real history is a horror show.

And we don't learn from it, because we're taught it's not such a horror, there's decent people behind this, and decent, who would never do horrible things like that, what are you talking about?

Well, they did. It's all verified stuff. It's factual. They just simply don't promote the knowledge so much to most people. Because they want you to be naïve and easily led and managed. And what they've done in the past they can always repeat. The same characters that are born in every generation that they use to be henchmen and torturers and so on, hm, nothing new about it.

Why do you think... You had a beautiful example of the Soviet technique that they've done over and over, even going back to the French Revolution, the same organization behind it, that funded it all, who benefited afterwards [Alan chuckles.] by the way. Even when the rest of the leaders got all of their heads chopped off, even the ones who were used to start the revolution and manage it, the ones who really managed it behind, they ended up running the whole country and the Empire and the money and everything else, you know. Oh yeah. But they talked about it. They talked about what they could do by using the people, hm. Once they get started, eventually you've got to get rid of the people who lead it. Because you'll never have peace then. You can't bring in, now you've got a new elite running the show at the very top, the elites can't have the guys who were doing all the killings walking about and strutting around as they were before and you've got to get rid of them. That's what they do.

But when they started the revolution in France don't forget they went to the Bastille, they let the prisoners go. There wasn't a lot of prisoners in it. One of the main ones that convinced them to let them out was the Marquis de Sade, he was a prisoner. An utter pervert. They always use perverts to run up the show, really just to serve people whose whole object long before Nietzsche came along was to destroy everything you believed in [Alan chuckles.] that was humanly nice. Hm.

The Soviets, the Bolsheviks let the prisoners out too. There's old footage of them letting all these prisoners out. And there was IMMEDIATELY mayhem on the streets. They used them to terrorize the people, burn places down that wouldn't conform, this is during the early revolution, terrify the citizenry, and murder the citizenry at times too. You had the same thing with other countries they went into, they let them go. Then they used the henchmen, then they arrange, and once they've done their work in terrorizing people, they kill them. When Castro declared he was a communist – like they didn't know, and the CIA helped him in, right, supposedly; again, the CIA is nothing to do with what you think it is – then he released all the prisoners out there too and that's why you had all the boats flying over to Miami, etc. And yeah, you definitely had gang leaders and things that have come out of it too.

Always the same technique. So, with the Covid thing, oh they're letting all the prisoners out, they might get Covid. Guess where a lot of them end up? Because then once they're all out, at the same time they're getting the revolutionaries in the streets. This is no coincidence. This is all been done before; it's been used before.

And what works, like Plato said, in one generation on the public to get a particular agenda through, even in altering behavior, or acceptance or whatever of in a system, just know the sequence of introduction and it will work again.

This is not coincidence. It's not coincidence. Have you seen the stipulations that Trump has given to other countries that want aide? It didn't start with Trump. I mean, Hillary Clinton, when she was in the State Department, had a little bit to do with the dishing of funds across the world to different countries in Africa. You should see the things of cultural change, which they didn't want in Africa, I've talked about them before, they couldn't believe these particular demands were being attached to the loans. Well, the World Bank is fully fledged doing the same thing, but so is Donald Trump. The big champion of things that used to be thought of... [Alan chuckles.] rather awful, in a lot of cultures. A big champion, eh?

Everybody's a player, aren't they, in this game? And they give you your leaders for all sides. They really do.

Right now, by what I've been reading recently in fact, to do with the World Bank, this is the whole agenda for sustainability under the guise of Covid, as I've said. The Club of Rome admitted that, I put the articles up a few months ago where you have the leaders actually saying that. There's little clips and videos of them actually talking about it that way, in this fashion. And here you are, you're watching it all being brought forth and put into action.

BUT I really think everybody's a player. I think the Chinese were a player in it too. Getting us all terrified in the early days with clips coming out of China. Which normally wouldn't come out with anything, you know. China can clam anything up. And you've got to give the cooperation of the Western journalists and so on to put anything in the papers too. So if China had demanded, no, this, that or the other, you would not have heard a word about any Covid outbreak in China.

Unless, unless they were in on it. To promote it. So, they terrified people with the shows that they showed you. Oh my god look at the folk with backpacks spraying offices and people in the offices breathing all the stuff in. My God, these huge machines spraying stuff in the streets, eh, going way up, hundreds of feet into the air. Why would they do it hundreds of feet up into the air? Why, it must be all over the place, this terrible killer virus! And then Fauci himself said he didn't think it was anything for Americans to worry about, in the early days, and masks were useless and don't use them. A complete reversal, eh?

But you are getting pumped up and pumped up to be terrified of something. Then you're getting this conflicting story back in your own countries. Then they hit you with the whole agenda. Oh, it's SPREAD, it's here now, HHHHHHHHHH. I thought somebody was watching it's coming, isn't this, I mean don't you have special folk that can actually see these things coming into the country?
[Alan chuckles.]

They all went into anti-action, all the papers, on the same day across the continent and the world. The same day, all on board with the same stories. You're as well as just getting one newspaper because it was the same articles verbatim as every other news articles, and probably the same across all TV stations. There's coordination for you. To be terrified, BE terrified and comply.

So again, with Agenda 21, there will be no vehicles, no private vehicles, it will be essential vehicles only. Here we go with the whole agenda. The same with meat, no meat consumption eventually, a vegetarian society only. Except for the elite of course, they need meat because their brains require it. You don't need your brain, so you don't really require different enzymes and things like that. So yeah, the whole agenda. Post consumerism. Once all the things slow down, oh, let's have a little tiff, and the next part is tiffs, they tiff with China now, we've got a little tiff with them.

China was made by the West. I did the talks years ago when we were integrating completely and funding all the factories to move to China. Because the politicians all signed on the deals for free trade with China in the GATT treaty and so on. I used to say, I'm saying all this stuff, and nobody was listening to me. I thought, no one's listening, you know. Even the folk who were losing their jobs didn't want to hear it. Why, but why would they… They don't want to hear that China; it was all going to China. That the factories they worked in, their bosses were paid to literally move the entire plants over to China. I can remember even guys in different positions as craftsmen, you know, real tradesmen, and articles in the paper, where they were getting brought over to China to train the Chinese to take over their jobs, and do the same and make the same things in the factories over there.

Well guess what happened? Millions of people were out of work then. And it was millions, don't believe the rubbish they tell you. You could see it all everywhere. Chaos. The best enemies money can buy, you MAKE them, eh? You make them. You pay for them. Because you've always got, the elite who really run you always need some kind of enemy. Always. Yep. To keep you together. You always need something to be afraid of or you would just lose it all, you'd forget it all, you wouldn't be afraid of anything. Then you might not just jump to it when they told you to jump. That is the real system.

So yeah, China literally, everything was given to them. Canada was building big dams for them for free, taxpayer, you know. It was like gifts, paying for the building of hospitals. We still are paying things through the, because it's extended under the treaty that emerging nations, and now India is in it too of course and a whole lot of other nations. The emerging nations, you see, when they sign on get all these freebies given to them. That they can make things, even if it's your factories that move to India or China, they can make the same things there then, for the same corporations, owned by the same, and then import them back into you here, without paying any import duties. That's a good deal for the corporations, eh? Great deal actually.

But you also pay subsidies on the shipping of the stuff back to you. [Alan chuckles.] hat's why if you order direct from China things are so darn cheap. Have you ever wondered why the postage is so darn cheap? You're paying for it; all the taxpayers are paying for it here. Not the Chinese. India is the same way now. Then you pay for their hospitals and their schooling, and dat-dat-dat-and-dut-and-duh. And even nuclear plants! I think, again, the CANDU reactors all over the world now.

But yeah, as YOU go backwards and fall apart. And then, then years later, like 20 or 25 years later, when you really are going through the Covid thing, well, let's just notice now that China is becoming a swaggering character with pushing his weight around. What did you think was going to happen when you fund them like that and you pay for all the factories to move over there to give all of them work? so that they could have a great economy and so they would get a rising middle class, etc. etc., and well-educated people. As you went backwards. What did you think was going to happen?

D'you really think the world is run by stupid people? No, it's not. It's not.

But the plan was for China eventually one day to take over as policeman of the world. That was written about as I mentioned before in the 1930s by the Rockefeller group that paid for the big world meetings for the Royal Institute of International Affairs/Council on Foreign Relations At that time when they published that book, that was kind of unthinkable because China compared to a lot of the world you would say was way backwards, way back there, they didn't have industry or anything else. Well, they knew with step by step where they would take it.

Most folk can't think long-term like that. They can only, it's like you in your lifetime, if you want to do something, you'll try to get to the abilities to do something or make something or whatever or achieve something before you're old and die. The corporations and the foundations that work this, that really work the agenda here, the real agenda, can go on for hundreds of years, each one with their specialized part of it. Hiring and training and retiring, and hiring... It took generations of people to get what they want. Long-term planning, eh?

So anyway, that's what we're living through is a massive agenda. Most folk haven't got a clue. I don't, you can't blame people. They're so wrapped up, you're so wrapped up in trying to survive, most folk grow up like that. In the UK was a great example, if you had something that gave you that start, that spark to see things, the knowledge was there and lots of books, good libraries at the time. Not from television. The TV was a massive brainwashing apparatus and time waster. As I say, most of your indoctrination comes to fiction, it's all embedded within the fiction.

But the UK is supposedly the victor of world wars and so on, supposedly, eh. [Alan chuckles.] Totally utterly bankrupt, with most of the folk in some kind of rationing or poverty or whatever and emaciated. A lot of, a real... You know they never recovered. I was talking to a fella in Sudbury a couple of years ago, and he's French-Canadian. We mentioned, we just mentioned Britain and he says, I've never seen so many ill people in my life, they don't look well. And it's true, they don't look well.

Then when you go into the studying of intergenerational defects that happen with genetic disruptions of types of food, lack of food and so on, and when you realize that Britain was on rationing… It came from the 1700/1800s through poverty, and life expectancy for workers was very low. On really, it wasn't even subsistence wages, it was pretty well starvation, literally starvation wages for folk. Into the late 1800s and a Boer War. Again, every war took masses of taxes to get raised and so on, and new taxes to pay for it all. And the laying down of not just railway lines across India for instance, the taxpayers paid for all that, they paid for the militaries too.

They got nothing out of it, all the people, except the bill. But the clique in London reaped an incredible harvest. All paid by the taxpayer. Then they hand the public the bills. The same for World War I and II. and rationing through World War I, the Great Depression, right into a Great Depression. The Great Depression lasted in Britain right through to World War II started, and still they were in rationing then. So, it went on through that too, and then up into the 1950s.

It wasn't until about the 60s they started giving a little bit of light, at least through propaganda, let's have a swinging 60s and happiness and a new type of thing, and songs. The songs, and then they gave you stars to... Most folk were just as poor as ever. They weren't stars. All show, propaganda and so on.

But yeah, the effects of intergenerational malnutrition is still going on. Nevermind other things too that can affect you intergenerationally through certain things that are introduced into the body from other sources. But yeah, he did notice that. It's really interesting to see how your makeup is changing all the time.

I've mentioned before of a book I got; it was a well-known book put out by a dentist who went around the world in the early 20th century [Nutrition and Physical Degeneration by Weston Price]. He got photographs of families, you know, maybe three generations, children, parents and grandparents together from different groups, and even tribes across the world, and in Canada too, in Indian tribes as well. He showed you the effect of just the processed foods. It had to be that, at that time. You could see the parents were literally changed; their facial structures would change a little bit. The room in the mouth would narrow a little bit. Their children would start looking like the ones in Europe who had been through malnutrition, as we thought of it all being, where the mouths would really get small, and the teeth would get crushed together and overlap and things like that and all those problems. But you'd see the mouths and the cavities and the spacing and the arching of the mouths of their grandparents that didn't, hadn't been brought up on the processed food system of the white man and so on, and they were much bigger and healthier, etc. Well, if that did that, so quickly, just the food system, and the additives to the foods for processed foods and so on, in a generation, what do you think a few generations would do? What else is happening?

Well, you know, any, any basic detective story starts off and you follow-up, when did it start, you know, what happened before it started, what changed in the system before it started to get...? This is how you follow clues. Now of course it's all taboo to look at certain areas. Especially now. It's all connected, isn't it? [Alan chuckles.] It has to be. What else happened to change the physical structure of people and make them allergic to everything, you know, I'm allergic to everything? Everyone's got compromised immune systems, of some kind, either allergies, food allergies, all kinds of allergies, skin allergies. It never happened before like this.

Something hit your immune system. I wonder what it could be? And when did it start? Hm? Well, there's something to ponder, eh?

You can only look into the truth, as I say, if anything, by accepting you might uncover horror. And most folk can't handle the truth, that's soo true. It is soo true. Can't handle the truth. And you can’t blame them at times, you know, because we've all had the training to be, oh it's a nice world and you live… Like Bertrand Russell says, we'll train the people to believe that their country is the best one, it didn't matter what country it was, right. Everybody would say, we live in the best country in the world, we've got the best education system, we've got the best healthcare system in the world. He said that, we'll train the people. They all believe it. You get the same propaganda everywhere you go. In any country. [Alan chuckles.] There ya go.

I used to laugh too; I remember when I was really small. We were never small in Scotland, we were wee, you know, that was a difference when you're wee, you see. You had all these old movies from the US that they’d play on the BBC at night and on the weekends. At one time it was just the BBC, you know, so they had a complete monopoly on propaganda. But I remember seeing an old, old movie and they had a well-known actor at the time playing Abraham Lincoln. It was black-and-white actually. At the end of the movie a little boy comes up as Lincoln is getting on a train and says, could I be president one day, Mr. Lincoln? And he says, son in America you can be anything you want to be. You see?

That's the kind of propaganda they gave out then. I mean, folk had no idea, and you still have no idea that the people you're talking about today in politics, the Clintons and all the rest of them, were picked as children by organizations. The ones in Britain are the same. The Tony Blairs and all these characters, they're all picked as children by charitable foundations, they call themselves, that's going to improve the world. They admit that, that they actually pick them as children.

The Cecil Rhodes group, you know, you get a Rhodes Scholarship, it was also how they picked the leaders for the last 100 years. They have people who would note, and certain teachers in every school would note too, on the lookout, they're getting paid to be, and they would funnel them off into the intelligence services, or, and sometimes both by the way, into guidance to become politicians for the future maybe 30 years down the road.

The ones I mentioned in Britain, their websites are, still proclaim what they're doing. They're creating future leaders by getting young children. They have children's groups. Just like The Young Communist Party, you know, the same thing. But they're presented to the public as adults, and oh, you've never heard of them before, you'll know nothing about them. You're given very little about their background. They're all trained to act in a certain way, and either you'll be more intellectual looking, and this other one will be a little bit more radical left, and this one will be... They're all trained in advance, you see. That's how it's done in every country across the so-called Democratic countries.

Now, some, I think I had one person, occasionally you'll get a complaint about whatever you talk about. Because you're not here too, and I'm not here to please everybody anyway. And I'm also conscious occasionally that I'll get someone that will kickback. Because part of the psyops that they do too in counterintelligence, as I've said before, is to attack you either with bots, you see, if you're into social chat you get nothing but like Twitters, etc., cavalcade's or escalades of.... [Alan chuckles.] complaints, all fake and bots put out there. Or, they'll put a chunk of people, as an order of the day attack so-and-so and all say this about the same person until they... And I would just ignore that, if you're getting that kind of thing.

But occasionally I'll get one that gives me a little glimpse into something, or they'll to steer you off into a different way of thinking or talking or whatever. But I've got one that said, you know, you’re repeating the same stuff over and over. But no, I'm not. I'm not repeating the same stuff over and over. But if you've got a certain agenda, you must repeat it over and over, the part of the agenda for sure. Because there's a thousand things out there to distract you from the agenda, the plethora of data that they said they'd dump on you, you know, the last few years ago. They said they would give you stacks of data that would overwhelm people, and lead them off into all kinds of areas, or they’re chasing aliens, well it's not people that are doing it is got to be the aliens, and yada, yada ya, you know. You can see that happening all over the place too.

Stick to the basic facts and the agenda. Because underneath all the swamp and layers of swamp you get the truth. And the truth often has always been staring you in the face. Even then you might not like it because you've been trained to feel horrible about even thinking it. [Alan chuckles.] It's a hard thing even to accept that there are completely evil organizations out there in the world. I mentioned it so many times too about the Bond movies, James Bond movies. The main enemies they had in James Bond movies, written by guys at one time that were in MI6 for instance, like John le Carre and characters like that that were involved in, you'd get little things come out of little interviews that they would do and so on. Ian Fleming, or Alexander... Yeah, Ian Fleming, Alexander was the guy that invented penicillin.

But you get little bits coming out of them too in their different stories that they would put into, out there for public consumption. The biggest enemies on the planet were not countries. Maybe within countries you would have the same clubs, eh, private clubs, or even an international club. But they're the ones like the Cobra, and you had Spector and all these different ones, all these different organizations run by very powerful, VERY powerful, mafia-like, real Mafia, not the little Italian Mafia groups, but the REAL BIG Mafia, international... until they ran world banks and so on.

Well, that's how it really is, folks. With a different agenda. With their own formats as to what they exist for and what they're going to do with the world. That's what you have. And how many times can they give it to you, you know, in their writings? Some of the writings are pretty awful, you know, again it’s for public consumption. They don't want to bore folk with too many facts, because folk will switch off. They want entertainment at the same time.

But yeah, you would see the different characters, the Blofelds and Goldfinger and all the rest of them that knew how to manage whole nations. Right down to the one where you have, I've mentioned it before too, I think that one is called Tomorrow Never Dies. Where the media, the world global media mogul creates the news, he makes things happen. Because he’s got, he's a multibillionaire with a huge enterprise and he can buy off countries, and works with different countries too, a kind of Spector type character. So, he makes tomorrow's news and publishes it in advance, tomorrow's news today. A man who controls the world's media with high-tech, you know, it's all superspeed satellite systems. It was really well done that part of it. And it's not so far from the truth today, it's closer to it than a lot of it actually. But they show you the real evil, evil characters.

Another one too was Quantum of Solace which had a multibillionaire philanthropist that had... A philanthropist he was. He just wanted to be an environmentalist and help the planet as he took over the supplies of water across the world and diverted subterranean water flows and so on to make a fortune. Because he said tomorrow's money is actually water, that's tomorrow's gold, is water. So, under philanthropy he was taking over lots of resources. Very factual in many ways. And quantum too is an interesting name because you can look it up and see who owns the Quantum Corporation, another big, hhh, philanthropist. [Alan chuckles.] The way it was done, how it was presented, how the folk will go and clap and think it's all, what a wonderful person this is. An arch villain, you see. That's what you're dealing with is arch villains. You really are.

I mean, you ever wonder why the media has always shut up about Epstein? Hm? And we're told don't go any further, because he was lower down the totem pole here for this big organization.   That's why they were told to shut up. But the characters behind them, and above them, they are part of the real, you know, mob that can run the world here, and the finances of the world. That goes for wars and everything else by the way, you know. And you literally, the blackmailability of all these politicians and generals, anybody who's anybody, men and women, totally blackmailable.

This is straight out of James Bond. People who run countries, and they're never elected to the countries. It's no different than when the Royal Institute of International Affairs and the Council on Foreign Relations, a private club remember, a global club for world government, hm, and world domination of all resources. Rockefeller was in it, the whole bunch of them. And there they are, you know, drafting up legislation for governments in Canada, the States and Mexico to jump in on and agree and sign for unification and for so-called free trade, which is integration into...

That's how Europe went, with a rough Association of countries, Economic Association, and then legislation would go step-by-step, planned that way, to integrate them all, until you lose your sovereignty. That was the whole point of it. The same group did it, they drafted the one up for Europe years ago. They did it for the Canada, the States and Mexico. I put out, it was actually from a videotape, I taped it at the time years ago back in the late 90s, and then again just after it before 2005 again, when some of the leaders of it came out AS the CFR for Canada, for the first time, a private club, saying, admitting that they drafted it all up for the integration of this, you know, and how wonderful. It was signed by...

Well, the public had no say in this at all. You see, private clubs, all the circles. Down below there's levels of them but they all belong to the big one at the very, very top, folks. You'll often find the leaders that come out as spokespeople have, it's not just horizontal interlinking of these circles, it's upwards as well, you see. So, certain ones go up and up and up, they get higher up into the upper echelons. But they're still workers.

But when it came to the Epstein thing and the people who funded him, and all the different revelations that came out with the Whitney Webb interviewing Farmer and different people, this is amazing stuff, and it's been just immediately just covered up with the Covid thing, they just shut it down with the Covid thing and distract them. Because it's so important to know it, if you really want to know how the world works. Way more to it than, he wasn't some horny guy, eh, with his horny mistress that recruited... No, no, it's way, way, way bigger than that. And that's the lower part of the totem pole. Way up there, they'd won't touch the next ones up there who financed it all, the kind of overseer, the majordomo for certain parts of the nation in the States, eh, or the international ones above him. It's just astonishing. That's the real world. That's the real world. Private organizations, straight out of James Bond. Straight out of James Bond. That's how it's done. That's how it's really done, folks, for those who don't know.

I had to laugh too, how they show you little ideas in a sense, ideas based on the little truisms where I think it was Jodie Foster was in a movie. Was it Contact, First Contact or something, I don't remember what it was called. A spacey thing. It wasn't the greatest movie, I thought, a bit boring. Sci-fi type. So, this machine was getting made, a massive machine. It really almost looked like a big Ferris kind of wheel type thing, but spun, spun, spun in different directions… or a big gyroscope. Then they would drop a capsule down through the middle of it, this time warp thing, and you'd be whisked off into some other dimension.

So, Jodie Foster supposedly had been trained as the pilot of this thing, you see, although you didn't do much except sit on your behind, I think, and it guided itself. But regardless, it was canceled, it broke apart at the last minutes through again subterfuge or something or terrorism. Of course, the poor girl’s heart was just destroyed, I mean, she was going to be famous and yada, ya. Well, she gets a phone call at night, and everything in her home is electronic starts talking to her and telling her to, you know, look on the Internet and things like that, she does that and bingo, or put on the TV. Everything was obviously controlled from some other outside power, right.

Eventually she hears this guy talking, she knew who he was. He's a kind of Rockefeller type character, a man who was so well-known for financing and massive projects to do with resources and military and God knows what else. He says, why are you worried about things? Turns out he's in his own, his OWN space station going around the world, you see. He says, well yeah, we have these little perks like this. After all, our companies get put in charge of creating these things and designing them and so on, he says, and then getting financed to do it, he says, for research and development. Well, it's only right that we make copies for our own private use and things.

Well that's more, that's closer to the truth of how things really work. It really is. Do you really think that the characters that work for the military-industrial complex for instance, get financing... Oh, it's all so separate and so compartmentalized they don't know what their part fits into. Now, somebody knows who designed the whole darn thing, folks, and they got paid by the taxpayer to do it. Anyway, that's how the world really works. It's done by horizontal and vertical systems of interlocking rings. Maybe 90% of the folk in each ring don't know the real higher agenda of their part in it. It's all based on faith. And their palms are well greased, you see, so they're very, quite content to say nothing, not to ask questions. That's how most of the system works.

I've mentioned this before, the same in Freemasonry, you don't get up in Freemasonry by asking what do the degrees mean and so on? No, no. You keep your mouth shut and you listen, you know. The whole idea in Freemasonry, they show you that with the three monkeys, you know. One’s got his eyes covered, one’s got the mouth covered, one’s got his ears plugged. That's what you do, it's based on faith, that whatever order you're given from above is for a legitimate reason, you don't have to understand it.

It's very much like Marxism because that's based on the same thing. You'll never understand true communistic science, you see, the science of it, they pretend it's a science. That's why they'd always go to Stalin who could reinterpret things for you. He'd never mentioned that he told you a different thing the last time you asked him, no, no, just accept the new saying as some point of wisdom and you're just too dumb to understand it.

It's the same thing for most organizations. Because we are, again, so well studied. They know all this about us. Most folk will shut up to get up the ladder. Politicians know what too, you don't ask questions when you join a party. You wait to be told something that's volunteered to you, you know. That's how it's done. That's how you're picked and chosen too, to be used, even from school. Someone who's too bright won't follow agendas, they'll get, their ego can get a hold of them, you see. They want folk who will go along with agendas and do what they're told from higher powers. Freemasonry is the same thing. If they've got a use for you at the top, you'll get out of the Lodge you joined and you'll be pulled into some other lodge that's got higher functioning, and they have them for corporations and guys who are the CEOs in certain lodges. That's how it's done. Forget all the occult stuff. The fact is, they get orders, and they… they’re sworn to secrecy. That's why you pick, that's why these organizations exist, they’re already sworn to secrecy.

Again, most folk even in the military think it's a brotherhood. And if you're in the military you want to believe that whatever you're told to do is for a good reason. Again, like communism, or Marxism, or Leninism, or Stalinism, that you just don't understand. So, faith, it's based on faith.

The worst horrors are based on that kind of thing, you know, in secrecy. In true faith there should be no secrecy. There can't be any secrecy in true faith. There's no need for secrecy in true faith if you're telling the honest truth of everything.

Before I forget again folks, I should really mention you can send a few bucks my way @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. As always, I start off by telling you to make a note of all the other sites that I’ve got up there because if anything happens to the .com site hopefully, if I go quiet and you just know what's happened and you can't get through on the .com site, look into the other sites listed @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. These are my official sites, these are mine, you see, and hopefully you can get the information that you're looking for and listen to the latest shows or talks. I won't say shows, listen to the latest talks.

Because we're going through history, as I've said before. I've been going through history for my whole life I think really. It's important to understand, for those that really want to understand it, the folk who can handle truth without cracking up or becoming nasty or disheartened and so on. Truth actually helps you get through things; it gives you strength. It doesn't mean that you go around like a crazy person trying to convert people like a real, you know, conversion thing in a religion. You gotta be very careful what you say to people these days. Especially today, these days. There's so many spies around there in society that will turn you in.

I mentioned, this is just like [Alan chuckles.] the horror leading up to Bolshevism and after Bolshevism in the Soviet system, because folk will turn you in thinking that they're doing the state a favor, you're a bad person. It's all in the programming from the SAGE group, the subgroup that they employed, behavioral insights teams and so on, they admitted that they're going to make you feel all guilty, and have the ones turn on everybody, use the crowd against the individuals that won't go along with something. That's what you do, use the crowd. Hm?

It works awfully well. Because they really will believe they're doing, that you're a bad person, they'll believe it. You'll see them attacking folk that are trying to talk to them and saying, look, this is all nonsense, this is all happening for a different reason. They'll say, who are you, you're not the person on TV I'm watching every night, you know, some famous newscaster or whatever, you know. And that's sadly true, that's how it works. It's very easy to turn people against the rest, you see. Information warfare, you see, it works, it's well understood the techniques on terrifying people into compliance and terrifying them into attacking people who won't comply.

That's how the horrors happened down through history by organized groups running the show at the top. It works awfully well. It's the same with the folk in the streets, a lot of the followers are deranged. You can see that in the ones who are deranged. They're terrified, they've been taught that all folk are, especially the white folk, or their parents even are evil, evil, it's all their fault this has happened to the world, they believe the world is falling apart. They've heard that since childhood through schooling and through high school and through college. And they believe it. They are totally indoctrinated.

Their purposes that they used to live for have been totally destroyed through war, [Alan chuckles.] a war which they didn't even know, or their parents knew was happening on them. They thought everything was happening by itself. The system you live in in any era is there generally to serve those who rule it. When they suddenly give you revolutions, like sexual revolution, and the musical revolutions, and gender, men, you know, the whole rock glam thing, that rock glam, or glam rock, where you end up with guys spending more money on their hairdos eventually then the women were doing, and wearing tight glistening pants and things... That was all part of it too. They have no idea all this was planned long before they even heard the first twang from the guitar.

That's how you do things. They're not called revolutions for nothing. Most revolutions, I've said so many times, are not violent. They're cultural. Like Bezmenov said years later, they're cultural. That's how you change society. Gramsci said it too, don't hit them head-on with ideological debates and arguments. He says, go in and you become them, quietly, then you gradually start changing the culture. It might take a generation, two generations, but eventually you will achieve ALL the ends. Because you have altered gradually the culture. That's how it's been done.

But with mass communication television and so on, it was far easier to do it with the rock, you know, drugs and rock 'n' roll and sex and all the rest of it. Then you deal again as I said with the fallout of sex with unwanted children, with national health services and abortion and so on. That's how you do it. It's all planned in advance. People sat at the top and thought about all this before they gave any of it to you. Oh yeah. But when you're young you don't realize it, you think, oh they're doing it all because they want us to enjoy ourselves with sex, right. Really? Is that what you thought? Of course you did. [Alan chuckles.] That's how it was promoted. Then the marriages fell apart. The communist planks are all getting fulfilled, eh?

Interesting that the Soviet Union, they had some main spokespeople at the time when they first started with the Bolsheviks and so on, and they had a woman there who was in charge of sexual progress for the Soviets [Alexandra Kollontai]. She was all for free sex and eventually, you know, abortion and the whole thing, in the early days. They realized she was having such an impact, she was heavily promoted by the Soviets at the time, by the government, the Politburo, that they were getting a bad, an even worse name abroad in the countries that weren’t going along with it at the moment, at that time, but also inside Russia the people weren't breeding. And they thought, you know, if it goes on like this, they weren't having live children born and all the rest of it, and families to take care of them, they said without the crisis and shortages of food and all the rest of it in the Soviet system, that they wouldn't be, the state wouldn't be able to afford to feed the whole country if they were having children without having the parents. You see. So, they got rid of her. They literally got rid of her, hhhch, and kicked her out of the country. I think she went over to the States eventually and became a governess or something like that. But anyway, it's a long story, who cares.

The fact is, that they needed parents, so they started to repush the value of marriage again. AS they were using the same technique to destroy the West, with a lot of the help from the folk in America already that were well, actually there was, I think Bezmenov said something awfully true. He said that when he came over to eventually North America, he came to Canada, and he got a job in the CBC. Which is like Canadians version of the BBC. We call it the Communist Broadcasting Corporation in Canada, you know, not Canadian. He said when he came over, he got a job there and he said he met more true communists inside the CBC than he ever knew in Russia. And he wasn't being facetious, you know. So, there's lots of help all through, you know, their plants were all there and all through America too.

Many of them now are emerging again, some who still lived through from say the riots of the 60s, etc. Some of the organizations that now police all of you, it's quite amazing, were classed as terrorist organizations back then because they were blowing up government installations inside America in New York and places like that. They're now prominent people now running the show. The same folk, eh? Ha. And their children are out there on the streets a lot of them too guiding a lot of it. It's amazing to watch it and see it happening. And by knowing it, you almost at times wonder what century you're in because it's like repetitions of what you've read before, down to a T, with the same slogans and everything.

But again, it's for a purpose that most folk never quite figure out. Because they are, with Covid and all the rest of it going on, they want to bring you into a post-democratic system. That's been on the cards for years. In the 1970s the Club of Rome, the big think tank for the United Nations and for the big groups like the CFR, it's a big think tank, came out and talked about democracy was just too slow and cumbersome and they couldn't get the big projects done because you have to please different groups and you can't have them all pleased at the same time, so democracy was just an impedance, you see, to their progress. So welcome to the post-democratic system for those who haven't quite figured it out.

Sure enough, since 9/11 you've been losing all the rights you had anyway. You're getting used to being guided and told what to do and rubberstamped and dropping your pants at airports and stuff like that, taking your shoes off like some prisoner. And there you go, you know. It's all, it's incessant now. It's all planned that way, folks.

They're not separate incidents that are happening like 9/11, the Covid today and… No, no. These are all steps in the same program, thought out to be part, to be a continuous program of reeducation as they like to call it and reformatting society and the human being itself.

So, go into @cuttingthroughthematrix.com and send a few bucks my way. Maybe you can buy the books and discs if you want. You can see how to do it on the website. Cash is okay. PayPal is fine. Checks are okay. I think Money Gram too is still okay with some countries. I know that some international postal money orders are not getting issued by some countries. Some of them are still issuing them, which are okay to be cashed in other countries like Canada. So, there are ways of getting cash to me and hopefully I can keep ticking along here because it costs a lot of money just to even have all the sites up. Never mind the fact that there's nothing else I can get done when I'm doing these talks. Because it's a lot of information to process every day and through the week and putting things together. And answer people too.

And I really do like to hear from everybody. Even if I can't get back to everybody, I read the stuff. Because you get the experiences of real people as we go through all this together. You see it from different points of view and from different eyes, different countries, different experiences, but you get a bigger picture of everything. And that's real history you're living through. Not the authorized history that's probably been prewritten before they gave you Covid, just like 9/11. I'm sure they had the authorized version of what was going to happen pretty well shelved somewhere before it even happened. There's always an authorized version that's contrary to reality and the experiences of those that live through it.

So, it's awfully important to keep, let me know what's happening in your own lives. No one is unimportant here. No man, there's no one unimportant here. Everybody is very important. And don't ever, ever get cowed down to thinking that you're irrelevant or unimportant, that's so untrue. I don't care what you do or how you live or anything else, everybody is very, very valuable in life. Don't ever let that be driven out of you.

Collectivism in the communist type system is meant to make you a cog in the machine until you really will see yourself as a nonhuman being, along the Julian Huxley type of idea, dethroning humanity from its pedestal as something special and superior. Well, when you see the abilities that reside in everybody, and the feelings and emotions, and the decisions you can do to do good if you want to, animals don't have the choices. Hm? We have so many choices.

There's definitely a battle between good and evil on the go here, a real battle, folks, with the same, I would call them pretty well demonic characters that gave you these slaughtering revolutions of the past let loose on the planet. There's no doubt about it.

So, as I say, help me tick along by donating to me at the very least @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. And don't be afraid to send me your thoughts and your experiences and your observations in areas. I mentioned before too I've had so many trains go by, heavy, heavy trains, heavier than I have ever seen them before. There was a big lull of course in the last few years, a massive lull in heavy trains, maybe a few a day, maybe 3 or 4, 5 at the most in a day but nothing heavy like that. Now, my house shakes with the heavy cargo, and miles long trains, and maybe 20 or more per day, yeah, and all night long. Sometimes 10 minutes apart.

Where are they all going? Because when you look at the map north of me there's not a lot there. [Alan chuckles.] But we do know that that's where they have the big NORAD underground centers way out in the wilderness there. They'll fly all the important folk in and take them and by train to a certain extent too. But it's not for the general population obviously. And they are stocking up on foodstuffs and heavy, heavy stuffs, propane gas galore, trains of it sometimes, like never before. You're looking at being locked down for some years. That's what I'm seeing here.

This, to come out of this Covid isn't going to be a quick thing. It's an excuse, you see, for whole agenda for the 21st century. And that has to be accomplished under the guise of different things. Under crisis guises. That's where DISguise comes from.

That's what they planned on. The World Bank has said that this is going to go on for at least five years, and maybe even PERMANENTLY. Huh?! Are you getting the picture? Hence the need to terrify the public, oh, a spike, we're all going to die again, oh my goodness. Regardless of the exposés of the, oooooh, the avalanche of pyramids of lies we've had already exposed. And verified by the way. This isn't just conjecture. And they're at it again, the same thing, eh, testing and finding fragments of something, a dead, dead virus, is not something that's killing you.

Most folk, as they say the universities there, I saw this graph, today, and they showed you all these thousands of students, and they showed you state by state by state. Down on the side of the lists there too it showed you all tested positive. And down the list on the right-hand side was hospital cases, zero, zero, zero, zero, there was NONE at all. Nobody's ill with them, most of the young.

So, it doesn't matter. Facts don't matter. Even when you're using their facts. Because it's a massive agenda here, massive agenda. So much is pinned on this. And it’s nothing to do with you or your voting. Because the group that run the planet don't get voted in, but they put the folk who get voted in, in place, in every country.

Now, I'd better give you some articles before I run out of time, eh. Because I am running out of time, it just goes on and on and on. A lot of pertinent articles too. I don't just pick them willy-nilly because again you're overwhelmed with too much data. A lot of it's partly true, some really falsified, so you've got to really pick the stuff that's got some truth to it by verifying it. And you can verify articles, or at least the truth on certain articles for yourselves from the official sources when they quote them. One of them is from, you know this well, Helena Handbasket, eh, Helena, Handbasket, and that's from the Irish Sentinel.

Possible and Probable legal action needed to deal with Irish Government treasonous Covid Tyranny (Alan: Yep.)

theirishsentinel.com / 8 Sept 2020 / By Helena Handbasket

In the same week that the CDC in the United States admitted that their mortality figures for Covid-19 were completely bogus, (A: And they did.) stating that only 6% of Covid-19 deaths

(A: …because they had thousands and thousands put down as deaths. Anybody with a particle of a fragment of the particular DNA from the virus, eh, from DEAD viruses would show up as positive with the silly test that they do. Anyway…)

stating that only 6% of Covid-19 deaths could be directly attributed to the virus, it seems that now Ireland has also admitted to falsifying figures to terrorise the Irish people and as an excuse to decimate their economy.

(A: This is the agenda. This is an agenda, folks. Always remember that prime and foremost. Don’t get into these arguments with things. It’s an agenda. They've told us, a world of austerity. I gave the talks on austerity years ago from the United Nations and all the folk that were associated with it.)

The figure for Ireland comes in at even less than the CDC at 5.57% equating to a rather conveniently round figure of 100 deaths directly from Covid-19; allegedly.

(A: And even then, there'll be other reasons, I guarantee you. So, for the country eh, 100 deaths. Hm.)

In fact, there seems to be no evidence whatsoever that anyone has died directly from Covid-19 in the document below.

(A: They give you the document from the government sites in Ireland…)

https://www.hpsc.ie/a-z/respiratory/coronavirus/novelcoronavirus/casesinireland/epidemiologyofcovid-19inireland/COVID-19_Daily_epidemiology_report_(NPHET)_04092020_website.pdf?fbclid=IwAR0_wTwTbLt2JoO7z9hnkcUKRXy65f9QeigSn5T64qbOMkaDO1VFkuwaqCs

(A: They got the daily epidemiology report there to show you that he's got the stuff to back up what he's saying here.)

If we look at Page 11 of the document we can clearly see that 1,777 deaths have been listed as related to Covid-19, but in the following lines we can again clearly see that there appears to be a contradiction in the fact that 99 'cases' are Probable with 159 'cases' being, at best, 'Possible'.

(A: [Alan chuckles.] That's not scientific, you see, probably or possible.)

The report states that of the 1,777 'Covid deaths' confirmed, 1,677 had already been suffering from underlying health conditions and as such Covid-19 was not the primary or even possibly related to the cause of death at all.

When we look at the median age of the deaths attributed to Covid-19, we can see that it is 84 years old.

(A: That's the rough age, you see, the average…)

But the average age of death/longevity in Ireland today is 82 years old, so it is clear that so-called ‘Covid-19’ deaths could just as easily be attributed to old age considering that the average age of the deceased is two years longer than the national life expectancy.

The conclusion I take from this official government document is that there is no evidence presented in the report to confirm in any way that a single person has died directly from Covid-19.

I say this due to the fact that no post mortems have been carried out, or been allowed to be carried out, under the pretext that this could be a further concern for infection of pathologists. This is clearly nonsense as pathologists have been conducting autopsies for decades on victims of far more serious infections than coronavirus without consequences for their personal health.

(A: And he goes on to say it. Again, all it does is point to what he says here, he says...)

THIS IS HIGH TREASON (A: …with all of this evidence here.)

The ramifications of the brutal lockdown of society, excess deaths due to the withdrawal of critical medical interventions, such as emergency procedures, cancer screening etc., school closures, business closures, mass unemployment, increased suicides, alcohol and drug abuse, domestic violence etc., will be felt for decades to come.

(A: And that’s what it’s meant to do. They knew all this before they locked you all down.)

Surveillance technology being deployed to track and trace every individual stupid enough to comply with it will destroy any illusion of perceived democracy and freedom. Politburo diktats on masks, testing, vaccines, the swift move to a cashless society will end freedom permanently and leave Ireland in a state of permanent tyranny. This Covid-19 fraud is not a short term problem for Ireland or any other part of the world which has fallen victim to this cabal. It is a new way of life for us all and it will not be pleasant.

Well, that’s the agenda, folks. This is the whole agenda, you see, that they couldn’t rush through and persuade you to just follow with sustainability and the climate change, you're all causing the climate to change, it's all your fault and there's too many people. So, this is it here, you see. You're going to get rationing and all the rest of it. It's, really, it's a hell on earth they're bringing in. And this is what they know. It's all planned years ago, this whole thing.

There's not any stage here at all to do with Covid lockdown, before you even heard of Covid, that wasn't discussed in think tanks step by step-by-step, what would the effects be here, what would the effects be there, what would, yada, yada? What do they want? They're going to bring in austerity. Well how do you do that? Shortages. Create shortages. How do you do that? Put everybody out of work, lock them down, yada, yada ya. It's all planned a long, long time ago. Including the fallout from depressions and so on, they knew all that would come. I've got articles here from the 90s about it by the way. They said if they ever locked down the country for any particular things like pandemics, these are the things that would happen. It's all happening.

Also, this other article here came out just the other day too...

Flu and pneumonia killed TEN TIMES as many Brits as Covid last week, stats reveal thesun.co.uk / 11 Sept 2020

ILLNESSES such as influenza and pneumonia are killing more people than the coronavirus in the UK, figures have revealed.

(A: This is recent, this is new stuff, new information.)

Of deaths registered in the week ending August 28 in the UK, just 101 mentioned the coronavirus.

The ONS (A: Office of National Statistics.) states that 12.6 per cent of deaths were caused by flu and pneumonia, against 1.1 per cent that were caused by Covid-19.

Well, Covid 19, you can’t believe ANYthing they tell you now that they’ve been caught so many times lying and fudging the figures. Even paying doctors to put it in their death certificates. And the hospitals. By the way, there’s one case that got attention because a man got a notification from the hospital that his mother was diagnosed with coronavirus. Well, she was buried six months ago.

Shelby County woman who passed away 6 months ago gets letter saying she is COVID-19 positive - kens5.com / 3 Sept 2020

What I realized they were doing is they are, the hospitals, because they’re getting paid an extra 40 to 50 grand if they put down a patient as being coronavirus positive, eh, especially if they can get them on ventilators, they get all that extra cash. And more, more if they die of it. I thought, well, they're going back through the death certificates to try to fudge it and put up the numbers for the hospital. That's what they're doing, eh? Amazing, eh?

So anyway, I'll put these articles including the last one I just mentioned. And this one to do with, again, with the flu killing more folk, etc., another article too. Because this is the agenda for the 21st century, remember, with 2015, 2030, all these different parts of it being parts to be implemented and fulfilled by the time the next one rolls along, you see the different parts of it all split up through the century for the meetings that they have. When they meet in 2030, they'll have their meetings and they'll say, this is what we've accomplished, we're on target with this, this, this and this, and we're a bit behind here, here and here and so on. That's how it's worked. It's micromanaged, folks, our lives, eh.

The road to madness: How eco-obsessed councils - under cover of Covid - have spent millions of YOUR money to shut roads across Britain

I mentioned this before, I says, the Club of Rome said they are so happy, all the agendas that they couldn't get you to fulfill through sustainability and the climate change could be done under Covid, they said, right. And they won't allow, and they've got all these articles out from, look at their websites, they boast about it and they're just having a dance with glee about it. Mind you, they get huge money as well, all these prostitutes that literally sell out their countries and their peoples and they prosper as they do you in deliberately for an ugly, ugly cause. The Club of Rome said that they were going to force governments not to allow anything to open up that, unless it had sustainability assessments. Meaning, necessary assessments for sustainability, eco-friendly, etc., etc., right. But they mentioned, the Club of Rome before that yeah, the air is so wonderfully clean now, eh, isn't that wonderful and etc. Well, there's no traffic on the road, you see. So, here's the next step…

The road to madness: How eco-obsessed councils - under cover of Covid - have spent millions of YOUR money to shut roads across Britain

dailymail.co.uk / 11 Sept 2020

(A: That's only one article of many actually. Then they give you an example…)

London's Marylebone Road is even more congested than usual. Seemingly endless lines of cars, taxis, lorries and vans stretch back for at least a couple of miles.

Ever since it was built in the 18th century to catch spillover traffic from busy Oxford Street to the south, this road has been one of the capital’s thoroughfares, a major east-west arterial route.

Until recently, it was a six-lane highway, essential for the huge quantity of vehicles — 80,000 every day — that use it.

Then, some years ago, it went down to four lanes for private vehicles after a bus lane was installed on either side.

And now, in some stretches, it is down to a single lane each way for cars, vans and lorries. Hence the gridlock.

…hardly any cyclists are actually using the new lanes on the Marylebone Road…

(A: They’re bad people, they’re not using the bicycle lanes, eh?)

Why just two lanes? Because London’s Mayor, Sadiq Khan (A: [Alan chuckles.]), has taken advantage of emergency government powers — introduced this spring as a result of the pandemic — to install cycle lanes, financed by taxpayers.

(A: Isn't it amazing they use your tax money so's they can, so you get plundered that way, and then a lot of folk obviously can't use bicycles. It writes off all the elderly too, or even middle-aged folk with different problems too, it just writes them all off from participating in life and travel, eh. But that's the price you pay for sustainability, isn't it?)

Transport for London says this is a ‘temporary measure’ and ‘under review’. But many believe the changes are likely to be permanent — and the capital’s drivers, businesses and local residents are furious, saying the measures are crippling trade and ruining the neighbourhood.

That's one of many, as they introduce the agenda for the 21st century, hm, with its next part 2030, etc. Not so far off, eh? And what did they say at the last sustainability meeting, and a lot of countries signed on, to end private cars in the next few years, by 2030. Germany signed on to it too, it was published in the papers.

Another one too, as you and your democracies are there to save you and make sure that you can stay alive, eh? That's another lie.

10pm curfew 'could be introduced across Britain' after move worked in Belgium

uk.news.yahoo.com / 9 Sept 2020

(A: So, I guess if they chop the heads off in Saudi Arabia for certain things and so on, we should do the same in Britain shouldn't we? Maybe it's already been, I'll have to think back on it, eh? But there you go, ‘after move worked in Belgium’. This is the excuse they've used for years, I've noticed it, well they do it in this country so let's try it here. This is how they do uniformity across the world in everything. Big agendas, eh. It says…)

It comes after drinkers in Bolton were told to finish their pints before being kicked out of pubs early in an attempt to curtail young people partying, which is thought to have led to a surge in coronavirus cases.

(A: I wonder who thought that, eh? [Alan chuckles.] Can they give us any evidence for their thoughts, hm? So, the government's going to use that too as they cut down.)

…had 120 cases per 100,000 people,

(A: So, I guess they just tested a whole bunch of folk, and you're guaranteed to get a certain percentage with some old decaying dead virus particles in their nostrils from any kind of coronavirus actually, even the common cold. It says…)

as contact tracing revealed the rise was fuelled by citizens in their 20s and 30s spending time in pubs.

(A: Well that was the British pastime that. I mean, it always was. Mind you, folk used to converse in pubs and that's where you learned real things and often from points of view. Because you’ll get the standard point of view in the BBC, that always lie to you. So, folk communicated in bars, that was your meeting place for information. That's why eventually they put in TVs there and sports, to drown out conversation, folks. It was all deliberate, years ago. Anyway…)

According to The Daily Telegraph, ministers could extended the "curfew" to the entire country, after the measure had success in Belgium.

A senior Government source told the paper that ministers have discussed the possibility of extending the curfew.

Jeremy Hunt (A: …he should be hunted!), Tory chairman of the Commons Health and Social Care Select Committee, asked the Health Secretary on Tuesday if the Government will look to South Korea and Hong Kong as examples of good practice for stemming an increase in cases and avoiding a second lockdown.

Responding, Mr Hancock (A: Hhhhhhh.) told the Commons: "In some countries, not only in the Far East but also closer to home, they have seen a rise in cases especially among younger people, taken action and that has turned the curve.

(A: Well, no one's going into hospital with it as being sick, folks.)

It's good that you can get it and not know it because then you get immunity. Otherwise you would get sick, and you wouldn't get over it, hm?! So, they always give you the cases. They don't say, wait a minute, a month later, they're all fine they've got antibodies and they're over it. That's what happens. Hm? Otherwise they'd be sick in the hospital. But they're not. And that's what's called herd immunity, that's how you GET herd immunity. That's how you've always got herd immunity in the past. M-hm. But facts don't matter when there's a big agenda here, right.

Another article too…

Coronavirus: Households to be banned from meeting each other in Birmingham, Solihull and Sandwell (A: Hmmm.)

news.sky.com / 11 Sept 2020

The leader of Birmingham City Council said the move comes after an increase in coronavirus-related hospital admissions.

(A: Oooooooooo. You see the same propaganda across all the media, you see, oh there's a spike, a spike happening, getting you ready for a complete lockdown for the entire winter into next year. Isn't it amazing? Fauci said at the beginning, eh, I remember, about February, after he denied the US would even be hit with it or bothered with it. When he really got going with it, he said, oh yeah, he says, it's going to be total lockdown, life will never be the same again, he said, this will last, a lockdown, right down into next year, at least. You can take it to the bank, they tell you at the time. And I says, no, they'll probably give you a month or two in the summer. Because if they feel there's a kickback from the public, if they're kicking back on it, so they give you a little break, then they'll say, oh it's spiking again. That's exactly the formula they're following, you know. M-hm.)

The Department of Health order was announced at a news conference by the West Midlands Combined Authority.

COVID-19 infections in Birmingham have been increasing…

(A: It's only, no, it's the testing's been increasing. [Alan laughing.] Guaranteed. Remember the fellow in Africa, the Prime Minister of the country there [John Magufuli] and he, and it was genuine, he did put in all the samples of these swabs from, he even swabbed fruit, even used motor oil, he did that too, and different things, and sent it all off to the same WHO lab in the country. They all came back positive for Covid. So, there you go. They just threw the WHO group testing labs out of the country, it's such bogus nonsense. When there's agendas there, what do you think these labs are getting paid to do, folks? Big money, eh? Please your masters, eh, oh, positive, positive, positive. So anyway…)

It means people in the city will not be able to mix with any households, indoors or in private gardens, except for those in a support bubble, from Tuesday. (A: Oh.)

According to NHS Digital data, the latest seven-day rate for Birmingham to 8 September showed 78.2 cases per 100,000 with 892 cases over the period - among the highest in the city since …

…but nobody's in hospitals, you know. Or they'd tell you. It's just cases, eh. N-n-n. But again, facts don't matter anymore. You see, this is a very important agenda, you know, they've worked on this for years to get to this step here. And…

Motorways in England to trial (A: ...another part falls in with getting you off the road. It's just coincidence though.)

60mph speed limit (A: This is your highways, your major highways, your motorways.)

in bid to boost air quality

inews.co.uk / 12 Sept 2020

(A: Again, here's your agenda, you know, get them all of the road, and just fulfilling it all under Covid, eh. So...)

Four areas of England’s motorway network will have the new limits installed

(A: I love how in the democracies the people are never ever consulted, eh?)

Reduced speed limits of 60mph will be trialled on stretches of motorway to combat air pollution.

(A: Well, this is for the whole country, you know where it’s going, eh, very quickly. They'll give you all this, oh it's a wonderful what's happened. Mind you, if nothing is getting moved or transported, you'll starve to death because it's all brought, traveled by road or rail, hm, diesel.)

… cut from the usual 70mph (A: …to 60.), will be rolled out in areas identified as exceeding safe nitrogen dioxide (NO2) limits.

(A: Wow. [Alan sighs.] There ya go.)

They will be in force 24 hours a day on four 4.5 mile stretches, effective from the end of September, with a review after one year to check if air pollution lowers.

(A: There ya go, eh, there ya go.)

NO2 is released from car exhausts and leads to global warming.

(A: Oh see, there it is, global warming. There ya go. Darn, there's that global warming again.)

Around 40,000 premature deaths each year are linked to poor air.

(A: Prove it. Give us the statistics and the facts and stuff, eh. 40,000 exactly. Not 40,001 or 41,000. No, it's 4 0 0 0 0. There ya go. That's when you know there's a con taking place.)

“Ultimately the air quality challenge will be solved ‘at the tailpipe’ by vehicle manufacturers and changes in vehicle use.

(A: Meaning you won't be able to drive at all, eh.)

"Until this happens we will continue our extensive programme of pioneering research and solutions."

(A: Yep. Hhhhhhh. And they get the cops to enforce it all eh.)

Other motorway speed changes

(A: They've got a whole bunch of things here too.)

The UK Government has set a target to end conventional car and van sales (A: There you go, you see, you get the combustible engine off the road…) by 2040, and for almost every car and van on the road to be a zero emission vehicle by 2050.

Well, they’ve already signed on to have that all done, again, by 2030 I think some had signed on to it. I'll put these articles up to show you the agendas for sustainability is all underway, folks.

OHIO: Get Ready For COVID-19 FEMA Camps

technocracy.news / 7 Sept 2020

(A: That's the Federal Emergency Management Agency.)

Don’t blame Democrats for Republican Governor Mike DeWine’s dystopian partnering with FEMA to set up isolation camps throughout Ohio to fight COVID-19. DeWine is undeterred by multiple court orders striking down parts of his unconstitutional mandates. ? TN Editor

As our long national nightmare of “15 days to flatten the curve” drags into its sixth (sixth!) month, many of our nation’s governors and bureaucrats are inventing new ways to wield their power.

(A: They’re all getting paid off to do that. That’s why they’re put there, folks. They grease the palms. And the ones who hang out, standoff, they standoff and they won’t accept it right off the bat, just get offered higher bribes until they go along with it. That’s how the system works across the world really.)

On August 31, without much fanfare and with almost no news coverage, Ohio Gov. Mike DeWine (R-Lost His Way) (A: [Alan chuckles.]) ordered Interim Director of Health Lance M. Himes to amend the insidious (and unconstitutional) health order the state’s citizens have been suffering under since March to create what amounts to FEMA camps.

Never mind that deaths and hospitalizations have been on the decline in Ohio since July 1.

Actually, a lot longer, before that, the real deaths and all that. You see, the Covid thing was just flattening off through May, it was going way down, plummeting. Which is normal for these kind of viruses by the way. Another article too from ZeroHedge…

Woodward Book Exposes General James Mattis' Plot To Overthrow The US Government

zerohedge.com / 10 sept 2020

(A: I mean, there's no, there's no real disagreement about what went on here, eh.)

According to a pre-release excerpt from the Washington Post Bob Woodward writes about a discussion between General James Mattis and Director of National Intelligence Dan Coats about a plot to overthrow the elected government of the United States.

[...] “Mattis quietly went to Washington National Cathedral to pray about his concern for the nation’s fate under Trump’s command and, according to Woodward, told Coats, “There may come a time when we have to take collective action” since Trump is “dangerous. He’s unfit.” (read more)

It’s got the links there to read more about it and so on. That's from Zero Hedge that article.

These Black Lives Matter riots, you see how they're all led by white youngsters, eh, and some that are not so youngsters either by the way, you know. But as I say, apart, the ones at the top, I have no doubt about it, are the same characters that are run by intelligence agencies. Which also are completely connected with the big tax-free foundations, as you well know. These are part of a massive intelligence network system all these big foundations under charitable causes and so on, huge ones, eh, like the Rockefeller and Ford, Carnegie and many others. They're all connected. They're one big system of intelligent systems. They fund the changes across the world. They fund armies to change things in different directions and systems and so on for their own good. Again, part of the big MEGA group I think, I'm pretty certain all of them are.

The ones who really lead them are using the same tactics. They're all trained by intelligence sources to do what they're doing. The ones who follow them are just the youngsters who literally [Alan chuckles.] haven't got a clue what really is behind it all, you know. They're just the sheep that Orwell talked about who are always used in riots. He mentioned that in Animal Farm, eh, four legs good, two legs bad. Trotsky and Lennon said, we shall win by slogans. Just short slogans, you know, that's all you hear. They can't just debate anything, they just get a slogan, as though it's a holy, holy term, they just keep repeating it as though it was a holy term, you know, as if it was.

Another article too, a Jesuit, the Jesuits are amazing what's going on here. There's one priest in the States there that his Bishop just disowned him basically, and his bishop is a Jesuit. But this priest was just giving online talks, I guess it's like Internet's sermons, eh. He talked about the terrible, that people can't vote for folk who are promoting rioting and the destruction of the church and the destruction of the country, and his Jesuit Bishop I think came down on him for it. So, the Jesuits are an amazing group, aren't they? They always were. And they were actually, you know, legal at one time. But they seem to be dominating everything again. It says…

Jesuit-Led Parish (A: Another parish there, it's a different article.) Asks Parishioners to Take Pledge Affirming ‘White Privilege’ Must End

breitbart.com / 5 Sept 2020

The pastor of a New York City, Jesuit-led Roman Catholic parish is asking his parishioners to recite a “pledge for racial justice” during Mass that affirms “white privilege and the culture of white supremacy must be dismantled.”

Rev. Kenneth Boller, S.J., pastor of the Church of St. Francis Xavier, asks parishioners to recite the “pledge for racial justice” after communion:

This is disgusting what’s going on in churches. What’s that got to do with churches? Church is supposed to be for everybody. You don’t start putting people up or down in churches, hm. A bigger agenda is on the go, eh. Big agendas.

Never mind the fact that a lot of the Protestants churches are being funded from overseas. [Alan chuckles.] They're funding the pastors now. Again, the Bernays technique, don't bother getting the flocks, persuading them individually, just gets the ones who lead them. So these TV evangelists were set up, that's all come out, even from Israel, they've admitted it from Israel when they found out a lot of the money from their own budget was going to these pastors to have them on board to be pro-Israel, so all their flock would be pro-Israel and pro the wars, etc. I'll put these articles up.

It's just kind of interesting to see how things really work. But it shouldn't be shocking to anybody. I mean, it's the same with lobbying. Every country in the world, if you are a wealthier country, every country that's not as, even ones who are maybe even more wealthy, are there lobbying to get more cash for their countries from YOU, you know, that's what happens. Because they use your countries like a bank account. Your countries shouldn't be loaning money out even to other nations. I mean, who started this whole system? That didn't used to exist, you know. [Alan chuckles.] And you are the guarantors, always, to pay off debts from loans that cannot, and they don't expect them to, be paid back. The folk in your own country, you're put down as guarantors and you end up paying it over and over and over. Then they give them another loan. It's a racket, a racket, folks. It's gangsterism is what it is. It's always under the guise of doing good, isn't it?

Oh, here's another one. And all the characters are in on the money, getting the money off you.

Long-awaited … (A: ...long-awaited, like we're all waiting breathlessly, eh...)

Long-awaited NHS Covid contact-tracing app will FINALLY launch in England and Wales in two weeks, Department of Health announces - a day after Sturgeon launched it in Scotland

dailymail.co.uk / 11 Sept 2020

(A: There you go. So, they've got England, Scotland and Wales apparently, this app here. That's a contact tracing app to launch...)

…launch on September 24…

(A: There you go. N-n-n. It's...)

…a 'game changer'…

(A: All these promotional things you'll see in advertising for all the other products, that use the same term, it's a ‘game changer’, eh?)

…would be ready by May, but its rollout was repeatedly delayed because the software struggled to pass trials on the Isle of Wight.

(A: They always use islands and stuff for these trials, don’t they, eh?)

The app will add to the NHS Test & Trace service which aims to track down people who have been close to those infected with the coronavirus. It will use Bluetooth to keep an anonymous log of everyone each user has been close to, and alert them …

(A: You’re talking about Stasi. I mean, can you imagine the tyrannies in the past, they would DROOL for this kind of power, folks. And this is it, it’s got nothing to do with Covid. Hm? Hm? NOTHING!)

I've got other articles here, I'll put them all up by the way, the links to them from the sources, which admit that for every person that they're testing positive... And if you have a broken particle, they can't tell you if it's live, dead, or long dead, or if it's from somebody else. Because your nose, they're always dying off in your nose, all these different viruses. Always. That's your first level of defense, on ALL the stuff that's out there. So particles of the DNA will show up as positive. They know this. It's a complete con. A complete and utter con. Right. But facts have got nothing to do with it. It's a huge agenda, MASSIVE agenda for altering the world and how we live and how we’re ruled, folks. Post Democratic, eh. Hm? So far everyone that says positive, they say they can put down for the computer models another 10 per person probably came in contact with them. It's all made up bogus nonsense. [Alan chuckles.]

Coronavirus: Oxford vaccine trial facing 'challenge' as volunteer suffers suspected serious adverse reaction (A: Hhhhhhh!)

news.sky.com / 9 Sept 2020

Researchers are investigating whether the unexplained illness is linked to the vaccine.

(A: N-n-n. Isn’t that amazing, eh? By the way, some of them at Oxford that are in with the big grants also work at Wuhan. [Alan chuckles.] Just coincidence though, eh?!)

The Oxford coronavirus vaccine trial is facing a "challenge", the health secretary has admitted, after it was put on hold due to a suspected serious adverse reaction in one of its volunteers.

(A: By the way, when you look at all the different studies, 80% of the public are getting bad reactions to it. All different degrees, you see. Well, it wasn’t as bad, he only collapsed once and, you know, he broke out in a sweat, he mumbled a bit of nonsense and, you know, but he’s okay now. Maybe. [Alan chuckles.] But here’s this one here anyway…)

Researchers have paused the trial while they investigate the reaction in one of the participants in the UK, it was announced on Tuesday night.

"… we voluntarily paused vaccination to allow review of safety data," a spokesperson for AstraZeneca - the drugmaker working with Oxford University - said.

They explained it was a "routine action" and that it is speeding up the investigation to minimise any potential impact on the trial's timeline.

All this stuff is untested. It takes 10 years minimum to test it, but they’re going to rush it all through in the one year and give it to you anyway. But here anyway, back on track again.

Oxford coronavirus vaccine trials RESUME - dailymail.co.uk / 12 Sept 2020

I tell you what, I’ll bet you anything they got the poor sod that ended up with the bad, bad reaction, and they probably started it off saying, you know, maybe it was something you ate, what d’you think? Oh no, no, I didn’t really eat anything like that. Hhhh, you know, we can give you a few more bucks, you know, here, and they offer a sum and they'll say, well, it was probably something you ate or something, eh? Well, no, no. Double the price, blah blah blah. And eventually get to the right sum, and, okay, it's probably something I ate, you know.

You think this doesn't go on? [Alan chuckles.] It happens all the time these kinds of things. When you have millions and billions riding on, of taxpayers' money riding on private enterprise for big corporations, this is what happens. They won't tell you what the reaction was, by the way, that's so interesting. That's pretty standard. But again, other ones too, even the Moderna that had reactions in different people. Remember that other guy ended up in hospital too in the States with something similar, you know, probably similar symptoms. And that one was willing to go and do it again! Hhhhhhhhhhhh! He must've got offered an awful lot of money, or he's desperate.

The World Bank, eh?

The World Bank Covid-19 Strategic Preparedness and Response Program and Proposed 25 Projects Under Phase 1 - pdf

documents1.worldbank.org / 2 Apr 2020

(A: This is not supposed to be out there I believe. It was initially just for internal use, but they admit on it that, it says, after consideration is publicly available. But it's not [Alan chuckles.] widely publicly available I suppose. This goes into, it's quite interesting, when you read it, it's...)

COVID-19 STRATEGIC PREPAREDNESS AND RESPONSE PROGRAM

(A: …by the World Bank. It's got all the different guidelines and abbreviations and acronyms there. Which are interesting themselves, because you not supposed to, they don't want you to understand what they're prattling on about. I'll just mention here before I'll go any further what it contains within it, a PDF from the World Bank.)

(A: It talks about all the countries, the money they're getting from other countries to supply the Third World countries through this all Covid idea. It runs into billions and billions and billions of dollars who say that they're going to pay it back. A lot of them really haven't had much problem with Covid, however, it's got nothing to do with it. That's always the way of it, isn't it? [Alan chuckles.] It's a great excuse regardless. But it does say, and I think it's on page 6, they say that this agenda for preparedness for Covid in the emergency and so on, is going to last up until 2025.)

Expected Project Approval Date: 02 April 2020

Expected Project Closing Date: 31 March 2025

Expected Program Closing Date: 31 March 2025

And that can be renewed of course at the end of it, that's what they always do with the sunset causes, etc. So, you're looking at five years of this minimum, eh. It will be a completely different world at the end of it obviously because everything is going to change under this whole world system. And that's the point of it, that's the purpose of it with the present loans and so on that they're getting from other countries to give to other countries. But they're preparing for it up to 2025 before it changes to any other system. So, you can pretty well take it to the bank, literally, the World Bank, that this Covid idea is to last at least until 2025. Remember, the world is never to be the same again according to Fauci and many others that are in on the big gang at the top that are all profiting from it, and are all part of it actually, in more ways than you'd ever imagine.

It's a good article to go through for those who want to, you know, take time and go through it step by step by step and look at all these different… You see, the World Bank is a strange organization. It's privately owned but it uses other countries' money, which is a... [Alan chuckles.] it's not really that foreign of an idea, is it, when you look into other ones that started up like that. They've got other countries to sign on for all these grants and loans that they dish out to other countries, after skimming a little off it. Because it's a private organization, like most things are. Like the Bank for International Settlements is really private. Just like the US Federal Reserve is private as well. I'll put it up for those that want to go through it. It's interesting.

It does give you more of an idea that this is meant to last for quite a few years, for the agenda, you know, for the whole agenda. Sustainability, they mentioned sustainability and things like that in it as well. Because all the guys in-the-know are well in... Well, even that, it wasn't supposed to be given to the public initially, they had to go through sort of different trials and say, well yeah, I guess we've censored enough stuff out of it, we can dish it out now to the public. Which tells you you're always getting lied to, eh. There's not a single institution out there that's going to tell you any truth.

Getting back to 9/11, it was the same thing there you know. I thought about it at the time, the head for, at the time, in Britain of the GCHQ, who was also in charge of really the MI6 groups as well, and on all the other… They're under an umbrella in Britain and have been since the time of Victor Rothschild who was the head of it all then, he was in charge, he eventually became in charge of all the intelligence agencies in Britain. It's still the same today. But the head of it came out after 9/11 because the US was saying, why didn't anybody tell us? And he came out and said, and I remember, I even recorded it at the time on the radio. He mentioned it, and it was on an international program. He said we did tell you, we told you to watch out, something, what was going to happen, that the towers were targeted, yada ya, and it was dismissed, you see. That did happen.

Other ones did too. People in Israel came out and said the same thing, they all knew this. They said it was impossible in this day and age to keep secrets, electronic secrets from all the chatter. They've got collecting, collection, you've seen these big, massive golf ball things across Australia and different places. They're putting them across the Mediterranean now, hm, as well. Israel is involved with that one as well, in the Mediterranean, eh, on an island there. It collects all the data and there's not a single transmission from any source that they can't capture. It's been the same from 2001 as well, that's what they said. They said this is impossible, they knew all this was going to happen, that these folks can't keep quiet about it. You'd have to have no cell phones or communications of any electronic devices at all to get together and plan things, never mind not getting seen getting together to even have the planning. [Alan chuckles.] On camera, everything is on camera now. So, in this day and age you can't stop it.

It's the same thing that you're seeing today with the drugs coming in and all that. They could stop that if they wanted to. There's no intention to. This is the days of soma, you know, they've legalized certain drugs. They want the country stoned. Again, going back to the different articles by the military characters and DARPA and the Pentagon, they talk about these mind-altering techniques that they're using for compliance and so on. Oh, how do you get compliance? Well if you drug folk, they're generally pretty compliant, you know, you going to argue about this? Nooo, nooo, nooo. You do what we tell you? Oh sure, okay. Depending on, you know, heavy tranquilizers, no problem. You'll get some compliance... You won't get any effective work out of them, but you'll certainly get compliance for doing what they're told or behaving in some way or another. Unless they're on the other types, you know, the mix, the cocktail mix of fentanyl and massive amphetamines at the same time or cocaine, then it would take 10 folk to hold them down, if they even understood where they were.

You really think they don't know all about everybody else, including all you out there that are doing the rioting? OF COURSE they do. And they know who the leaders are, and they won't arrest the leaders because they are all working for the agencies. [Alan chuckles.]

If you thought about all of the children that Epstein... It's admitted to Epstein had thousands of young females went through that, this group, this selective system. And yet they haven't found many of them, have they? What happened to them? A lot of folk, a lot of these youngsters you know, if they really wisened up and realized what was going on or whatever, or just said no, they wouldn't be allowed to continue if they could point to individuals that are important, you know. As far as I'm concerned everyone is important. But these are, you know, important people, eh. And we know that Epstein said to some of these women, and they've given testimony that he kept telling them, do you realize how powerful these people are, do you know what would happen if anything came out and blah blah blah...? They were all warned off.

D'you notice in California they're allowing another step towards having sex with children, legalizing it? Where they say that if the person who is having... This is a step, you see, it's a step, one of the many steps they've taken over the years. They said that as long as the person who's having sex with the minor is at least 10 years older than them, though not more than 10 years older than the minor… This is how they're taking it. Well, then that will get expanded and expanded in two years' time. You know how it's working. Because that's the agenda, folks.

Did California legislators just vote to protect (gay) adults who have sex with minors? - lifesitenews.com / 8 Sept 2020

Tom Cotton Leads Lawmakers Calling on DOJ to Investigate Netflix for 'Peddling Child Pornography' - breitbart.com / 12 Sept 2020

They said that in 2001, the same year as 9/11 happened when they had that big meeting with the different groups for censor control, they wanted to do away with censorship and so on. They had professors from Canada and States all attend this world meeting about censorship and anti-censorship, and how far they could go pushing the envelope. And many of them were actually censors themselves for organizations that work with governments. So, they all attend. They're not there… You think they're there to help you or to save you from... No, no. They're there to decide how much to push the envelope to completely destroy society, a la the Frankfurt school techniques, eh. Everything had to be completely destroyed right down to even when necrophilia in your culture was prevalent, but they said that wouldn't be enough, according to Adorno and Horkheimer at the Frankfurt... Institute as they called it. It's just astonishing.

You're living through all that happening, and folk can't recognize it for what it is. So yeah, well, it goes on and on, eh, total destruction of everything. Even the trace or memory of your society has to be eradicated. You start with statues, you see. Even the folk who are hauling down the statues don't get it yet [Alan chuckles.] that they're all getting used for a different agenda.

The road to madness: How eco-obsessed councils - under cover of Covid - have spent millions of YOUR money to shut roads across Britain - dailymail.co.uk / 11 Sept 2020

Because yeah, it's all, it will be cleaner air, but you can't travel anywhere. You can't even get out of your house for a walk by the way, unless you can prove where you're going, like Australia, eh. Another one too…

Dr. Pam Popper on Impeaching the Governor of Ohio and How Christians Are Being Influenced to Take the Vaccine

needtoknow.news / 7 Sept 2020

(A: Again, Bernays said, don't go door-to-door, go to organizations, churches are good, get the preachers and he'll convince the flock to go along with whatever you want. That's Bernays, and they never change the idea.)

Ohio state representative John Becker led Republicans in drafting ten articles of impeachment against Ohio Governor Mike DeWine, citing the governor's actions, like implementing a statewide mask mandate, closure of businesses, stay at home orders, and more, as "abuses of power." According to the Ohio Constitution, the House of Representatives has the sole power of impeachment but requires a majority vote.

Dr. Popper reported that a group of prominent evangelicals are calling on Christians to follow the advice of public health experts, wear masks, get vaccinated and correct misinformation and 'conspiracy theories'.

(A: There you go, use the churches for it.)

The pledge was drafted by leaders of BioLogos, the nonprofit organization (A: [Alan chuckles.] Again, they're all part of the big chain society groups.) founded by Francis Collins, director of the National Institutes of Health, (A: [Alan chuckles.] Isn't that, it's just a coincidence that…) who is also is Anthony Fauci's boss.

(A: That's just coincidence for goodness sake, it's conspiracy theory.)

Dr. Popper says that while Christians are being recruited by BioLogos, which claims to represent Christian interests, the founder of the organization has accepted funding from the Templeton Foundation that is involved in depopulation efforts in Africa that were initiated by Bill Gates.

This is quite a good little article here. [Alan chuckles.] I'll put that one up too. Everything sounds so bizarre until you look into it, and you say, my goodness it's true. You know? I mentioned it before…

Bishop threatens 'canonical penalties' for priest whose viral video warned Catholics can't be Democrats - lifesitenews.com / 10 Sept 2020

You cannot be Catholic and a Democrat. Period. - youtube.com / 30 Aug 2020

He’s talking about the rioting and all the rest of it and the destruction of the family and yada, yada, ya. This is the one that gave the talk online streaming the mass and he said that this is probably his last mass he would give them live streaming because of the incredible hate mail he’s got from all the terrorists in the country, you know. Yep. There ya go. And again, I mentioned before his, there's a Jesuit Bishop I think above him that kind of disowned this priest for saying it.

TFMS: Behavioural paper supporting the consensus statement on mass testing, 27 August 2020

gov.uk / 11 Sept 2020

Supporting paper prepared by the Behavioural Team of the Multidisciplinary Task and Finish Group on Mass Testing (TFMS).

(A: There ya go. It says… if you use assisted technology and blah blah blah, they say no it can't be used for that.)

This is a background paper and was not considered at a SAGE meeting.

(A: …right… okay… SAGE meetings. That was the emergency group that was set up supposedly to con us and manage it all.)

It is a supporting paper for the TFMS consensus statement on mass testing, which was considered at SAGE 53 on 27 August 2020.

It should be viewed in context: the paper was the best assessment of the evidence at the time of writing. The picture is developing rapidly and, as new evidence or data emerges, SAGE updates its advice accordingly.

Therefore, some of the information in this paper may have been superseded and the author’s opinion or conclusion may since have developed.

So, they get into some of this documentation here. These are the groups, mind you, that tell the media how to terrify the public by exaggerating all the different things they’re told to give to the public and tell the public. So, I'll give you these links for those that want to get all the data from their own site. It's interesting to go through it, all these different groups. These are the same groups as I say that told, that gave handouts to all the different journalists and newspaper organizations telling them to exaggerate things, to terrify and really increase the tension and anxiety amongst the public so's they would conform to all the instructions they were getting. Obedience, eh.

Rather than just get a basic, you see, you can't give them the basic truth or we'd all just ignore it because it's just rubbish, you see. So, they have to lie to you because it's a huge agenda here. Nothing to do with, Covid is the excuse, right. Operation Moonshot, right. Britain is one of the most bankrupt countries in the world in real-time, real, you know, financial sums and so on. And it's all bogus money we're living on, with anyway by the gang at the top, right…

'Operation Moonshot': £100BILLION plan could see entire UK population tested for coronavirus in just a week - thesun.co.uk / 10 Sept 2020

They're throwing money around like madness, eh, during this whole... And again, it's all to their panels that run the systems and own all the test swabs and the labs and yada, yada, yada, ya. N-n-n. Endless testing, which is complete bogus nonsense. But that doesn't matter. Np. Remember what the World Bank said, the program that they're running will continue right now with the borrowing and so on giving it to all these different countries under the Covid crisis to 2025. Hm? Are you getting the picture? And after that time, you'll be living in a different world altogether. Post not just Democratic, post-consumerist into rationing and all the rest of it, completely managed by experts and electronics managing, watching and following your every move, every thought that you have.

Bill Gates Steered $250 Million to Mainstream Media to Control the Narrative

needtoknow.news / 8 Sept 2020

(A: That's just coincidence though. He's a generous guy. I mean, the media really need that money right now, they would take it, no problem... the prostitutes that they are.)

A Columbia Journalism Review expose revealed that, to control global journalism, Bill Gates steered over $250 million to major news media outlets, including the BBC, NPR, NBC, Al Jazeera, ProPublica, National Journal, The Guardian, the New York Times, Univision, and many more. Gates also funneled unknown sums, via subgrants, to an army of independent fact checkers, including the Poynter Institute and Gannett, to "silence detractors" and to "debunk" charges that Gates has championed biometric chips (implanted contraceptive drugs), vaccine identification 'tattoos', satellite video surveillance, and COVID vaccines.

(A: He paid them all off to cover his behind, hm.)

Bill Gates bought the media, and during the ‘pandemic’, mainstream news outlets have treated Bill Gates as a public health expert, despite his lack of medical training.

A Columbia Journalism Review expose reveals that, to control global journalism, Bill Gates has steered over $250 million to the BBC, NPR, NBC, Al Jazeera, ProPublica, National Journal, The Guardian, the New York Times, Univision, Medium, the Financial Times, The Atlantic, the Texas Tribune, Gannett, Washington Monthly, Le Monde, Center for Investigative Reporting, Pulitzer Center, National Press Foundation, International Center for Journalists, and a host of other groups. To conceal his influence, Gates also funneled unknown sums via subgrants for contracts to other press outlets.

(A: Even though all the stuff to silence detractors and debunk charges, the fact is, MIT came out with the thing that Bill Gates had helped finance the whole idea for the biometric implanted chips and so on, tattoos that is for the vaccines. N-n-n.)

His press bribes have paid off. During the pandemic, bought and brain-dead news outlets have treated Bill Gates as a public health expert—despite his lack of medical training or regulatory experience.

That’s quite a good article. I’ll put this one up too. There's so many I could read right through but there's just no time for it all.

Coronavirus Act 2020 - UK - Chapter 7 - pdf

legislation.gov.uk

(A: I'll put this one up as well. It's from the British government I think.)

Emergency registration of health professionals

2 Emergency registration of nurses and other health and care professionals

3 Emergency arrangements concerning medical practitioners: Wales

4 Emergency arrangements concerning medical practitioners: Scotland

5 Emergency registration of and extension of prescribing powers for pharmaceutical chemists: Northern Ireland

Temporary registration of social workers

6 Emergency registration of social workers: England and Wales

7 Temporary registration of social workers: Scotland

(A: It's all these… This is an official, you know, one from the government by the way to these organizations, eh, and these pharmacists, and government departments, medical departments and so on. It's interesting to, again, to waste your life going through all the stuff. [Alan chuckles.] Because there's stacks of it out there. It goes through indemnity, very important here. They know what's going to happen here, right. And it says that…)

12 Indemnity for health service activity: Scotland

(A: Meaning, whatever effect it has, because they're going to give you all the vaccinations and so on, right. And they probably won't give you treatments in the hospitals, that'll be another order they'll get probably, you know, stick you on some kind of ventilator or something that kills you.)

13 Indemnity for health and social care activity: Northern Ireland

14 NHS (A: National Health Service.) Continuing Healthcare assessments: England

(A: And it's got other indemnities too, oh yeah, England and Wales, yeah, it's got indemnity for there as well. And let's see…)

Compensation (A: ...money...) for emergency volunteers

(A: That's to probably pay them off to shut up to say what they saw. [Alan chuckles.] Because why would you pay volunteers, eh? It's kind of oxymoronic. So, it's giving the emergency registration of different groups as I've said before, where they are going to, literally, it's a commandeering for like a military service, that's what it's like. But indemnity for anything that's done TO the general public from all these organizations from big Pharma, doctors, nurses, hospitals and so on, whatever happens to you, you can't sue them. They're all getting special... They're getting away with murder I suppose. Why else would you do this? They've got different disclosures here...)

33 Disapplication etc by Welsh Ministers of DBS provisions

Disclosure: Scotland

Inquests

30 Suspension of requirement to hold inquest with jury: (A: Interesting.) England and Wales

31 Suspension of requirement to hold inquest with jury: Northern Ireland

32 Deaths in custody from natural illness: Northern Ireland

(A: ... Deaths in custody from natural illness, is also, they can suspend all these inquests. A lot are going to die here, obviously. This is official stuff from the government, from the crown.)

Schools

37 Temporary closure of educational institutions and childcare premises

38 Temporary continuity: education, training and childcare

39 Statutory sick pay

(A: ...to all the different people involved.)

Pensions

45 NHS pension schemes: suspension of restrictions on return to work: England and Wales

(A: Not Wales, they always say Wales, it's Iwales[?], eh? The same thing for Scotland and Northern Ireland.)

48 Powers to act for the protection of public health

Power to suspend port operations

50 Power to suspend port operations (A: That's interesting.)

Powers relating to potentially infectious persons

(A: So, there's a whole bunch of these camps you're going to get put into regardless of what you've been... You've been 20 miles within this person's range, you know, that's maybe infected, eh, so you're going to get shoved into these things. So...)

Powers relating to potentially infectious persons

(A: Potentially, right.)

Powers relating to events, gatherings and premises

(A: These are all official stuff to be enforced by the law.)

Courts and tribunals: use of video and audio technology

53 Expansion of availability of live links in criminal proceedings

54 Expansion of availability of live links in other criminal hearings

55 Public participation in proceedings conducted by video or audio

56 Live links in magistrates’ court appeals against requirements or restrictions imposed on a potentially infectious person

57 Use of live links in legal proceedings: Northern Ireland

(A: In other words, if they got you on a video anywhere, after looking at your, because they all got your apps on your phone, already by the way. They're tracking your phones but through the apps, you see, so they know where you've been and at what times and all the rest of it and who's near you blah, blah, blah, blah, blah. So that also they can lock it in with these, where you've been, with video surveillance at the time. It's all done instantly now. They can punch it in and get the actual cameras that watched you, etc., wherever you happened to be, in collusion with times on your phone for placement. And here's...)

Postponement of elections, referendums, recall petitions and canvass

(A: Humph.)

59 Elections and referendums due to be held in England in period after 15 March 2020

(A: ...and after May...)

60 Postponement of elections due to be held on 7 May 2020

61 Power to postpone certain other elections and referendums

62 Power to postpone a recall petition

63 Power to make supplementary etc provision

(A: ...so they can change it to whatever way they want...)

63 Power to make supplementary etc provision

64 Northern Ireland: timing of canvass and Assembly by-elections

(A: Wow, this is quite the... [Alan chuckles.] this is quite… This is the top of the page, eh, there's 359 pages here. This is from the crown. N-n-n. This is the big one. N-n-n. I tell ya. Whoah, whoah, this is... This will take you a while to go through this would indeed. Powers, it's all about powers, powers, powers, powers, you know, there's a whole list of powers to this, powers to that, blah blah blah. And it's got different chapters in it.)

BE IT ENACTED by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

PART 1

MAIN PROVISIONS

Interpretation

(A: And they start off with…)

1 Meaning of "coronavirus" and related terminology

(1) In this Act— "coronavirus" means severe acute respiratory syndrome coronavirus 2 (SARS-CoV-2); "coronavirus disease" means COVID-19 (the official designation of the disease which can be caused by coronavirus).

(2) …contamination, however expressed, is a reference to infection or contamination with coronavirus.

N-n-n. I-yi-yi. I tell ya. This is a whoa, huge document here. Anyway, I'll put this one up too for those that want to get gray hair and maybe live long enough to get a pension at the end of the it maybe, if they ever even have that.

German doctor: COVID-19 vaccine 'could prove to be the biggest mistake'

lifesitenews.com / 10 Sept 2020

The first vaccine was developed at the end of the 18th century by English country doctor Edward Jenner. Jenner's success was so resounding that it remains the blueprint for all vaccination programs to this day. The smallpox vaccine shows the four characteristics that characterize a good vaccine candidate. The disease to be vaccinated against must be so serious that it justifies the vaccination of a large number of people. This is because healthy people who may never come into contact with the pathogen are vaccinated. Therefore, one must be sure that the benefits outweigh the risks with great certainty and by a large margin.

If this is not the case, vaccination constitutes a bodily injury.

(A: So, you must fulfill certain criteria first, you see.)

This precautionary principle, which is expressed in the dictum primum nihil nocere ("first, do no harm"), has been the guiding principle of all medical action for more than 2,000 years. This sensitivity is also the reason why for a long-time vaccine production was exclusively in the hands of the government. The pathogen must also not change.

(A: …listen, this is important.)

If frequent mutations occur, vaccination is like shooting at a moving target with a fixed gun: you can hit the bull's eye, but you usually miss.

Thirdly, the pathogen should occur only in humans, because its eradication is possible only if it does not find shelter in animals.

(A: Do you get that there?)

Finally, vaccination should provide long-term and comprehensive protection against the targeted disease.

(A: Then he goes through the usual way of making vaccines…)

Usually, the development of a new vaccine takes six to ten years. First the vaccine must be produced in cell cultures, in chicken eggs or by means of molecular biological processes. However, this production represents only a small part of the overall development. Particularly demanding is the testing, which takes place in a pre-clinical phase in the test tube and in animal experiments, followed by three clinical phases in test subjects.

In the first clinical phase, the tolerability of the vaccine is usually tested on fewer than one hundred people. Questions are answered such as: Does redness or pain occur at the injection site? Does it lead to inflammation? Are there deaths?

If the vaccine survives this phase, which lasts from weeks to months, the second phase will involve up to 1,000 test persons to determine whether the vaccination causes an immune reaction at all. If this is the case and the vaccine does not show any serious side-effects, the third and longest test phase follows.

In most cases, 30,000 to 50,000 test persons are divided into two groups, one of whom receives the new vaccine, the other a placebo. Both groups are then usually exposed to an infection with the target pathogen for four to six years. After this period, it is investigated whether the vaccine group has fewer or at least milder infections than the placebo group. The long-term observation of many people also serves to detect rare, serious side-effects.

It goes on and on and on about how literally this is a politicized virus. And that it doesn't fill all the different qualifications to even be given it in the first place. Because animals get it too, right, you can pass it back and forth, through all kinds of animals. There is no guarantee of any long-term immunity. Even though you're getting immunity, but natural herd immunity from folk just spreading it around without even getting sick, like a lot of viruses. And they're rushing it through without all this, ALL this massive testing. They want to do like 10 years testing within the same year, hm? You see?

The one that they're testing out in the States and probably Canada is one that's going to alter your DNA for epithelial cells. Permanently. In your body, it's going to alter your cells in your body permanently, into a different type of cell. Huh?! I don't think so. I'll put this article up.

Now, Toronto was one of the first cities put down for a smart city, which is all tied in with this whole idea which just happens to be all planned for the Covid thing long before Covid came along, the Internet of Things where they track and trace your every single movement for the rest of your lives. Which again is being done because of Covid, it's Covid, you see. It's just pure luck that they came up with the idea long before it. So this article goes back to May 26...

Google Canceled Its ‘Smart City’ Plans for Toronto

needtoknow.news / 26 May 2020

(A: …because some folk realized, some local counselors and all that realized it was a big takeover of an organization. Well, of course it was. Palms get greased. Now, the folk who hold out on these things, right, the counselors and that generally just wait for a bigger offer. That's how all politics works, folks. If you really have a point of view and you're steadfast, you wouldn't alter. But these folk do it all the time. It's because they get bribed, you see, that's what happens. But this is back in May, and they put down, I remember reading it at the time where they talked about…)

… include autonomous cars, innovative ways to collect rubbish and shared spaces for communities to come together in new ways.

Sidewalk Labs, a sister company to Google, had earmarked disused land in Toronto, Canada for this bold urban experiment, which it hoped would become a model for other cities around the world.

Do you want to be completely owned by the corporate society? or the system that you’re living under today? Completely owned by them? From birth to death? Tracked, traced, the whole bit? Hm? Again, it all ties in with rationing, doesn't it? Because you're going into rationing whether you like it or not in a post cash world, eh? Hm. I tell ya.

Multidisciplinary Task and Finish Group on Mass Testing -pdf

assets.publishing.service.gov.uk

Multidisciplinary Task and Finish Group on Mass Testing

Behavioural Considerations

(A: This is from again the same group around SAGE, and psychological warfare, the department that was subcontracted by them.)

1. Effective mass testing for population case detection of SARS-CoV-2 will require high rates of testing and self-isolation (> 90%), achieved equitably in any targeted population. Outlined below are key elements of any mass testing programme that could go some way towards achieving this.

(A: This goes on and on. Again, you'll be really old and wrinkled by the time you finish all these things to read, you know. But your government agencies and all these thousands of parasitical agencies that jump on board during any crisis, eh, that's why they love crisis and promote crisis because the money is just tossed to them like you wouldn't believe to come up with this rubbish, you know. Screeds and screens of rubbish, then they hand it to the government politicians that don't know what to do with them except pass them into law. And you find out the corporations then rule your entire life. That's already here. Yep. But they all, they've got different fines on it too, and how much fines they give you...)

10. Self-reported ability to self-isolate or quarantine is three times lower in those with incomes less than £20,000 …

(A: They even, they’ve got it worked out who can afford what, eh, to self-isolate and who can’t, and how much to fine people by and blah, blah, blah if they break their quarantine or whatever it happens to be, even if they’re not really infected, eh.)

Let me see now, remember too, back at it again, remember to send a few bucks my way @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Very important to help me tick along here because I have no axe to grind in politics or other... [Alan chuckles.] I just state the nasty world as it really is to those that want to know about it. At least you'll find you don't get depressed with it. You really don't. You only going to get depressed if you're living as a nervous wreck believing it all and getting terrified by it. If you're not terrified by it, you won't be a nervous wreck. And you can at least make some decisions to help yourself, and hopefully as I've said before, you've got a few friends, not many, you know. If you've made five friends in your life, real friends, then you've made a big breakthrough. Because most folk don't really ever get real, you'll get lots of acquaintances, you know... Hysterical psychopaths at parties, you know, you walk in the door and the woman who's holding it, oh hiiii, hiiii, as though you're royalty, and you just walked in.

But I mean, she'll be saying that to every single person, and as soon as she can't use you, that's you, you're out of her head altogether. That's a hysterical psychopath, attention seeker, you know. That's how most folk, oh I've got so many... No, they don't have friends at all, they've got acquaintances. Like Plato said, you're lucky to get 4 or 5 friends in your entire life. So, if you even have a couple, just promise to help each other out. Just... Because times are going to get really, really tough. You've got to make sure you've got the right people, folks who won't crack when pressure is applied. Because occasionally you might have to break some little stupid rule, you know, they've got a whole plethora of rules, an avalanche of rules to come on you, in order for basic survival. Yep.

An article too about all these safe vaccinations. I've got an article at the beginning about when they met at the World Health Organization for Vaccination Month in 2019 and how they were going to promote all the safe vaccinations and so on. Here's one...

World Health Organization says oral vaccine caused new polio outbreak in Africa

lifesitenews.com / 10 Sept 2020

(A: That's another one, because they did it before I think in parts of India after the Bill Gates organization went out with the oral vaccine as well with it live. And now they've got a new type of wild strain of polio that was created in the lab through the vaccines. Hm, there ya go, how's that? And they want you to take them, they're safe for you?)

Two young children in Sudan (A: …that’s too many, I’m sure.) are now paralyzed after vaccinations. (A: That’s acceptable, would say Bill Gates, you know.)

And…

Organ-harvesting means the cause for life is threatened like never before

lifesitenews.com / 4 Sept 2020

(A: Good article.)

September 4, 2020 (LifeSiteNews) — “Come on down!” was Bob Barker’s invitation to contestants on The Price is Right, the most popular game show ever to air on network TV. In many ways, the liberal left today resembles a giant rigged game show, with politicians and the mainstream media giving their cronies the “right price.” The Democrats’ 2020 National Convention was a giant pre-taped game show with no substance, no policy, no plans — just platitudes and gaslighting. When Joe Biden said on day one, “We are in a battle for the soul of this nation,” he was right. We are in a battle — with a party that supports killing unborn babies and selling their body parts, encourages mob action, vilifies and demands to defund the police, and labels many citizens “deplorables.”

The Democrat game show is decades long. In the 1970s, politicians and the mainstream media already played to Planned Parenthood and the liberal left. Trying to get a fair shake for the babies was harder than selling ice at the North Pole.

It goes through some of the history of it there too. These are things you've got to look at if you want to, how could you possibly come to any moral conclusion about humanity in itself or what's going to be done to you, when you've already given up, hm, you’re right that folk are special, that ALL life is special, eh? ...when you've been trained that you're just another lowly animal… in fact, you're lower down the totem pole than most animals… How you've been trained! Look at the youngsters today that literally are out rioting and screaming. This is really despair you're hearing. Because they've had that brainwashing in from school to the present time. Until they hate themselves and everything else around them. Total despair. I've said before, suicide is despair and anger turned inwards. Murder is when they turn it outwards.

Now another one too...

The R number and growth rate in the UK

gov.uk / 15 May 2020

(A: This one here is to do with, this is how they work it out for their statistics.)

An R number between 1.0 and 1.2 means that on average every 10 people infected will infect between 10 and 12 other people.

(A: [Alan chuckles.] That’s how they pump up all the numbers, eh.)

I tell ya. And again, the same mantra…

Coronavirus cases soar by 3,497 in the UK in the highest Saturday rise in FOUR MONTHS as SAGE adviser warns nation is on the brink of losing control of outbreak - dailymail.co.uk / 12 Sept 2020

Oh, hhhhhhh, oh my God, I'm breathless just reading it there. Oh wow, scary stuff, eh. I guess, remember they got rid of the other guy from, that was put in charge of it, Ferguson, remember, with his massive statistics that were all fudged and so on. Because it's all done by computerization. The computer will spit out anything you want, so you say, for every person that's going to test positive, just add another 10 to it per person. It's all bogus. Isn't it?

As I've said before, article after article over the last few months, you're going to get fragments of this in every test that you do in most people. It's present in your nasal system, sinuses, even in your throat, dead particles. Particles of it. M-hm. That's what happens when you catch the thing, your system kills it, immediately for most. It's happening all the time regardless of Covid, long before Covid came along, this particular Covid anyway. N-n-n. So, here's the scare tactic because they've got to lock you down into this five-year plan.

And …

SAGE Scientific Advisory Group for Emergencies U.K. - gov/uk / 11 Sept 2020

Scientific Advisory Group for Emergencies, ohhhhhh, there ya go. That's the SAGE group, eh. It tells you a bit of what they are. Again, private bodies. They encompass a lot of psychologists, neuroscientists, and behaviorists, people who are trained to lie, and with better techniques, to persuade you, they're born persuaders, you see. There ya go.

Antifa Radical Arrested for Arson in Washington State — Was Caught on Highway Live-Streaming on Facebook Before Arrest (Video) - thegatewaypundit.com / 10 Sept 2020

N-n-n. What a fool this guy was, eh? He actually... [Alan chuckles.] They always think they're such big, like I'm a real hero, I'm burning places down, I'm doing really good for the cause, eh. He was on Facebook streaming it is he was doing it. Fftttt. I-yi. Sweden…

Sweden: The Violence Is "Extremely Serious"

gatestoneinstitute.org / 8 Sept 2020

(A: Extremely serious now, eh. Well, we saw the masses coming out under the guise of, from different, you know, Africa too. Also, a lot of people for refugees supposedly from different, all over Africa under the guise of refugees. Awfully healthy-looking guys. Very fit as well. Well fed, eh. And flooding into, again, Sweden. Sweden had help too. There's even people in Sweden who did videos on who was helping, they were helping to bring them all in because they wanted to destroy the Swedish people as a Swedish ethnic group, you know. Destroy the homogeneity, one of the women said about it in fact, it's important that it's done, she said. So, here's the outcome of it all too as we all know.)

"The police must ensure that the criminals are arrested and can be prosecuted. The criminals need to disappear from our streets and squares so that no more ruthless crimes are committed... We work intensively, around the clock, despite this, the severe violence continues." — Sweden's National Police Chief Anders Thornberg, August 29, 2020.

Gothenburg's Ali Khan clan (A: …Ali Khan, see, Ali Khan clan, it’s a clan called Ali Khan, it’s like a mafia group.) has been reported to the police more than 200 times but the police had to close almost all cases because the gang threatens the victims and witnesses to stay silent.

"This weekend, two boys were subjected to terrible atrocities in a cemetery in Solna for an entire night. On Tuesday, a teacher in Gothenburg was kidnapped and beaten after contacting the police. What we now experience almost daily is not normal... Sweden should start by making it a crime to be part of a criminal gang, (A: You’d think they’d already have that wouldn’t you? Mind you, the governments would have to be included.) in the same way that it should be a crime to be part of a terrorist organization.". — Ulf Kristersson, leader of the opposition Moderate Party, Facebook post, August 27, 2020.

"Unfortunately, there is a grudge against Christian culture among certain groups and the Church of Sweden in Malmö cannot be passive while the Christian cultural heritage is vandalized" — Sweden Democrats Party, August 26, 2020.

(A: That's part of it too. Everything is deliberate. A lot of it is out in the open, you know.)

"Recently, there have been serious incidents and serious acts of violence linked to criminal networks, in which several people have been murdered and others seriously injured...

"In Stockholm, two people were murdered in the past week, and in Gothenburg, criminal groups have tried to demonstrate power by controlling vehicles entering certain districts.

(A: You can see that in the States now too, eh?)

Earlier in August, an innocent 12-year-old girl was murdered... [during a gang incident], and in other parts of the country there are conflicts between various criminal networks and other ruthless crime, as well. On Friday night, a violent riot also occurred in Malmö where several police officers were injured..."

(A: It goes on and on and on. Two boys were raped as well…)

…two boys were raped, tortured and nearly buried alive in a cemetery…

(A: These were what they call…)

… "humiliation crimes"…

(A: They rape boys and then they bury them up to their necks and so on. That's something that came out of, you know, different countries far away. M-hm. It's meant to show the power of the perpetrators and the gangs. And these are the milder cases by the way.)

In the riot that took place in Malmö on August 28, an estimated 300 people burned car tires, shot fireworks and threw stones at the police. The riot occurred close to Rosengård, a so-called "vulnerable area", populated mainly by immigrants. Video footage posted to social media showed the rioters shouting "Allahu Akbar" … (A: …and so on and so on.)

Well, Sweden was socialist a long time ago, and partly maybe effeminized, like a lot of countries. Meaning, the men were literally trained from school onwards, you know, as boys, not to get involved in fights, don't fight back, just shut up, etc. And literally, this is 20 years later or 25 years later and here's the outcome a lot of it. You know that too. We all know that. Of course, we do. That was part of the agenda.

You're living through a long-term plan, eh. How do you get to this stage? Well, by the time we bring these people in, and that will cause, and we'll give them the power to go ahead and do what they want, we'll have really eliminated any opposition in the male. It's long-term strategies, folks. Wartime, they’re wartime strategies, I hope you understand that. They're actually taught in military schools long-term planning, for long-term enemies, how to take them down.

Australian health execs, politicians float travel bans, tax penalties for COVID vaccine refusers - lifesitenews.com / 20 Aug 2020

I'll put some videos up too. You'll hear this head of the police in, was it Melbourne? I'll put it up regardless, it's on YouTube anyway and it's Australia, laying down the law like some real, you know, like martial law type... I call him, his name is Patton, so I call him General Patton.

General Patton - Vic Police forced to smash car windows over non-compliance - youtube.com / 3 Aug 2020

You should hear this guy. This guy literally, he'd fit right into the part, because there's no question of anything about his authority and how, what he's going to put into law, well it is actually into law but he's going to really make it all happen and have no… be utterly ruthless with that all, etc., etc., etc. AMAZING stuff. You got to see it. And enjoy it. I've got a few YouTube's I'll put up there by the way.

And...

Australian health execs, politicians float travel bans, tax penalties for COVID vaccine refusers

lifesitenews.com / 20 Aug 2020

Australia's second most senior medical officer has said that denying those who refuse a coronavirus vaccine the ability to go into restaurants, travel internationally, and catch public transport will be discussed by the government.

(A: So here they go step-by-step until you'll be forced to comply. You live in a democracy, but you've got no option, you see. Oh, we're not going to force you, you just have to stay at home all the time and starve to death, hm.)

"I suspect the majority of Australians will get vaccinated and then there will be a strong public view that those who choose not to get vaccinated, need to, there needs to be some sort of incentive stick perhaps, (A: STICK, eh?) through the current programs including No Jab No Pay, to make that happen," Coatsworth said.

(A: So, you're not going to get a paycheck if you don't comply. N-n-n.)

Deputy Chief Medical Officer Dr. Nick Coatsworth

(A: Whoah, whoah, whoah, eh? You talk about North Korea. Aaaachhh, ha, ha. [Alan laughing.] N-n-n. Then of course this Prime Minister…)

Prime Minister Scott Morrison in the previous 24 hours first said that a coronavirus vaccine will be made "as mandatory as you can possibly make it" before quickly walking back the comments somewhat and saying that the vaccine "is not going to be compulsory" and that "we can't hold someone down and make them take it."

You see, there's your, there is your thing in democracy, let's make it impossible to live without it, with what they want you to do, right, we're not forcing you, you just can't go anywhere.

This is totalitarianism and utter tyranny. And it's for the rest of your life, folks. This Covid thing is an excuse for a whole reset program from the World Economic Forum. For total reset, not just a financial but a completely new way of living, or existing, I would say existing.

Also…

Teacher worries parents will overhear what he's actually teaching their kids in virtual classroom

educationviews.org / 10 Augn 2020

(A: Now that they've got them at home a lot of them are doing it on their computers their schooling.)

Meet Matthew R. Kay, a teacher at Philadelphia's Science Leadership Academy who's been accused of trying to indoctrinate his students in left-wing thought.

(A: Well, they all get that total indoctrination.)

Kay came to the public's attention Saturday when he posted viral tweets warning his followers that the virtual classrooms slated for this school season will allow "potential spectators," including parents, to overhear what their kids are learning.

(A: Hhhhh, can’t have that, eh? So, they’ve got things like…)

… “equity/inclusion work,” i.e., their alleged indoctrination of schoolchildren.

You know, on gender identity, things like that, you know, the encouragement they get to try all this new stuff, you see, that their parents are just too old-fashioned and contaminated to understand, they're contaminated with old ideas, you see. That’s standard Marxist philosophy.

Wealthy NYC college student, 20, is among eight arrested for 'causing $100,000 worth of damage to businesses in Manhattan during BLM rampage'

dailymail.co.uk / 6 Sept 2020

Clara Kraebber, 20

(A: 20 years old. N-n-n. So yep, it says...)

Kraebber, a student at Rice, is daughter of Upper East Side architect

Wealthy NYC College Student Arrested at BLM Riots After Causing "$100,000 in Damages" to Manhattan Businesses - thegatewaypundit.com / 6 Sept 2020

There ya go. And I think her dad was a psychiatrist as well. So, there's the outcome of psychiatry and liberalism, which is mainly Freudian liberalism, eh, for the same progressive agenda. [Alan chuckles.] Really, folk don't know that either. Total war for a long time and the folk don't even know it's been a war. And it still going on. And...

“Bipartisan” Washington Insiders Reveal Their Plan for Chaos if Trump Wins the Election - unlimitedhangout.com / 3 Sept 2020

There you go. Yep. Then you've got all the fires on the west coast and in Oregon and all this kind of thing going on at the same time. Quite amazing all the stuff that's happening at the same time. I remember, I keep thinking back, and it will be, oh, conspiracy theory, because folk have already mentioned it. Some Antifa guys have been accused, without the proof they say, of starting fires. That's what they're doing in the cities for goodness sake, hm. Standard technique of the revolution is always to set everything on fire. You can look at the old, old stuff going back to the Bolsheviks in the early Russian revolution. You see them going through the streets setting fire to everything. That's the standard thing they do, terrify the people into submission. That's what it's meant to do. And to make them think there's no law and order, so that when they present their leaders, you accept them dumbly without question. That's how it's done. All been done before. It's all tried techniques. There's nothing new in it at all. Away they go, and the folk just don't quite get it, do they? N-n-n.

And this one here is to do with, oh yeah, I mentioned before about when they did the 2019 WHO…

World Immunization Week – 2019

“Protected together, #VaccinesWork,” World Immunization Week 2019

cdc.gov

(A: They tell you the…)

…three key groups of people who are vital to ensuring everyone is protected against vaccine-preventable diseases…

Now, there’s a video up too, remember, where they actually mentioned, amongst themselves, luckily a lot of folk copied it before it was pulled. They actually admit all the different doctors that took part in the panels and that, they didn't have much experience either and training about vaccines. They get like the last day in training, it's like maybe half of the day is given to vaccinations. They just take for granted it's all good and it works and so on, but they know very little about it. This goes on to this day, you know, the same training where they don't know. But they're told to tell you it's all good for you. By whom? By the vaccine manufacturers. That's where it all comes from.

So, they go through this, this was their lineup getting you all ready for the coming vaccinations and World Immunization Week 2019. It doesn't give any data, it just tells you to convince the public to accept that it's good for them, blah blah blah. Very childlike little slogans and so on. But it doesn't go through, here's how to explain and show them that it is good for you and how it really works, it's not there. They don't give you the facts, do they? It's just standard propaganda like any other advertising, isn't it? And you’re not treated like a human being, a sentient human being by giving the facts, you know, informed consent. It's good for you isn't good enough. Sorry. [Alan chuckles.] There ya go.

So, I've rushed through all this stuff tonight again, or this today. It's been pouring rain, like torrents of it all this time as well. This is the stuff as I say that generally would come across even the Pacific and hits the West Coast. But there are certain things I noticed in the past, even back in the 90s when suddenly you'd have a change in the Jetstream and it would go straight up the West Coast, like a straight line, vertical, straight up. It would hit the shore of California pretty well, the coastline, and go straight up in a straight line up into British Columbia, and then turn at a right angle and go right across the country. [Alan chuckles.] You don't get that in nature, folks, you know, it just doesn't happen in straight lines. But it does now, you know, occasionally.

There you go, weather modification, eh? Oh, it's a conspiracy theory. Well, here's all the stuff they've admitted to and programs from universities and the characters and so on. Oh, that's still a conspiracy theory, yeah. Yep, there ya go. They'd never do that. [Alan chuckles.] They'd never use it would they?

Well here I go; I'm prattling on again as usual. But once again don't give up folks. You're going to live through it, whether you like it or not, we're going to live through this. Let's hope you will like getting through it and it won't be... If you just give up and say yes to everything to comply, you're done for, as far as any society, I don't care which country it is, you're completely done for.

The eradication of what used to be called the more advanced nations by a dominant minority that have nothing in common with you, that run it all. Really. That's really what it is, worldwide. They'll have their total world domination and true rulers of the planet. And to get there you must all comply to be wimps. And you've all been trained never to say no. It's not polite, no is a bad word, it's a negative word, you see, be positive, always say yes. That's what the salesmen are taught to train you to say. It's a nice day. Yes. Oh, it's a beautiful sky. Yes. That's a lovely carpet you've got there. Yes. Here's lovely machine. Yes. You see, as soon as you start saying yes you can't stop saying it. So, you've got to learn to say NO. No. No. No.

And don't let people start sticking things into you. When they've already told you, Bill Gates, what, 700,000 folk worldwide will probably die as a side effect of this thing... That's okay? That's acceptable? Then you've got how many folks are going to get crippled with it? Hm?

And you probably won’t die off the bat anyway. You won't die until you hit an actual coronavirus, and then your body will go into overdrive and your immune system will go into utter overdrive, and it will kill you. That's quite common by the way after certain vaccinations. I won't even repeat them again ad nauseum, but I've given all the articles up there @cuttingthroughthematrix.com, from their own sites, the professional sites, the manufacturer admitting and even the government warning you at certain times not to take the flu shot because of a particular virus that's out that year, if you had the flu shot your body will go into overdrive and kill you. That's not conspiracy. This is stuff from the governments and Canada did it a few years ago and the Department of Defense as well. All these articles I put up and lots of folk have grabbed it and put it all over the planet all this information. And it's good to see it going, you know, it really is.

But as I say, don't give up. Learn to say no. It's not a negative word at all. It's called a self-survival mechanism by saying no. It's an important word to have. Can I take your food off you? No. Can I take your clothing off you? No. Etc. etc. It's a natural response. You've been trained it's a bad word. Who trained you not to, don't say no, be nice and congenial… Okay, yeah, okay sure.

Don't say that, say NO. No. No. Just like that. Practice it every day. Say it at least 20 times a day, eh. To yourself even. That's how you get started. Because you can keep... This is the biggest hoax in history, one of the biggest hoaxes in history. Other things have caused world wars, some of them. But this is a BIG HOAX for total control over every, everything, everything in your life. Everything.

And stop putting all your stuff up there and ticking off boxes, likes, dislikes, to get yourself profiled. Stop doing it. Have some, have SOME self-respect for yourself, eh. Stop giving away all the data so they can analyze you and then they know exactly how to make you conform to anything that they want you to conform to. Ffft. Sad, eh?

Cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Send a few bucks my way. Important. Help me tick along. Buy the books and discs or straight donations are great. Because we're going, this is hell, this is hell. But it's history we're going through, it's real history. It's as big as any world war. Probably bigger actually. Because this one is for, literally for the entire planet's control by a tiny few at the top. Lots of little circles and helpers in academia on board with it, but it's still really a minority, a dominant minority.

Step-by-step you've got to start regaining your self-respect, start with your self-respect, and respect for other people who also say no, and other folk who get offended by what's being done to them.

But take care of yourselves and have a few friends at least. Not many as I say. You will get real true friends that will stick by you. But even a couple is darn good.

So, for myself Alan Watt from Ontario Canada, where I'm getting all the rain that should be falling on the West Coast over yonder, I'm getting it over here in Ontario as the Jetstream dumps it all on me. It's like torrential rains. It's very similar actually to tropics, you know, you get the tropics in the rainy season. This is when we get it where I am is this month, until often you're walking in the mud until the snow eventually sets in pretty soon.

So, for myself Alan Watt from Ontario Canada, it's good night and may your God or your gods go with you.

Topics of show covered in following links:

Possible and Probable legal action needed to deal with Irish Government treasonous Covid Tyranny

theirishsentinel.com / 8 Sept 2020

TRUE TOLL Flu and pneumonia killed TEN TIMES as many Brits as Covid last week, stats reveal

thesun.co.uk / 11 Sept 2020

The road to madness: How eco-obsessed councils - under cover of Covid - have spent millions of YOUR money to shut roads across Britain

dailymail.co.uk / 11 Sept 2020

worked in Belgium

uk.news.yahoo.com / 9 Sept 2020

Sandwell

news.sky.com / 11 Sept 2020

Motorways in England to trial 60mph speed limit in bid to boost air quality

inews.co.uk / 12 Sept 2020

OHIO: Get Ready For COVID-19 FEMA Camps

technocracy.news / 7 Sept 2020

Overthrow The US Government

zerohedge.com / 10 sept 2020

Wealthy NYC college student, 20, is among eight arrested for 'causing $100,000 worth of damage to businesses in Manhattan during BLM rampage'

dailymail.co.uk / 6 Sept 2020

Wealthy NYC College Student Arrested at BLM Riots After Causing &quot;$100,000 in Damages&quot; to Manhattan Businesses

thegatewaypundit.com / 6 Sept 2020

Jesuit-Led Parish Asks Parishioners to Take Pledge Affirming ‘White Privilege’ Must End

breitbart.com / 5 Sept 2020

Long-awaited NHS Covid contact-tracing app will FINALLY launch in England and Wales in two weeks, Department of Health announces - a day after Sturgeon launched it in Scotland

dailymail.co.uk / 11 Sept 2020

Coronavirus: Oxford vaccine trial facing 'challenge' as volunteer suffers suspected serious adverse reaction

news.sky.com / 9 Sept 2020

Oxford coronavirus vaccine trials RESUME

dailymail.co.uk / 12 Sept 2020

The World Bank Covid-19 Strategic Preparedness and Response Program and Proposed 25 Projects Under Phase 1

documents1.worldbank.org / 2 Apr 2020

Dr. Pam Popper on Impeaching the Governor of Ohio and How Christians Are Being Influenced to Take the Vaccine

needtoknow.news / 7 Sept 2020

Bishop threatens ‘canonical penalties’ for priest whose viral video warned Catholics can’t be Democrats

lifesitenews.com / 10 Sept 2020

You cannot be Catholic and a Democrat. Period.

youtube.com / 30 Aug 2020

paper supporting the consensus statement on mass testing, 27 August 2020

gov.uk / 11 Sept 2020

‘Operation Moonshot’: £100BILLION plan could see entire UK population tested for coronavirus in just a week

thesun.co.uk / 10 Sept 2020

Bill Gates Steered $250 Million to Mainstream Media to Control the Narrative

needtoknow.news / 8 Sept 2020

Coronavirus Act 2020 - UK - Chapter 7

legislation.gov.uk

German doctor: COVID-19 vaccine ‘could prove to be the biggest mistake’

lifesitenews.com / 10 Sept 2020

Google Canceled Its ‘Smart City’ Plans for Toronto

needtoknow.news / 26 May 2020

Multidisciplinary Task and Finish Group on Mass Testing

assets.publishing.service.gov.uk

World Health Organization says oral vaccine caused new polio outbreak in Africa

lifesitenews.com / 10 Sept 2020

Organ-harvesting means the cause for life is threatened like never before

lifesitenews.com / 4 Sept 2020

The R number and growth rate in the UK

gov.uk / 15 May 2020

Coronavirus cases soar by 3,497 in the UK in the highest Saturday rise in FOUR MONTHS as SAGE adviser warns nation is on the brink of losing control of outbreak

dailymail.co.uk / 12 Sept 2020

SAGE Scientific Advisory Group for Emergencies U.K.

gov/uk / 11 Sept 2020

Antifa Radical Arrested for Arson in Washington State — Was Caught on Highway Live-Streaming on Facebook Before Arrest (Video)

thegatewaypundit.com / 10 Sept 2020

Sweden: The Violence Is &quot;Extremely Serious&quot;

gatestoneinstitute.org / 8 Sept 2020

Australian health execs, politicians float travel bans, tax penalties for COVID vaccine refusers lifesitenews.com / 20 Aug 2020

General Patton - Vic Police forced to smash car windows over non-compliance

youtube.com / 3 Aug 2020

Teacher worries parents will overhear what he’s actually teaching their kids in virtual classroom

educationviews.org / 10 Augn 2020

“Bipartisan” Washington Insiders Reveal Their Plan for Chaos if Trump Wins the Election

unlimitedhangout.com / 3 Sept 2020

World Immunization Week - 2019

cdc.gov

Shelby County woman who passed away 6 months ago gets letter saying she is COVID-19 positive

kens5.com / 3 Sept 2020

Tom Cotton Leads Lawmakers Calling on DOJ to Investigate Netflix for ‘Peddling Child Pornography’

breitbart.com / 12 Sept 2020

Did California legislators just vote to protect (gay) adults who have sex with minors?

lifesitenews.com / 8 Sept 2020

Sep 20, 2020 "Cutting Through the Matrix" with Alan Watt (Blurb, i.e. Educational Talk): " Imaginative Media Gives Itself Benediction, News is the Most Perfected Form of Fiction.

Hi folks I'm Alan Watt and this is Cutting Through the Matrix on September 20, 2020. The weather is really changing here, [Alan chuckles.] I'm sure it's changing everywhere, but it's changing here. I've had down to the zero-mark, freezing mark for the last two or three nights actually in a row and heavy frost in the morning. So, it's coming, the winter's coming because of global warming, you see, it's getting colder. And here we are.

Mind you, I think they've changed the whole agenda for climate change into Covid. They just have to change the title, you know, man-made global Covid and away we go. And here we are, hm? Same agenda, sustainability, rationing, postconsumer society, etc., the Fourth Industrial Revolution, the global reset, hm, it's just the same darn thing isn't it really.

Because we wouldn't listen to them, as they keep blaming us… It's amazing how you try to be good and the folks across European countries for the last 50, 60 years tried to be awfully good and not have any more than two children most of them. Then of course they say, there's not enough of you so they opened the doors, floodgates, to the planet actually. Then you tell you there's too many of you. You can't please them. You see, it's not meant that you actually win here. It's meant that you just keep playing the game of trying to believe them.

It's the old, the Orwellian excuse you had in 1984, where the war, it was always ongoing between East Asia, West Asia, Eurasia and all the rest of it. It's not meant to be won. It's meant to be perpetuated, perpetual war.

It's the same thing with you, you're trying to do, obey and go along with what you perceive as being a legitimate form of government, even though you don't have a simple example or any example that it is that in fact except the media telling you it is. And it never works on your behalf, does it? It really doesn't. There's always agendas on the go that you've got nothing to do with. You get no say in the matter. But you suffer from it all. Then they blame you for whatever happens, hm?

It's quite [Alan chuckles.] an amazing system that you're born into of deliberate confusion and control. And blame and guilt. Guilt is awfully good right now. Guilt is in for, you're going to have the sins of every ancestor that crawled the planet with a club, you know. It's all, again, the Marxist philosophy of destroying all that was, all systems that were, regardless of the system you actually lived under.

When you look at the horror for instance of most empires across the world as they expanded and grabbed territory and resources, the people back home often weren't much better in the Middle Ages and later than the people they were conquering, you know, it was much the same kind of thing. It was always an elite, you see, based with a money system backing it that had to always get more and more resources and gold and diamonds and so on, wealth, and the resources for big companies and corporations to make their factories and so on. Nothing really changed for an awful long time.

And that's been the way, a kind of natural way, I'd say, in a sense, because there was nothing else given to the public, you know. There was no other system they could live under except basically small tribes. Looking back to them you have to say to yourself, when you look at all the horrors that did happen, every century you'd have different horrors and plagues and things and wars, just like today, hm. We've got more chance of it happening today, we've got better machinery for making the wars and machines to make the weaponry, and labs to make the plagues.

But anyway, we certainly do have a history of survival through, all of us really, regardless of what they call class in Britain, something they pretend doesn't exist. [Alan chuckles.] More so in America, they're good at it, pretending it doesn't exist. But it's always been there. Every culture's got the same thing, it doesn't matter where you go, whether it's Hindu or Muslim, you'll find the same class distinction. It sets in, it seems to be natural just to set in that way, a human trait, and away you go with it.

But regardless, through all the different things, down through many, many centuries, the fact we’re here to criticize anything means that we survived, eh? [Alan laughing.] And your ancestors somehow got through it. And of course, it wasn't a continuous nasty story, obviously. And humans, being humans, you tend to have some humor as you go through really bad times. That was part of, say, the British system too of comedy. It was all kinds of humor, base to the highest level, instead of sophistication. But it was all to do really with hard times. You'd knock yourselves about a bit and laugh if you looked at all the ridiculous things that happened in your own life, and then your parents, grandparents and all the way back too. Because we have that, we have that ability to get through really horrible times. I think most cultures do as well.

But unfortunately in the 20th century, or leading up to the 20th century, really you could say the 19th and 20th, you have this escalating organization of a system that really broke out, we saw it with Weishaupt for instance and the Illuminati group they keep on about. But don't, don't knock it down completely. The fact is, it was the basis of a system of organized, you might call it, crime. Just like when we have these groups today by the way that really have descended from it. [Alan chuckles.] You have to understand the techniques that were advocated by this group of very well-educated people that literally had many, many members that were the wealthiest people of their era helping them along, you see, and financing things.

The idea again was to take over the resources of the planet, hm, and to take over the planet for themselves by using front organizations. And to get a good front organization it has to be real. You must pick people who've got real genuine chips on their shoulder, or beefs, and you picked leaders, you finance them well too, that helps to keep them there and going along with it and taking orders from you. But then you use them against another group that you also created. And each group you created would get lots of followers from the general public, so you create all these divisions. Then you lead yourself up to the direction you want to take it, even conflicts, armed conflict, slaughters and genocides even and open warfare, with national warfare too on the go as well. Until people really haven't got a clue of what the original problem really, really was.

You'll get the official explanation later on of authorized history, but you have to dig in to find machinations of what really happened and brought it about. It's fascinating to see the hands of these characters as the techniques were expounded through different countries through this real, and that's the key to organization, yeah, organization is such an important word. Those who are well organized, and secretive naturally about their affiliations, with each other even, if you can get a bunch together, like they did in times gone by, they could manage just the money itself, hm. That was the so-called genius of the Rothschild family, that wasn't the first family to try all that out, by any means, and take over about five different countries, you know, initially, by creating a form of centralized lending eventually, that's what became of your central bank system, that's what it eventually became, and the Federal Reserve Bank in the States. But the thing is, it didn't stop with that, you see.

Now that you've got a Federal Reserve Bank or a centralized bank that lends to government, as opposed to just having different private lenders all maybe collectively putting money in the hat you might say for governmental wars. Like you had with Wellington, they had to actually drum up the money. And Nelson too even for his, in fact Nelson was worried, he wrote about it before he died, eh, before he was killed, to a friend I think it was in Spain, another officer who lived in Spain. He was worried about his own personal finances. Because even then investments went up and down, especially when it was to do with trade and goods that came by sea, and lots of ships would get sunk, you know, every year across the globe in the trade routes through piracy, bad weather and various other reasons, even disease too. So, it was an iffy kind of thing. He lost investments as well and he was worried about his family. This is an Admiral, hm, and he's worried about his family not being able to survive if anything should happen to him.

So, the ones who controlled the money always had incredible power. As far back as Rome, you can actually find out who was financing the different leaders and rulers of Rome for their wars across the world. And they got well-paid, mind you, because it was all lent money. You can see the precursor of what became the central banking system in Europe, for different countries of Europe and America, you can see it in ancient Rome. And even before that in Greece, you know.

So, you find that even the philosophers, it's like today, hhhch, it all ties together, today money creates stars that you follow. There are lots of philosophers and you only, the ones that are picked, cherry picked by those who rule and have the money and the wealth, are going to be made stars for perpetuity, you see. So, you go back to the ancient times as well, Aristotle became a mentor in the mysteries in philosophy for Alexander. But Aristotle was given a wife from the Levant, from one of the wealthiest lenders there, merchant lenders, you know. So even then you can see the influence of who made Aristotle Aristotle, because he became very very famous after he got married... and he went down in history that way.

Nothing has changed. Money creates those that we end up reading about. Except for the bad guys. The bad guys are always the losers. It doesn't matter where across the world, you look at losers, they're always put in the books as the bad guys, and you get the bad guy versions of it. Even in kingdoms, as they called it, like Britain, or the UK, I mean, you had Wales. At one time Wales would fight with England. But more often it would fight alongside England because they were always given the next monarch. A young monarch before he became king was a prince, and he was always given the title of Prince of Wales, so the Welsh would think...

It's easy to appease people, in old times too, that was a legitimate government, remember, that's all they had. It would give you a little bit of snob appeal, again, well, we've got a prince, y'know, who's going to be the king one day. Simple things like that can get folk on board with you. And they used the peasants eventually to fight other rebellions, inside England sometimes. Then in Scotland as well, you know, as archers mainly, they'd be part of the English army. But you had Northern Ireland as well. Really, that have got hammered since Queen Elizabeth I time. Which always is a little thorn in the Scots, eh, the Scots' side. Because in Scotland they don't ever address Queen Elizabeth, the present one, as Queen Elizabeth II because she was never, Queen Elizabeth I was never the Queen over Scotland, you know, so there wasn't a first for Scotland, you see. So, a little, it's a little technicality there.

But anyway, you have these kingdoms, that's all the folk had. Yeah, they had all their shires and their reeves and so on that would keep the peace, and other ones would collect taxes. And from the people because the system of collecting taxes, giving you the cash to start with [Alan chuckles.] and then collecting taxes is very, very old. In Scotland it was so bad in some parts of England too, that when they went around to collect the taxes for the Lord, you know, on behalf of the Lord, they would, that was your feudal tax, your fee, your feu-, for existing, you see. But also, for existing on what was his land, even if your ancestors predated his, it didn't make any difference.

That's the power of might, you see. That's what everything was based on, the power of might until they become, it becomes the power of right, because they're still there and now they're posh and they've got fancy castles and they talk in a different accent. Actually, it truly is a different accent that they develop, to be different from the peasantry, you see. At one time they used to be pretty happy, but once they were posh, they had to be heppy, we're heppy, you see, a different accent. And then you'd say, my, that's a really posh person, that, whenever you heard that language spoken. So anyway, it's quite comical looking at history and Britain used to be pretty good at putting out good comedies about the kind of evolution of societies in Britain, from wearing furs in the caves and all that, all the way up to the posh ones that we have today, or even better ones we had in the past in fact.

But regardless, as I say, that was the only system the people knew. But from the year dot, really, when money was coined, especially, even before it was coined, before... At one time, in the days of Moses and so on, you wore your money around your arm. It was very similar to a religious thing that you [Alan chuckles.] can wave around your arm [Alan chuckles.] and pray too. [Alan chuckles.] I mean, they had good reasons for praying I suppose. But at that time, it was gold, and you would wrap it around your arm. You would snip off so much in payment for whatever it was you were purchasing before they developed a coin. That was the system they used for a long long time.

It used to be silver, then it became gold, silver was there first. The Phoenicians tried to make their, the coin, the coin of not just the realm but what they saw as their realm, which was a good part of the world at one time, wherever they traded and had factories. They had factories making pots and different things and different goods that would go in the pots, along the way. They also used slaves too, you see. They even had factories, they actually had mines going into the Urals in Russia, for folk who don't know that. The old records that were seized eventually by Romans, and were kept actually, said that they used slaves from... Slav, is where the word slave comes from and they were often used for mining in these mines in parts of Russia that the Phoenicians owned long, long ago.

They had it worked out the cost of a slave according to how long he would live. Because they only lived a certain amount of time in these mines, eh. You can only be, it could be days or weeks depending on the type of mine, if it was wet, dry, and so on. And sometimes they'd have to go through things like asbestos, you don't realize you actually had to cut through asbestos that you find in these chalk areas when you go through chalk and all kinds… Even that was recorded, these diseases recorded, even by the ancient Romans, you know, and the actual type of thing they had to cut through. Because they took over you see, from many of these organizations that ran it before, all of this kind of thing before them.

But it's fascinating again to see it, this craving for wealth, and metals that were to be used. It must be very, very old indeed. But they would be used to buy power. Money bought power. It was power and it bought power, power over others. Especially when you had a big enough society to accept it as power, you know, oh, I want that, y’know, give me some of those things. But about 800 I think it was BC, maybe or even, not BC, it was about 800… Yeah, 800 BC I think, they think that coins came in, the actual first coins came in. They were different shaped ones; it wasn't just round ones like the moon and the sun sort of thing. It was, they'd have different triangular ones and so on.

But from its inception, that's really where your history starts. Because it gave, it created a leisure class. I've mentioned this before that the philosophers in Greece for instance created the school system, schola, and that means 'leisure', you see, only those in leisure could attend and learn things that, really, that they thought weren't that relevant, their parents didn't think they were very relevant. Chatting about the meanings of life and all that really wasn't that relevant to hardnose businesspeople that owned fleets of ships for trading.

So, it's quite interesting to see how much of it was recorded, of the data of the times recorded. Then you can compare it to today and it's not really that different. You have of course Europe, you had, I would call them practical schools for the working classes coming out, really being created for the factory system, the industrial era. It was a minimalistic training because often these children had to also work in the factories, even when they were children, maybe 10 years old and so on. But it enabled them to read basic instructions for whatever they were making and so on.

Then it developed further and further into education for, again, really to the job they had been picked to do. They really, they were pretty well, hhhch, a form of paid slave because they were stuck in that job, often in the same factory for the rest of their lives. If, and I say this tongue-in-cheek, if they were lucky. Meaning, because you know eventually in the 20th century the idea was to do away with a job for life in anything really, unless you were much higher up the ladder. Unless you're a politician, you know, it didn't matter if you're good at what you did or not, you would never get fired. The same with civil servants, eh?

So, it's interesting to see the education system developed the way it did. From a necessity to teach them basic instructions and so they could comprehend basic orders and so on, and eventually led to setting up school systems for working-class people. You'd always had ones for the wealthy, either trained at home, homeschooled and then they'd go off to maybe universities later on, from early days. In fact, way back in Britain the Romans had records of Universities in Scotland! – how about that, eh – they'd often send their children to at one point. And here they are telling us we ran around there all hairy chested and stuff like that, eh, big beards that were so long you could trip over them. Ttt. And there's a different story altogether there.

So, they had, you know, universities for the wealthy people. It wasn't just Romans, I mean, Greeks would come there too and other people as well. It's quite fascinating even, I'm getting off the topic anyway but, it's quite fascinating to see the mystery religions when you read about Plato and others. That it wasn't just a learning of philosophy, as you well know, it was learning of the mysteries, as they called it. The mysteries were their form of, hidden under philosophy, a lot of philosophy was a way of life, and the mysteries often times were the secrets of being successful in that life and dominating others. Most success came from domination of something or another, of yourselves over something else.

They had at least three, at least three places, sometimes five schools, mystery schools they would go to for learning. I gave these talks many years ago of where they were. They had them in Egypt. So, the Greeks for instance would go to Egypt. They'd also go to a place which later became India, hm. In fact, two in that whole, it's a massive subcontinent really, two in India. Then one in the Middle East area, call it the Middle East or the Levant they used to call it. And another one that was based in old Persia. That's when they became a master eventually, when they did the whole circuit, you see. They'd send youngsters about the age of maybe 15 for their final education. That's just a by-and-by.

But it hasn't changed really that much, except now it's all mathematics and we call it basics, I suppose, education, extraneous stuff too of subjective material as opposed to just basically objective material. But for the working classes, working classes had, they make… Really, there'd be no industry at all if it wasn't for the working classes, as you all know. There'd be no real progress in anything if it wasn't for working classes that put in your sewer systems and made the pipes and all the rest of it. So, they were given more of a polytechnic type course, practical courses to get things done. That's why you have what's called civilization today. Because if you didn't have all that going in, your sewer systems and your septic systems and everything has to be put in there, and tradesmen and electricians and plumbers and so on, you'd all be living in squalor. I don't care where you'd be, they could be talking posh all they wanted at the very top, but you would not be living in a very healthy system at all.

You're always fighting nature, as they say. Don't ever, this great, this is a great thing that came up from the days of, it wasn't just John Dewey that was behind it. He's part of the organizations I'm talking about too, the World Wildlife Fund and Prince Philip going way back again to Darwin, hm, and you know, the ‘most favored races’ theories, etc. And meaning also the ones that should maybe get, even amongst your own race, weren't up to par. This is where eugenics all came from, going back to Thomas Malthus as well who came out with the scale, oh, there's too many people and eventually they'll all be standing on each other's heads. They didn't need a computer then, they just did mathematical, you know, equations and worked out if so many people had so many children today and by the years so and so they'll all be standing on each other's heads. Nothing happened the way he said. And everybody was going to starve to death as well. But he had the ear of kings and queens and governments in his day. That's where it started.

He did a lot of good, lovely charts, like the ones they churn out, just like the ones you churn out for Covid, you know, with all the big spikes and everything. It's very impressive, you know, all these charts, it convinces a lot of people. But he was wrong again. But that idea was always there because there is always a fear from the people he served that, the real nobility, and in all nations, they've all had the same thing, if there's too many people maybe the people would overthrow them for any... They're always living in worry, you know, fear. Also, too, if too many people would eat all their food supply and take all the space up that would then, they may die as well when there's just too many people.

That's always been a favorite theme, there's too many peasants, you see. Now it's not just peasants, they'll say under Covid, are you necessary or are you not necessary? You know? That's how they got you all worked out, according to your age, gender, physical abilities, mental abilities, etc. etc. etc., and necessity, are you essential? Are you an essential person? Should we keep you alive? That's what bioethics is doing now too, isn't it, eh? Ftt. Uuuuuuuhh, that would make you sick, wouldn't it, eh? It doesn't change that much.

But we live through it, and it keeps going on and on... as most folk pretend it doesn't exist. They don't really mean it... They get the guys like Sir Attenborough. Odd named that, Atten, eh? From ancient Egypt, Aten, borough, the borough of Aten. But anyway, there he is there and constantly saying there's just too many of you, not enough of these animals, you see. He doesn't bother, and he never gets lambasted for what he says either, does he? Have you noticed that?

What you've got in the States at the moment, are cities getting burned and so on under the pretense that's been given to you, backed by the media, that it's not happening, and what is happening is for legitimate purposes. What's happening is not protesting, as you well know. They're fronts, well exposed fronts of who funds them, what their goals are in the Marxist organization. But again, that's a front in itself. The followers as I say never really know. Like the old Illuminati idea, which didn't fade away by the way, you know, they had kings and queens into the organization eventually, across the planet, and the top bankers across the planet, who all profit by the way on the wars and everything else that goes along with it.

But as I say, you cannot judge the past by the present. You can always say what was wrong and the horrible things that were done at times, absolutely. No doubt about it. But people were brutal. M-hm. People were brutal. It takes a long time to civilize us all, ourselves. And civilization, I think it was Reagan said something like, that civilization, meaning a working system where you all respect each other to an extent, even if you disagree with me, you respect it's a working system, civilization is just a generation away from barbarism, it was something like that, to paraphrase it. And isn't that so true?

Because in a generation, hhmph, an organized group that's already in universities, has been for a long time, comes forth with a generation, and I said this before, a generation which they trained to hate themselves, to hate their parents, hate the system, to hate the country. Now, that's warfare. That's what the Communists tried to get done a long time ago, and the groups associated with all the different, myriad of branches of them all working together to destroy a functioning system. That's the point of it. Something that's functioning, which is an enemy of those who want to supplant it and then take over and be the bosses of it, must get rid of it by getting the folk to turn against it themselves. That's the first step of warfare, psychological warfare. They bring in critical theory and everything gets criticized until eventually one generation is all you need to have an army of youngsters; which they can unleash on the people anytime they want. I said, I warned this years ago this would happen.

The subversion has been, you paid for your own subversion through all your taxes and through the school systems and so on. Folk never realize how they've been taken down. Very old techniques. Very, very old techniques. Going back to even ancient China they had manuals on it, how to subvert nations before you even have to have physical warfare. You might not need physical warfare if you subverted it over a period of time, and then destroyed it. Gramsci also said the same thing, the communist who was based in Italy at one point, who said, rather than just have basic fights and going out and slaughtering citizens, he says, we should maybe subvert the culture, go in and take a long time subverting the culture, until we are the culture, our leaders in a generation could really have filled all the positions of leadership. So, the whole culture has been changed especially if you use it for education. That's all happened, you see.

Folk read these things and they can't believe that these things would ever happen. But the books were all there, and what the Marxists taught their followers was all there, it's all published information. It's that folk didn't want to read it, you know, thinking it's some kind of little, little sect that would just go away by itself somehow, hm. Ftt. Again, Marxism is a front, all groups are really fronts for one big organization. They are. It's a myriad, it's myriads of arms on it, into all kinds of things, but it's one organization. Marxism is one where you pick people who are, as I say, have a chip on their shoulder, they can't fit in, they feel that they've been let down, they feel they've been left out, and you use them. You use the leaders especially, who are a bit higher in the agenda, they've got a better idea of the real goals, for their level, but they don't let the followers know that. They just, yeah, yeah, right, these rotten sods were bad to you, now it's your turn to get revenge. So, you use them, you see.

You dispose of them too because once you bring in this system and you've conquered the old system, and the ones who are above communism who run it all take over the system, they cannot have those same people running around loose. They want to then convince what's left of society that now you're in a safe obedient society. You can't have them loose anymore, and they won't get tamed now that they tasted blood and the burning and so on. So, they get eradicated. That's the standard procedures. There are many groups out there across the planet that have been developed by one group above them who will take over eventually, all these positions, all these nations, into one global structure and dominate it.

Very old agenda. Very old plan. You're living through it. My parents were living through it and my grandparents were living through it, they didn't know. Some of them had a little bit of an inkling there was something much bigger on the go, but they wouldn't have so many facts as they have today. Np. If they want them that is.

Again, money is the key to so much of it because with money you can buy all the politicians off quite easily. Not hard to do. Especially with politicians, since they are, they don't really have many, um, state values most of them, they're not what you call states people, statesmen and women. They're psychopathic, you know. They don't know how to run anything except their mouths off. And even then, they have to follow scripts written by other people, who are professionals, the politicians generally are not professional, but the ones that write the scripts are. And even the ones that are screaming the Communist Manifesto out there in public and in the States right now are still reading stuff off scripts. By the Masters above them. And their paymasters. A lot of them are getting paid from different sources as well, and the funding they're getting, we can trace the funding actually, it's quite out in open. You're not allowed to speak about it because they'll cut you off, and maybe even worse, rather quickly, because it's getting to that stage now.

Your governments are definitely bought off completely I'd say. I think this whole Covid idea shows you the uniformity of allegiance across the planet from politicians as they all go along with what the general public are bewildered with, hhhch, when the evidence of a horror really isn't there in front of you. Except the horror of what's happened with the reaction to this Covid and damage it's caused. Facts don't matter when they're all completely, complete, almost without exception on board with the same thing, let's bring back the terror syndrome for the winter. I said this would happen back in February. Oh, the spike will come, oh my God, and then, yeah, and the useless tests are guaranteed to show positive. But not illness, you know. Illness doesn't matter. Until you get your immunity passports, which is really, it's just a record for the rest of your life of your annual updates, and every vaccination out there by the way. Huh-huh. You'd have to be superhuman to take all those vaccinations and NOT get side effects from it. Really.

But all the politicians are completely on board. Britain's going overboard with it now, you can see them, and tonight I'll be putting up different articles about that. And Australia that's a good case study actually in what they're up to, with something you would expect to have seen in a Banana Republic with the way that the police are literally just like space-age hoods really, getting set loose in the general public, with extreme force, hm. There's other reasons for that too, that Australia really is owned and has been owned really lock stock and barrel by those who own America. Eisenhower as I say, set out the marching orders for the future of Australia from then on. That's why the US has it's listening posts all across it. It's an outpost of American now, or for those who rule America. Even America's completely different from what used to be, obviously.

There's one group at the top that runs it. You know that. You all know that. You suspect it, put it that way. If you got 40 classmates together, old classmates, I'd like to see you all agreeing on everything all the time that's politically correct. You'd expect some dissent somewhere, a different opinion, or even a parallel, similar type of opinion, but a little bit parallel, a little bit different at the same time. But when you see across the board with all these characters, it tells you they're all bought and paid for. Try to tell me that no one has got the guts and the decency and the honor of saying, we're not, I'm not going to take the people along this road. Hm? Or are they really terrified?

Something you've got to accept as well, there are people in this world who get bumped off all the time across the planet with different agencies that are on the go and doing the killing. All kinds of ways of dispose of people. They don't have to show you some horrible thing, oh, mass poisoning in the streets, or the Skripal affair they had in Britain that made no sense at all, that kind of thing. There's far more people killed all the time, deliberately. They even have YouTube ones up of some of them, of hit squads, professionals killing folk. At least they used to have it up on YouTube. You'd actually see them, the authorities had pieced the characters together coming into airports into their country, they knew where they came from and what targets they were going after, in France for instance. Then they showed the hotel camera showing them going in, first in goes the person who does the job, the deed you know, in goes the sweeper after and clean it all up and get fingerprints, anything out of the way, everything out of the way, get in and all that kind of stuff. There's about three different levels of it, then they all get out. Then one by one they're all split up and you see them one by one at different times a few hours apart going through the airport and so on. This is how it's done. That's professional, you see. Happens all the time.

Most of them are just accidents. Lots of accidents happen. A few years ago, there were, hhhhh, stacks of biochemists dying. Some of them went to meetings and maybe 3 at a time would die. [Alan chuckles.] I guess because they wouldn't go along with something, or held out for more money, or they couldn't be bribed, or who knows? But it was happening all the time. They had lists of them. It was just a dangerous thing to be involved in. Never mind David Kelly as well that was involved in that kind of thing as a government agent who was sent across not just working with certain countries to make biological weapons, which he did talk about, that was one of the last things he disclosed before he was found suicided. He also was sent across to inspect other countries laboratories to make sure they weren't doing biowarfare or had the signs of it and so on.

Yeah, it's a very dangerous field to be in. Because it is, I always said it, I wasn't really worried about the atomic bomb so much getting used deliberately to kill masses of people. It's far better with the quiet wars, eh, or the silent wars… or silent weapons, I should say, for quiet wars where you've always got plausible deniability. Just like Covid, eh, oh, guess what broke out? Oh my goodness, it's a new kind of, a novel, a new type of coronavirus. And out comes all the data bit by bit by bit, and even right down to how it got to China, you know. Once we had the data there all admitted to from the lab in China and so on, and here's it's gene sequencing and here's the four inserts, etc., and the cleavages in them and how they put them in and yada ya. Then the government gets a bit restless and changes its tune and says, oh no, it probably developed naturally.

After it was admitted they got the coronavirus that came from North Carolina University, Fauci had dominion over that area too, had it sent over after a meeting in the States with the Pentagon and the rest of them that this was a bit too dangerous to do gain of function, making it more infectious, in America if it got loose, they said. I've got the papers here, we've all got them, it's been up on the Internet too. If it got into the public, it could be disastrous, so they gave it to China and gave them the money, millions of dollars through Fauci signing the agreements to continue the work. And bingo, bingo! Then we're told now it just happened to... But regardless, and now you've got another woman from China coming over, another defector last week, saying yeah, she worked on it too. She was given it to investigate once it had broken out in China, and they realized what it was too and the gene sequencing of it all. It was, you know, she claims it definitely came from a China lab.

Regardless, everything is pro and against, isn't it? Everything, it's just a massive psychological warfare at the same time. Until the general public won't be able to make their mind up on anything. That happened with 9/11. The same darn thing. Exactly the same thing. You'll get all this evidence coming out and then once they give it maybe a week to soak in to the public and get repeated and so on, then they come out with a completely alternate reason for everything happening, for EVERYthing happening. Then after that they added more and more things, maybe it was this, maybe it was that, maybe, maybe, maybe, until the public switch off. That's the psychological operation, you see. So, we don't know where we are with Covid yet. Except we do have the trail that certainly a Covid type was given to that lab by Fauci. In fact, this defector said, ask Dr. Fauci, he knows all about this.

Amazing times isn't it? It's amazing times we're living in where there's such overt evil on the go. Overt it is. The public feel the evil, they can. They'll try to find other ways to describe it, but they FEEL it. You're either at least uncomfortable, at least uncomfortable, right, or right to those who are absolutely terrified of what's coming down.

But we've got to remember, we have to remember that you all have voices, all of you have voices, and to stop the greatest evil we've seen probably in our lifetime, across the globe, you will all have to start saying NO. To different things, no. Because this is a hell on earth, like a permanent hell on earth that's coming down now. Absolutely.

Don't be terrified by the brutes that are set upon you. Governments go this way when they're utterly corrupt and desperate. They'd rather you all just comply, naturally. But when they go to brute force and try to show actually through all the media that they've got to terrify you further into compliance, you've got to start saying no, this is enough. This is...

You've got to, when you get through this and win by the way, you know, you've got to get all the policeman's names, their badge numbers, their supervisors, the politicians that advocate, and THEY

ALL GO ON TRIAL. I mean ON TRIAL, publicly on trial. Like a new Nuremberg, eh. Including the scientists that are behind it, and the people who pretend they're, they're all part of the WHO, World Health Organization who are put in place over our countries, hm, they've all snuck in somehow, hm, and they're all part of the Gates group and the GAVI group. All this clique that's involved in all the vaccinations, all the preparations as well, one small clique really. Running everything.

They'll have to go on trial for what they've done here!

And deliberately destroying the planet's economy! Well, what d'you think you're going to live in [Alan chuckles.] or how do you think you're going to live after this? Well, total austerity, like I've said for years. I read the articles from the UN for years, how do we get the people into accepting austerity? Austerity is poverty, basic survival, that's what they mean. Well, bingo, here’s the plan. Hm? First, they used the climate agenda. Then they complained that folk aren't listening to us, we'll have to do something more drastic. Bingo, the next year, or even late that year in fact, out comes Covid. Fft. M-hm.

Now remember again before I go any further you can help me out too by getting a few bucks sent my way @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. You'll see how to do it. You can send checks; you can send cash even and use PayPal. Just ordinary post is fine, things don't get lost. One thing about the postage system, it's good. Don't express anything. Don't register anything for special extra higher cost. They're guaranteed to stop them and give them more scrutiny and stop everything. Just send it regular post, whatever it happens to be, regular post all the time and that's just fine. It's dandy. It helps me tick along.

I've got articles here tonight, I knew it would come, I was waiting for it. Because Event 201 and even the one going back into the Lockstep, the 2010 Rockefeller one, but Event 201 that they were all involved with, with the Gates foundation and Johns Hopkins University with their so-called, you know, their plan of it all and their exercise IF it should ever happen, wink-wink, nudge-nudge. They said that, they had a 4 to 5 stage plan of introducing laws to come down on the public, that wouldn't comply, and then laws that would come down and come down to folk who wouldn't shut up. Initially they would label it as disinformation or wrong information. Then they would go after them for their finances, trying to lock them down. Just… Just… Isn't that tyranny, folks?!? This is what you used to read in all the movies about tyrannical governments in the past, or Mexico or some other Latin American country or whatever it happened to be. And you've got it HERE. The dirty, dirty tricks squad, hm, as they try to shut you down by every means possible.

You see, what you're under, and this is comical in a sense. I used to, strangely enough, years and years ago I couldn't, I had no patience for any kind of TV shows that used to be on. But years later, years and years later as I say, somebody once sent me literally discs of say, Dad's Army, the old series in Britain, a comedy series, a kind of almost slapstick about World War II and the Home Guard units. Guys who were miners and butchers and everything else couldn't get in the Army because they were, again, they were preferred or their occupations were essential occupations to keep the system going, but they could form the Home Guard in case they were invaded.

They had lots of good comedy through it and reality too mixed in with it. Because folk were put on austerity rationing. But also, in one or two of them they had Mainwaring, their captain was also the bank manager, introducing martial law when bombs had come down and hit the water supply lines, the pipes and I think the gas lines as well. So, he took charge of it all instantly, because he liked to strut, shows his stuff, and it was a comedy. But instantly he introduces, he says, you can't have a bath because the water supply's been hit, so you need a chitty from our office if you want to take a bath, you know. And he says, and no meetings in the streets of more than five people. And all the stuff you're seeing with Covid, he reeled off in a comedy sketch. Because that's emergency powers, it never changes.

That's what you've got right now. They introduced emergency powers. So, under this emergency power they can do whatever they want. Now, we saw that with 9/11, when they all went across the board doing the same darn thing with 9/11. Oh, you can't have any rights anymore because we're being attacked, and the whole world's been attacked. They signed into law by the way, all NATO countries signed into law that they'd all been attacked as a unit, so they'd have to enforce the same kind of totalitarian system across all their citizens, total surveillance, yada, yada, ya. I've got it here actually; I might put it up tonight what they signed back then.

But it never changes, does it? It just doesn't change at all. So, as I say, I'll put a lot up there @cuttingthroughthematrix.com at the end of the talk. You can get the links and the PDFs and keep them for posterity because you're living through amazing history right now. IF we get through this. We don't know what they've got planned next. And I really, you know, I'm not sitting worried about things because there's no point worrying. It will immobilize you. That's what they would LIKE to happen, fear is meant to immobilize you. Then they show you a choice of this or that, you always take the easy choice, which they know you will, and you end up losing, you see.

You've got to stay stable, don't panic, as Jonesy would say in Dad's Army, and you'll get through. You'll get through. If you've got a few friends and so on, and you'll definitely, you've also got to help each other. You've got to help each other out. It doesn't matter. And stay in with, don't argue with your family because you'll need them. And some folk will crack up, there's no doubt about it, during all the things that are coming down the pike. The authorities know that too.

We're guided like a herd of sheep step-by-step; you understand that. Because from the very beginning there was no possibility they would change their course here. That's a fact. Anything else was just to, oh, maybe they're going to back off. No, they're not. I said that again back in February, I says, Fauci's laid down the law what's going to happen, you're never going to get out of your homes, never getting back to work, never going back to ANY kind of thing that you thought was normal, unless you get the shot, a shot, and you also get the cards, the immunity passports, the Gates idea, which also is World Health Organization, which he pretty well owns by now with the money he puts into it. And he himself is a front man for the same secret organization, secretive organization we were talking about before.

Think James Bond. As I've said so many times, the biggest problems in the James Bond series were never really countries. But you had these private shadowy organizations, you know, that had their fingers in everything. You have the same kind of thing in Sherlock Holmes with Moriarty and this incredible genius organization of criminality across the planet that had their fingers in every pie. As they said even with Moriarty, you couldn't whisper something anywhere of import that one of his spies wouldn't hear, they had so many of them. [Alan chuckles.] It's not too far from the truth, folks, especially now with all the surveillance upon you all. They want to push us like a herd of animals step by step by step down the preselected path, predetermined path that they know they're going to take us down.

So again, @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. You can buy the books and discs. Send a few bucks my way as well. Remember I always put the links up to the articles I mentioned so at least you've got some proof that they were actually published, that they're out there in the first place. It doesn't mean they're 100% sure, you know, you can never be hundred percent sure of certain things, but you've got more validation than normal, it's not just hearsay. There's a lot of fake news getting put out deliberately by the other side by the way for folk to grab a hold of, in the hope that you'll publish it, then they can point to you, oh look at all that fake news. Then you lose credibility. This is total war.

I mentioned the group in Britain, eh, the 77th Brigade they called it with the leader in it, he was in the newspapers talking about his job and how they've got thousands of these guys in cyberspace attacking everybody all the time and manipulating people's thoughts and minds. It's a step above the behavioral insights team, although it's connected to them as well. But yeah, they attack everybody. Massively so. There's one in Canada too working with them now, I've got that for tonight, I'll put it up. They have a team working with the military of Canada to attack people who are going to complain about, ah, they keep saying Trudeau's plan. This guy couldn't plan anything, you know. So, it's not his plan. Canada is well in the bag of control, it doesn't need, any figurehead would really do right now but they've got perfect compliance with the politicians in Canada pretty well. But yeah, they're going to turn the troops loose eventually.

By the way, Canada will be using the troops as well going around door-to-door. It's a martial law scenario, we've got it here. So does the States. It's all the same thing across the board. And to the very end they'll use basic, we're really pretty well nice people and they're just going to help you here... You'll get images of guys with rifles helping old ladies across the street, that's what will get put in your head, you know. It will be the furthest thing from the truth. But it's for total compliance. They even have a staged plan of those who will comply and those who won't comply, they've already got it made up, the ones who are already speaking out about it and how they're going to deal with them. Including imprisonment. That was also in the early plans that I read months ago, it's just confirmation of the same thing. Australia of course is doing that already, so they're going ahead and just grabbing folk who show that they have a different opinion. There's a price you pay for having different opinions, hm. Quite amazing. But that's the system we're living under.

There's so much happening right now too. You've probably already heard about Newt Gingrich who was on Fox News a few days ago. They were talking about the riots in the States... Oh sorry, the protests in the States, you know. He said, and I've got the link to it and the whole thing, I think he's up on Bitchute still at least. He said, well, when you see these Attorney Generals, these district attorneys and so on that are put in place across different states in the US, and the funding behind them all came from the same source. He mentions the source, and it's taboo to mention the source by the way. [Alan chuckles.] Literally taboo, like illegal, hm, in some countries. ...who funded them, some of them with millions of bucks behind them to get them in, who literally are, some of them have concepts of having no prisons at all. They're not even putting the rioters and the arsonists they're catching in jail. They're letting them go right away with it. So, they're back on the streets just doing it, continuing.

This is total, a total revolution. They know who's behind it, financing it, the different people. Why don't they arrest them? It's because again the guy, this guy, we all know who he is, hm, Georgie boy, eh. We all know who he is. He's obviously way up there already in the controlling, at least on a part of the controlling system of the whole planet right now, funding this across the world. Bill Gates is a front man. He wasn't a self-made man. Neither was his daddy. They put these people out there and they have missions. They'll live awfully well their entire lives; they'll get a lot of publicity and be made to be important. But they're all front people. Absolutely. No doubt about it.

Anybody who's anybody in the communications area too is absolutely a front person. I don't care what Facebook or anything else is there for you to peruse, eh. You have to look at the CIA and say what IS the CIA? What on earth is it, really, eh?! Have you had anyone ever explain what the CIA actually is in this day and age? You all hear, oh, it started off with the OSS during World War II and… You know, it was a combination of the British Secret Service and, also this oversees, the Secret Service, SOE group as well. Long stories to all the stuff but anyway...

Oh, that's what it was for! It was to fight to Germany at the time. Oh my goodness, yeah. And they put their agents in all media, I don't think they ever left, to give the right kind of propaganda. George Orwell mentioned he was in it during World War II, so was Arthur Kessler, Bertrand Russell and a whole bunch of other people. They had communists in there too, absolute card-carrying communists. They were all pals back then because, remember, the idea of this illumined group at the top running everything was to bring them all together to knock out certain countries, then have you all fight each other once it was all over. That's exactly how they did it. Again, you can't get change without having conflict. So, you create sides, have conflict on the go, then you got it where you want it to go. Then you have a different part of the plan afterwards with different names and everything else. That's how the world is really run.

But the OSS was an amazing organization. Then of course after World War II became the CIA. You'll see many times politicians down through different generations literally have asked, what is this, you know, they try to get information. They can't get anything out of it. For national security, that's the excuse given. But we know it's been across the planet's fomenting wars and overthrowing governments, mainly for resources for the richest folk on the planet. That's what always happens. They're not doing it just because they don't like your politics. It's to do with the resources and finances, etc. Wealth, hm.

So anyway, yeah, so the CIA, I've said this before, and the Mossad, MI6, and many other organizations across Europe are all part of the same, they're literally one system nowadays. Have been for a long time. What is this organization then, eh? This compartmentalized organization? Where the guys at the bottom will get nothing, oh, no, we're American, we're still American, you know. But what about their superiors above them? different compartments, up and up and up and up? Hm? You see, when you smell something, something really smells wrong, beyond wrong, it's wrong and confusing, it's confusing because it DOESN'T make sense, then something else IS always going on. Always going on.

So anyway, I'll put up the link with Gingrich getting cut off. He was the ex-Speaker of the House, eh, so he was cut off live. You can see the woman, the host, the women hosts that were on it who had their little, all had their little invisible earbuds in their ears, you know, and they got the word, NOPE, you can't mention that man's name who's funding all of this thing, you can't do it. Why not? That's what he said, Newt Gingrich said, well why not? He says, well he is, we all know he is, we've got all the evidence here. I'll put a link up to his own site, Newt Gingrich's site. Oh, not to his site, he's on a different site actually, his articles are on it. You can see his take on it afterwards on what happened there. It's quite interesting. He puts the links up to justify and to verify what he said. He wasn't making things up.

'So it's verboten?': Fox News panelist STOPS Newt Gingrich from discussing 'Soros-elected' district attorneys - rt.com / 16 Sept 2020

But how come no one touches this character that's funding all of this, who's funding the folk who are the leaders of the rioters in the streets and the arsonists? No one's touching this guy. So, what is this big organization way above, where governments won't touch him? No police force will ever go near him, or even accuse him of anything. The politicians and everybody across the media are terrified to mention it, because they'll lose their JOBS. That's POWER, folks. What are you pretending you live in some kind of Democratic Republic for when this kind of thing is happening? Who's kidding who? [Alan chuckles.] I tell ya. It's quite something. Strange days indeed.

So, I've been, again, thinking about the news. When you see it live, you see these people getting their orders live, and they follow, they obey it and they shut up. There's no honor in them obviously. But again, they had no honor before the Covid thing. The media had lost all credibility over the years. More so since 9/11 happened and everything that they pushed, and they were all on board for it and so on and loss of freedoms and privacy and so on. They had completely lost all credibility as they all reported exactly verbatim, word for word the same news articles, across the country, from it didn't matter what stations they were. That's all one organization eventually, obviously.

All they had to give you to keep folk [tuned] in was bits of almost soft porn about and celebrities and what they're up to, rubbish like that, you know. So, when Covid came along, oh, they're back on board again. Terror is a great thing, if you look it up… If I don't look in, I'll not notice something that's going to save my life that's in the news, I'd better tune in every day. Then you get into the daily dose of addictive terror, hhhhhh, oh my God, oh my God, until eventually you'll be asking, no, demanding to have the vaccine. And folk will fight.

I can remember doing the shows on the radio at the time, I think it was 2009 when they came out with the big pandemic then, it was going to kill us all then as well, you see. It's the same one too where eventually they told all the doctors in Canada, don't bother testing the patients in the clinics, walk-in clinics, don't test them just put them down as having this virus. So that was all such baloney then too. Folk weren't dying all over the place either. It didn't matter, because facts don't matter, you see. But the media were all behind it, completely on board with it. I'm sure they're well rewarded for going into overdrive with telling the folk we're all going to die. You see, it's all been done before. All of it.

What it was really, it was a big training exercise of, and they actually mentioned that in recent articles, that all the training that they got and the education they got and the studying of the public's reactions to different things, it was well studied for today, so they could make it more perfect, the unrolling of this whole Emergency Powers Act idea. Today all the things that they tried out before to coerce the public into by terrifying them, that's all they had at that time. They didn't have any other way to force you into it. So, they perfected techniques by using these previous attempts to get you all to rush off and get shots and so on.

And it's strange, we all survived that last one that fizzled out too. They had millions of doses of a vaccine that they had to ditch eventually. The States had it; I know it was millions of them were ditched in North Carolina in some River. I don't know why. But the FDA went in afterward and said it probably didn't harm anything. [Alan laughing.] Ahiy tell ya. This world we live in is quite amazing. But yeah, they've tried everything before to terrify us all and to see how we react, and study us so they could try and close any loopholes that they probably couldn’t get around in previous times.

Now, what's the chances of unleashing the story and the terror across the nations, and when that's going on, again, the same characters that's funding all these, this Wizard of Oz behind the curtain, you know, but we know who he is. And he's only one of them, you know. There's the Tides Organizations and different ones fund these people too. They're all set up in advance, these foundations for them to fund NGOs, as they like to call the groups going around arsoning and burning places down. They're NGOs, you know, tax-free and they get funded to do it. As I say, the ones who are following and getting carried away thinking they're really doing it, they're all behind it themselves. They have no idea who their leaders really, really are. These are operatives. These are agency operatives obviously. And they're well-funded, well-paid, as I say, they have pension schemes and everything. Once this is over, they're often into something else, maybe even some other country in fact, and they'll leave everybody else to take the heat.

But the OSS, as I say, the OSS was an interesting organization. Even I think it was Christopher, not Christopher Lee... Yeah, it was Christopher Lee was part of it during World War II, and Special Operations Executive he was part often, and he had his card to pop into the different allied special forces areas including that one at Hereford in England and in Wales. So, he was well known amongst all the different generations of guys in special forces. But yeah, they all had their, you'd be amazed how many people are involved in this. There's a lot of them too who are put into the news media. Lots of them. That's all been explained and admitted to over years. Even lists of them came out, people in the media, American media who were really CIA trained and operatives. Most of them are assets, really, you know.

The same in Canada, even CSIS has, most of them are really just, you can get little contracts you can sign on for and pass information. It's almost like a pay-as-you-go, you get paid as you go I suppose picking up information here and there. They have them for universities and things like that but a lot of that is dying off with, not all of it, you also need physical people, but they've got the Internet now. Then they've got the NSA for the States that shares it with Canada. And so on and so on.

So, there's nothing happening today with the Covid that wasn't tested out before, even as far back as the first SARS outbreak in 2003. Then too it turned out in China, I've got the article still, China accused eventually, at least put out the idea, or the thought [Alan chuckles.] that they wondered if America had designed this, they thought that was designed in a lab at the time. Again, you don't know who's telling the truth here because China will refute anything you say. What was interesting, it seemed to be mainly attacking people with the genetic makeup of their own people in their homeland and who had settled in Canada too. So, in other words, you know, like ethnic group specific.

But we'll never know these things. Never. It's quite easy to take them and alter them into... Don't forget the people who become your saviors, the scientists who work on the vaccines, are the same scientists who work on creating the disease. You do know that [Alan chuckles.] don't you? Yep. Because these labs are, that's where they do the experimentation with virologists working on them. We have the ones working on the mRNA, the messenger RNA as they like to call it. Interesting, one of them who most people in Canada didn't even know existed, is really the guy who was behind Moderna, and he worked on a lot of this stuff for years and he had moved to Canada. And he moved to the States, I think he was working at Harvard for a while.

Yeah, these characters work in these labs. You can't work on these, with the viruses to get vaccines unless you work in these labs. They're containment labs, hm. Which really were designed for warfare purposes. If you're dealing with viruses and putting in gain of function into them, just to find out IF it ever became a really deadly disease by itself, maybe in 10 million years' time, you know, maybe, maybe, you know, maybe, maybe even 50 million years' time, you know, then you should be ready for it. That's the excuse. That was how they get around all the biowarfare treaties they signed, well it's really just for medical reasons now, it's for safety, you know. No, no, it's for creating the same darn things again.

So anyway, I'll put some of these things up tonight. But folk have no idea. Most folk, if you watch TV, you won't have a mind of your own. It's weaponized and it was weaponized a long time ago, television. Through crisis situations they go into overdrive with propaganda. That's going to be the same uniform propaganda, it doesn't matter what paper you look at, it was a newspaper in the old days, or some TV station today, or channel, it's just repetitive propaganda that they're all repeating. And the same day... If Bill Gates comes out on one day, they'll all have Bill Gates live, supposedly, giving the same talk on how you should all just submit and go along with it, at the same time.

And Mr. Fauci that has this little smirk there, you know, he's always got a little smirk on his face like a... Because of course, he’s up the chain there. He's in with Fort Dietrich, you know, he’s overseer of that group too. He's worked with these... Why do you think this little guy came out and really was put to the top very quickly? The job again is gain of function, creating diseases. Hm?! And again, standardizing information amongst their own level of scientists. Any scientist who wants to say something different is, phew, they'll lose their license so darn fast, you know. And this little guy is the boss of it all. He got Judy Mikovits out rather quickly, and many others too by the way. But yeah, he's in with Bill Gates. And Bill Gates owns GAVI. Bill Gates funds massively, even over half of the World Health Organization's expenses and so on. He decides, he's got vaccinations going across the whole planet, this guy who doesn't have even a first aid certificate, you know.

That's the world we live in, isn't it? Scary times indeed. And it's going to get scarier, so you've got to keep your head and don't panic, again, as I say, don't panic, don't panic. Because they have to unleash the brutes eventually. Unfortunately, as I've said so many times, no generation is devoid of brutes that are employed by tyrannical governments. All governments become tyrannical in times like this. Obviously. We see it in Australia, the things people never thought they'd see in what they called civilized countries, democratic countries... Of armies of these cops, dressed in battle gear really, wearing black because black is the uniform of death, that's why they picked black back in the 80s. As I've said before, in the late 80s, or into the 90s actually when they came out, they changed the outfits in Canada – I don't know about Australia – at the same time for the police that used to be... The police used to be approachable and didn't look like military, didn't look like Darth Vader. They had light blue shirts on and were pleasant, a bit more pleasant, and you could approach them and ask the time or directions or something like that.

Once they came out, and they came out with them, even put promos out to get the public used to them. Oh, maybe you've seen it, maybe you've seen your local policeman walking around in your area in different uniforms. And most of them are models, they actually had models going out in different even small towns like where I was living. Because I never knew these faces before so they were probably the models. They're walking like four abreast, walking down all smiling and happy looking, and dressed with the black gear on. Which is just military gear, right down to the military boots on and the pants tucked into the tops of the boots and so on. And completely black outfit including the black ties and shirts. That's the sign of death. That's the hangman. That's the executioner.

That's why, it's meant to be more intimidating. That's why they changed it over, in preparation, in preparation, right, for what was going to come along the pike which was 9/11. And all the NATO countries had to be on board. This is getting it all ready 2 1/2 years, two, three years before it actually happened. Allan Rock was on board with an omnibus crime bill, which was a martial law bill with arresting any suspects, it didn't say for what [Alan chuckles.], and put them in confinement, without charge, indefinitely, etc. etc. Before 9/11. This is two, three years before 9/11 happened. He put it through himself, supposedly, he was the head of it. Then he was sent off from being the Attorney General for Canada for the feds, and he went off to work at the United Nations. I heard he'd just come back recently, and the other communist Bob Rae went over to take his place.

So anyway, that's how the world's run. I always go back to Caroll Quigley who was an elitist himself. He had no sympathy for ordinary people at all. He thought they were pretty well scum. Intelligentsia aught mattered, that's what he thought mattered. He became the historian for, and he loved to boast about it, for the Council on Foreign Relations and got access to the records, which was combined with the Royal Institute of International Affairs, hm. That was, I've heard this from other professors too, there are certain archives in each country where they’re given access, certain ones. CERTAIN ones will be given access where they have material that you never see anywhere else. Well, Quigley was given that. He boasted about it. He said, I had the history, I suddenly had the real history of why things happened and what caused them to happen. He said that. He said, I work for this group on behalf of the group and he said I have no objections to anything that they do for their plans. These are the real globalists, eh. He says, I have objected occasionally to some of their methods, but he had no problems with them at all. He took over for a while or worked with I should say as well and took over to an extent as well as the archivist for them. They've got a massive, you know, massive library of what they've done to make things happen all down through history. Well, history for the last few hundred years. [Alan laughing.] This is from a top man himself. He wasn't hallucinating. He wasn't tripping out on LSD. He was just, he was boasting about it. Because to him it's such an honor to get in and get access to the archives.

He started to write about it. It wasn't just his big tome of a book that he put out there that everybody generally quotes. The other one was The Anglo-American Establishment. Awfully important. He went through how they had literally taken over Africa, South Africa. Even now they had manipulated the British government into supposedly going into save the people from the Boers, when in reality this particular group got mercenaries to invade the Boer territories and had them retaliating. That's what they did but they kept that out of the media. But he said, yeah, he says they were behind the different wars, and how they wanted the war for World War I and they worked behind the scenes to make all that happen. This is real history. This is what...

You see, this is what you're looking at with the real [Alan chuckles.] illuminati group, you know, at least one layer of it. They have in Britain the Royal Institute of International Affairs that used to be the Lord Alfred Milner group, that picked them all and they were lifelong members of All Souls College, that's where they met, you know, at times for big projects. But they also had an inner group and the outer group and a society of friends as well. The inner group is highly secretive. That's where George Orwell, that's what he was talking about when he talked about the party, and the inner party and the outer party and so on. That's how it's done. Compartmentalized. The same with the CFR inside the States, then you have a higher group from the CFR, you got, one of them is the Trilateral group, that's another one above that. So, everything's compartmentalized.

That's how the world is really run. Unlimited financing because the people who run the Federal Reserve's and the central banks are on board with them, they're part of it. That's another layer of it. When money is out of nothing, you know, they can collapse economies to make the people suffer to change your behavior, etc. if they want to. But they don't lose anything because it's all fictitious money anyway, isn't it, backed by nothing?

So anyway, yeah, that's how the world's run. If you go into Quigley's writings he talks, he really glorified these guys, you know, how they so cleverly took over parts of the world and fomented revolutions, got the stage set working inside Germany and Britain and elsewhere for a war, you know, things like that. And how they were all for their Soviet, the Bolshevik revolution. There were members of the Bolsheviks in the group! [Alan chuckles.] maybe more than you think.

Then they studied it all, they studied the Soviet system, the great experiment, the second experiment, America being the first. And here's a little unpleasant thing because people don't like unpleasantries, eh, we shy away from them, don't we? But if that was called the second great experiment, the Bolshevik revolution, that was a take over as you know. That most of the Bolsheviks had all run out of Europe before, had been chased out, then they were formed in New York mainland and Standard Oil picked them up and train them as, you know, to be revolutionaries, again. [Alan chuckles.] They even mentioned the camps they were trained in across America and then sent back to take over Russia. You have to wonder to yourself, they called America the first experiment, great experiment. Was it the same organization behind that too do you think? Hm? You've got to think about it.

And yeah, you have your own, everyone's got a founding myth, you know, a foundation myth for nations. Well, everybody has it. Rome was good, they had Romulus and Remus and I quite liked that one. You had I think it was the crow, was it the crow, native Indians, or Native Americans I should call them really. What an insult to call them Indians when they're not Indians, they're not from India. It was applied to them, eh. But as I say, the Native Americans, the crow one was good. They actually got their name, and a very simple, you know, creation myth. The crow literally, a big, big crow flew over and stopped next to a riverbank I think and lay the eggs on the bank, and one became a male, one became a female. Very simple and easy and quite nice and quite pleasant imagery. I like that one. Again, Romulus and Remus for Rome. So, you have these foundation myths.

But what you do get with America is the Francis Bacon New Atlantis. There's no doubt about it. He was referring to a place out, it would be West, out West in the Atlantic somewhere. Right down to how it would be designed and set up. That was so fascinating really. A good science fiction read if you want to take it as science-fiction. He said that underground, under, he said the true rulers would live 3 miles under, inside mountains, kind of like Cheyenne Mountain, you know, or 3 miles deep in rock, you know underground, and they would have laboratories there.

Remember, behind the mystery religions and alchemy and all the rest of it, they know that the symbols too ended up being scientific symbols as well. Science was always part of it, you see. And science was power. You kept science secret and quiet. The underground stream of knowledge, things that were taboo to talk about even when certain religions would go after you. But they'd always been, some of them wrote about it. The members of the groups wrote about it that eventually, it wasn't some kind of prediction because they had been doing it for a long time. They said eventually it would be so powerful, as scientific advisors and makers and manufacturers, that governments because of their military needs will come to us and gradually we'll get more and more money and we'll get more and more power and esteem and status, until we will rule everything. That was behind that, for those who don't quite know it.

It was a mixture too of mysticism and Kabbalah at one time. Because all the old mysteries had really I'd say Kabbalah in them in one form or another, eventually anyway, eventually they did as they amalgamated different beliefs together in different nations. But Kabbalah was part of it, and you had it with those who are involved in science in Francis Bacon's time. So much so that some of them learned Hebrew, you know. Even when America before it had its independence, I think it was in Yale, and maybe another one too, I know I was reading about, some of them had courses in, where you had to take Hebrew, [Alan chuckles.] no kidding, back then.

So, you have to realize that you had a mix of mysticism mixed with, out of mysticism you get a kind of prolific philosophy. In other words, it's an agenda driven thing, hm. Change is the word; you get change in all kinds of mysteries. Changing spells, that's what magic is supposed to be about too, you change something, right. So, science is the same. Chemistry is the same. How can you, if you add this and this, can I change it into something else and so on, and what do we get out of it?

Right now, you've got the mRNA, the messenger ribonucleic acid, and you're going to change it for a vaccine, to change the cellular structure in your lungs and in your nose and so on, permanently. There's a change for you through alchemy, eh. Hhmph. Which will obviously change the human to an extent into something slightly different from what the human was before. Obviously, that's what's happening, you see. And you have to have no say in the matter. It's awfully important to those who own you, I would say at least, very important to them. At least they think it's important. And you have to get no say in it at all.

I guess to save you, they'll have to kill you if you don't accept it. You know? You see the police sometimes where they get called out to someone who's going to attempt suicide and they've got a knife or something and they're ready to cut their own throat. That happened in Canada a few years ago. The guy literally, the cops killed him. He wasn't running at the cops with a knife, he was going to cut his own throat, so they shot him. Saved him the trouble, I guess. So, you don't call the cops if someone's committing suicide, I mean, just don't do it. And I understand it too, they're not meant, they're not trained to deal with that. I mean who… You need special training, and you get time, time, teams and funding for people to stop that kind of thing happening. But not the police. The police are a FORCE; their job is to use force for whatever object is desired.

Going back to Francis Bacon, yeah, he says this New Atlantis would be a light to the world, eh – this is very telling, the terms they use are telling, you understand – a light to the world and they would have higher morality in their dealings with all foreigners that would come in with shipping and stuff, or places they would send their ships to, and they would be very honest and trusted and admired throughout the whole planet, you see, to bring in a global structure.

But the sci-fi part, some of the sci-fi parts are really good. He said that on the surface there'd be the appearance of a form of government that the people would think it was all there was, the general population. But he says underground they'd have a secret government, the true government, of scientists. Now, Novus Ordo Seclorum, in the States, a new earthly order, you see, that's really important. It means a secular order, which is an earthly order, nonreligious, that's what it means. Even though their symbols are highly religious and very, very ancient… because they will deceive, right. [Alan chuckles.]

He said too that underneath the ground everything would be powered with scientific inventions, one of which, he said, would control the weather and could make a perfect day by giving sunshine, clearing clouds, or they could bring in storm clouds, or they could actually somehow trans.., beam it over the ocean, or today I guess we'd say today they'd hit it off the ionosphere and it would reflect it down and aim it just like the HAARP technology. But he says, it would be powered with something that gave the heat of the sun. That's like nuclear energy. [Alan chuckles.] He said they could literally be used as a tremendous weapon, or else it could calm the seas, or use them to sink whole shipping, like armadas if you like.

So, what's interesting again [Alan laughing.] was that one of the old homestead Francis Bacon had, I think it was Francis Bacon, he had meetings in it, eh, with members of his own little ilk, his lodge I suppose they'd call it. They did scrapings, universities, I don't know if it was Oxford or... They did scrapings of the beams in the ceilings, and they found heavy traces of cannabis and things like that. So, they presumed that these guys, that literally, don't forget too that they had different sea captains coming and going all the time, were trying different things, including probably opium too, I'm sure.

It's amazing, and whenever they find that stuff they say, oh it probably helped him to [Alan clears his throat] really imagine things, you know, it helped their imagination, writers just love this kind of thing, it makes them do… Have you read the gibberish of the morning after of folk that had been partying with marijuana? [Alan laughing.] These people literally, they'll grab you and hold you and they'll say, and they'll tell you, and stare so sincerely and honestly and earnestly and they'll tell you that, what they think is amazing philosophy at the time. Then they'll go and write it all down, screeds of it. Then in the morning they look at it and they shake their heads and say, who wrote that? You wrote that. NO, and then you see them blushing and they just tear it up immediately, it's so terrible, but at the time they thought it was astounding genius.

But anyway, yeah, so Francis Bacon talked about this power of the sun technology as heat and light that give them such energy to power everything. Way ahead of its time. Even I would think for science fiction writers [Alan chuckles.] for even 100 years later or 200 years later could imagine. But he was into it.

That's what they said, you know, so it will be a secret society really running the show. With a kind of layered degreed system of hierarchy. On the surface there'd be a form of government which the people would believe in. Well, that's what you're in, folks. You have, you look at these prunes that you get presented to you as politicians, with the classic ones you're getting, the classic ones. Even today, there's more classic than ever today you know, where they give you the ones, here's the communist radical one, here's the communist ethnic radical one, here's the communist blah blah blah, and then you get the other one.

Well, where's the right wing? What IS the right wing now? It's kind of died off, isn't it? You don't have that. You have neocons which blossomed into the next one which Obama went in and he took over from them and continued their wars and got congratulated from the neocons like Rumsfeld for continuing and expanding the wars until there were more of them under Obama. So, he was a neo-Dem I guess you'd call him. Now you're back to the neocons again. And you have no choices for what, the meanings now are almost, the old meanings are meaningless now. The old terms are meaningless now of Democrat and Republican. And the Republicans have been on the payroll, as you long know, as have the other groups like Obama's group with, from... Hhhch, the neo's, let's call it the neo's, eh? [Alan laughing.] The con part comes later. But that's what you're living in, it's an amazing deception.

It’s just interesting to toss these ideas around in your head as kind of subjective I suppose really. But a lot of it can be definitely proven. You're living in a system very much like what was described by Francis Bacon in The New Atlantis. He even told you which groups would have more rights than others in fact in his writings, would be held in higher esteem. [Alan chuckles.]

So yeah, I often wonder if America was the first great experiment, and the Bolshevik group was the second. And where we're going today is for the total grand finale, the cap, you know, the globalization agenda, post productive, postconsumer to an extent, into an austerity system. And post Democratic they said that from the inception of the Club of Rome, the big think tank that works for the United Nations and it works for this group at the top. An intermediary think tank that talks to us at times, the Club of Rome, telling us blatantly that there's too many of you and democracy doesn't work anymore, it's too complicated in the society for democracy, can't get things done efficiently. Who praise China because being a communist totalitarian tyranny, you know, or a government where you don't really have personal opinions in different groups, they can get things done quickly, they just say it and shout at the top and they all obey down below, all the way down. They praised them for it.

That's where it's all supposed to go, under martial law. If you notice your democracies are out the window. Come on! I don't know why they even go through this pathetic game in the States of election time, really. Because you know what you're really getting, don't you? Why would the neocons praise Obama as well? Praise him? for continuing the same agenda which they had started, with the same list of countries to get taken out. Hm? Then into Donald [Alan chuckles.] who is praised again for continuing and is getting ready for the big one I think really. I said that before, I think that's really why they put him in. He would, he promised to take direct action against Iran, you know, at certain meetings he had, and which were published. And he got in so maybe that's what he's got to do then, get it all going. You can see the movements towards Iran right now. And that they've been hammering Syria from Obama's time all through into the present one. They won't give up on them either. They want Syria and Iran demolished into the Stone Age like the rest of them. We could go on forever about this, although you can't really say too much on the topic in this day and age.

A good part of the world is still not in shock with all the Covid thing, is so sick of this! It's been, look how long these wars have been going on, eh. Before 9/11 they were going on. They had the Gulf War One, [Alan chuckles.] eh. I saw another article by the way talking about the divvying up of the oilfields during Gulf War One, how they would take over eventually once they had completely destroyed Iraq, down the road. I've already mentioned the one that Tony Blair was in. It was in the newspapers, and I put out the articles years ago. It was admitted that he and the CEOs of the top oil companies Dutch Shell and BP and all the rest of them came in and they all hammered out amongst them, this is before they started destroying Iraq, who would be getting the different oilfields. This is reality. This is not conspiracy stuff, you know, it was admitted to. They went through the records of those who went to Number 10 and the meetings they had and what they discussed and yada, ya, it's all published. Afterwards, years afterwards, eh.

Tony Blair is out there again with his foundations, you know he's such a great man, this one-man band to get Britain into the war with Iraq, nobody else want it except a small clique around him, very small. He's out there with his foundations talking about, you've gotta make sure that everyone gets a vaccination, because it's going to be mandatory and… blah blah blah, and you've got to bring in a kind of world system to manage it all, etc., etc. The same little front psychopath. Now, he's a low-level psychopath, well rewarded though for his taking Britain into a war that had nothing to do with them. M-hm. A war… And by the way, one of his foundations is to stop racial tension amongst groups in Britain. He helped demolish the countries that caused the mass migration, that they knew would happen and they helped them get into Britain. Then you watch the chaos start, and then you start ac blaming the folk in Britain for having resentment against what's happening in their own country! You see how it works now? Are you starting to get the picture?

This is straight out of the playbook of what was called initially illuminati in the old days, eh. Now you have myriad companies all branches of the same secretive organization running everything, eh. Meanwhile we're all stuck in a system of losing our, it doesn't mean the countries you're brought up in were always totally evil by the way, and you want to demolish its history just like that. Because you cannot bring today's thoughts and today's standards into the past, you cannot do it. People were primitive back then, more primitive too. Yep. That's what it is, you see.

So, you had, as I say, Quigley that was over the moon to have access to these archives. He said, yeah, we have all kinds of people belonging to our group, our level, communists, dictators, it didn't make any difference to them. Yet the same people are telling you to hate people, that run for low-level politics, with the same designations, running for different groups. You see how you're all getting used and stirred up? Where the ones way above you have all the leaders of different, like, section leaders way above and as part of their group running, helping to run their departments, eh, keeping the trouble going... While they all meet together and have their own secret meetings the public can't get into, as they're deciding how, different tactics and where they're going from there. It is astonishing how the world really runs, isn't it?

But again, the first and foremost thing you have is to train the public to be naïve. Awfully important. I've said it so many times. And we believe it. I mean, why shouldn't we believe it? Here's your history, here's your culture, here's your people, here's your leaders, and you're not too bad a people, etc. etc. And because they keep telling you that, and, you're civilized, they keep telling you you're civilized. Yet when it comes to war and things like that, you'll see different people emerging suddenly on the stage in the theater of war, you see these different players getting these amazing powers, emergency powers given to them immediately.

Churchill literally rounded up hundreds and hundreds of people instantly with the Secret Service police that the public didn't even know that they ever had up until then. Because a lot of folk didn't want to go into a second world war. They didn't see, Britain was already bankrupt from it, and it was going to get a lot worse. And you couldn't pay this thing off in a few years, the debt that you incurred for that. So, a lot of folk were against it, you know. Again, the victor's always write the histories and paint the bad guy as the ultimate enemy and the most, the evil Empire, etc. It's been done before, and it will be done again. And has been done even with the Middle East. Saddam Hussein was suddenly an evil, you know, a great Satan. So was, you know, Qaddafi. They're all suddenly Satan's, etc. Hm? The same terminology is used over and over, eh. Because they must always over rationalize the wars once they've happened. Because they don't want the people starting to dig out, and wait a minute, that's not exactly what they told us at the beginning... We're always being used, always being played for games which you'll never figure out. Never figure out. Np.

I've mentioned before too, you've got to look it up as well. It's a TV maybe half-hour show I think it was back in maybe the 1970s, or 60s even I think. You'll see Donald Pleasence, and I really like Donald Pleasence, great actor. He died. I believe he's dead anyway. He was a great actor and he could play these parts awfully he well. And a well-trained actor too, when they had real professionals, you know. But it was called The News Benders, The News Benders. He recruits people who don't know this organization even exists. He gets journalists that are a bit wayward or whatever, but they've got the abilities of imaginative writing. So, this guy is brought into his office one day, and it's a tower in London, on this particular floor, and Donald talks to him. He says, yeah, you're going, we want you to work for us. This reporter says, and he's cocky and all that, and he says, well what d'you mean, who are you, I don't even know who you are, never mind work for you.

He says, well we decided we want you in, we've watched you for a long time. The journalist says no, how could you have watched me for a long time? No one's watching me. He says oh, we know all about you, and Donald Pleasence sits down and opens up this booklet. He says, yeah, you had a falling out with your girlfriend, with your wife a while ago and you had an affair, we know all about that. He names the names of the people and all the rest of it and what happened, when it happened. Of course, the journalist is getting a bit paranoid, and he says, oh how do you know all this, you been following me around? He says, no, we don't have to follow you around. He says, where did you get all this data? You went into hospital, he says, a few years ago to get an abscess, or something, an abscess, a minor operation, he says, we put an implant in you then. This is 1967 or 68 I think this was released. He shows him this little thing in his hand, the size of this, he says, you know, we put that inside you. He says, do you want to hear what does it? So, he plays a bit of a recording, and he says, this is your heartbeat, d'you hear the bump-bump-bump? Then you get the voices over the top and he says, we've got the recordings of everything you've said in the last 10 years, or however long it was.

It was a bit ahead of its time. The whole point of the section he was going to recruit him into, and he took him through this other room, and they had models of, like, the moon landings [Alan chuckles.] models, of the latest missiles, they had models of a mountainside that had been, it looked like a nuclear bomb had hit it. This is the stuff, he said, this is what we put across on the news, he says, this is for next year's news here, we've got all this, and he tells him, this is what the story is going to be. He even has a big rack with magazines on it and newspapers, he says, this is, these are like prototypes of how the news will be in that day in this year and so on.

The guy is astonished. He says, what, we make the news? Yeah, he says, yeah. It's much better, since the end of World War II we've run the whole show making people think they're going to get blown up any minute so that they, no one dares take the first move, we know what's going to happen. So, they keep them in a state of terror you see, strategy of tension they call it. They make the news, it's all fake stuff. Including the trivia. The guy is astonished and astonished, and he says, but I still can't, I can't go into this. He says, this is too much coercion, and you have all these powers.

That's where he was cracking up knowing that his reality, his nice cozy reality of the system and the world was completely fake, he was learning here, hm. As he tried to walk out the door, and he said, I wouldn't do that, he says, this thing also has a little explosive in it. [Alan chuckles.] Anyway, the guy eventually, he's offered I think three quarters of a million pounds or something, something like that. He says, oh yeah, we pay our people very well, money is no object. Since they make it, you know. So, he was on board with it.

A good statement in it, I think a good statement. Donald Pleasence when the guy says, what, you mean you make of the news? And he says, But I've been reading this stuff for years, even writing about these things I'm getting right now. He says, yeah, the news is the most perfected form of fiction. And I thought, that's it right there, eh! The news is the most perfected form of fiction.

You're seeing that today.

People across the world have watched cities getting burned and people on camera saying they're just demonstrating, it's just demonstrators, as the flames are in the background. [Alan chuckles.] And drive-by shootings, people getting shot and killed and so on, they're just protesting, and looting the stores, whole streets looted. There's fiction for you. What? Forget your lying eyes and take our word for it, what you're really seeing is just peaceful protests.

You're LIVING through it, gaslighting. All the time. Actually, The News Benders is tame compared to what we've been living through for years actually, never mind recently. But if you can get a hold of it, it's worth looking up. You'll enjoy it, these little quips from the 1960s.

They make the stars remember. They always make the stars. It's like Al Gore, Al Gore when he, years ago he was in all the papers giving his speech about, you know, the coming catastrophe of the planet if you didn't start paying carbon taxes to his carbon exchanges. No kidding you. Here’s the crooks, folks, here's the real crooks right here, eh. M-m-m. Ftt. They belonged to the real, the real organization, the Bond type organizations [Alan chuckles.], the bad guys. Yeah. They set up exchange banks where they're going to sell carbon, fictitious carbon. Like, they don't store it in anything, they're just going to say, you probably released this this day, so we want you to pay so much towards what you probably released this day into the air. Then they trade it, and it's like stocks and it goes up in price, and they sell it. Blood and Gore was the name of his company. Ftt. But anyway, Al Gore, they launched him too during that time, trying to make him famous. Because he wasn't famous for anything. So, he says, I invented the Internet. [Alan laughing.] There ya go. [Alan laughing.] There ya go. N-n-n. Blood and Gore was the name of the company though. Ftt. I tell ya. An inconvenient spoof indeed.

This is what we live through folks, there's an agency above it that owns the star making machine. People don't just rise to the top through skills and talent, anywhere. They must be presentable. They've got to appear what they want them to appear like, like a good actor. If it's a good scientist that they want you to believe in, they'll create that scientist. Or they'll give you, they'll give you, um, a technocrat and launch him to the world as being some wonderful genius. And give him lots of financing.

You had the same thing happening with Epstein, hm, and Maxwell, part of a group. For years folk literally, that was the persona they created, he was a multibillionaire. But in reality, the money was all owned by the company, the group that ran him. We know that too. That's supposed to be taboo to mention it now, you see. Very powerful indeed. It's the same too with Zuckerberg and all the rest of them that are, ohhh, these geniuses, it's just astonishing, as they're launched as front people to really run massive spying operations over the planet, and having control over everything and free speech, total control over speech.

And folk think they're somehow going to evolve into a higher form of democracy? Whoah. I tell ya. N-n-n.   Completely censored everywhere you look. And it's going to get worse and worse because this 5G is for the world, it's part of the whole reset, the global reset idea from the World Economic Forum. A whole new way of living, or I call, existing, it won't be living anymore. Because it's bad enough being spied on, on all electronic communications, when you're getting spied on everywhere you go, everything you do, every transaction you make, everything you purchase, all on their system, every thought that you have pretty well on their system, that's where it's going.

I said years ago the elite will not be content to that phase of it, after that, it's a whole different phase again. But getting up to that phase they won't be content until everybody is completely 100% predictable. That's the intention of it. The people above you have no love for you at all. The people, hhhch, that you think funding even the revolutionary movement have no love for the folk that are doing the revolutions. At all. None. Zilch. None. N-n-n. They are all being used. But the front leaders are getting well-paid to be used. [Alan chuckles.] It's kind of like the Specter and the different groups that you hear about on the Bond groups. That's where they got the whole idea from it, again getting back to Conan Doyle, it wasn't just some obscure idea of the Moriarty who was the genius, they had geniuses at the top absolutely. But they had no problems with murder and mayhem, you know.

Now, there's no doubt about it, we've been heavily manipulated, on a scale never done before with electronic media. Including all those that, who are joining different camps, you see, the pros and against and so on of whatever it happens to be. You find crowds gather. I remember years ago I gave the talks on The Crowd, it was an old book put out years and years ago of the early studies of crowds, then later studies on crowds, it would add to it throughout the years by behaviorists. They're constantly studying us. You understand, if you understand human behavior and what you can manipulate people into doing, and you know how they immediately form their pros and against, you see, for and against, that always happens, then you can use them very, very effectively and very efficiently for your own purposes without them realizing that they're being used. Because most of it is emotional. Emotion runs crowds and overtakes pure logic and reason. It's the right buttons to press.

All the way back to Plato again, Plato said, you use the same techniques used before to get the same results. If you know the sequences of implementing something that worked then, it will work again in the future if you use the same sequence. That's how it works with manipulation of the psyche and the emotions. Emotions are very easy to manipulate, really. Because we have inbuilt likes and dislikes, some of them are to do with survival. That's why folk hate the idea of abortions, a lot of people, because it's killing ourselves in a sense, you see, and when we start killing ourselves, there's no end to what the next step is. Start off with the young, then end up with the elderly. Well you know they don't know what's happening, just... Then just folk who are getting fed up living, let's add them to it. Let's add folk who are depressed to our list. Add folk to it that are just physically ill in some areas, although they could live for years with help. That's already happened, I've done the stories live a few years back.

It doesn't stop, you see. Because the system doesn't exist for you. Again, you're given the myth of a caring system by gushing psychopaths. When in reality it's vastly different. Behind the gush is a cold clinical evil mind and that's what runs you for profit and for efficiency. Humanity has got nothing to do with it. At all. That is the system you're in.

So, you have these inbuilt things, so at election time you always get the same topics. Abortion, pro-and against, you see. Which are instant, they're very guttural, you know, they're really... By guttural I don't mean deep in your throat; that's down in your stomach really, it's abdominal, it's a reflex action you'll have about things. Because you're killing something that's not diseased, it's not unhealthy, it's healthy. So even medicine goes down the tubes, long ago with it too, it lost its credibility of do no harm, first, first to do no harm.

We live in a corrupt system, very, very, corrupt, and they must corrupt the people to go along with it, naturally. That happens over time. The folk adopt the views given to them and opinions given to them, very cleverly given to them. They don't even know they've been downloaded into them in a sense, bits and bytes by techniques, with languages specialists. Language is more than just how to convey messages. It's how to have people implement it within themselves, with guaranteed results, eh. You have psycholinguistics and even other related arts to it, all connected, that will give you the correct views and opinions, and emotions to go with the opinions.

So, the crowds are very easy to create. You get the ones that, as long as you get the, you find chinks in the armor. The Communists knew back in the early 20th century, actually even the late 1800s, they already sussed out America and how they could get America to have a revolution inside of it to overthrow the system into the next system. You see? They'd already had a previous revolution to bring in one system, then they... So, it's always the elite really who are bringing in their own revolution. I hope you understand that's what's happening today with the global reset from the World Economic Forum. The revolution it’s created, it's theirs. It's not the ones in the streets that are doing it or the ones who think they're communist, etc. It's the ones way above them who own this system, that's why it's being allowed to happen. Haven't you figured that one out yet? That's why it's ALLOWED to happen, and that's why the media is all on board with it, they're told to be on board with it. It's the elite system going to the next phase for themselves. This is what you live in.

It's bad enough being lied to, to the bitter end until you get the jabs in your arms or wherever they want to stick it. But it's just, you know, conning you all the way to it. Oh no, we might not do it. Oh, we might do it. Oh, might not do it. You know, you're going to get it. And you still have the choice. No, you won't, and it's going to be mandatory. This is how they play with you, you see.

But it's the elites global reset for themselves, and most of the folk on the planet right now they claim are superfluous. The Georgia Guidestones, no one's blowing them up. Where's Antifa and the rest of them there? Because they're talking primarily to start with, with the Third World countries, with the massive populations… There's no, there's nobody going down there and knocking them down. And I'd like to see them try. Suddenly you would see some amazing force on the premises that would stop them rather than have… You know, buildings are okay to burn down and people's homes and stuff but no... [Alan chuckles.] I'd like to see them go; they won't go anywhere near it because their leaders tell them what to do.

It isn't just the leaders that you'll see, there are the spokespeople, they have ones below them, they have three ranks, you see, and they're all like NCOs behind them. And they're all paid, these ones are all paid. Then get the rest of them to go along and do what they're told. And take the heat and the blame afterwards. And the prison sentencing. That's how it works. But it's for the elite at the top for goodness sake. You haven't seen them either going for the top banks or anything, you know. Why haven't they gone to the Federal Reserve building? Hm? [Alan chuckles.]

The answers is in what's not done during these things. That's what tells you so much. M-hm. There ya go. Anyway.

You're living in a system that's, the owners of it have decided to go onto the next phase for themselves. All of this is getting used to bring it into a world of sustainability. You've heard too all the articles recently or read them maybe. Most folk hear things or see them now because they all watch TV. I don't watch TV. I get clips sent to me on the Internet here and there or folk send it on discs because my Internet speed is so slow. Because I get hammered for what I do here, for what I say. I mean, it's almost dial-up speed during the day I'm getting now. M-hm. It's all intentional. And plausible deniability… Well, it's not on our end, sir, you know, it's maybe your equipment, maybe, maybe, maybe. I've been through it for years back and forth with them. That's what they do. That's the reality. M-hm. [Alan chuckles.]

Once again before I forget @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Throw a few bucks my way. PayPal. Cash. Check is fine. I think even Money Gram still works today. Some countries can still get international postal money orders to send, but not inside America anymore apparently, US. They'll cash them but they won't write them to send elsewhere. Definitely not Western Union, it's not worth it to anybody. Western Union takes such a chunk of everybody's money, both the sender and receiver, it's not worth doing. And what you have to fill in there is just, forget it, the data is incredible just to send a few bucks. The other methods are there @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. You can buy the books and discs too if you want. That helps me tick along.

So yeah, you're living in a system that Caroll Quigley more than hinted at. He listed the cover to an extent too. Don't forget his book, the one, his main book that he's known for, literally it was banned eventually by, the printer grabbed it, or the publisher and printer, I think the one publisher that did that one, Tragedy and Hope, was the one that did them for schools and colleges too, well known. They said that they broke, they literally got the hard, you know there's the physical plates they use for printing and smashed them all up. Luckily there was a edition out there, and then afterwards quite quickly everybody started grabbing it for free, and publishing it for free, without any rights to it. I've actually got the audio where Quigley talks about all that in some talk he gave on what happened to him. He was surprised to see a complete duplicate of his books put out there. He said they were authentic, nothing was added to them or detracted from them. One way or another the information got out.

He lets a lot out of the bag, you know, of how they think. What you see by studying Quigley himself is the mindset of the people who run at his level, their level of the control over the public. You get a study in the person themselves, that tells you a lot. Of course, there's audios out there too which I also have where he talked to some of the students, privately, while they were taped, and give them advice on what to do, what to say, what not to say. Even, he even mentioned [Alan chuckles.] to one of them which is a well-known one, with one of the students he says, look at that, and he gives him a dollar bill. Everybody's going, oh, no, no, not that again. Well, that was way back then in the 60s. He says, look at that bill, and he says, that's, why is the symbol, of an ancient symbol of a power, a world power in its day, and a mystery religion, on the dollar bill? He starts to touch on it, and he says, now, don't talk about this to anybody, or it will ruin your career.

So, here's a guy who's involved in all of this stuff, who was obviously a member given access to the archives, and also, he worked the archives for them, and they were creating real history. Not the paperback book version you get put into the bookstores after wars, like World War II and so on. They got the real archives as to how they helped set things up and provoke countries into war and manipulate them into war, managing the financial system, the loans and debts and all the rest of it, for power and control over all the countries after the war, and amalgamating whole countries together into European Unions and things like that, eh. So yeah, I mean, it is quite fascinating to see how they... And he thought it was wonderful, you know, that on its own mankind was just too dumb and stupid to make a go of it by themselves, they need the elite, the proper thinkers to do it all properly, you see. He's lauded for it naturally. A lot of what he talked about in his book Tragedy and Hope was true to do with the banking system or the financial system for the ones that deal with the general public.

He also talked about how medicine would eventually become so incredibly expensive no one could afford it. He blamed the ordinary folk rising up into the middle classes, and losing the ethics that they used to, that the old ones used to have. A lot of old doctors at one time came from old families and they didn't really have to work, or it wasn't the main income or a desperately main income. They were in it because they liked it and they felt drawn to it and they wanted to do a good job. So, he blamed the middle classes for getting too greedy, and he said the time will come where the greed factor will destroy the system. Well, he was right on that.

But again, he also knew that above all of it was the manufacturing drug systems, and the Rockefellers who set up the whole AMA for America and for the medical drug association, and the whole medical system for America, deciding what treatments will be used and what wouldn't be used. Also, all the drugs, the cartels of drug companies that sprung up around Rockefeller, it's just astonishing. Anything that wasn't under their control they simply banned or ridiculed as ridiculous and put out their own stuff, all their medications. That's the same to this present day. Rockefeller himself was again a front man for the big enterprise system that really runs the world. M-hm.

So yeah, you're living in a system vastly different from what you ever imagined. I remember reading books when I was young. In Scotland you're not really young, you're wee. You know, you're wee, when I was wee. It was interesting to read about how well-known authors and ones from Oxford and different universities, authors that, and teachers who taught there, Masters that taught, they actually put out books talking about the histories and so on. But the terms they used often about, well in the Middle Ages most of the little people were, didn't know too much. And they talked about them as though they were a dumb animal. But not in a hateful manner, you know. Generally. Hhhch. But that's how they talked about them, as though they somehow, they couldn't ever aspire to anything, even if they had been told or given a basic education, that's really the impression that you got. Very class ridden indeed. That was not an unusual thing.

You had the same thing across Africa and different places and different tribes as well. Look at India. Even inside the Hindu culture with its stepped system right down to the Untouchables at the bottom, it's written into basically their whole cultural law that this is quite normal. That's how they perceive it. And there's no chance to change it, you see. They add karma to it, that's your karma as well, so you couldn't change it. You see what I'm saying? So, it's all fortified to stay that way and that's what they want, that's how the rulers want it, for thousands of years. And it benefits those at the top naturally.

You can say all you want about it; eugenics are really involved with discussions on India. They're fascinated by it, and they've studied it amazingly well. Because if you get the ones at the very bottom breeding with the ones at the very bottom, they'll say you get the same kind again. That’s literally, this is what they say. But that's the same terminology they use for, as I say, for people in the British Isles for centuries and centuries. You go back into... Ahhhh, I could go on and on.

There are segments of society that are looked down on in different occupations. One of them that's a favorite to be looked down upon is farming, for some reason. Because it's the most important thing that you can possibly have, to get food, to live. That's rather, I'd say it's more important than everything that lives on top of it, right up to the parasitical groups at the very, very top that obviously use everything that sustains the public, and the general population, they enrich themselves off of it. Without farming none of that would exist. There would be no top. [Alan chuckles.] Think about it. So, it's kind of ridiculous to look down upon farming, which is so essential. And it's also, there's a lot of science involved in farming to make crops grow, etc. It isn't just a matter of putting a hole in the ground and dropping a seed in, as Mr. Bloomberg mentioned in an article a few months ago, a couple of months ago. There's a lot more to it. And it's hard work.

None of us would survive without the farmer. It's the most basic thing. What do you need to live? Food. In a system who believe that the highest thing is to get money and deal with money and acquire as much money as possible, then you end up with all the ills that that causes in the world, hm. You really have dilemmas, don't you? In other words the more psychopathic a people are, the more successful in that system they've designed for themselves will happen to be, and the more they'll despise the people at the bottom that really either can't or have no inclination to climb up there and acquire incredible wealth.

What they're doing is so vitally important, or the ones at the top would be starving to death. It's utterly ridiculous. You'd think the ones at the bottom would get more applause for what they do. They're bent over and working hard... And we owe so much to farming, absolutely. That's why farming is the first thing to get controlled, eh. They want to keep the prices high. I read the articles a few years ago in fact when the United Nations, because they have their own department for agriculture, and they get everybody else to sign on to their different agreements, and they can reduce the food supply of the planet and increase the cost.

Because as they say themselves, you see, again under energy, Technocracy, everything is energy, and Wells said it and others since then said it and ones at the United Nations have said it, If you feed the people, give them good food, then they're healthy, if they're healthy they can actually breed, successfully breed, you know, with less problems or stillbirths and problems like that, but fertility improves. You see, that's a bad thing having fertility improving when their whole objective is to bring it down, like the Georgia Guidestones. The West, as Bertrand Russell said, had already been tampered with and that's why fertility would drop. And what's the biggest problem in the West? Infertility. Just coincidence, right.

What I'm trying to say to you is, you've got to get out from underneath this umbrella of what you think is normalicy of the system under which you live. We're definitely run by a world organization, massive, it's got tentacles into everything. You're seeing it now with, as I say, every countries' politicians on board spouting the same lines, just like the news, eh, it's like the news from Reuters, they're all spouting the same lines, line by line by line to the public. Why not just give us one news outlet? Hhhch, it would save a lot of money. Why have them all saying the same thing? Well, it's to give you the idea that they're all independent and different. Which they're not when they're all spouting the same stuff. That's why. And they've still got a few other things to finish off yet, you know.

You've got to start thinking for yourselves and not falling for everything that's offered to you. Whether it's information or anything else. Those in the streets, and this is how, when you study the psyche of the crowd or revolutionaries, when you study the writings that are put out by Weishaupt and his group, the reason that literally they were hunted, hm, in Bavaria. But they had already moved out and long ago into the wider world through the lodges. It's been recorded they were all through America too. It was the massive deception, how every layer of society would be getting conned basically and fed lies for different purposes, and different factions created to be stirred up and to be used against other groups [Alan chuckles.] that would be stirred up to be used. It's quite amazing to see how well it was understood way back then how to do it all. And obviously had been done already, through experience they had studied.

Can you imagine how well it's studied today? It's understood today when you see it on the streets. They know how to, again don't forget what Mazzini said. Mazzini was taught by Albert Pike. At that time, they didn't call it the Communist Party, they didn't call it the Communist Party up until Lenin and Trotsky were IN power. Up until then it was called The World Revolutionary Party. It was the same party that others had fallen for, Lord Byron, you know, the poet and so on, and Tennyson. They all thought it was a romantic thing to join.

You can read Burke talking about the French Revolution and other ones too, what happened. You can see the patterns in it, which never change, they always repeat themselves. What happens is they start fighting each other, as the folk behind, and doing all the burning and often the killing too, decide they're not getting all the things they were promised and then they start to see flaws in their leaders. The reason being the leaders are really there for a different purpose. You see, it's all understood. It's all been done before, you know, over and over and over.

Again, Mazzini in his writings back and forth to Pike and you can actually see these where he actually said that they would unleash the nihilists and the atheists on the streets. That's what they do. That's what you're seeing in the US under the pretense of, or under the umbrella of BLM where the leaders admit they're trained Marxists. They're getting funding again just like they did before, the Bolsheviks, from outside sources, well-funded multibillionaires, and I mean billionaires, eh, and well directed to. It isn't just money they're getting, it's direction and training.

It's repetition. They say hell is repetition. You're watching it, you're living through it all. Again, you get the Antifa group that jumped on board. You see the ones at the front of the BLM, but it's mainly white youngsters. But again, there's certain amongst them too whose great-grandparents may have took part in the old Bolshevik revolutions. This is a fact. Some of them have been caught already.

You'll see, I'll put a link up too, to the woman in Oregon, one of them. Did you see what happened in Oregon? It was quite amazing, where immediately the media and the police tried to just say, oh no, there's rumors going around that these Antifa are starting to go out into the country and start fires. And they squashed that immediately that whole, oh, it's just rumors, rumors, there's no credence to it. All the media said that.

Oregon Woman Holds Alleged Arsonist Until Cops Arrive - dailymail.co.uk / 15 Sept 2020

Oregon woman holds suspected arsonist at gunpoint as wildfires rage - nypost.com / 16 Sept 2020

Then you see a woman jumping out of her truck with a camera on and grabbing, getting one at gunpoint who was setting fire to the brush near her home. She held him until the cops arrived. This has been happening all over. A few, a whole bunch of them were caught before that doing the same kind of thing. Other ones have had Molotov cocktails, chucking them from cars. And yet the media is trying to tell you it's not happening? What kind of power has got that, has got the power to do that? [Alan chuckles.]

Do you understand, if they can't tell you that basic truth, there's nothing you can believe from them ever, folks. On anything. Fool me once, eh, shame on you. Fool me twice, shame on me. You can't go back to believing the media when they go to such lengths to lie to you.

That's standard stuff that happened then too. They're given their instructions, you go out into the rural areas to terrify the public and you burn their places down and yada, yada. The same thing happened in Australia, what was it a year ago they had all the fires going through there. Under the climate change agreements and people weren't going along with it and all that. All of a sudden, all these fires just broke out in the brush everywhere? And they got them, I read the articles, I kept the articles too, where the cops got a lot of them going out there and setting fire to the brush on the bush. So, it's repetition, folks. Standard stuff. But the media is going to tell you it's, oh, no, no, it's not. You're mind… That fire, look, ttt, are you going to believe your lying eyes or what I tell you, hm?

Also, too, I do read all the emails, it's awfully important to get information from people. It's touching when you get into people's lives and you get the problems they're going through during the Covid, and with the personal things that are happening too. That's the real world. That is the real world, folks. People are going through everyday kind of problems of all kinds and family problems and marital problems too in different countries. Now they've got all this Covid thing on top of them as well. Lack of funds. Lack of money. Fear of losing jobs. Already lost jobs. Small businesses collapsing like dominoes, hm, one after the other. All by design, folks. Nothing to do with reality.

You've got a virus that, it won't get lethal or attack you as long as you're eating. But not drinking coffee or alcohol or anything, it will attack you then I guess. But if you're eating, it's an intelligent virus you see it won't touch you. And you won't get arrested then for having a mask off to eat. Isn't that pleasant? Ohhhhhhhhhh, can you believe this nonsense? Can you believe it?

Yeah, getting back to Dad's Army, that was the idea. During one episode of Dad's Army, a comedy, right, about World War II in Britain. Mainwaring declares martial law for the town and rattles it off, you know, one after the other, dut-dut-dut-dut-dut, and no more than five people gathering at any time during the day, and only two in the evening, if they've got a purpose for being there, blah blah blah, and curfews at night, yada yada yada. At least folk laughed at then.

But today, whoa, whoa, whoa. As I say, Australia, I tell ya... The whole world has seen the shame, the utter shame that these goons over there in uniform should be feeling, you know, for what's happening. It's something else. But they've had this same police mentality since they were created as a penal colony, you know. There are histories of some of the islands just off Australia where they put a lot of the prisons and so on, just horror stories when you look at the histories of them, absolute horror stories. And the brutes that they had for, they tortured prisoners. Don't forget in those days to get it colonized Britain had all the laws out, stealing a loaf of bread, and folk were starving, would get you shipped off there into prison. Then you worked as a slave, that's what it was, you worked plantations and so on as slaves. What a horror show. But they had that thuggery of the current system, and I've read quite a lot about different islands in the reports up to the present, from the present time even, and people going back into the history books into the records of these places and locals who lived outside could hear the screaming at night as folk were tortured and beaten. Horror stories.

Well, it's the same thugs that you put in uniforms today, folks. Unfortunately, it's true, when you look at Australia there's no doubt about it. And it isn't just Australia. We've had, again, Xbox generation that wanted to get into either killing folk in the military, right from Xbox to uniform, or into the police departments. The attitude change is massive. It's different. And they’re so politicized. Certain groups they won't go near because they don't want to lose their jobs. [Alan chuckles.] So certain groups can create mayhem and they're untouchable. So, you have select groups now that are okay to hammer with truncheons or beat them up or whatever because no one's going to stand up for them. That's where you are today with this. I've got old books saying this will happen from studies that were done years ago. Sad isn't it? But that's where we are now.

I'm going to get into a few stories here. Again, keep the emails coming because I like to keep in touch. Because it's real history as folk, what you experience in your own life is the real history. I've always said that. The books are all fudged later. Reality is fudged right now if you read the mainstream. In real time it's fudged. Your real stories are what matters. That used to get passed down in families to children at one time, mainly through the mothers. That's what they wanted mothers out of the homes, because the culture primarily was put through the mother, the history of the family and the people. Nothing happens by accident here, folks. Or to help women earn money. It's an extra tax base for sure. But no, there's a different reason behind it all.

Now, here's Helena Handbasket. Helena Handbasket gives you a good idea of Ireland. Ireland is amazing because it is a bit of a basket case, isn't it?

Áine McMahon:- It’s in Times like these when you need your head examined

theirishsentinel.com / 13 Sept 2020 / Posted by Helena Handbasket

In yet another disgusting display of gutter press, comic book degree scribbles, the Irish Examiner stoops to the level of anti-Semitic style (Alan: This is psychological warfare…) sloganizing stating that at least 3000 ‘coronavirus deniers’ marched through Dublin yesterday afternoon.

https://www.irishexaminer.com/news/arid-40047719.html

(A: This is what they're told to put out. It was the same thing with the climate deniers, right, after the Holocaust deniers, they kept using it for anybody who wouldn't go along with anything at all or have doubts on anything. This is…)

In what is commonplace in the world of mainstream media, a so-called ‘journalist’, Áine McMahon of the Irish Times tweeted on behalf of the Irish Examiner in what is clearly collusion between these two mainstream media whore rags. But her gutter press nonsense can’t even stand up to the most basic scrutiny. She first claims that this was an “anti-facemask demonstration” before changing the narrative again:-

“There are at least 3,000 coronavirus deniers marching through Dublin city centre. Slogans range from “take off your mask” and “it is only a common cold” to “wake up people”.”

(A: So, you’re a coronavirus DENIER. Hhhhhhhhhh, there ya go.)

Did you hear too, and I'll put it up again the link to Robert Kennedy Jr, his talk in Berlin.

Legendarische Speech van Robert Kennedy Jr. tijdens demonstratie Berlin 29 Augustus 2020 - youtube.com / 30 Aug 2020

He started off his talk to them in the open air in front of a big, massive crowd. He said that the press said that I would be meeting, what was it, 5000 Nazis here. That's how they put it in the press before he even gave his speech. He said, I don't see Nazis anywhere. He let them have it, the folk that were, the press that were lambasting him for daring to speak out to the people and the injustice of the massive lockdown, etc. You see, there's nothing they won't stoop to. That's straight out of the communist handbook too. And the Ayers manual too in the States is the same one, the Bill Ayers one, the Weather Underground. Always give, you must give smear tactics on everything, smear, and repeat it and repeat it, it will stick eventually, whenever you use the same term in anything that happens, just keep using that same term, people will immediately back off no matter what the topic happens to be. It shuts them up.

So anyway, this is Helena Handbasket telling you what they're doing there, and how… with these prostitutes, these folk in the media are prostitutes anyway generally. They know how to get their bread buttered and get promoted up the ladder. Of course, they do.

Drunken Decision Making Tyrants Laugh at Publicans and the public whilst downing taxpayer subsidised booze at work - theirishsentinel.com / 13 Sept 2020 / Posted by Helena Handbasket

Another article by the same author is…

Locking Up Infected Politicians Would Be A Start

theirishsentinel.com / 16 Sept 2020 / Posted by Helena Handbasket

As Dublin prepares for more mass protests against government tyranny under the guise of a fake pandemic, it comes as no surprise that the city has now been threatened with further restrictions on movement and gatherings.

(A: Well, that’s emergency powers or martial law as they call it. All NATO countries by the way, I've got the article here, have signed on to this, this exact same agenda, right down to the forced mandated vaccination. He puts up the links that they're all on board…)

https://www.irishexaminer.com/news/arid-40049684.html

https://www.independent.ie/irish-news/living-with-covid-chaos-cabinet-virus-scare-and-a-second-wave-gathers-strength-as-stricter-nphet-advice-looms-for-dublin-39535013.html

https://www.rte.ie/news/politics/2020/0916/1165449-politics-ireland/

Tyranny, once unleashed, cannot be curtailed unless the people gather in large numbers and demand, first vocally, and as a last resort violently, to overthrow their tyrants.

We have seen the same actions lauded in the mainstream media in countries supported by the west in North Africa, the Middle East and elsewhere, most recently Belarus, (albeit that this is orchestrated by the west) as courageous and noble acts by brave people to curtail tyranny to overthrow their brutal dictators.

(A: That’s a color revolution. You see, we’ve been funding all the revolutions, but if you have one at home yourself that’s not authorized, they won’t allow it, you see. By the way, I mean, I said years ago that they were training a generation to grow up, you know, to overthrow their parents and grandparents and the system. Through the colleges, through the schools and colleges. I said the same thing too, I says that the great big eating machine that the West has been using for 30 years now, Gulf War One right through into Afghan war and into Iraq, and a whole bunch of other countries too across Africa, and eventually going into Syria and taking out Libya, one after the other. There's a whole bunch yet they still have to take out, Iran and so on. I said, eventually this big eating machine that you've all been paying for and supplying the troops and material for will come back home to eat you all. Well, welcome to it folks, here it is. This is it. [Alan chuckles.])

(A: You have big color revolutions that are the soft, this is the kind of soft, in between soft and hard power. They call it soft if it's really protesting. That's why they want to keep calling it a soft power at the moment, as they burn cities down. But that's a precursor to the big one, you know, and then they're going to use the troops on the streets with the Covid thing and the vaccinations and the curfews yada, yada, ya. This is what they want. It's in their Emergency Powers Acts I've got here for Britain and for Canada too and a few other countries. But all NATO countries, it's the same one when you look at them.)

(A: But as I say, the hypocrisy of that same media, back to the article…)

The hypocrisy of that same media should be as clear as crystal to those with the eyes to see through the outrageous lies and propaganda of an establishment media intent on perpetrating terror upon its own nation; deceiving and lying blatantly to prop up the tyrants masquerading as the ruling government of Ireland, an unelected puppet regime bending over, some quite literally, to globalist masters the Irish nation have no interest in serving and the majority of whom know nothing about.

(A: The folk don’t know who’s running them, do they? They don’t know anything about it, what’s really running them, do they?)

They have knowledge to a limited extent of the European Union which has devastated the country on the back of massive loans which the Irish taxpayer has been put on the hook for.

(A: I’ve got the articles. I remember the videos too from the World Bank and the IMF when they were giving their diktats to the Irish, who were up in their eyes in hock after the last bank crash. It wasn't just in the States, it was worldwide, right. By the same crooks that are bringing you Covid by the way because that's the same system that's running it all. It's all parts of their program, you see.)

(A: I remember too, Ireland literally was saying, oh yeah, the EU kept saying, oh, take all these loans on, oh my goodness. And you get all these, and stacks of Russian companies rushed there too, there was a lot of crooks run out of Russia towards the end, believe you me with their loot and got out of the country and went all over the world. But some of them settled in Ireland for, they were getting tax funded backups on public-private partnerships. You know, we'll put so many bucks in and the public will put all the rest in. Then you're left holding the bill, you see, the tab to the big banks. That's how it was all set up. Encourage the Irish to borrow and borrow, and oh, no problem, the sky is the limit because the future is so rosy and golden. And they all fell for it, and you know, bang, now you're back to square one. Totally under the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank, you know. There you go.)

There is no shortage of useful idiots waiting in the wings to be let loose on Irish society. We have seen such useful idiot scum on the streets under the banner of paedophile supporting Antifa in recent weeks.

(A: It’s true, Antifa’s not just for destruction of the family unit, being Marxist and doublethink. It’s also supporters of intergenerational sex, etc. It’s very, very much what Adorno promoted, you know, that eventually down to not just pedophilia but down to necrophilia, and even then, anything left of the old culture had to be utterly eradicated including the people who REMEMBERED it, folks. Are you getting the picture? Uuuuuuuuuuuurghh.)

They are simply a terrorist tool of government and as such deserve all retribution should they continue to show up at peaceful, anti-tyranny protests. It's been good to see that these animals are not having it their own way at all. They are minute in numbers, clearly politically illiterate and are being called out as the perverts they clearly are;

(A: They've got other things happening in Ireland by the way by the pedos involved in this as well.)

It's been good to see that these animals are not having it their own way at all. They are minute in numbers, clearly politically illiterate and are being called out as the perverts they clearly are; at least one attribute they share with their political pimps. (A: … the deviancies.)

People are not so blind that they can't see these vile excuses for human beings for exactly what they are and thus treat them accordingly.

These are parasitical viruses drunk on the level of power they have to create chaos in the nation, knowing full well that every single news hack outlet and person within their disgusting industry will back them, prostituting themselves to the realm of evil for a vastly inflated pay packet or simply so they won't be exposed as no better than Antifa in terms of their debauchery, albeit, better dressed and better smelling than their low level, useful idiot, paedophile colleagues on the streets.

You see, you don't realize this is part of the supposed, the revolution is a continuation of the destruction, not just the end of the family unit, another stepping up to the next step. Now, what's left? Well, you still got children, you know. Again, it's an emotional thing, it will get brought up and, oh, we're here to protect the children. We can't even say that anymore when we're, when you're aborting most of them these days. I mean, eh, we've got to look at ourselves here. We're all part of the society here, you know. Again those who utterly HATE you, as a species, want to take it down till there's nothing left of any of your history, or even a memory of family units, or your old cultures, or anything to do with what we used call decency, has to be utterly destroyed. That's what Adorno was on about. N-n-n. And here we are watching it all getting promoted and promoted, eh.

In California, you probably saw that, they didn't pass a law, what they did was alter the law a little bit, they claim, to bring it into line with little girls getting raped supposedly, so that little boys can have affections with adults as long as the adult is no more than 10 years older than the child.

Did California legislators just vote to protect (gay) adults who have sex with minors? - lifesitenews.com / 8 Sept 2020

So, it's just step-by-step coming down until... I gave the talks years ago from some of the top perpetrators that attended group meetings, of the censorship committees for media, who were all on board for it. They said the next step is for intergenerational sex, there would be no such word as pedophilia eventually, it has to be eradicated, that term even. They always eradicate the terms, when they've succeeded and change the terms to nice terms, you see, nice things. Anyway, it's just intergenerational love, you see. Hhhhhhhhhh. I won't even get into that, I think we're so far gone as a society that, you know, the children don't have much of a chance.

You already had it with last week's talks when I talked about, when I mentioned one teacher in the US in New York who was far left, you might as well say he's communist too, who was complaining and worried because with the at home Internet learning, it was designed by the way by Bill Gates for those who don't know that. [Alan chuckles.] He came up with the big program to, you'd all be reimagining, reimagining education. Just like you're reimagining policing and reimagining healthcare, reimagining… This is all from the same characters, eh. But anyway, that's what this teacher said, he was getting worried that the parents might catch on to what they're getting taught, these young children to do with you know, what we're talking about now, as an example.

But again, the folk have no idea there's been a war, there IS a war on you all. And there has been a war on your parents and grandparents. Even further back than that. A complete war to eradicate your culture, and your memories, and your way of being... And to introduce this new one, which has been authorized. Which would never work functionally because it's against all of the things that worked before. It CAN'T survive itself. Np. That's quite fascinating just to even understand that much, to see how it was all getting pushed.

Anyway, Helena Handbasket here is talking about total rebellion and so on. And talking about all those who caused the problems have to be basically brought to justice. And that's true.

I said it before, that Bush Junior after he was out, you know, with his slaughtering wars, etc., on behalf of others, leaving everybody with the bill at home, says, oh yeah, I remember telling, it was a guy next to him, I don't know if it was McCain or who he was telling. But he said I remember telling him, if the public ever find out what we've been doing, meaning deceiving them all and conning them into wars, if they ever find out what we've been doing, they'll chase us down the street in big mobs with rope in their hands.

Well shouldn't he be brought up on crimes against humanity, a war criminal? All these folks who are on the drumbeat, the massive drumbeat to totally destroy society, even using Covid, closing down the entire world's industries, and small businesses completely gone most of them, by design. First time in history lock down the healthy, [Alan chuckles.] stop all commerce. Guess what happens? Oh governments, please feed us. They'll come out and say, oh, the government's sending out squads of food to deprived areas, oh thank goodness, aren't they wonderful, immediately to action, aren't they wonderful? Yep, Angels of Mercy in uniform. Aarghhhhhhhh, you can see it all now.

But yeah, they should all be, and all these liars that have lied... Look at the lies they gave you and admitted to now eh, that they inflated the numbers, 96% didn't die of Covid that they had down before. And it's very doubtful if the other 6% did either, to be honest with you. If they died of anything they're getting put down as Covid. They're still, and I gave the articles out last week and the week before from the sources for Canada and the States and Britain. They're still saying for everyone that could have Covid, right, if you test for Covid on that stupid test, the swab test, which is completely bogus, but if it comes back positive, they can put down in their computer systems that they probably already infected 10 people, each one infected 10 and to inflate their numbers. They're still doing that.

Why don't these folk get arrested? And the folk who gave you these, who destroyed your economies by design in advance before you heard of Covid? This was planned, folks. Event 201. Lockstep as well. I'll put them up. Another article too before I get away from Handbasket here…

Drunken Decision Making Tyrants Laugh at Publicans (A: That’s people who own the pubs.) and the public whilst downing taxpayer subsidised booze at work (A: Talking about the politicians in Ireland.)

theirishsentinel.com / 13 Sept 2020 / Posted by Helena Handbasket

The latest stab in the back in this culture of establishment superiority complex on steroids, the Dáil private bar (A: This is the politicians’ private bar…) is open to TDs (Totalitarian Drunks) whilst the rest of the country’s 3,500 bars remain closed,

(A: You see, they closed all the bars. But the ones for these politicians, they can go to their own bar, eh, and get drunk, eh.)

…whilst the rest of the country’s 3,500 bars remain closed, unless they can provide a ‘substantial cooked meal’.

(A: What the heck is substantial, in this day and age? Substantial cooked meal… So, I guess the virus again won’t, if you’re having a drink it will attack you like crazy. This would be great for their prohibitionists eh. Can you imagine if they could have drummed up the Covid idea back then, eh… Oooooo, the demon drink will get you, that virus is going to get in through that beer there… and down you go, eh, that's it. But if you're eating a meal, it's okay, the virus says, ohhhhh, it's a pitiful virus, says the poor soul probably needs that dinner there, hhhch. Eh? And we are dumb enough to believe it and go along with this nonsense eh. Anyway…)

This assumes that the common cold or given its new normal name, coronavirus, knows you're eating and therefore cannot possibly infect you. (A: There you go, see, there you go. N-n-n.)

It's true enough, I mean, we're living through absolute mockery of logic here, by design. Another one too is…

A DARPA-Funded Implantable Biochip to Detect COVID-19 Could Hit Markets by 2021

mintpressnews.com / 17 Sept 2020

An experimental new vaccine developed jointly with the US government claims to be able to change human DNA and could be deployed as early as next year through a DARPA-funded, injectable biochip.

(A: I'll put this one up. It says…)

The revolutionary breakthrough came to a Canadian scientist named Derek Rossi in 2010 purely by accident. (A: Yeah, sure. Sure! Sure, yeah.) The now-retired Harvard professor claimed in an interview with the National Post that he found a way to "reprogram" the molecules that carry the genetic instructions for cell development in the human body, not to mention all biological lifeforms.

(A: So, you take the shot, folks…. eehhh, you know. [Alan chuckles.] good luck to you.)

These molecules are called 'messenger ribonucleic acid' or mRNA (A: …the m is the messenger, you know…) and the newfound ability to rewrite those instructions to produce any kind of cell

(A: Listen to this…)

to produce any kind of cell within a biological organism has radically changed the course of Western medicine and science,

(A: Well, maybe even the human bodily structure, eh? Hm?)

even if no one has really noticed yet. As Rossi, himself, puts it: “The real important discovery here was you could now use mRNA, and if you got it into the cells, then you could get the mRNA to express any protein in the cells,

(A: That means, express is to switch on, you know.)

express any protein in the cells, and this was the big thing.”

It was so big that by 2014, Rossi was able to retire (A: No joke. Huge surprise.) after the company he co-founded with Flagship Pioneering private equity firm to exploit his innovation, – Moderna Inc.,

(A: This guy is part of the establishment, you know, he is another front. Obviously. This is how it’s been done your whole life and before you were born. So, Moderna Inc, that’s invented nothing up until now, you understand that too, eh? The only company that Fauci said he trusted them to make the vaccine. Just surprising. Made nothing before. All ready to go though, eh?)

Attracted almost a half billion dollars in federal award monies to begin developing vaccines using the technology. No longer affiliated with Moderna beyond his stock holdings, Rossi is just “watching for what happens next” and if he’s anything like the doting “hockey dad” (A: That’s how they presented him in Canada, oh he’s a hockey dad, like we’re all nuts on hockey or something.) he is portrayed to be, he must be horrified.

Remote control biology

As early as 2006, DARPA

(A: Right. That’s the military wing for, that makes all that stuff for military, ARPA part. Before they called it DARPA, it used to be ARPA and they give you the Internet from the Cold War days.)

As early as 2006, DARPA was already researching how to identify viral, upper respiratory pathogens through its Predicting Health and Disease (PHD) program, which led to the creation of the agency's Biological Technologies Office (BTO), as reported by Whitney Webb in a May article (A: …which I have as well…) for The Last American Vagabond. In 2014, DARPA's BTO launched its "In Vivo Nanoplatforms" (IVN) program, which researches implantable nanotechnologies, leading to the development of 'hydrogel'.

Hydrogel is a nanotechnology whose inventor early on boasted that "If [it] pans out, with approval from FDA, then consumers could get the sensors implanted in their core to measure their levels of glucose, oxygen, and lactate." This contact lens-like material requires a special injector to be introduced under the skin where it can transmit light-based digital signals through a wireless network like 5G.

(A: That was actually shown at one of the world's technologies symposiums they had a year ago, maybe two years ago. I'm not sure if it was Switzerland maybe, I can't remember, they have so many of them. I remember some organizations that attended that put out videos of, they actually had volunteers and you actually saw them implanting this thing in the back of the hand, eh. This is a big, this is a real, there is video up there too, I think TruNews. People sometimes come down on any kind of religious site, but they put a lot of good news out too. They did have a clip I think of this happening in one of their talks this year. You can actually see the guy getting the thing injected into his hand at the demonstration itself. So, this is going on, folks. Again, you had the old ones too from a few years ago where they tried some of these things out for people who went to discos in Spain and places like that and in California. You can actually use it like a credit card, you could take off, just deducted by swiping your hand across the machine the cost of your drinks and so on.)

"…with approval from FDA, then consumers could get the sensors implanted in their core… (A: Right.)

hydrogel Penny

A penny aside a 3D printed hydrogel model of a lung-mimicking air sac in Rice University's Houston BRC lab. Melissa Phillip | Houston Chronicle via AP

(A: So, it shows you the size of this thing alongside a penny, you know.)

Once firmly implanted inside the body, human cells are at the mercy of any mRNA program delivered via this substrate, unleashing a nightmare of possibilities. It is, perhaps, the first true step towards full-on transhumanism; a "philosophy" (A: …that's being rather light with the word I think.) that is in vogue with many powerful and influential people, such as Google's Ray Kurzweil and Eric Schmidt (A: No, they’re just front people to promote it all.) and whose proponents see the fusion of technology and biology as an inevitable consequence of human progress.

The first term was used by Julian Huxley, transhumanism, and at that time that he referred to it, to people like himself who came up with the proper breeding, and kind of inferring that they’d been, their mothers and fathers had been selected carefully. Just like Charles Darwin of course, who the Darwin’s only married with the Wedgewood family for generations, some of them married their aunts and so on. I think in fact Darwin’s wife died, when she died, he married was it his mother’s sister? They were all Darwin’s, you see. Anyway, yet it was the same thing with the Huxley’s, Julian Huxley.

In his talk to UNESCO, part of it again was to create a world educational system to indoctrinate and get a standardized system of the public, under UNESCO, you’re using science, rather than any other moral authority, just science as the indoctrinative technique and purpose. He did say that we are transhumanists. Meaning the ones who want to change the world. Meaning, this select strange group again, again the same group that brought in the Lord Alfred Milner group and all the different characters you read in the modern history, fairly modern history, belonging to this world dominating society for an Empire, standardizing the world and its resources under their hands. But wanting to help the people, you see, they want to help people at the same time. They're doing it all for altruistic reasons like empire building and wars and things. You know, they’re illuminated people, right.

So yeah, this is, he called themselves, we are transhumanists. The very fact that we have these ideas to help society and the poor souls, makes us trans-human, we are willing to sacrifice everything to become trans-human. So, a separate species ties in with Bertrand Russell when he said in his book, he said that eventually with the proper breeding and selective breeding, like, designed by experts for the upper classes, he says, they'll eventually become a separate species. You understand that? Anyway, there you go.

And by the same token, by bringing down and reprogramming the general public down below, the proles [Alan chuckles.], you become a separate species anyway, wouldn't you, a different one. So anyway, this article goes on and on and…

A wholly-owned subsidiary

In July, a preliminary report funded by Fauci’s NIAID (A: National Institute of Allergies and Infectious Diseases.) and the NIH (A: National Institute of Health, which is part, I read the other day, the NIH is part of the executive branch, eh.) on an mRNA Vaccine against SARS-CoV-2 was published in The New England Journal of Medicine, concluding that mRNA-1273 vaccine. provided by Moderna for the study, “induced anti–SARS-CoV-2 immune responses in all participants, and no trial-limiting safety concerns were identified,” and supported “further development of this vaccine.”

That was at the start, remember, that was in July. But then they did get some folk getting sick with it, yada, yada. Don't forget too that this is common, most of these vaccines will give you, you'll develop, you'll find, oh, yeah, we took a blood sample afterwards and it had developed some immune cells to it, you see. Most of them will do that. The problem is when you meet a Covid virus or any coronavirus afterwards, not just the 19, or the COV2 as they want to call it as well, you might get a massive response to it, a vaccine enhanced respiratory response, which is a cytokine storm, which will KILL you.

That's what's happened with vaccines before, a lot of them. That's why you have this long-term study over a few years. This isn't happening this time. They've given themselves immunity. You'll see that with all the NATO agreements with all the emergency powers for the vaccine that I'll put up tonight. That yeah, they are bypassing all these tests and so on... And giving immunity to everybody involved in it and administering these vaccines to you all. That's nurses, pharmacies, and everybody else they bring in on the act, including the troops that are going to go around door-to-door. There you go.

So anyway, I'll put this article up and some other ones as well to do with the same article. Because as I say, that was also in the National Post in Canada as well, and elsewhere. There's quite a lot of data on this guy in the article too. It's just amazing, it's just coincidental that he formed the company years before, you know, and just in case, you know. [Alan chuckles.] Yeah, here's the PR piece here it says…

Heroes of the pandemic: Meet the Canadian hockey dad behind COVID-19 vaccine developer Moderna - nationalpost.com / 28 May 2020

That's from the National Post itself, eh, just wonderful, and it's hockey, hockey, hockey, hockey, and yada, yada, yada. There's a little video there too if you want to see it. But yeah, hockey, hockey... hockey and Harvard, eh, there ya go. Yep. It's the usual stuff. It's the same stuff you would read when they create a pop singer or an actress or actor or something like that. Another one too is this article here...

3 Futuristic Biotech Programs the U.S. Government Is Funding Right Now

leapsmag.com / 31 Oct 2018

(A: That's from the Future Frontiers group here.)

FUTURE FRONTIERS

Last month, at a conference celebrating DARPA, the research arm of the Defense Department, FBI Special Agent Edward You declared, “The 21st century will be the revolution of the life sciences.”

Biomedical engineer Kevin Zhao has a sensor in his arm and chest that monitors his oxygen level in real time.

Indeed, four years ago, the agency dedicated a new office solely to advancing biotechnology. Its primary goal is to combat bioterrorism, (A: [Alan chuckles.]) protect U.S. forces, and promote warfighter readiness. But its research could also carry over to improve health care for the general public.

(A: All this money, they just can’t stop worrying about you. Oh.)

With an annual budget of about $3 billion, DARPA’s employees oversee about 250 research and development programs, working with contractors from corporations, universities, and government labs to bring new technologies to life.

(A: There ya go.)

Check out these three current programs:

1) IMPLANTABLE SENSORS TO MEASURE OXYGEN, LACTATE, AND GLUCOSE LEVELS IN REAL TIME

A first-in-man trial for the glucose sensor is now underway in Europe for monitoring diabetics, according to Zhao..

“If this pans out, with approval from FDA, then consumers could get the sensors implanted in their core to measure their levels of glucose, oxygen, and lactate,” Zhao said.

(A: There ya go. Wow. Isn’t that wonderful.)

2) NEAR INSTANTANEOUS VACCINE PROTECTION DURING A PANDEMIC

Traditional vaccines can take months or years to develop, then weeks to become effective once you get it. But when an unknown virus emerges, there’s no time to waste.

(A: You don’t need it. All you have to do is wear a mask during a pandemic, right, and guaranteed not to get it, pull it down and keep eating and you never get the virus. So, you don’t need this stuff.)

This program, called P3, envisions a much more ambitious approach to stop a pandemic in its tracks.

“… enlist the body as a bioreactor to produce therapeutics…”

So how would it work?

To fight a pandemic, we will need 20,000 doses of a vaccine in 60 days.

If you have antibodies against a certain infection, you’ll be protected against that infection. This idea is to discover the genetic code for the antibody to a specific pathogen, manufacture those pieces of DNA and RNA, and then inject the code into a person’s arm so the muscle cells will begin producing the required antibodies.

(A: That’s what they’re doing with the Moderna, is particles of the actual viruses, mixed with another virus by the way, two different kinds put together, hm. And it’s meant to reprogram the DNA through the RNA. [Alan chuckles.] It goes through how it’s going to work…)

3) RAPID DIAGNOSING OF PATHOGEN EXPOSURE THROUGH EPIGENETICS

Epigenetics, that's where they switch on and off, they call it expression, different functions of cells and transmitters and so on. Switch them on and off. It's all switching. I remember reading that years ago this is where it's all going to go. And here it all is. You can switch it on and off in your brain too, different parts of it. Even proteins. Even hormones on and off, eh? Epigenetics it's like switching, switching points you might say. So, they give this article here and I'll put that up too because it's too much to read obviously tonight. For those who are really interested, can read it themselves. Most folk really won't read this kind of thing. They want the emotional stuff, the aaa's and ooo's. But if you really want to understand, here's the information, get it yourself.

A Military-Funded Biosensor Could Be the Future of Pandemic Detection

defenseone.com / 3 March 2020

If it wins FDA approval next year, the two-part sensor could help spot new infections weeks before symptoms begin to show.

(A: This is permanent lockdown, folks, with the stuff to be stuck into you, etc, you know. Yep.

I'll put them all up, as I say. There's just too many of them. Another one too is…

Taking the UK's Testing Strategy to the Next Level

institute.global / 17 Aug 2020

…mass testing (A: Hhhhh……) – meaning testing the majority of the population, using all possible means at our disposal – remains the only way to restore confidence and allow the UK to live safely alongside Covid-19. This means an evolution in the government's testing strategy, from one based on targeted testing to one that opens up testing to as many people as possible, as often as possible.

(A: D'you get that part…)

…as many people as possible, as often as possible.

(A: They're going to order you again and again and again, test, test, test, hm. Getting the point?)

We are therefore asking the government to make establishing a mass-testing regime its core objective.

(A: Hhhhhhh. There ya go. And this is the one I think Boris Johnson okayed.)

Oh, this actual article is from the Tony Blair Institute for Global Change. The guy who brought you the mass migration because they all got out of countries that got bombed into the dust. Here he is again still stirring the pot, eh? And yeah, he’s just such a great philanthropist. I guess he’s transhuman. He doesn’t look human, does he, hm, to me. I'll put this article up too. But yeah, he's on board with it naturally for his bosses, total vaccinations for everybody forever, forever, more and more of them. Here you go.

Another article…

The Stalinist Trial Of Julian Assange. Whose Side Are You On?

johnpilger.com / 7 Sept 2020

(A: It's John Pilger. Most folk have forgotten who he is. [Alan chuckles.] The media want you to forget of course. He goes into what happened to him and how he's doing and so on.)

I had never heard a publisher or an editor invoke morality in this way. Assange believes that journalists are the agents of people, not power: that we, the people, have a right to know about the darkest secrets of those who claim to act in our name.

(A: Well, that’s a wonderful dream, isn’t it, eh?)

If the powerful lie to us, we have the right to know. If they say one thing in private and the opposite in public, we have the right to know. If they conspire against us, as Bush and Blair did over Iraq, then pretend to be democrats, we have the right to know.

It is this morality of purpose that so threatens the collusion of powers that want to plunge much of the world into war and wants to bury Julian alive in Trumps fascist America.

In 2008, a top secret US State Department report described in detail how the United States would combat this new moral threat. A secretly-directed personal smear campaign against Julian Assange would lead to "exposure [and] criminal prosecution".

The aim was to silence and criminalise WikiLeaks and its founder. Page after page revealed a coming war on a single human being and on the very principle of freedom of speech and freedom of thought, and democracy.

The imperial shock troops would be those who called themselves journalists: the big hitters of the so-called mainstream, especially the "liberals" who mark and patrol the perimeters of dissent.

It's just showing you how you get targeted. By the way, all he's got in this article here, is to be used in the next phase against everybody who's speaking out against Covid by the way, using the military. Military cyber warfare AND physical force if need be. This is the next step of it.

Ontario imposes ‘highest’ fines in country for those who break new COVID gathering limits

lifesitenews.com / 18 Sept 2020

(A: Oh Captain Mainwaring, [Undecipherable]...)

(LifeSiteNews) – Ontario Premier (A: That's like the governor that you get in the States.) Doug Ford has imposed “severe fines” which will be the “highest in Canada” for those who break physical distancing health rules put in place due to the coronavirus.

In his daily media update on Thursday, Ford said that his government “will throw the book at you if you break the rules” with fines of “a minimum” of $10,000 for anyone who organizes “illegal” social gatherings and $750 for those who are at such an event.

(A: There ya go. You see, this is the next step. It was all put out by the way in Event 201 step-by-step the five different levels they would use, and now you’re going into the end parts of it.)

The new restrictions apply to “social gatherings in private residences, backyards, parks and other recreational areas. This includes: functions, parties, dinners, gatherings, barbecues, wedding receptions.”

(A: No kidding, eh?! [Alan chuckles.] So, there's no wedding receptions, no barbecues, no nothing.)

"The new limits do not apply to events or gatherings in staffed businesses and facilities because they must already follow specific public health and safety guidelines …

Well, all you have to do is put on black outfits and black facemasks and the logos, you know the logos they put on, and say you're, you know, it's really a gathering for, you know, the authorized protests and stuff like that. I'm sure you'll get left alone then, they can't touch you, you're too politically sensitive then, you've got a legitimate reason for eating, you know, together. [Alan laughing.] There ya go.

The hypocrisy is.... Aaarrgggggggggg, plainly you can't trust, there's not a single government department that have got any credence because the politicization of who can do things and who can't. Do you understand? You're in trouble when certain folk can do all the things that you can't do because of, political authorization, because of who they are, hm. I'll put that up and another article here is by Whitney Webb.

Coronavirus Gives a Dangerous Boost to DARPA's Darkest Agenda

thelastamericanvagabond.com / 4 May 2020 / Whitney Webb

In January, well before the coronavirus (Covid-19) crisis would result in lockdowns, quarantines and economic devastation in the United States and beyond, the U.S. intelligence community and the Pentagon were working with the National Security Council to create still-classified plans (A: …and it's got the links to all this stuff in the article by the way.) to respond to an imminent pandemic. It has since been alleged that the intelligence and military intelligence communities knew about a likely pandemic in the United States as early as last November, and potentially even before then.

Given this foreknowledge and the numerous simulations conducted in the United States last year regarding global viral pandemic outbreaks, at least six of varying scope and size, it has often been asked – Why did the government not act or prepare if an imminent global pandemic and the shortcomings of any response to such an event were known? Though the answer to this question has frequently been written off as mere "incompetence" in mainstream media circles, it is worth entertaining the possibility that a crisis was allowed to unfold.

Why would the intelligence community or another faction of the U.S. government knowingly allow a crisis such as this to occur? The answer is clear if one looks at history, as times of crisis have often been used by the U.S. government to implement policies that would normally be rejected by the American public, ranging from censorship of the press to mass surveillance networks. Though the government response to the September 11 attacks, like the Patriot Act, may be the most accessible example to many Americans, U.S. government efforts to limit the flow of "dangerous" journalism and surveil the population go back to as early as the First World War. Many of these policies, whether the Patriot Act after 9/11 or WWI-era civilian "spy" networks, did little if anything to protect the homeland, but instead led to increased surveillance and control that persisted long after the crisis that spurred them had ended.

Using this history as a lens, it is possible to look at the current coronavirus crisis to see how the long-standing agendas of ever-expanding mass surveillance and media censorship are again getting a dramatic boost thanks to the chaos unleashed by the coronavirus pandemic.

DARPA Dystopia

For years, the Pentagon's Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA) has remained largely out of sight and out of mind for most Americans,

(A: Then it goes into the different projects…)

…their projects are often praised as "bringing science fiction movies to life."

However, there have been recent events that have marred DARPA's often positive portrayal by media outlets, which paint the agency as a beacon of scientific "progress" that has "changed the world" for the better. (A: They give you links to these articles too.)

For instance, in 2018, a group of European scientists accused the DARPA's "Insect Allies" (A: I remember reading that article.) program of actually being a dystopian bioweapons program that would see insects introduce genetically modified viruses into plants to attack and devastate a targeted nation's food supply. DARPA, of course, maintained that its intent to use these insects to genetically modify plants was instead about "protecting" the food supply. (A: You see how you play the game.) Regardless of DARPA's assertions that it is merely a "defensive" program, it should be clear to readers that such a technology could easily be used either way, depending on the wielder.

(A: Don't forget too, DARPA, eeeeeh, even before you heard the term DARPA, before it really existed as such, were breeding mosquitoes, bomber mosquitoes we call them in Canada, at Beso, Ontario and sending them to the States when they had Plum Island on the go. They could load, it was a big mosquito that had been developed for carrying an excess load of viruses or bacteria.

Because it's the infection load that you initially get that can depend on whether it takes in your body, or if it's too little the body might be able to fight it at the source of entry, you see, where it's punctured you. The more they carry the more effective it is for biowarfare. So, they developed these big bomber mosquitoes they call them and sent them to the States and used them. So, this is old stuff really.)

(A: They've also talked about giving viruses and plagues to people, they even had a program years ago where they wondered if they could even give you the antibody, you know, the actual kind of an antidote to some of them by using mosquitoes, you see. Yyyyyyyyou wouldn't believe the stuff, it's way beyond sci-fi when it gets… I've even seen that thing in some sci-fi movies, where the military releases stuff to cure folk... Aahhhhhhhh. Anyway. By using mosquitoes. But this is a good article here, they go into DARPA's BTO...)

...the agency's "Biological Technologies Office" (BTO), created in 2014.

(A: …and the different things they've been working on.)

Following the creation of DARPA's BTO in 2014, this particular program gave rise to the "In Vivo Nanoplatforms (IVN)" program. The diagnostics branch of that program, abbreviated as IVN:Dx, "investigates technologies that incorporate implantable nanoplatforms composed of bio-compatible, nontoxic materials; in vivo sensing of small and large molecules of biological interest; multiplexed detection of analytes at clinically relevant concentrations; and external interrogation of the nanoplatforms without using implanted electronics for communication."

(A: Long-winded indeed, eh. So again, they go into, well, we're really trying to sense, nanoparticles and sensors and so on, so they can sense and treat illnesses and disease and infection on the inside of you. It ties in with the previous articles I mentioned tonight about these things too.)

…"soft, flexible hydrogels that are injected just beneath the skin to perform [health] monitoring …

So, they're here to help you. This whole military-industrial complex is really a beneficent sort of thing that they can't, they worry, can they do enough to help you. Hm? Are you starting to get the picture, this how things are always put across on you, eh?

Bill Gates Slams FDA, Doubts Agency Can Be Trusted With COVID-19 Vaccine

zerohedge.com / 15 Sept 2020

(A: There's quite a few articles right now, Bill Gates doesn't want anybody to test it, or even have any government authority, anything to do with the vaccine and in distributing. He just wants to make sure it's distributed and given to the people, but he doesn't want any testing done or anything else. So....)

Bill Gates just ratcheted up his PR campaign to sow doubts about President Trump's alleged 'political meddling' with the FDA, while also placing him in league - if only temporarily - with the vaccine skeptics Gates frequently rails against. During an interview with Bloomberg News, the Microsoft founder and Gates Foundation chairman, who has persisted in his defenses of the WHO (A: Because he pretty well owns it.) despite growing evidence of missteps, attacked the FDA's credibility, claiming that he no longer believes the FDA is 'the world's premier public-health authority'…

(A: [Alan chuckles.] Bill Gates, he doesn’t even have a first-aid diploma, [Alan laughing.] certificate. So, he’s [Alan laughing.] telling the FDA that he doesn’t believe that they’re…)

…'the world's premier public-health authority'…

Gates, who has helped finance several vaccine projects around the world,

Bill Gates doubts FDA and CDC can be trusted on Covid and vaccines - rt.com / 16 Sept 2020

Sure, let’s trust a non-doctor billionaire who pays media instead. Again, I’ll put some more of them up too, sterilization of Africans and people in India too. I’ve heard that they also did it in some place in Latin America. But I know about India and Africa for sure with the so-called tetanus shots. They had ingredients in them that interfered hormonally and made them abort their children, but also made them almost a permanent sterility in some of them. That’s a fact. This is all, I’ll put up the articles, this is not happenst... this isn’t just... a rumor, put it that way.

Bill Gates, Bill Gates really is, this character could have been sitting there with Blofeld in one of these movies, honestly, could be, eh, stroking a cat or something, with diamonds around its neck, I mean, really, he belongs in it. What I'm talking about, this kind of agency exists, actually. M-hm. I tell ya, self-made people, eh. [Alan chuckles.] Ha, ha, ha, sure. Just like his daddy was. Sure. Hm.

Warning Australia is running out of RICE - and may not have a single homegrown grain left by Christmas

dailymail.co.uk / 13 Sept 2020

(A: That’s to hype up the fear, you see. That’s the Daily Mail Australia.)

SunRice (A: I guess that’s a company.) chief executive Rob Gordon warned families would soon be forced to eat rice imported from Vietnam as local supplies continued to dwindle.

'We are going to run out of Australian rice by Christmas,' he told The Daily Telegraph.

(A: There you go.)

Low rainfall, dry weather and COVID-19 panic buying …

Well, they’ve made sure the folk are panicked, because you can’t trust the darn government. They know what’s happening here, they know what’s going on. Yep. Don't forget too, how much are they exporting?

It reminds me of Russia, the Soviet Union when it took over the other little countries around about it and it grabbed Ukraine. That was the breadbasket not just of Russia, that was the breadbasket for a good part of Europe. Massive experts they were putting out. Well, once they came in, they take the people off the farms, only leave a few on it initially so that production just plummeted. Then they had riots going on inside the cities since they were pretty well starving. This is what they always do to get control over the public. Then they started taking all the grain away from the Ukrainian farmers that were left, and their farming implements by the way. In the old footage you see these walking skeletons, and children, this is what the Bolsheviks did to the people. Are you getting the picture here? The ones who say that they love you, and they're going to have revolutions to help you, and bring in a just society, and they starve all these folk to death? You should see this stuff.   Woah. Woah. If you can stomach it. Then again, then you found that Stalin was exporting stuff, what he could get for money. As the folk were starving. Ftt. Uuuuuuhh, uuuuuuuhhh. Yep.

And then you wonder why they're lauded in history. You never hear anybody attacking that particular revolution or the event, of what happened in it. Never. How come? But Germany, oh, they were just the Evil Empire personified. But the Bolsheviks that did it all, let's just starve what, about 8 million of them in the Ukraine to death there, that will also teach these little peasant farmers lessons, eh. Mmm. The spokespeople on behalf of the people, they represent the people.

Australia Pushes New Measure To Detain COVID "Conspiracy Theorists"

zerohedge.com / 18 Sept 2020

(A: This is the next step, as I say, you know.)

Aussies have vented their frustrations and attempted to take back control of their communities after a surge in virus cases prompted the government to re-implement

(A: Again, I don't, don't use their terminology. These aren't cases, these are folks who might have fragments of the viruses in the swab, but they're not ill. They're not ill. Big difference. So that's the excuse of course, the government's using it…)

… to re-implement some of the world's most draconian social-distancing measures.

And if there is one thing that terrifies increasingly tyrannical governments, it's a loss of control of the narrative, which is why the Australian government is getting a jump start on curbing any so-called "conspiracy theorists" daring to spread information that questions the fear-mongering being used to keep Aussie citizens under lock and key.

A new bill is expected to be debated by the Victorian government in the State Parliament this week. It gives local authorities the power to detain "conspiracy theorists" and people who refuse to self-isolate, reported Caldron Pool.

(A: This is actually the next unrolling of the British Commonwealth countries plans. They're all the same, I've read them. Step-by-step. They talked about it at again Event 201 what would happen, before it hit supposedly, or it was released [Alan chuckles.] on the public of what they would do and the different stages they would use on the public to make them obey and get them on their knees. They actually debated this, you know. You can actually see the video of it for a lot of you, if you care to go through it, it's five hours long. They were the ones eventually that were put in charge of it all. That was their so-called test dry run.)

(A: But here it is, yeah. So, you're put in prison if you're a conspiracy theorist, you know. This is what Russia did. Russia had one of the most draconian systems of psychiatry, you see. If you didn't go along with anything, you MUST be mentally ill, or you would go along with it, only sane folk have no problem going along with this, and that was IT. That was it. You can't fight it back, discuss it, debate it, that was it. Oh, you're obviously crazy or mentally ill, or you're a conspiracy theorist, you're obviously a bit nuts, you see. And here is the same... It tells me it's the same folk that gave you communism that's running all this at the very top. There's just too many, too many things going into place, tink-tink-tink-tink-tink, you see, too many things just falling into place. The same stuff. Including a lot of the terminology, you know.)

… the rule could be applied to "conspiracy theorists who refuse to self-isolate or severely drug-affected or mentally impaired people (A: You see, there you go…) who do not have the capacity to quarantine." Those arrested under the new rule will be housed in quarantine facilities.

(A: That’s mental hospitals, folks. Here you go. Welcome back to the new Soviet system in Australia. On behalf of the richest folk on the planet that own it all, just like they own us all [Alan chuckles.] in the West as well. Hm? The big organization that Gates and the rest of them all belong to.)

Attorney-General Jill Hennessy said the new bill would "allow us to continue responding to the challenges the pandemic presents, (A: I wonder that that is, eh.) so we can keep protecting Victorians and delivering the services they rely on." (A: …as they’ve shut them all down, eh.)

So far, many of the anti-lockdown demonstrations have been held on the weekends. At least 200 people were fined and 74 arrested at a protest in Melbourne on Sunday. If the bill is passed, some protesters would be rounded up and arrested, and could spend time in a quarantine facility.

(A: There ya go.)

… authorities have already arrested a Melbourne woman for allegedly writing pro-anti lockdown posts on social media.

There ya go. N-n-n. Remember the woman who had talked about a protest and so on, and you see them busting into her place in arresting her. I-yi-yi-yi, there ya go. In a country where they pretend they’re all so tough, eh, the guys are just all tough, and how they hate the old system because they were all ex-convicts and stuff and they all fought for rights and freedoms, and this is how they’re getting treated. And they're accepting this rubbish?!?! Hm? M-m-m. Quite amazing, eh. There you are, using psychiatry again, and opinions. What's my opinion? You're obviously a conspiracy theorist, which is obviously a mental illness, eh. N-n-n. There ya go.

Another one, a video from a different site again…

Australia Runs Out Of Rice As Police Invade Farmers Markets

bitchute.com / 14 Sept 2020

Australia will run out of homegrown rice by Christmas, which may help to explain why their police are kettling people at farmers markets (which clearly doesn't help social distancing) and becoming more violent in general -- if the state expects food shortages, they must bolster the police presence and acclimate people to increased totalitarianism, particularly around food. They are preparing -- are you? Start growing food today.

And the latest Chinese neurologist that just came into America…

Chinese virologist accuses Beijing of coronavirus cover-up, flees Hong Kong: 'I know how they treat whistleblowers'

foxnews.com / 10 July 2020

(A: Well, hhhch, you've... luckily you didn't land in Australia, eh?! Hhhhh, you'd be a conspiracy theorist and locked up, mentally ill.)

Li-Meng Yan told Fox News that she believes China knew about the coronavirus well before it claimed it did. (A: Other ones have said that too.)

She says her supervisors also ignored research she was doing that she believes could have saved lives.

You don’t know what to believe about this particular one. Because she obviously is wanting to give information in order to get into the country and stay here. On the other hand, she’s mentioning, it says, it’s worse than they’re telling you. Which would fall in with what they’re doing on this side. You understand how it's getting played right now, where they want you to believe it’s a real horrible thing. And maybe for the Chinese it is if it’s ethno-specific, hm. But she did say that you should ask Fauci, he knows all about it. And again, the coverups in her country over what's really happening, etc. etc. and the Communist Party too control the coronavirus narrative. Well, that's what we're getting too, they're getting control of the coronavirus narrative. Same thing, isn't it? The same thing.

This other article here is… sometimes I'll put them up, sometimes I won't. [Alan chuckles.] The Prime Ministers SAGE, that's the group in Britain that's running the whole, it's like the group is to do the coronavirus and so on. As opposed to the COBRA group that just deals with like terrorism. And I guess they just need a, I don't know, a VIPER project to deal with the politicians that are terrorizing the public. But anyway, it says...

PM's own SAGE experts warned

(A: This is Britain. Can you believe it, a broke country, just flat broke owing, if they ever have great, great, great grandchildren, that they're all down to pay off a debt, which is impossible to pay off. So, let's throw out...)

his £100bn 'Moonshot' plan

(A: This is the one to test 10 million people A DAY…)

to save Christmas by testing 10m people a day

PM's own SAGE experts warned his £100bn 'Moonshot' plan to save Christmas by testing 10m people a day might be a waste of money and will deliver too many false results - as ministers admit the technology may NEVER exist - dailymail.co.uk / 11 Sept 2020

Do you understand what they're doing here? This is, don't shake your head thinking, well... Because you know it's all rubbish, what they're telling you is nonsense. It's obviously got a different purpose behind it. It's to convince YOU that this is a, it's UTTERLY necessary, it's, you're living in terror and fear and they're going to have to monitor you and test you for the rest of your lives on and off. Frequently, you know. I think I mentioned before I looked at all the different universities in the States, last week, and they had a graph up and a chart with all the testing. They're testing all the students, the ones that are open anyways, testing them all for coronavirus. They had all the lists there, and it had a small amount, really, of students that would have the coronavirus. All down them, for all the universities, and straight-line top to bottom, hospitalized ones: none, zero. Not a single one hospitalized ill. So, what is...? Again, you're meant to bash your head saying, for goodness sake, none of this makes any sense. It's not meant to make sense. It's for a different reason. It's the global reset, a whole new way of living. That's what they said. It isn't just resetting money. It's resetting you, physically, with vaccinations that are going to alter your genetic makeup permanently, and your offspring if you're able to get any afterwards. Forever. [Alan chuckles.] Well, good luck if you have that kind of faith I suppose.

Emergency powers to allow use of unlicensed Covid-19 vaccination in UK

inews.co.uk / 17 Sept 2020

(A: Well, it's the same everywhere, unlicensed, it's untested everywhere.)

If a vaccine becomes available before the end of the Brexit transition period on 31 December and it has not been approved by the European medicines watchdog, the UK will use its own emergency regulations to sidestep EU law to allow the jab to be deployed due to the serious threat the virus poses to human life.

(A: WHAT serious threat? Uhhhhhhhhhhhh. So, they're going ahead with it. And I've got some from the government too I'm going to put up by the way from the governments websites themselves some of them. But this one here is not their website, although a lot of the articles are from the websites there. But it says if a vaccine becomes available before the end of Brexit, yep, they're going to…) allow the jab to be deployed due to the serious threat the virus.

The government admits it would be an "very unusual" step to use the extraordinary powers for an unlicensed medicine (A: [Alan chuckles.]) but that it would be necessary, in those circumstances, to save lives from coronavirus.

(A: It's going to…. Whhoooooooaahhhhhhh! They've already had bad effects from that, across the whole planet, and all the kinds of vaccinations they've tried out, everywhere.)

… the government tries to reassure the public that "unlicensed" does not mean "untested" and that it is expected the vaccine will have gone through several safety trials before use in the general population.

(A: It actually says in it, when you read them, that they first test it on about 20 people. Young people generally. Healthy. Then they go on from there, test them again and expand it a little bit and test them. But they're not going to even go through even one year or two years testing here.)

However, the plans also include invoking a separate emergency power which would give the government and all firms, organisations and people involved in the supply chain, from manufacture to administering the jab to individuals, immunity from being sued in the civil courts if someone becomes ill or dies as a result of an unlicensed vaccine.

(A: I've got them here actually, I'll put them up from the government itself that it explains this. They have blanket immunity on everybody, folks, as they could possibly kill you. And you can't do anything about it. You're going to be forced to take something and then it ki… That's called murder. Hm? Well not everybody will die of it. Whoever does die of it, it's MURDER, if they're going to be FORCED on the public. We should start using the proper terminology here.)

Describing Covid-19 as the "biggest threat this country has faced in peacetime history",

(A: Can you believe this rubbish?!)

the document says a viable vaccine will go through "the usual rigorous testing and development process and be shown to meet the expected high standards of safety, quality and efficacy before it can be deployed".

(A: It has to be tested for years, and follow-ups on this though, long-term effects, etc… Not done. Oy-yoy-yoy.)

It says it may be necessary because of the, you know, THE EMERGENCY, to speed up the process of authorization, and give it and deploy it before it's fully tested. So, there you go, that's you, folks. There you go. I'll put all the articles up from the government too.

U.K. Gov. Consultation document: changes to Human Medicine Regulations to support the rollout of COVID-19 vaccines - gov.uk / 28 Aug 2020

And...

CDC – Vaccine

COVID-19 VACCINATION PROGRAM INTERIM PLAYBOOK FOR JURISDICTION OPERATIONS – September 16, 2020 –
pdf

cdc.gov

(A: This one is from the government indeed. I'll put this one up as well. I've got ones for Britain, and I think Australia somewhere. I've definitely got, also got the US as well. This is how many I've managed to get this week. I don't get much sleep, as you can imagine. This one's got 57 pages in it. It's for the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, CDC. September 16, 2020.)

(A: And yeah, it's all in here. It's got everything in it. Blanket immunity. It goes through it all, one after the other, all the immunity groups they're going to use, from the military police, pharmacies, nurses, helpers, assistant, nurses, all this kind of stuff, anybody who can give you a jab. If you end up having, you know, a deadly reaction to it, well, no one's going to get sued for it, they're all going to be quite happy to do it to the next one. That's just what's going to happen folks. They've got...)

State and Local Coordination

(A: They've got everybody's names. They know all your homes, where they're going to go and yada, yada, yada.)

Large Number of Doses Available; Supply Likely to Meet Demand

(A: …likely to meet demand. They'll have no problems with the demand of it, having it all made and so on.)

Identifying and Estimating Critical Populations

Describing and Locating Critical Populations

Vaccination Provider Recruitment

Vaccination Provider Enrollment

(A: They are bringing in lots of people literally. And I really mean that. I've read other articles where people who've lost their licenses are all getting brought in. They'll do it. They'll do it, they want the money. [Alan chuckles.] But they'll also keep their mouth shut, probably lost their license for rather nasty things. But yeah, this is what's going to come around you and jab you with stuff. And if you don't take it, well, you'll get locked up forever probably. Until you submit and go along with it. There's your choices, eh. Quite something. And they've got…)

Vaccine Recovery

Vaccine Storage and Handling

(A:...etc., yada, yada, ya. And also, through all the different electronic gadgets you've got you'll get reminders from the government on second dose reminders. Now remember, you might need three or four shots, so depending on your system, eh, so if you managed to survive the first two you might end up getting more to make sure you're definitely going to die with it. That's what [Alan chuckles.] I mean. But there you go. And this is literally to alter your genetic system.)

Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting System

Vaccine Safety Datalink

(A:...etc. etc. It's got whole pages on immunity from prosecutions of all kinds, yada, yada, ya. Ones for children as well. It's a playbook, you know, we're going to play with you. And from the CDC, eh.)

For the purposes of this document, "vaccination provider" refers to any facility, organization, or healthcare provider licensed to possess/administer vaccine or provide vaccination services. A "COVID-19 vaccination provider" is any vaccination provider who has been enrolled in the COVID-19 Vaccination Program.

(A: That also means any cop could give it to you, or a grunt from the Army, eh, who'd been enrolled in it. [Alan chuckles.] There you go. Also, Homeland Security is involved in it. Now you know what they're all for, all these organizations.)

Homeland Security Exercise and Evaluation program that jurisdictions may find useful as they plan their own exercises.

(A: Hm. It will take a while to go through it all, mind you. It's like a military operation. That's what it is actually, it's a military operation the way they've got it all worked out here.)

State/Local coordination

Tribal Nations and Tribal Communities

(A: ...too. It goes on and on and on.)

Anyway, I'll put this up. It's quite a read. I've got a few actually to put up. I'll see what I can manage tonight because there's an awful lot to upload, etc. Also, there's...

Dr. Breggin's COVID-19 Totalitarianism Legal Report - Breggin.com

Dr. Breggin's COVID-19 Totalitarianism Legal Report and Resource Center for the Case to Stop Emergency Declaration in Ohio and Elsewhere

Peter R. Breggin MD Expert Legal Report (PDF link)

337

(A: He's a doctor who, and I think he's also a psychiatrist. He came out with an attorney, got in touch with each other, to put a massive complaint in that the government has no, and the US has no legal authority to shut anything down at all. There's nothing in the Constitution anywhere. But they'll run over that anyway, they don't even bother with the Constitution. It says…)

Determined to restore the Constitutional rights that have been stripped away by the State of Ohio's unjustified actions regarding COVID-19, Ohio Stands Up! has filed suit in the Northern District of Ohio Federal Court to remove Gov. Mike DeWine's emergency order. The group is represented by attorneys Thomas Renz and Robert Gargasz.

"We believe that the response to COVID-19 has been the greatest fraud ever perpetrated on the American public," Renz said. "The objective of this legal action is to force the state to honor the Constitution and to stop the lies, manipulation and fear-mongering intentionally being promoted by public health officials and elected officials."

It goes on and on. He does a documentary, a little talk with it to on YouTube I think it is. I'll put up the link for that one as well.

Dr. Breggin's COVID-19 Totalitarianism Legal Report - Attorney Press Release - breggin.com / 30 Aug 2020

Peter R. Breggin MD Expert Legal Report – PDF - breggin.com / 30 Aug 2020

Now, it's war on police now as you know because they're getting, and all the youngsters at the bottom are saying, well, let's go and kill the cops now and be a hero for killing the cops. Because everybody's applauding it, everybody's authorizing it, because they're not stopping this. Even attorney generals in some of these states are letting them go. They're not even putting them in prison when they get caught. Anyway…

Dramatic moment hero mom-of-one cop, 31, saves partner's life tending to his gunshot wounds after Compton ambush - thesun.co.uk / 15 Sept 2020

You actually see the video where they're sitting in their car and this little guy waddles up to them, pulls out a gun and shoots them through the window. Shoots them both, and she was shot in the jaw, and she helped her colleague out and tried to stop his bleeding and so on, they're both bleeding. She was 31 and I think, a 31-year-old mum. The guy who was with her in the cop car was a 24-year-old cop. But it's just, you know, that's okay, there's no, that's not that terrible a thing to happen obviously, in this present climate, is it? In fact, they've had lots of mail saying, I hope they died. And by the way, I think in the ambulance that were taking him to the hospital, was it a different one or was it the same one, and the Antifa groups and the BLM groups were trying to stop the ambulance getting into the emergency.

When all this is over, you know, people have got to put everybody that's pushed all this, from the very top, it's not from the bottom, it's from the top, you've got to charge them and have public trials for these characters. These are enemies of the people, absolutely, that put all this out here to destroy your culture using every means they can, destroy everything, locking everything down with the Covid thing that's literally, obviously has not been anywhere near as serious as they've said. Yeah, some folk have died but they've died of the cold, the flu, and everything else too, they're so sick some of these people. They know this. They've fudged the figures so much because there's a bigger agenda at work, you all know.

But the people involved, if you could catch them, if you had a real world and it was all real and it was just a few people, nasty people in a small organization, you could deal with it. But you're dealing with something that runs the world, I hope you understand that. This is a big, massive organization across the planet. It's been here before you were born. And they don't get elected in. They put the folk in that you elect. [Alan chuckles.] Or think you elect. And they choose them as well.

The Resonance of Extremist Narratives Among Young People in Britain: New Research institute.global / 12 Sept 2020

The anxiety and uncertainty caused by the global health crisis is only exacerbating this, strengthening the hand of those seeking to undermine and divide societies. In the months leading up to the pandemic, the terror attacks at Fishmongers’ Hall and in Streatham showed how Islamist extremism continues to inspire violence on the streets of Britain, while the live threat of far-right terrorism …

(A: This is Tony Blair again by the way, one of his many big foundations, eh. The guy, again, he was picked to be a little star here, this little… disgusting bit of you know what. And here he is as a front man again, still, with a foundation... A man who CAUSED mass migration by bombing folk out of their homes and their countries. A man whose sidekick, you know, his Deputy Prime Minister came out and said, well, he said he was going to destroy the cultural makeup and physical makeup of the British folk by mass migration of, you know, diffuse peoples from across the world. And here he is now saying things like this? …with the threat of far-right terrorism in Britain? Do you understand how they play the game here? This is standard Weishaupt stuff [Alan chuckles.] you're watching here, with the same kind of characters, eh. What evil, evil, evil people. EVIL people.)

Terrorist attacks, however, are simply a symptom of a wider set of societal challenges.

Yep. So they’re going to train everybody to be different, you see, and cause the chaos, blame the folk who live in the country, who descended from folk who didn’t live in the country, blamed them for the responses, and then, you know… Uhhhhh, what a piece of manipulative evil this psychopath is. Oyyy. Well-rewarded though by his bosses. Well rewarded. M-hm-hm.

Another article here is…

Food Chain Reaction crisis simulation ends with global carbon tax

cargill.com / 12 Nov 2015

(A: This is from Cargill, the big food conglomerate, one of the five big agri-food businesses that own your supply of the world's food. [Alan chuckles.] It's quite interesting because you'll find John Podesta is one example was involved in these food stress exercises. Small world, eh? So, they did this simulation with a global carbon tax, if there was a world food crisis, you see. So…)

Climate, hunger, civil unrest and spiking food prices came together at the Food Chain Reaction game in Washington DC this week. Cooperation mostly won the day.

November 12, 2015

The game took the players from the year 2020 to 2030. As it was projected, the decade brought two major food crises, with prices approaching 400 percent of the long term average; a raft of climate-related extreme weather events; governments toppling in Pakistan and Ukraine; and famine and refugee crises in Bangladesh, Myanmar, Chad and Sudan.

Climate, hunger, civil unrest and spiking food prices came together at the Food Chain Reaction game…

They go into how it worked out and where it would go to, etc. etc., and how the US, the EU, and India and China would make deals together, and yada, yada, ya. But they would blame it on the weather, and you'd all have to pay carbon taxes. That's from Cargill Inc. M-hm. Yeah, you'd be surprised to see the characters involved there. You probably know them all, their names right away in fact. And another one here, the same group, Cargill right, works with the World Wildlife magazine, you know, from the WWF, with Prince Philip at the top of it and the whole bit, and works without these groups too, eugenics, too many folks, etc....

How a new game helped us understand the future of food

worldwildlife.org / Spring 2016

By 2030, the inevitable had happened. A coup in Pakistan. Flooding in Bangladesh. The world’s farmers were breaking under the pressure of volatile commodities prices.

Policymakers across continents initially reacted to these developments with ad hoc responses, ranging from a meat tax throughout the European Union to increased humanitarian aid.

(A: ...blah blah blah blah blah. It's the same one actually...)

This scenario was part of Food Chain Reaction: A Global Security Game, hosted by WWF, Cargill, the Center for American Progress, Mars, Inc., (A: That’s interesting too, American Progress [Alan chuckles.] And it isn’t really American.) and game designer CNA (formerly known as the Center for Naval Analyses).

There you go. That's quite amazing who's all there by the way. N-n-n. And also…

Food Supply Spontaneously Combusting! Controlled Demolition Of Supply Chain

bitchute.com / 31 Aug 2020

(A: I'll put that up as well. Part of the same kind of thing)

From grain elevators in Iowa, to sugar silos in New Orleans (A: …they went on fire.), to food warehouses in Essex, to grain reserves in Beirut -- the world's food supply chain is going up in flames.

(A: Flames seems to be the in thing right now, isn’t it, from burning homes and streets and forests and stuff, you know, they’ve got them doing it too in Oregon and elsewhere. Even though they’re trying to play it down and saying no, it’s not. Even as they get the photographs of them getting caught. [Alan chuckles.] Oh no, no, there’s nothing happening, you’re not seeing… they’re probably just out for a hike, you know.

From grain elevators in Iowa, to sugar silos in New Orleans, to food warehouses in Essex, to grain reserves in Beirut -- the world's food supply chain is going up in flames with farm labor running from COVID-19 tests,

(A: Which they are. Because there’s so many migrants, eh, illegal migrants.)

meat plants ordered closed,

(A: Again, if anybody tests positive, not ill with it but positive with particles of Covid that are dead long ago, then they’ll close the whole plant down. It’s all deliberate, folks.)

and weather warfare destroying crops, why not just torch the rest?

This is quite a good one here too for those that want to go through it. It's from the Ice Age Farmer, it's quite good actually, some of it. He's someone who really deals with food and storage and growing it and stuff like that, it's quite an interesting little site. Again, I'll put up Newt Gingrich, an article from USA news.

‘So it's verboten?’: Fox News panelist STOPS Newt Gingrich from discussing [Alan clears his throat]‘Soros [Alan clears his throat]-elected’ district attorneys

rt.com / 16 Sept 2020

(A: I'll put that link up where he was cut off dead. Because it's illegal, you can't say it. I'm surprised they even let you say Bill Gates. Maybe they'll ban that too, you see. The big perpetrators, the Weishaupt types and Spartacus types and so on, they'll just ban you from mentioning it, you see. And if you mention it, you'll be mentally ill and put in prison. M-hm. This article here talks about it. Also, it actually mentions this...)

Mr. [Alan clears his throat] funded prosecutors, who put them in office really, and let rioters go but declare not agreeing with BLM to be a hate crime it says.

Nor has [Alan clears his throat] influence been limited in major cities. His funding was decisive in the election of Diana Becton in as the DA in California's Contra Costa County just East of San Francisco Bay area. Despite a plagiarism scandal Becton became famous for pressing hate crimes charges against a couple that painted over the Black Lives Matter street murals during this year's Independence Day weekend.

Mentioning any of that is now partly off-limits on Fox news, however.

The Soros Cover-Up - Newt Gingrich - americanmind.org / 17 Sept 2020

Fox cut off Newt Gingrich for Saying Soros Funds ANTIFA/BLM - youtube.com / 16 Sept 2020

There you go. I tell ya.

Bill Gates doubts FDA and CDC can be trusted on Covid and vaccines. - rt.com / 16 Sept 2020

Again, it’s another one and I mentioned previously tonight, it’s a different article from a different site saying something similar. Because he wants to have his own group in charge of everything. You see, government might say this, we’ve noticed the folk are just dropping, keeling over after the vaccinations here. He’ll say, oh no, no, they’re just tired and relaxing after the stress built up to getting the shot, you know, that’s how he’ll word it himself, I’m sure. He’ll waved his hands a lot and all that kind of stuff, he does a lot of waving. His eyes are cold and dead, you know, like some critter, [Alan chuckles.] you know, you wouldn’t trust that, he’s got the eyes of a predator, you know, beady.

Also, an article about, it says…

Get Hume out of Edinburgh University

americanmind.org / 17 Sept 2020

A place calling itself the University of Edinburgh (A: You see, there used to be a University of Edinburgh there and it was in awfully good University at one time.) has decided to remove the name of David Hume, the great Scottish philosopher, from the tallest building on its campus.

The announcement comes from its Equality & Diversity Committee (A: That’s the Marxist group.) and its Race Equality and Anti-Racist Sub-committee.

Hume, it seems, has committed sins against anti-racism (as attested to by 1,700 signatories on a petition).

Honors like having a building in his name must be stripped, and, perhaps, statues must also come down. (A: …as the new Marxists, you see, of this century decide what's right and wrong in the past. That's what it's about, you see.)

It says this maybe a good thing, maybe too good to be there nowadays, etc. etc. As you fund the racists, on behalf of the elite though, because they promote it. And the leaders as I say, the real leaders get well funded to do all this by the richest capitalists on the planet at the very top. Quite amazing. As they play with everybody.

Consultation document: changes to Human Medicine Regulations to support the rollout of COVID-19 vaccines

gov.uk

(A: This is another one here from the government of the UK. It gives you, well, you can download it yourself, get the link for it and the whole thing. They go into...)

COVID-19 is the biggest threat this country has faced in peacetime history, (A: …same thing as the other ones, eh?! They're all the same scripts.)

COVID-19 is the biggest threat this country has faced in peacetime history, (A: Really? Really?) which is why the UK government is working to a scientifically led, step-by-step action plan for tackling the pandemic (A: Hhhhhhh, thank goodness, eh.)

The independent Joint Committee on Vaccination and Immunisation (JCVI) will advise the UK government on which COVID-19 vaccine/s the UK should use, and on the priority groups to receive the vaccine based on the best available clinical, modelling and epidemiological data. This will depend on the properties of the vaccine, those most at need (including health and care workers) and the particular medical circumstances of individuals.

(A: Maybe that's why they're going to basically conscript all the folk who are either retired or lost their licenses, because the other folk, they'll get it first and they'll get sick, and they'll have to replace them probably. M-hm. There you go. It goes on and on and on. You have to read all this one yourselves too, to do with...)

Nature of the Consultation

Timing

Temporary Authorisation of the Supply of Unlicensed Products

Once again, same as the States as well. All the same stuff, isn't it? And they pretend you're all different nations, eh?

Kushner, Jared Kushner, what a character. I mean, it's so open what kind of organization you got here running the show right now. Americans have no real political parties left really. Not real ones, for themselves, to save themselves. Kushner, the accords, you know, this is the new accords they made, Israel has made an accord with the United Arab Emirates to do with getting, them ganging up, it's the first Israeli Arab coalition that's going to maybe go against Iran. This is the preparations for it. I've been waiting for this since Trump got in actually. But Kushner, you know, folk must say, I mean, what is this administration? It says…

Kushner: Accords allow Arab states to separate own interests from Palestinians'

timesofisrael.com / 11 Sept 2020

(A: What does any of this have to do with America?)

White House adviser highlights Bahrain's tolerance, intimates arms sales not a factor in deal, says assurance of Muslim entry to al-Aqsa Mosque will make region more tolerant

Kushner said Friday that the two Trump-brokered normalization deals between Israel and the United Arab Emirates and Bahrain will allow Muslim countries to prioritize their own national interests over those of the Palestinians.

"This will reduce tension in the Muslim world and allow people to separate the Palestinian issue from their own national interests and from their own foreign policy," Kushner said.

This is from the Times of Israel, this article here. M-hm. Now also I'm going to put up…

I need help': Pennsylvania mayor makes desperate plea after fatal police shooting of Ricardo Munoz in Lancaster

usatoday.com / 14 Sept 2020

(A: Again, they immediately got a whole group to go in there to that little place and it says…)

LANCASTER, Pa. — Demonstrators in Pennsylvania took to the streets for the second night in a row, this time more peacefully following the fatal shooting of a man by police on Sunday.

(A: You can actually see the video of it, I don't know if you've seen the video where it was a call to a domestic dispute by the mother of this guy. And they always say they've got a mental illness, but a lot of them are on meth and so on. Anyway, the cop's just walking up to the door and the guy comes flying out of the door with a big machete or something in his hand. And the guy, I seen the photograph, this fella had to be in some kind of drugs because he's about 4 feet off the ground when he's jumping. The cop ran away from him, and he had to turn eventually, and then he shot him. That's what happened, that's what you see in the camera. So immediately the whole idea is to go in there and smash everything and so on by the proper troops and so on, etc., or the BLM groups and Antifa groups, eh. So, the mayor…)

Lancaster Mayor Danene Sorace…

"I need help. We need help," Sorace said, calling on leaders across Pennsylvania to help forge a solution to shootings involving police officers.

(A: Meaning, police shooting.)

"I am clear beyond a doubt that we lack the tools, the resources, the expertise and the capacity to do this on our own here in the City of Lancaster."

"We need an evidence-based protocol for responding," she said. "What is that protocol?"

"Additionally, how do we create and staff a system that can respond 365 days a year, 24 hours a day and within minutes? These are just a few of the questions that need to be answered to create a countywide plan," she said.

Who was Ricardo Munoz and why was he fatally shot by police? - thesun.co.uk / 14 Sept 2020

This video may be inappropriate for some users - Lancaster Pennsylvania Police Shoot Ricardo Munoz - youtube.com / 14 Sept 2020

And what is… I can remember quite a few years back they talked about something similar where we see they've done away with all the psychiatric hospitals and institutions. And institutions, you always think of them by the movies with folk getting dragged in in straitjackets. People used to book themselves in when they felt stress coming on and they couldn't manage it in their lives. They could go to a restful place, peaceful, be looked after, fed, and out of the stress of the street and society in general. But they're always painted as those crazy places and folk doing stupid things inside. Folk don't behave like that in the psychiatric hospitals that you see in these movies. It's nothing like that.

And you've got such a drugged population, with these drugs now that put them out of your skull on crystal meth, etc. They, you can't act responsibly if you go on that stuff. It can't be done. You lose your sanity. Then when they go after cops with big knives or whatever, machetes, or anybody else for that matter, they're going to get, they're going to have to defend themselves. But you've got these groups saying oh, no, you can't do it, you can't deal with it like that. Well, what are you supposed to do?

Unless you did have teams with a net and all the rest of it [Alan chuckles.] who could somehow corral the people that are losing it. All been discussed before, years ago, and it crops up all the time. But it's true, you would need these massive organization, maybe even bigger than the police force, because you'd need teams of maybe a dozen at a time, at least, on standby, everywhere, to deal with these kind of things. Because folk are cracking up crazy now with drugs and the lockdown and so on. It's going to get worse.

This article here, it was about Sweden, and it was put out, again it's about food, “let's talk about food”. At the beginning of the Covid fiasco, and don't forget that Sweden didn't fall for the total lockdown thing either, eh, and didn't have the problems that the rest of the world had, naturally. This is from May and it says...

Let’s Talk about Food—and What Happens In a Crisis

govexec.com / 25 May 2020

Sweden is telling its citizens to be ready to feed themselves for a week. Other nations should follow suit.

(A: This is what they were trying to tell you back then, oh, we’re going to lock you down, right.)

This week, Sweden presented a civil-defense brochure to be sent to the nation’s 4.8 million households. Called “If the Crisis or War Comes,” (A: If the CRISIS or WAR comes, eh, to the citizenry…) the 20-page brochure provides practical instructions, ranging from the signals that will sound in case of a national emergency, how to detect disinformation, how to get on without access to heating, fuel, the internet, how to get on without access to heating, fuel, the internet, medications, or public transport.

(A: Now, listen to this…)

(A: It’s a cold place there in the winter, you know, like Canada.)

It also explains to Swedes how to plan for food disruptions and issues this sobering directive: every able-bodied resident will be expected to fend for him- or herself for seven days.

(A: Then it goes on though, it's interesting here. It says…)

The U.S. imports a staggering 95 percent of coffee, cocoa, fish, and shellfish. Half of all fresh fruit and fruit juices consumed in the U.S. are likewise imported. Food import rates are similar around the developed world; the UK, for example, imports 50 percent of its food.

(A: They never learn, Britain, eh? World War I they needed help from the States, World War II they were starving. But it keeps you under the thumbs of the controllers.)

“Our food is transported via increasingly long and complex supply chains that often involve ships; at any given time there are some 100,000 ships at sea transporting food and other commodities," notes British geographer Sir Nigel Thrift, a former vice-chancellor of the University of Warwick. "Most of the ships pass through a small number of choke points, which are very easy to attack."

So, it goes through all the things that can happen to your food supply. It's quite a good article actually. It goes on and on and on. And about fuel as well. Even things like fertilizer, if you had to, if it was protracted and drawn-out, what you would need to survive. And have energy cutoffs they call it too when things start to get cut back and rationed, etc.

You'd better start thinking about these things, because these characters at the top are going to use all the same techniques they used in the communist revolutions, or the Bolshevik ones, in the Soviet system and then it went into Poland and Ukraine and all the other countries. That's the best way to get folk to their knees is through starvation, folks. And if you can't get heat and all the rest of it too, you're going to get made... Don't forget, Technocracy is the technique that they want to achieve, rule by Technocracy where experts will rule everything, all energy, including food which is an energy. You comprise energy. Are you getting the picture?

It's getting crazier and crazier; they've got a video of a drunk man...

Drunk man shot dead in Philippines for not wearing facemask following President Rodrigo Duterte's sinister threat - thesun.co.uk / 9 April 2020

So, he was drunk, and he didn't have a facemask, so he got shot. There you go. There's no riots about that though, you know, that's probably okay to kill folks then, you know.

Now, I've still got a few articles here and before I do the last articles, remember, cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Send me a few bucks. Buy the books and discs if you want or just donate to me straight. PayPal, send cash, checks are fine, and I think there's MoneyGram too, which they use at the post office I think, is okay. And if you post anything just use normal post, don't spend extra cash to track, trace it and so on or insure it. You don't have to; the post is pretty decent. Any parcels ever get sent to me never use UPS. They don't deliver to the door. Neither does FedEx. UPS will actually use the subcontractor ones they have for anything outside the cities, and they won't deliver to my place. I've had arguments with them. So, don't ever. Just use basic post. Basic post, no expedited post. Basic post to get to me. And don't do extra insurance or anything like that. It WILL arrive.

Operation LASER

canada.ca

Operation LASER is the Canadian Armed Forces' (CAF) response to a worldwide pandemic situation.

During Operation LASER, the CAF (A: Canadian Armed Forces.) implement certain measures on their personnel and Department of National Defence (DND) employees to reduce the impacts of a pandemic situation.

(A: So, this is the Armed Forces for Canada, right giving assistance to…)

Canadian Armed Forces assistance:

Assistance to the Public Health Agency of Canada

Support to long-term care facilities

Support to Public Health Ontario

Canadian Ranger support to Quebec

(A: They're going to use the Rangers, Canadian Rangers for the northern parts of Ontario and elsewhere by the way.)

Local Response Forces

The term Local Response Forces (LRF) refers to unit-level organizations across the Canadian Armed Forces that are not yet tasked as part of Operation LASER Task Forces but may contribute to community-level activities as municipalities continue to deal with the spread of COVID-19.

The LRF personnel may be Reservists who work out of armouries in cities across Canada, or troops on bases and wings who may be called upon to fulfill tasks in the local community. More specifically, LRFs may provide a helpful hand for short term general duty tasks (A: …and so on.)

Deployment of Canadian Rangers in Saskatchewan

Deployment of Canadian Rangers in Northern Ontario

Deployment of Canadian Rangers to British Colombia

Deployment of Canadian Rangers to Yukon, Northwest Territories and Nunavut

The three lines of effort for Operation LASER

Preserve and protect CAF personnel to maintain operational capabilities and readiness (A: …and so on.)

Assess CAF activities at home and abroad including continuity plans, protecting defence supply chains, and taking measures to limit the chance of infection of CAF personnel.

Support other government departments to ensure the CAF are ready to support the Government of Canada's objectives and requests for assistance.

Phase 1: Pandemic preparedness

Mitigation planning …

Phase 2: Pandemic alert

Active monitoring of the evolving pandemic threat, with some protective measures adopted

This phase is activated by the Chief of the Defence Staff (CDS)

Phase 3: Pandemic response

Activated on order of the CDS, this phase is characterized by widespread and continuous transmission of the virus in the general population …

(A: Here's the thing though, it doesn't say illness or sickness. I mean, there's hardly, most folk would test positive, if you've even been near anybody with a cold or you've had it yourself, because it's particles it picks up. Well, it's such a bogus test to begin with, we know that. That doesn't mean you're sick. And herd immunity comes around that way anyway. Which you need. Without a vaccination. But again, facts don't matter. It has been written in stone obviously from before we heard the term Covid.)

The Canadian Armed Forces (CAF) response will be dependent on the disease's impact in and around the location of CAF elements and requests for assistance to civil authorities

Phase 4: Post pandemic restoration

…re-establishment of all DND/CAF services and operations to normal levels

This phase transitions back to Phase 1 (A: …etc. Then they've got…)

Joint Task Force-LASER

Following the activation of phase 3 of Operation LASER, 1st Canadian Division Headquarters, a high-readiness, rapid-response unit based out of Kingston, Ontario.

From mid-March to mid-May, JTF-LR was responsible for the coordination and command of all domestic operations related to Operation LASER and played a critical role in the CAF response to COVID-19 by:

- Implementing and monitoring force health protection measures that preserve CAF operational capabilities; and
- Responding to and acting on requests for assistance from other government departments and agencies.

As of May 13, 2020, these functions have been assumed by the Canadian Joint Operations Command, headquartered in Ottawa, Ontario.

It's got a lot of PR photographs and stuff in support and gives technical details. There's a whole stack of it here too. I'll put this up as well for those that want to have a little deco at it, you see. Not a peek but a deco at it. There's another term for you as well.

Also…

FDA - Oxitec Mosquito

fda.gov / 5 Oct 2017

On October 5, 2017, FDA issued final Guidance for Industry (GFI) #236 –Clarification of FDA and

EPA Jurisdiction over Mosquito-Related Products, which clarifies that mosquito-related products intended to function as pesticides (A: …which I mentioned earlier.) by preventing, destroying, repelling, or mitigating mosquitoes for population control purposes, (A: I hope it's mosquitoes they're talking about.) and that are not intended to cure, mitigate, treat or prevent a disease (including by an intent to reduce the level, replication or transmissibility of a pathogen in mosquitoes), are not "drugs" under the Federal Food, Drug, & Cosmetic Act,

(A: Hhhch, amazing how they alter their genes, well, we don't have a law that says you can't do that and release it, it's all to do with drugs and things so it doesn't come under that, so just release them.)

FDA - Oxitec Mosquito - fda.gov / 5 Oct 2017

It's got a whole bunch of guidelines here on using it for different purposes, etc., for the company called Oxitec, eh. There you go. What a world we live in, eh, where the age of science being the great dictator. And here it is. On behalf of those who really own it all, which is the same characters who owned it before. [Alan chuckles.] Before you had it.

And…

Trump Health Aide Pushes Bizarre Conspiracies and Warns of Armed Revolt

nytimes.com / 14 Sept 2020

Michael R. Caputo told a Facebook audience without evidence that left-wing hit squads were being trained for insurrection and accused C.D.C. scientists of "sedition."

Ah, maybe he's looking at the streets, out the window. [Alan chuckles.] Maybe that's what's doing it to him, I don't know. I'll put that one up too. But he says, it's a conspiracy, without evidence, eh. Hhhhh, oh, oh, dear, dear. And another one from Fox news…

Hong Kong virologist claiming coronavirus cover-up tells 'Bill Hemmer Reports': 'We don't have much time' - foxnews.com / 13 July 2020

She's waiting to tell everybody her whole life story here of how she escaped the terrible organization from China. Now, here we have an article from the Times, and it says…

More than 3,500 tracking devices issued to those serving Covid-19 stay-home notices outside of facilities

straitstimes.com / 13 Sept 2020

him

SINGAPORE - More than 3,500 tracking devices have been issued to those serving Covid-19 stay-home notices (SHN) outside of dedicated facilities.

(A: All the testing, all the things that are going to happen here, they've already been tested over there. This is how they've always done it with Island Pacific places and so on.)

Those who arrived here from 11.59pm on Aug 10 and are allowed to serve their SHN (A: [Alan chuckles.] outside of facilities have been required to wear the electronic wristband device throughout their SHN period.

(A: Now, Singapore by the way, is one of the complete, is more of the technocratically controlled country and it has been for a long time. Everyone's got IDs they have to have with them at all times. It's all cashless everywhere, for a long time. It's very socialistic, managed that way too by massive bureaucracies, etc. You do what you're told and obey and that's it. But they don't call it communist there, it's a bit different. But it's the same kind of socialistic techniques that are used for compliance and managing the public. So, it's an ideal place to test all this stuff out on obviously.)

Long-term pass holders may also do so if they or their family members own or are sole tenants of the residence. (A: …meaning stay in it too. So, they're given these devices right…)

If the devices are not activated, the authorities will determine their location and help with technical difficulties or take enforcement action, as needed.

Children aged 12 and below are exempted from wearing the devices.

It has issued a total of 162,668 SHNs, of which 14,053 are active.

This is what they want to give you here, these... these really convict bracelets, eh, electronic convict bracelets that they put on certain people if they committed crimes. It's the same kind of thing they're using there. This is what they want to unroll in Canada. That's what this character that's in charge of the health system of Canada, Tam, said in a documentary about 10 years ago, I think it was on the CBC, that they would use these kind of things on Canadians if need be. Well, there's nothing happening that's not planned this way. Of course, Tam was also placed here. Again, Tam is also on the board of the WHO, a bit of conflict of interest you'd think since basically Mr. Gates owns it now, since he's the biggest financier of the WHO. It is a communist organization. I see the whole UN as a form of communistic system. But again, as part of the real system that runs the world.

Always, remember, getting back to Quigley, what did he say? We've got communists, fascists, dictators, we have every, all kinds in our organization as members. This is how they run it all. Are you starting to get the real picture? The Weishauptian picture of how it was all managed back then, why it was such a great threat to the system? Interesting too if I remember... Weishaupt, I think at the end when he was getting hunted, he went to one of these Germanic areas...

Germany wasn't a fully-fledged, a big one nation back then. It was kingdoms, little princedom's and kingdoms. You had the Saxe’s; they had the Coburg's and Gotha's and so on. He eventually was put up by one of them, and these are parts of the British Royal family today. I'm talking about the Gotha or Coburg. But anyway, they put him up and gave him a pension for life. Why would they do that for this guy? It doesn't, it's never been explained why he was put up and supported and given a pension for life from them. Why would that be? Hm? There's more to it than meets the eye. And that's the official history, that's all we're given but that's the official history. Not conspiracy or anything.

You've got to always remember that this was, I think personally it had to be kind of on the go before Weishaupt took it over, that's what I suspect. Again, it's everywhere. They run all institutions it seems. They put their people in, they have suborganizations like specialized ones like the Council on Foreign Relations, the Royal Institute of International Affairs, they called them the Lord Alfred Milner group Kindergarten at one time in Britain when they ran the Empire. They put their own members in as the heads of the countries they took over as Governor Generals of these countries across India and South Africa. They put their own members in, and their own members ran the resources and the finances. That's going on today, the same kind of thing, it's the same kind of thing on the go.

They financed, don't forget what they said, they did finance the so-called communist or Bolshevik revolution from the West, and they observed it and studied it and helped it through its entire existence as the communists USSR. We fed them too, for goodness sake. Then with the massive Cold War, massive money made too from guaranteed tax money for weaponry, weaponry, new missiles, new missiles, new missiles, etc. Great boon for them. They love war scenarios and cold wars because it's money for nothing, eh. BIG money, eh. But it gives them control over everything.

And with Covid, eh, we're not all dropping dead here. The hospitals haven't been overwhelmed. They’re still not overwhelmed. They've got staff out there getting fired for complaining that nothing's happening in the hospitals. This is a massive deception like never before. And they're trying to tell us, across the board, the same sentencing, everything, every country has got the same thing getting put forward by their front prostitute journalists. We've never seen such a thing like this... since the great war, or for the Spanish flu... Never in peacetime have we had anything so drastic as THIS. What nonsense. What is this? Talk about massive gaslighting, eh?

Because this agenda, the Covid is the excuse for the whole program that sustainability couldn't get through by yapping about global warming and having nonbinding agreements with the climate agreements. This is the whole agenda rammed through here on behalf of the WEF, World Economic Forum and the Club of Rome. And they admit it. I've given you the articles over the months where their members at the top admit it, they are rejoicing, they can ram it all through under Covid. That's the end of the story. A whole new way of existing. Right. The Fourth Industrial Revolution they call it, eh? Which is no industry for you at all. [Alan chuckles.] And may be no life eventually, the way it's going, eh? Total lockdown coming over the winter.

So, remember @cuttingthroughthematrix.com, send a few bucks my way. Help me toddle along here and get through with all my websites. I try and to get back to people who email me, as many as possible. I'm overwhelmed every day. I mean, I get no, I'm at this all day long every day, eh. Just uploading with the speed they are giving me, because I'm getting hit, penalized, for talking, then it takes me hours, maybe all night long just to upload my talks to my sites. Just that alone, eh? So, send a few bucks my way so I can survive through…

We're all going through it together, that's true. We are going through this together. That's one part of the slogan that's right, we're all in it together. We're all going through it together. We are going through history, and we need each other. And believe you me, you need an occasional voice here and there to keep you, keep your mind from cracking up altogether. And for those who are struggling, I'm with you. And I'm sure other people are with you too.

We've got to be there for each other during these times. It doesn't matter if they are even faraway, it doesn't make any difference, if folk are in trouble get in touch and we try to help each other out.

Because that's what we can offer each other. That can be a big, big difference knowing that someone's thinking, you know, about you. It's very important in this day and age of isolation, this forced isolation that folk are suffering under. All manipulated and managed by the very evil people at the top, there's no doubt about it.

Very evil people who, well you could go on and on about what they've done in the past, but what they intend to do now is... is beyond comprehension for a lot of people. It's the same characters at the very top, they have no love for the general society at all. They have no affinity with you.

So, for myself from Ontario Canada where it's already every night as I mentioned it's in the freezing mark, it's about 32° right now. I'll start to get this uploaded once I'm finished.

Take care of yourselves.

Don't give up, folks. It's not over yet, you know.

And you've got to learn to just, when to speak and when not to speak. I would say, learn to live inside your heads in company until you can listen to where people are at before you open your mouth, because they can turn on you so quickly when they're all living on the edge, they're frantic. So be very careful and don't jeopardize yourself by trying to convert folk into like a religious conversion. It doesn't work that way with the facts and the data when they're watching television every single day, maybe even all day long, some of them.

You've got to really just use your head. And have a few friends, just a few people that they can always count on each other. And you've got to get used to, don't tut-tut and so and so. You've got to do it. You've got to do it; you've got to help each other. Because eventually it will be your turn as well.

So, for myself Alan Watt from Ontario Canada, it's good night and may your God or your gods go with you.

Topics of show covered in following links:

It’s in Times like these when you need your head examined

theirishsentinel.com / 13 Sept 2020 / Posted by Helena Handbasket

booze at work

theirishsentinel.com / 13 Sept 2020 / Posted by Helena Handbasket

Locking Up Infected Politicians Would Be A Start

theirishsentinel.com / 16 Sept 2020 / Posted by Helena Handbasket

A DARPA-Funded Implantable Biochip to Detect COVID-19 Could Hit Markets by 2021

mintpressnews.com / 17 Sept 2020

Heroes of the pandemic: Meet the Canadian hockey dad behind COVID-19 vaccine developer Moderna

nationalpost.com / 28 May 2020

3 Futuristic Biotech Programs the U.S. Government Is Funding Right Now

leapsmag.com / 31 oct 2018

A Military-Funded Biosensor Could Be the Future of Pandemic Detection

defenseone.com / 3 March 2020

Taking the UK’s Testing Strategy to the Next Level

institute.global / 17 Aug 2020

Julian Assange. Whose Side Are You On?

johnpilger.com / 7 Sept 2020

Ontario imposes ‘highest’ fines in country for those who break new COVID gathering limits

lifesitenews.com / 18 Sept 2020

Coronavirus Gives a Dangerous Boost to DARPA’s Darkest Agenda

thelastamericanvagabond.com / 4 May 2020

Bill Gates Slams FDA, Doubts Agency Can Be Trusted With COVID-19 Vaccine

zerohedge.com / 15 Sept 2020

Bill Gates doubts FDA and CDC can be trusted on Covid and vaccines. Sure, let’s trust a non-doctor billionaire who pays media instead.

rt.com / 16 Sept 2020

Warning Australia is running out of RICE - and may not have a single homegrown grain left by Christmas

dailymail.co.uk / 13 Sept 2020

Rice As Police Invade Farmers Markets

bitchute.com / 14 Ssept 2020

Detain COVID &quot;Conspiracy Theorists&quot;

zerohedge.com / 18 Sept 2020

Chinese virologist accuses Beijing of coronavirus cover-up, flees Hong Kong: 'I know how they treat whistleblowers'

foxnews.com / 10 July 2020

Hong Kong virologist claiming coronavirus cover-up tells 'Bill Hemmer Reports': 'We don't have much time'

foxnews.com / 13 July 2020

PM's own SAGE experts warned his £100bn 'Moonshot' plan to save Christmas by testing 10m people a day might be a waste of money and will deliver too many false results - as ministers admit the technology may NEVER exist

dailymail.co.uk / 11 Sept 2020

Emergency powers to allow use of unlicensed Covid-19 vaccination in UK

inews.co.uk / 17 Sept 2020

U.K. Gov. Consultation document: changes to Human Medicine Regulations to support the rollout of COVID-19 vaccines

gov.uk / 28 Aug 2020

CDC - Vaccine playbook

cdc.gov

COVID-19 Totalitarianism Legal Report

breggin.com / 30 Aug 2020 (alternate link provided)

COVID-19 Totalitarianism Legal Report - Attorney Press Release

breggin.com / 30 Aug 2020 (alternate link provided)

MD Expert Legal Report - PDF

breggin.com / 30 Aug 2020

HEROIC ACT Dramatic moment hero mom-of-one cop, 31, saves partner’s life tending to his gunshot wounds after Compton ambush

thesun.co.uk / 15 Sept 2020

The Resonance of Extremist Narratives Among Young People in Britain institute.global / 12 Sept 2020

Food Chain Reaction crisis simulation ends with global carbon tax

cargill.com / 12 Nov 2015

How a new game helped us understand the future of food

worldwildlife.org / Spring 2016

Supply Chain

bitchute.com / 31 Aug 2020

it's verboten?’: Fox News panelist STOPS Newt Gingrich from discussing ‘Soros-elected’ district attorneys

rt.com / 16 Sept 2020

The Soros Cover-Up - Newt Gingrich

americanmind.org / 17 Sept 2020 (alternate link provided)

Fox cut off Newt Gingrich for Saying Soros Funds ANTIFA/BLM

youtube.com / 16 Sept 2020 (alternate link provided)

Get Hume out of Edinburgh University

americanmind.org / 17 Sept 2020 (alternate link provided)

Kushner: Accords allow Arab states to separate own interests from Palestinians’

timesofisrael.com / 11 Sept 2020

I need help': Pennsylvania mayor makes desperate plea after fatal police shooting of Ricardo Munoz in Lancaster

usatoday.com / 14 Sept 2020

Who was Ricardo Munoz and why was he fatally shot by police?

thesun.co.uk / 14 Sept 2020

This video may be inappropriate for some users - Lancaster Pennsylvania Police Shoot Ricardo Munoz youtube.com / 14 Sept 2020 (alternate link provided)

a Crisis

govexec.com / 25 May 2020

Drunk man shot dead in Philippines for not wearing facemask following President Rodrigo Duterte’s sinister threat

thesun.co.uk / 9 April 2020

More than 3,500 tracking devices issued to those serving Covid-19 stay-home notices outside of facilities

straitstimes.com / 13 Sept 2020

Operation LASER

canada.ca

FDA - Oxitec Mosquito

fda.gov / 5 Oct 2017

Trump Health Aide Pushes Bizarre Conspiracies and Warns of Armed Revolt

nytimes.com / 14 Sept 2020

Berlin 29 Augustus 2020

youtube.com / 30 Aug 2020 (alternate link provided)

Oregon Woman Holds Alleged Arsonist Until Cops Arrive

dailymail.co.uk / 15 Sept 2020

Oregon woman holds suspected arsonist at gunpoint as wildfires rage

nypost.com / 16 Ssept 2020

Sep 27, 2020 "Cutting Through the Matrix" with Alan Watt (Blurb, i.e. Educational Talk): " The NGO Philanthropix Industrial Complex "

Hi folks I’m Alan Watt and this is Cutting Through the Matrix on September 27, 2020. I should really start by reminding you to take a list of all the sites I have, my official sites. You'll find them @cuttingthroughthematrix.com on the webpage there. These are my official sites. Because last week when I was, [Alan chuckles.], I uploaded my stuff and the company that provides websites, you know, you buy from them the space, they went down. The first time. It was down for a good part of the Monday then they came back on again. I looked and looked and looked to find out if they had been hacked or whatever and I couldn't find anything in the media. But on the phone to the company, and it was all pleasant and everything else, they said that multiple memory banks had gone down. So, storage banks, I guess. So, I really don't know what happened or if it was just me or whatever. Because we're living in an age now remember where intense censorship is going on. And no company wants to get blamed for participating in censoring and going along with government commands and so on. It's really hints, you know.

Today this censorship is to do with all providers for instance, and Facebook is famous for it, that's why part of the reason it was created in the first place to come to a stage where they could eventually censor you. Once enough of you were on it and took it as part of a necessary program, they start censoring you. It was planned that way. The same with YouTube. That's why they gave you years and years of free stuff on YouTube and eventually you see the real purpose of it, and the Alphabet group that it belongs group. That's really what the Internet is about, it's perpetual reeducation of the general public across the planet.

But anyway, go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com, and I really mean it because eventually this might happen, this might keep happening until there's nothing left. Maybe one by one they’ll go down. But hopefully as long as I can still tick a long, I'll be able to get something up on one of my sites. So cuttingthroughthematrix.com, you'll see my official sites listed, make a note of them and save them because you probably will end up using them again, I'm sure. If I'm not on the cuttingthroughthematrix.com on Mondays or whatever look into the other sites and hopefully I've managed to get my talks up on the other servers. That's how it's happening. So yeah, that was [Alan chuckles.] last week. And also, the time it takes me through the actual provider of the actual Internet, not just the ones who do the web hosting sites and so on, honestly, it would be faster to use dialup to put my talks up on the Sundays. It crawls. It just crawls. And it cannot be just coincidental obviously. It's not like I'm putting up multi gigabytes or anything like that.

But that's, the games that go on, are always, are perpetual, you know. And it will get worse as we go through the different stages of lockdown, and along with the lockdown, censorship. Because they have increasing five stages of censorship, as we go up into the supposed Covid crisis idea according to the Event 201. They've got them all color-coded again with all the stuff you learned on the old Star Trek movies starting at yellow alert and all that all the way up.

Again, go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com. By the way when you're there, remember, throw a few bucks my way. You'll see how to do it. PayPal is fine. Cash is fine. Check is okay. Money Gram can be used as well. That helps me tick along as I say and keep my sites. Because it costs money, all this costs money and it's not like I was selling anything like T-shirts or mugs or politics. I'm just telling how the world really is, and maybe from understanding it you'll be able to understand how you can help yourself and save yourself, or even your friends and families and so on. Because we're going through an incredible war. This is only part of a very, very long-term war, and you've been living in a good part of it since you were born, so are your parents. Long term agendas.

But right now, they're stepping it up with all the cons out there and yeah, the very few... You understand, I, even with the political schemes and so on that go on, I'm very skeptical. I think many of them are really just playing their parts as actors. Because the overall agenda, the strategy in the dialectic is to get the synthesis out of the two. The thesis, and its counter and antithesis, the two sides of whatever, of every side of every story, two sides, and then their resulting synthesis from the arguments that are fighting about what goes on. Then it starts all over again using the synthesis as the new thesis, you see. That's Trotskyism as well. That's Marxism and Trotskyism, for those who don't understand that. It works very, very well for those who control it all. Because you're in a game, a big, massive game on the general public of the planet.

Before we've seen it. We've seen, oh, decades of, especially in the US, the same in Britain too really, where you can't tell the difference really between the parties when they're in. Because they're all… they're all being vetted by the same authorities to get in in the first place, all the leaders. They're all members of the CFR or in Britain the RIIA. The same in Australia and New Zealand. India as well. So, you're living through a prefixed and preordained agenda, including elections. And when you vote for people to come in, a new party to come in, it's not because that you really believe in them. It's that you've just lost faith in the one you voted in the last time, as the same old, same old has happened and the same old wars continue or are revamped, and the same funding goes into everything from the taxpayer to pay for it all. And you never get anything out of these wars. Most folk can't figure out why you have them in the first place. They can't even give you half decent lies for propaganda to justify the wars. Because they're not for you, obviously. You have to pay for it all and supply the material and the bodies that come home in the body bags sometimes.

So, you're in a big, big agenda. So, I don't fall, you know, for politics. I don't believe either that you vote for the lesser of the two evils. If they're evil, they're evil, and you're not going to win. It's not going to benefit you anyway. So the lesser of the two evils, it's an old strategy that's used by those who really control everything, to paint one really awful and the other one as pretty well bad but, and he'll do this, this and this but at least you might get that out of it, that's how you fall for these things. That's not what politics is supposedly about at all.

Apart from that you're run by massive, massive organizations, the tax-exempt foundations. Again, you have to go back into a lot of the origins of them, back into the 19th century as well and even before that. Even under Weishaupt by the way, in his day, he wasn't the first one to do it. He talked about how they would take over the nations by... the democ... well, a form of democracy, but really through think tanks he says, you know, and foundations, charitable foundations. Who's going to complain about charity? Oh, it's for this and this, and you'll believe it, oh that's nice. You have no idea what's really going on.

You see the massive funding they collect, and it's tax-free. These big foundations can invest across the world and still claim it's tax-free, when they bring in billions of dollars a year. Well, how can any democracy function when certain people have armies within your country all funded by these certain peoples, you know? All published, and you know it's all public too. You can't mention some of them because you're cut off immediately. It's forbidden, or verboten as Newt Gingrich said. He was cut off in the middle of a talk on Fox News because he mentioned a name which you can't mention. Even though it's all verified as factual, you know, you can look it up, and you can look up the society that he runs and dishes out all this money to these different groups. Some of them are classed as terrorist groups across the world, color revolutions and so on, the CIA, it's all one organization obviously running everything.

But the thing is, yeah, the big foundations really gave out a lot of information many, many years ago. I'd say as far back as Weishaupt and then later. I think even in the 19th century Gilbert and Sullivan in one of their operas there, comic operas had a song in it about the philanthropist, you know, a nosy busybody trying to get in and get money off everyone, and he knew everything about everybody too. It was almost like a little hint or a wink at blackmail if they didn't comply and donate cash to the causes that he planned.

So, this is an old idea. When you find the people that they set up as front people, and this is how it's really done, people are set up as fronts for companies and organizations. They might be real companies, massive companies that are set up, but you'll never get to the bottom of who really owns them. Even the CIA owns some huge, massive real corporations and so does obviously the groups behind London, the City of London as well, and behind MI6 and MI5.

Because that's the real system you're living under. It's a very private system. Owned by very old organizations. They bring in some new ones as they go along. Some of them change their names like a chameleon as they go along to throw the folk off. If they get a bad name on something, they can apparently close down, but they'll reemerge under a different name, you see. That's how it's really done.

They give you the front people, the self-made people. You know, the sudden whiz kids and things like that that you all believe all this guff that they give you to believe in to give legitimacy to the lie of who they really are. But they're well-paid. For the rest of their lives too they're worth taking care of and they'll be the fronts for one big organization generally. But they really are…

Just like Epstein, Epstein was a front man. You know, he was just, do you really believe he was just a horny guy, hm, with a lot of money? Do you really believe that absolute nonsense? And how quickly this died off? They didn't go into his handler above him too, very taboo, and arrangements had to be made with the CIA and governments to hush it all up, etc. That's what they do. They launch people and they make them stars in a certain field and they're really there for different purposes.

You'll find as I say that Facebook is an obvious one, and other ones before it too. And definitely, I can remember the head of Google many years ago talking about working with GCHQ in Britain for instance. Well of course, it's because they're an arm of it, really. Or they're a PART of the intelligence system, and the intelligence. And they're part of the massive economic system because lots of information came out years later, over the years actually, which was inevitable too with what they did to begin with. Which was, they're way ahead of investments. They get all the data of communications about investments, and they make sure, they can actually sway investments that way too, who's going to crash, who's going to rise, etc. It's just soo corrupt, you know.

But you're supposed to believe in it all, is aboveboard and your governments are aboveboard. But who can really believe that in this day and age? Hm? Does anybody really believe it? Hm? I mean, does anybody really think that even just the people actually run their, like an individual, like Boris Johnson runs the country? Do you really believe that? Or even Donald Trump running the US, you really believe that, one guy? Hhhch. The deep state isn't just the one, the swamp draining, it's above and below and to the side of them. That's how the things really are. Most of it's illusion, you know.

But the big foundations, I've mentioned it before, where at least the US did make an attempt in the 1950s, and actually earlier too but in the 1950s it think it was, they had Norman Dodd go around the foundations with like a commission, the Reese Commission to find out why these foundations in the US, the branches inside the US with the Ford, they got the Carnegie and Rockefeller, etc., why they were funding would seem to be the radical left that was wanting to tear America down. So here were the richest people at the top who began these foundations, again, from people like the Rockefeller family, you know, who meant again, to take over all resources. It's still on the go yet, the same organization. Not just them but it's a huge, the huge organization too which they were a part of, they're still on the go, take all the resources over and bring society into workable size for function and purpose. It hasn't stopped, it's still on the go today, just the same kind of thing.

So anyway, again, you can look up Norman Dodd and his interviews on, his surprise and shock when he talked to some of the heads of these philanthropic organizations. I think it was the Ford Foundation, that wasn't run by Ford at that time either, it was afterwards, and that's how quickly they had taken over, by the same group I think that ran maybe the Rockefeller foundation, by then. But anyway, the head, whoever it was, I might be wrong on the last part, but I know it was taken over eventually by a group that already ran other huge foundations. The head of the Ford one told him, he says, our purpose, or, part of our purpose, not the whole thing, right, was to change society and education so dramatically inside America and the West that they could eventually merge seamlessly and quietly, easily, the system of the Soviet Union with that of the American kind of free capitalist type society. And by that I don't mean the capitalists at the top that run the whole money system. I'm talking about the people, the middle classes, and who ran the economies and were the managers of economies and businesses and factories and all that.

So, merge it seamlessly. But primarily through changing education. Well, look at it today. If you haven't figured it out, it's still on the go. It wasn't banned because he mentioned it. And they didn't destroy the foundations, they continued as they had done before, but some of them were more honest in what they were up to. It was known then, it was so evident then they were funding what appeared to be communist organizations. Well, in the 1960s you had people, um, [Alan chuckles.], we'll say communist, but they were blowing up places across America, mainly in New York and Washington DC., you had the Weather Underground and different front names. Again, they're all names, aren't they? Again, now you've got one of the women who are now in charge, she's in charge of the money coming in, by again a person we can't mention, [Alan chuckles.] to fund BLM, which their own leader mentioned, says it's communist, or they're Marxist, trained, trained Marxists and so on.

So, nothing was done the previous time, as I've said. Norman Dodd talked about it. The old video is still out there if you want to look it up on YouTube or somewhere. It's worth going through and listening to. Because it's easy enough to speak about things of the past but at least you have some visual representation of the people involved, or even an audio, then it really adds credence to it, you see.

A lot of these things now that are disappearing rather, in fact in real time a lot of things are disappearing. You've probably been, those who are really into investigative work will notice that when you're on a certain, and a lot of the stuff you can't publish that you find. Really, it's not safe. It really isn't safe. In this day and age, and this world, it's not safe. Accidents happen all the time. The pros don't go into the streets to kill folk. The pros, the real pros make accidents happen all the time, or sudden illnesses.

I always remember James Goldsmith in Britain who was a robber baron, you know. He was one of the robber barons during that phase where they were plundering businesses by going in the back door and buying up shares in family businesses and then destroying the businesses from within by selling off lots of the assets, saying, stripping it and making it more efficient. But they sold off all the people and laid off or fired the guys who really helped keep it going, the older folk, you see, that kept it going, that knew all the ins and ropes and how things worked and so on. Most of them would fall flat after they were sold off again. But he was one of them, he was a corporate raider at the time. He belonged to some of the big clubs in London that you'd find aristocrats often would almost sell their whole fortune off, or give it away, [Alan chuckles.] in gambling debts and so on. He was part of these particular groups. A high roller.

But he did come out in talks and came out AGAINST the European Union. He tried to, he wrote a book too, a very good book on it. He tried to get folk to pull out long before Nigel Farage came along. He came over to the States and he explained in really good eloquent detail why they shouldn't go into this free-trade deal with America, the US and Canada, and the one they were setting up at the time with China. Because he says, it will strip you of all your work, there'll be no work for anybody left at home, which is true. And your economies will eventually plummet, you know, and that's exactly where we are with service economies, you see.

But it didn't matter. There was a video up there of him too in an audio where he talked to the U.S. Senate. It was awfully good, really well done. He put his case across very well. He didn't fabricate anything or go overboard with imagination. He stated the facts as they were at the time. And it's all come true. But anyway, after he did all that, he was diagnosed with a cancer, prostate cancer, and within a week of the diagnosis I think he was dead. Favorite technique to be used actually, that. Yeah, accidents happen all the time. You can't tell the people a lot of the things that you find out anymore.

I can remember back in the 90s where there were people in Australia, again organizations, private organizations, some of them were religions. And folk immediately switch, oh, that's terrible. Well, good for you, you know, good, turn a blind eye. Because in the business of knowledge you've got a look at everything. Everything. You'll find that the people who are really acutely aware of what was happening in the US and elsewhere were religious organizations. Because they had a reason to at least look and watch and dissect and try to put things together as to why things were happening.

Most of the public, and in most ages throughout the 20th century for instance, apart from the wars and so on, most of them really were fed nonsense by the television. Both in the news and entertainment, that's how they were just lullabied into sleep, into oblivion, and kept rather docile. But definitely kept ignorant of the big picture, there's no doubt about it. Even the better documentaries and the better investigations that were, like Mike Wallace talks where'd he ask direct questions, they gave you fake ones later on with the ones like Tom Brokaw and so on that came out later. Brokaw and other ones and 60 Minutes teams were watered down, almost like-a, like-a, I call it like-a Wallace interview, but not quite the same at all. So, you'd have the, immediately, we're the hard-nosed journalists, we're going to find out. But really, the topics they picked were really trivial when you look back at it today and where they were going with it. Rather than look at the big, big picture as the big organizations were altering culture purposely and so on, like the early Wallace ones were doing.

But in Australia there are religious organizations, some of them had been, had worked, some of the people had worked with intelligence communities, and they had tremendous information on even Pierre Trudeau of Canada [Alan chuckles.] and his background, it came out verified as well. Some of them too were journalists. One of them actually said that about the coming national ID system due to some national emergency which would arise. Now this was before 9/11, remember, before Covid. And before the whole idea of pushing a national ID for everybody, or international even. He said that some big buildings had been built across Australia in the big cities, on the outskirts generally, but they were actually owned by the post office. But you didn't go in there to post letters, and it wasn't a sorting office. These places were actually to do with information gathering about the individuals, and also, they would be used eventually, eventually for national IDs. Well it was supercomputer systems they were setting up at the time. Canada did the same thing with super Cray computers, huge buildings to cool these huge computers. Now I think Canada was buying about three or four, maybe up to five of them. One of them could run all of the Americas, the supercomputer, so it's never been explained why they needed all these ones. Australia was doing the same kind of thing.

The journalist in Australia, a well-known one said that, he says, I get the occasional envelope dropped off, brown paper envelope dropped off on my doorstep. So that's how things generally happen. Or generally used to happen. Today I think there's been more, more informers, because the ones who are watched the most are those who have the most to tell you, [Alan chuckles.] in governments or agencies and so on. That's why they're paid so much, that generally buys their silence. They're quite happy with that arrangement, rather than do the decent thing and tell the general public whom they pretend, pretend to serve.

You don't live in a nice, wonderful system. You live in a system purposely designed to keep you ignorant, to keep you fearful now, of course, that's part of it too. When you're fearful you can't think straight, you can't make logical decisions. You'll panic in the panic stage. And the overkill and the overdrive, psychic driving repetition every day in the news with Fauci and the rest of them, has been really, these characters should all be up on charges as crimes against humanity.

Those who crashed economies planned it in advance obviously. This is a fact, they planned it all in advance. Well, do you think they didn't know what would happen if you close down all industry and all economy? Well, eventually you have, who benefits here? Well, the ones who control it all benefit. The World Bank benefits. Hm? Where do you think all the supposed money is coming from? It's all fake. It's all run by a gang of crooks, who they just make it up and put it into computer so many, whatever number they want. Who's checking them? Nobody's checking them.

And your government is quite, well thank goodness, we're getting another so many billion this week off so-and-so. We have to pay it back, mind you, off taxes. Well, you're bought and paid for. You're slaves, folks. This is part of it. You're not going to get out of this. And they can keep this money racket going again forever. You haven't paid off the debt yet, you're still paying off the debt I think in some countries for World War I and II, they haven't been quite finished. How can you…? You see, with compound interest you can't ever pay it, that's why it's designed that way. Hm? And as you're paying off all these debts, they give you another crisis, then you borrow again, then that's added to the debt and added and added, never ending debt.

So yeah, the characters who planned all this, and who are still in the planning phase of it all because it's not, it's developing all the time. Oh, they're catching on to this, but how can we...? Oh, step up the testing and say there's thousands and millions of new cases across the planet. Well, the testing's so bogus you're going to find, you've already found it with the president of, was it, Tanzania in Africa [John Magufuli]. He tested all kinds, including fruit, and that all came back positive. Hm. By the World Health Organization lab that did the testing in his country. He kicked them all out, thank goodness.

But crimes against humanity. Planned. For something really, where the characters, where the perpetrators, their names come up, and the vaccine companies involved with them, their names come up with all their planned projections. Oh, if a disease broke out, Event 201 and even Lockstep back in 2010 with the Rockefeller foundation. Y'know, they've following the exact scripts of their supposed tests, step-by-step. And then you have the World Economic Forum, to which these giants all belong to, hm, talking about the global reset of the whole new way of living, or existing, and bringing in all the sustainability agendas that they couldn't get the public to accept through the climate change agreements. Well, here it all is.

There's nothing to guess at here. There's nothing to guess at. You'll find at the top of the medical industry, the vaccine industry, the pharma industry, with those who coordinate with governmental authorities, you always find what? EUGENICS. Eugenics is an old, old field of not just improvement of certain species, or types, you know in selected groups. But it's also to do with the eradication of other groups, folks. Well, how do you eradicate other groups? Hm? How do you do it? Well, you help them. You help them is what you do. We're here to help you. Again, these foundations and charitable organizations.

I won't even go into all the lawsuits against the foundations of Bill Gates and the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation with all their vaccines and strains of polio that's been created by them and spread, with their help, when they're helping people. It's all up there, I might put some more links up. Again. I get fed up doing it. Lots of other groups have put up their links as well. It's overwhelming evidence. Never mind the facts that he's already said on camera, hm, that oh maybe 700,000 people across the world will die of the side effects of a vaccine… but that was okay with him.

...this strange character, you know, who doesn't even, he doesn't even have a first aid certificate this guy, hm? He’s just a front rich man, a front man. He belongs to the big, the nickname is the Lucky Gene Club where they talked about, they need to bring down the population across the world. It has a different name now of course, optimum population group and so on and yada, yada, ya, whatever they call it today. I did talks on it years ago when they had a meeting, they had meetings about it. Oprah Winfrey was a member too and other ones as well. They discussed the problems across the world, oh, there's just too many...

This is an old idea. You've got to understand, people don't, these characters don't think like you. Yyyyou turn your head and say, oh, nobody would do what they, that… or whatever, I wouldn't do that, so they wouldn't do that. That's how you think. That's how you think, eh? That's how they CAN do these things, and they actually DO these things, [Alan chuckles.] because you refuse to believe it even when it's happening at times.

Look at the latest tests that have come out there, I think it was in the States, and elsewhere too by the way, where folk are getting so-called volunteers, they're paid, mind you, are getting paralyzed, volunteers testing the vaccines out and they're getting paralyzed, rushed off to the hospital here. And they want to put this in you? For something that most folk don't even get a cough with. Hm?

As I say, the same characters who are pushing it all, the Fauci's, are up to their eyeballs in conflicts of interest. Not just with the companies that he advocates should get the antivirals and all the rest of it too, and vaccine makers. He's also up to his eyeballs in verifiable data with supplying coronavirus from the States to the Wuhan laboratory where they did the further gain of function, made it more, you know, deadly. Altered it so you could make it more deadly, just to see what would happen if it ever went through a whole bunch of sequences on its own and did it by itself. This is the excuse they give.

This is biowarfare!

Biowarfare labs are the same biolabs that are there to help you, if you haven't figured it out, that's how they got around the treaties in biowarfare. Oh, we're here, okay, we're actually here now just to help people, you know. It's fascinating to live through it and watch it happening. But yeah, the data's out there of who sent it, who okayed it to be sent from the US, the coronavirus, where they had it at I think a university in North Carolina. The reason it was getting sent over there too was because if they did gain of function to this particular virus in America, and it somehow escaped, it could cause havoc. So, they sent it off to the Wuhan laboratory and supposedly it was continued there, the same kind of thing. And Fauci's got his name all over the thing. Then he gave them the money too, he okayed the money, so many millions of dollars over for Wuhan to continue the research.

I mean, you can't make this stuff up. You're looking at arch villains. I mean, this is the stuff you would get in the movies, wouldn't it be, about arch villains and arch criminals. And in fiction. [Alan chuckles.] But it's here in real life. That's what you'd better understand, most horror on a grand scale is in real life. Absolutely. There are batteries and batteries of propagandist, professional propagandist that can turn the worst disasters or the most searing crime information against anybody into lukewarm, pleasant, a pleasant summer's day, you know, once they get finished whitewashing everything. That's how the world works.

The people really do think, yeah, the leaders are running your countries. They really believe that. Mainly in America actually. The US is a bit unique in that respect. They've got this, they used to have the whole, the real patriotic fervor for their nation. Every child used to have the hand over the heart and sing, you know, the anthem. And they believed in it then. And the country was far better on all scale levels of class systems, put it that way, the working class too, far better than the rest of the world at the time. Yeah, it wasn't perfect by any means, but it certainly had incomes for the people, you know, if you wanted it.

For a time. Then I got involved in, it was taken over really, but they got involved in the very thing that they weren't supposed to, foreign wars. They were supposed to beware and not get involved in entanglements in foreign wars. Entanglements through treaties, you see. The very thing that Britain kept for all of World War I and World War II, the games to do with treaties. Well, we'll make a treaty with so-and-so, so when so-and-so attacks them, then we have to go to their aid. Before you know it, you've got these massive never-ending wars on the go. The balance of power structure.

How the balance of power structure worked with the City of London, that ran Britain and the UK and the British Empire, that's where all decisions were made. Not just for financial gain but by those who owned the financial systems, that's what they were about. They had incredible knowledge of history and the balance of power. What they meant by it, you look at an area where there's things that you want for the company, or the guys who own the corporations, and for resources and so on. So, it's just strategy as well but it's also, it's not just, they use geopolitics but what they'll do is...

They'll look at, to get the smaller countries that are near a big dominant country, and if you want to say, well a dominant country can afford a big Navy, if not now then eventually, and he might interfere with our plans for ongoing conquests and of acquisitions of natural resources and properties and diamonds and gold and everything else, you know. So, what you do is, you then start funding the small nations around them and say, well they're victimized by the big one, you see. You get them eventually to have their skirmishes, then you finance them more, with little caveats on all the money you're giving them, eh. Then you arm them, and you get wars going. You may go to their assistance if they can't manage it themselves. But if they can manage it regardless, they've knocked down the big one, you see, so now that potential future enemy is gone before it starts. Then you can get into all the land that he was going to control, or did already, even his own land.

Also, but then you've got the two little, let's say the two little countries that you'd propped up to fight the biggie. So, what you do then, you take the smaller one of the two and you finance them. You go, oh, the human rights is awful in the bigger one in there, terrible, terrible and the propaganda is churned out again. Before you know it, you're funding the small one to fight the big one. That's how you do it. This goes on and on forever, like centuries at times. Perpetual conquests. And you always do it, oh, look at what they do in that country with their laws and so on, that's terrible, terrible, we don't do that anymore. So, you go, it's okay to go over there and kill them all, eh, [Alan chuckles.] okay, because they… And people fall for this basic simplistic propaganda, you know. It's just astonishing.

When the PNAC group were running the US openly under the Bush Junior administration after 9/11, before and after, the propaganda they churned out was just astonishingly simple for really, they had different levels but mainly aimed at the general population. And it was rather sad to be aimed at the general population. I can remember the head of one of the education departments in the States and who was in politics at the time in the States said years ago that the average reading capability of the average American at the time was something like a grade 5 or 6 level. SO, all news had to be written to get to that level of education. No higher. No superfluous detail in it or anything, or intricacy of detail because the people would switch off, they couldn't comprehend it. That's what they said. I read the articles years ago on a radio show live at the time.

Nothing has changed. The propaganda is the same. So, when they wanted to go into Iraq, that had nothing to do with 9/11 by the way. Again, that didn't matter either at the time because it was on the list before 9/11 even happen, the famous PNAC list. But anyway, some of the propaganda that came out at the time, they make the women wear burqas. So that's ok, that's a reason to go and kill people? like about a million people because...? D'you understand, they're trying to cater to every radicalized group, in your own country, that are hypersensitive to anything, or their hyper sensitized group, to get them on board with it too. So, aim at radicalized feminism, radical groups… well, yeah, let's go and kill them, they make their wives... so let's kill them ALL, that will solve it. Isn't that a good solution, hm, let's kill them all. [Alan laughing.] Well unfortunately cluster bombs aren't really particular in who they're killing, men, women or children, burqas or not.

But facts don't matter when it comes to basic propaganda. And it is basic. It's never truthful about the real reasons for anything. That's the sad tragedy of it all too. You could go on forever with this kind of stuff if you've read enough history, even if you've lived enough history yourself to validate it. Because most of real history that you get you validate by you're alive at the time and if you were cognizant of what was going on, then, you know, eventually the picture will force itself upon you, whether you like it or not it's going to show you what happened because your memory contains it all. That's real history, not the authorized versions that are prewritten before the events happen.

It's like World War II, Britain lived for a while on pure nostalgia of propaganda about World War II. World War II was the final nail in the coffin, it just sped up the death of Britain faster because of the money they owed from World War I. But the guff that they churned out and the old movies they churned out, like postwar propaganda, they had some during the war. Not so many as the Americans did. But after the war too they had The Guns of Navarone and things like that. It's like living on some, on the glory times, that really wasn't glory at all, was it, for most folk? They were living through the death knell of their nations really.

Again, someone had sent me, it was a great disc on British propaganda from the ministries, meaning the different departments of the government of Britain to do with rationing and how to divvy up your ration cards and how to use them wisely. You know, it's like Covid all over again only it's to do with food. You'll get it down the road eventually because they will bring in rationing. They want to bring in rationing, and no doubt they will. They showed you the women going into the stores, in the butcher shops and getting their little slice of this, like a slice of corned beef, that was their week's ration or something. One person and you get so much, or so many eggs per week and that was it for protein. Protein was hard to get of any kind at all, because of the wars they said. And how they trained the public that there's no options, to make them all pull together.

Really, all kinds of illnesses you hadn't seen since the 19th century and 18th century, all broke out again because the health started going down the tubes. They kept it so quiet from the general population. It wasn't just rickets, but they had rickets in children. You would see the bowed legs even into the 50s, etc. of children who had lacked the proper calcium and vitamin D and so on. You also had all kinds of other illnesses that broke out with the lack of proper nourishment, food and vitamins and minerals. That was part of the price they paid for it. The elite never had a problem like that at all during it all because they had their own suppliers of the black market that could supply anything that they needed, so there was no shortage for them.

Even as I say the propaganda they were living on after World War II, right up into the 60s and 70s at times, is rather sad. And it's so true, when any nation resurrects a past and puts the nostalgic touch to it, there's different reasons for it. Part of it, part of the reason the public like it is because generally the time you're living in now is even worse. Or you could lack more moral values today so it's not so, you don't feel quite so safe in your own neighborhoods and so on, even in the UK, things like that. But a nostalgia for a time that had the impression of everything being secure, even if it wasn't really, you know.

It's the same with wars. When you look back on it and say, we did that back then. No, Britain was, you know, Britain... [Alan chuckles.] The war did not start the way it was said to start in the authorized versions that came out. We know that now. A lot of it is admitted to. Because you can't keep it all dead quiet. But I mean, Britain was the first to bomb Germany to get retaliatory air raids going, for those who don't know it. It's astonishing what the folk really don't know.

And it's hard for people, when you're brought up with the propaganda and you know all your relatives have been involved in something like that, and maybe your uncles or even your parents at times, even the ones that weren't old enough to fight, you'd hear their stories of rationing and how they all pulled together for the common good and all that. All that kind of stuff that you're hearing about the Covid, standard, we're-all-in-it-together stuff. It's sad when information starts to come out to realize that, no, you'd all been let down. You'd all been let down and used for other purposes. They had, literally, they had the embryo, the embryonic agreement set up before World War II, and during World War II they were working on it, for a post-World War II European Union. Meanwhile they're telling the people to go off and fight Nazism, in order to save your culture and your way of life. Which was decimated after World War II. You're used and used and used.

It's an awful thing for people, and they have a breakdown. It's like a death of someone, you have a breakdown. You go into utter despair initially. Then anger when it starts to dawn on you, when someone has died, you know, why did you leave me now, for goodness sake, you know, that kind of thing. You go through all these different phases. It's the same thing, you'll go through a death of a sort when you realize that there's no such thing as democracy, and the things you stood up for, or even fought and maybe other people died for, were wrong, you know, you were used.

And I've got to say this, there are many examples of the psychopaths giving you, because psychopaths can be awfully honest at times. Because they're by nature arrogant, you see. Sometimes they like to even boast about what they've done, and how clever they were in doing it. But you'll find that Kissinger did say- and the quotes are there, you know- that the military, people in the military are dumb, these are his words by the way, dumb stupid animals who are used for foreign policy. He despised them. I remember Bill Clinton said something similar, and there were articles in the papers how Clinton despise the military too. They all despise them because, they despise folk who fall for such simplistic propaganda, made up propaganda, that's part of it, I think. They despise people who go into these things because they feel patriotic, they despise them for their gullibility and naïveté. Sometimes they show it. They'll use them. But it doesn't stop at the military. These characters affect the nations, and that's how they see all of YOU, as well, ALL of you.

That's why George Bush Junior in an interview after he was out of office for a few years stated, he was talking about getting America into, the US into wars, huge wars. Which they did want, and we know that from the PNAC group, that he was part of the PNAC group too before he got in, they had a list of countries they wanted to take out. We know now why, but you're not even meant, supposed to talk about it. But Bush said that, if the public... I remember, he was saying to the interviewer, I remember saying to so and so, if they ever find out what we've done, meaning all of the nonsense to get the country into war, he says if the public ever find out what we've done they'll chase us down the streets with ropes in their hands. And he laughed about it. But it was an admission [Alan chuckles.] too to an extent of what they had done getting America into these wars, preplanned wars, eh. So yeah, they like to boast as well.

It doesn't change it, psychopaths are preselected. Psychopaths can be awfully good at times in what they do, if they're into the sciences or the biowarfare labs, that type of thing. They can be awfully good at what they do. Because generally, being a psychopath, they don't have the little thoughts that cross your mind, little, little... They say that they love sex above any other group because they have no inhibitions, no guilt complexes. They don't, they can have anything interfere with their ego, and guilt is something that will not, and anxiety is something that they will not tolerate, they won't have. They don't have it. It would crush them, destroy them if they felt anything like guilt or anxiety. They’re very cool calm characters.

You'll find them up in the echelons of power, and as I say, the biowarfare labs where they can go to work every day and... Like the actual, there was a good article, I don't know if it was the Telegraph that put it out, I've mentioned it before. I've got it somewhere, and a real, from the real newspaper. [Alan chuckles.] It was an interview that got into, a journalist got into Porton Down, I've mentioned before, in England. Porton Down, that's a big biowarfare, part of its job is biowarfare and a lot of other research too. It's almost like a DARPA type facility. They create bioweaponry there.

They also worked on radar there during World War II and guess who was put in charge of it at one point? It was Victor Rothschild, believe it or not. It's been disclosed since then that he gave all the stuff for radar and other things, other very important things to the Soviet Russia, and Israel eventually as well after the war because he was still in charge of the intelligence services. Literally he was, they put him in charge. [Alan chuckles.] The main suspect was put in charge of the five-tiered layered system of combined intelligence agencies for Britain. Another story.

Getting back to Porton Down, they have a Biolab there. This journalist got into listen and talk to the scientists. He joined them at their early coffee before they started work where they were casually talking about, you know, doing their gardening in the morning, you know, things like that and tending the roses, etc., things that you would say, these are nice people, maybe even kissing their wives goodbye or their children. Then they'd talk about what they were working on. Not in great detail, declassified material. But how they were working, oh yeah, one of them says, yeah, we've got all these ethnic specific viruses. This is back in what was the 80s maybe, maybe the 1980s. He said, yeah, we've got viruses so well designed they can rampage through a country. You can program for any age group by the way, you know, to specifically attack any particular age group. But he also said they can rampage themselves through a country in a week or two weeks and then just die off quickly. They're preprogrammed in a SENSE; they multiply so many times. It’s just astonishing what they've done with them all.

But is it really astonishing when you see the countless money, unlimited money that these organizations, these, these defense agencies get, hm? But they talk calmly about it, as though they were talking about making the best way to package margarine. That's how casually it was, there was nothing… You wouldn't, the shock comes when you realize you're meeting people, who are intelligent people, talking about the death industry. That there's no other reason for it. It's a massive death industry of silent weaponry, you know. Every country's got their own labs and this kind of thing, you know. Then you tie that in with the fact that you're shocked because you thought they were just normal decent, you know, people, that you might not even mind as neighbors until you realize what they did. They didn't go home at night and sit and fret and worry or have nightmares. That's psychopaths. Psychopaths handle this very well.

That's the same characters they surround prime ministers and presidents with. And above them there's higher levels that are there professionally. D'you really think someone could be appointed, say, in Britain as an example, as a minister, meaning a politician appointed to be the head of the health industry for a term or whatever, and then moved halfway through it as they juggle the musical chairs and put them in charge of unemployment, money or whatever it happens to be or somewhere. They know nothing, these politicians. They're not experts in any of these fields. There's a permanent staff there and civil-service, and civil service also has private partnerships working in with them, and they’ve had that for as long as I can remember, long before you heard of public-private for roads and so on and big service industries as they like to call themselves. But yeah, they have private ones.

They got private ones in for the NAFTA deal for Canada, who were pretty well put in charge of the departments in Ottawa, in the government, to deal with the whole negotiations, private characters like Simon Reisman. So, it goes against this whole idea, what's the whole point of voting when your governments are run by private individuals you don't even know exist, never mind organizations that you don't even know exist? What's the point in having politicians who are given a script to read, because they really don't understand what they’re being put in charge of? And you have to have the head of that department in civil service always run up to them with, this is what you'll say today for this particular part of our future programs. Because they haven't got a clue. You wouldn't know either. But the civil-service staff certainly do, and that's what they're there for.

So why not just do away with the politicians and just have the heads of the civil-service departments come out and dictate to us rather than these pathetic politicians? It's to keep the illusion going [Alan chuckles.] that you've got a say in something, [Alan chuckles.] a badly frayed and tattered idea.

So, when superpowers end up on the wane then they begin to romanticize the past. And since it's kind of, you can't really relate to the old battles in the Middle Ages with knights in shining armor, they tend to go to the last big battles, big wars. With Britain of course it was World War II, was the big one. After that they had the Korean War and so on, but you can't, it doesn't ring with most folk, the Korean War. So, they romanticize when they're on the wane as I say, World War II. They turned even Dunkirk into a kind of, like it was some kind of success story, like a great win. But it wasn't a win at all. It was a symbol of the disaster that was facing Britain, not just during the war but afterwards as well.

I remember pondering all of that too, how it happened, and I dug into the causes of World War I, the causes that were given basically, then try to find the real causes behind it. Then you find out again the authorized versions are so bogus. But what was very true was the incredible debt that Britain took on from American banks during World War II. That's why the US kept out of it, until the last year. Even then they were pressured to go in by Warburg because they were, the investors were afraid they might lose their investments, you see, [Alan chuckles.] so they got America to go in at the end, and pay for it too, naturally, and help them to win. They also financed, as I've said before, they financed the communists. The big bankers in America financed the Communists and sent money over with Trotsky and others as well, whom they trained radical armies of the Bolsheviks in the US, that all came out years later too.

I remember reading too about and watching an old documentary, it was an old movie reel actually of the League of Nations after World War I. I kept wondering, how did Britain get to be so broke when World War II broke out? They didn't even have enough rifles for the troops, for the new conscripts and so on. What happens to that all? I mean, massive stocks of the same rifles that they'd used for a long time, the pattern 303, Enfield, you know. What happened to them? you know, what happened, it was so short? Then I saw this documentary, an old movie reel on Britain doing its bid for the League of Nations, the precursor of the United Nations, between the wars, you see. You see these ships at sea and barges were towing out to sea, and they were dumping thousands and thousands and thousands [Alan chuckles.] of rifles into the ocean, under the disarmament treaties, and billions of rounds of ammunition, and shells and goodness knows what else, to prove that they were going to, that they were de… all right up until World War II started. Can you believe it? Who's behind this? Who is, who's behind this? This is all planned, folks. Who benefits? Well, who supplies the money in order to buy the darn things? …the debt in other words that you take on? …and who also has got the factories that churns out the munitions and…? It's great business for them. You know?

Literally when they had their Home Guard units assembled, to defend Britain in case it did get invaded, like they had in the Dad's Army comedy series, but they did have a real Dad's Army in a sense, real defense volunteer corps. They had to literally, you'll see them practicing with broomsticks and anything they can get their hands on, kitchen knives and things because they didn't have the armaments, because they dumped so much in the sea. You couldn't be so stupid as to do that, unless it was planned that way for a bigger, they knew that they were going to have another war obviously. They didn't think that suddenly humankind had become so nice to each other, that's not the history of the world.

But there you go; this is the kind of nonsense they do. So at the end of it of course when folk get stranded over there, driven off to the beaches and need to get picked up by boats, the victory truly was that folk, ordinary folk, and middle-class too that had the boats at the time, took everything they had across to try to get troops across. Of course, the ships did their bit as well. But really, it was a disaster, the whole darn thing was a disaster. And badly planned. Badly organized. Massively underequipped. But they still make it, like, a victory out of it. Really? Hm, a victory.

You've got to look at reality at times. It's like the Dieppe Raid you know, Dieppe, it was a big, big catastrophe mainly for Canada. A raid on the coast of France, almost like a fishing expedition to see how well the defenses would be with the Germans on the coast of France, and they pick Canada. It was Winston Churchill, he gave the task to someone who wanted to be in on the war, and that was Earl Mountbatten, Lord Mountbatten who literally was a... ohhhhhh. It was beyond a catastrophe. It was murder! All the reports came in through reconnaissance, the place was so well fortified, that they got wind of what was going to happen so the Germans had fortified the defenses. Even though all this came out and they said, oh, we'd better call it off, it's not going to, we're going to... They sent it ahead anyway and they got slaughtered. Terrible. These are your geniuses that run you, you know? No.

What I'm getting at is, there's always bigger plans in the characters who play with, who play with toy soldiers the same way as well like Mountbatten did and so did Churchill [Alan chuckles.] by the way. They had these big battlefield sets for their homes, the big mansions they lived in, and that's what they played with. So really it wasn't that different from putting real bodies in there, they had the same indifference I really think, being psychopathic those types. That's my opinion.

Regardless, you'll see the setups to the wars, and during the war too you have Winston Churchill giving talks about, it's good to help get a united Europe, our dream. Whose dream? Who is our? Who are we? Who's he talking about, hm? When they make these references, you've got to understand, they're not referring to what you think it is, like somehow, it's you, it's someone in Britain, your idea and you're all collectively part of it. No, they have a different agenda.

It's like Spike Milligan was a comedian who some folk thought was funny, and some didn't. In reality he did have mental illness. He did perhaps have a bit of manic depression, definitely a depressive phase came across. But he could be funny at times too. He had a breakdown I think during World War II in the artillery. He did mention that he first felt it coming on when he hit one of the beaches. He says, when they opened up their heavy artillery, he was in artillery himself. He says, when they opened up their artillery, he says, all you can do is lie there and bite into the ground and just hope you don't get blown to pieces. Then your mind thinks how, how indifferent this whole thing is, it's not personal, it's completely indifferent who gets slaughtered. Hm.

Because as I say, I've said so many times, we all live in little bubbles and you can’t imagine your little bubble just getting wiped out by some... some bigger influence, hhhch, than yourself, eh. And when you're young especially. But he also said, he came out with a good quip, and he said, again, that we thing, when suddenly you’re collectively a we, he says I remember when Chamberlain came back on, he says well, and he gave his speech on the radio that, we are now at war with Germany. He says, I like the we part, he said, I wasn't consulted. That's how it's done, isn't it? Hhhch, of course you're not consulted. You pay for it all in one way or another. Maybe your life too.

Big agendas. Big global agendas. We know that the biggest internationalists for globalization for owning the world by the way, were based in England, in London hm, the big organizations that gave you and brought the British Empire into being. Private clubs basically, massive organizations but very private. That's the group of course that Quigley talked about for the British branch, their headquarters, and the secondary branch that came off for America, the CFR. That's how the world is run, it has never changed.

These big foundations and organizations don't just give up and say, well we've completed our task, that's it, over. They continue down through generations, eh. Generations. Any competition, this is something to look at too I've noticed, any competition to the big foundations, now, the big foundations as I say, just like communism with all its foundations eh that back it all, under different names of communism, Marxism, Trotskyism, blah blah blah, Society for blah blah blah, you've got all these different names that they have for the same huge umbrella organization. They're so well-funded that they have full-time employees, hundreds, sometimes thousands in some of them at the top, like a massive bureaucracy, who higher and they get trained and work their lives and retire with pensions, and by that time there's others taking over, just like any big, big business. But unlike business, some businesses can go under, these big foundations don't, you see. They've got unlimited investments at the same time, even though they're tax-free foundations, unlimited... They get taxed on nothing, you see. They can't lose. They can set up their goals with their manifestoes and have all the different things they want to achieve, and work for a century or two to achieve it all. And add to it as they accomplish the parts of the task and have new parts they want to accomplish or conquer too. So that's how it's done.

You have no say. This is what runs the world, not your governments. That's what runs the world, PRIVATE foundations that have thousands, THOUSANDS of nongovernmental organizations under them and armies of them, from the street fighters to color revolutions, to protest groups, to many organizations and civil rights groups that are fighting for things you haven't even thought of yet and probably never will. But they're really armies to destabilize, and alter, and destroy, and rebuild, by DESIGN, not by happenstance and evolution but by design by those in control. That's the important part of it.

The United Nations likes to refer to them, and so does the CFR, the Council on Foreign Relations, as state actors and nonstate actors, and you also have civic actors, you see, and NGOs. The NGO groups, as I say, there’s thousands of them, fully trained professionals most of them, the leaders are for sure, with incredible financing going towards them, all shaping opinions, cultural changes across the board in every country on the planet. And getting paid to do it and trained to do it and how to do it and so on.

But always pretending they're just a local group, you know, just for blah blah blah. Hhhch, until you're in a straitjacket and imprisonment system of organizations, that keep giving themselves more authority, like grafting themselves as a little charitable volunteer group on to your local councils, until you can't put a garden shed in without a sustainability and ecological survey. And paying for it all. And how you're going to drive, not drive, should you drive, or should you just get a bicycle, if you're 90 years old, etc. That's how it's done.

This is what runs the world, actors, state actors, nonstate actors, and Nongovernmental Organization Industry Complex. Because that's what it is, it's massive industry, isn't it? And because you don't vote them in, they can do what they want. And the governments pretend that they're, well, we have to listen to them, you know. Do you?! Do you? WHY do you have to listen to them, and you won't listen to some spontaneous group that goes with a petition about unlocking us all from Covid? How come you don't get any credence given to you, but any NGO with the proper titles of who backs them financially has got immediate access to governments?

You're living in a farce of authoritarianism, an absolute farce. And you don't get a single leader coming out with a uniform so you can hate them, you know, like the Goldstein of 1984 with your two minutes of hate every day. You know, you're given other ones to hate and other groups to hate, and fake ones as well to hate. They've fomented so much HATE absolutely in the States right now, it's astonishing to watch it happening.

The usual groups are coming out and saying, oh, it's really white groups are the biggest problem in America. They were saying that back in the 90s. The same groups. As America's burning. But they won't say that about the white folk leading the Black Lives Matter. Who are they really? Well we knew who they are. They are part of the NGO industry groups complex, the NGO industry complex, incredibly well-financed and trained at the top. They always blame a different target of it, because it's a target that might, that might, if they ever did stand up, they're most afraid of. So, keep them whimpering and scared and silent and get them guilt ridden with stuff they haven't done, and you've neutralized them. All psychological warfare tactics and using threat and fear at the same time.

Nothing happens by itself. Albert Pike said it when he was, don't forget again he was part of not just Freemasonry but part of the World Revolutionary Movement, if not the actual main one at the time, and trained Mazzini and he went out to take over from Pike. But the thing is, Pike said it so well. He said, how does something grow, hm, like something in the field, a tree? Can you just throw the seed there and it will grow? Well, you might with an awful lot of luck, hm. But really if you want to make something happen you plan it to happen. You prepare the ground. You get the weeds out. You churn the soil to get the air into it you see, that's what helps and so on. It helps the worms and insects and all the bacteria to flourish that's going to be necessary for the health and survival of that tree. SO, you do all that kind of stuff in advance. You might even add certain things to the soil to make it better, you see, like compost, things like that. Then you put the seed down at the right depth, you see, the better depth for survival, then you cover it and then you wait. Then you take care of it, the seedling coming up. It's all preparation. He said, we never ever, and here's something that's very relevant for today, start a premature revolution.

Because a revolution, you see, is just like all the preparation that goes in before you put the seed in the ground to plant for the tree to grow. That's what a revolution, a truly well-planned revolution, you prepare the ground. Well, what is the ground? It's the general society. The ground is the target group in revolution, target group, those who may oppose you. Well how do you stop them from opposing you? Take your time. Make sure that you run the school system, where you've taken it over long ago, which is true in America and elsewhere. That's what UNICEF was part of too, mind you, for this purpose.

The main worry you're going to have are the males in the populations. So, you introduce a different schooling system where you have group consensus in classrooms, knowing that most youngsters want to be accepted by the peer group. They don't want to be shunned. You can bring in a system whereby if they don't agree with the final... diagnosis, say, I call it diagnosing a symptom of whatever it happens to be, the topic is, you diagnose where they're going and want to take you, the conclusion of it all. It's like a diagnosis in a sense, and you won't go where the teacher with the toolkit techniques of psychology is taught to try to bring you all too. If one stands out and said, I don't agree with that, you know, I wouldn't do that in this circumstance. Well, then you get shunned. Oh, that's terrible, you mean you wouldn't want to do that, and so this certain group over in that country might feel bad or they might suffer because people like YOU made it so, you wouldn't... You see how you shame-shame-shame, you know, consequences and shame, things that have not even happened.

Also, so the guys, and it's generally guys with the leadership qualities and abilities that will speak out. They think things through, you know, a bit more clearly and say, wait a minute here, you know, if we all do this, we’ll all end up being wimps. That's exactly what the whole thing is about because they bring in afterwards the zero-tolerance, if you get struck at school don't fight back, it's a CRIME to fight back. And you wait, years of this indoctrination, and maybe 10 to 20 years later you start a real revolution inside the country, and most folk, that you call decent folk, right, the ones where their indoctrination has worked on them, won't stop a new group being riled up and raised, hm, raised differently to hate the group that's now adults. [Alan chuckles.] You've got to understand, these are really nice tactics for those into warfare games, etc. obviously. It works awfully well. It's not genius really. It's been done before down through time.

But yeah, you raise up a group, once you've neutered the previous generation, and whatever children grew up in 10, 15, 20 years you make sure that you've radicalized them to hate. Oh, they've destroyed the planet, they're terrible. All different kinds of things are added into it, and gender differences, things like that. And you stir the pot up. And you radicalized them through intensive indoctrination at school. The same schools that 20 years ago were teaching a generation, or 25 years ago a generation not to fight back and to be nice and agreeable and have group consensus. Now you've got this group, a different group who definitely still have the consensus, but it's a radicalized consensus to hate anybody who's not part of the authorized revolution. It's all been done in advance, you see, and you paid for it all through your tax money. Of course, you did.

This isn't, I'm not the only, the people at the top all know this because they're part of it all.

That's how it's done. That's why you're watching these farces in the cities of mobs being led, guided, financed, incredibly well-financed at the top. The people leading these revolutionary movements, they'll come out as millionaires some of them, the leaders. Some of the leaders on the streets I'm talking about, the ones who are really well trained and you see them bused from town to town, and city to city, and state to state a lot of them, eh. They're well trained for what they're doing. They get the danger pay of combat troops really. But they'll get more than that too for, because if they're good spokespeople they'll know how to keep their group in line and to radicalized them further, and to keep quiet what their real functions and their real goals and objectives are. You must… They're really good mercenaries, these characters. And with unlimited financing, like all, all these operations, a lot, most of the money goes into the pockets and isn't even accounted for. So, I really mean it, some of them know darn well they'll come out as millionaires. Some of them did that work over in the Middle East as mercenaries for your own governments.

So anyway, we're living through amazing times and amazing systems, and it works because the ground was prepared. General society was taught to feel bad about things, which they had nothing to do with. You shouldn't, I mean, you think about it too, don't, I won't even fall into the nonsense, and I understand it too well and I could give talks on it, no problem at all, about the critical theory, etc. and how the Marxists, that's all part of destabilizing through guilt complexes creating a new system of class, those who are, who have the benefits of being the most victimized are the higher classes...

This is their criteria now. If you were one of the perpetrators maybe 500 years ago, or maybe, maybe, maybe with any, with a possibility of an ancestor being involved somewhere, or even in the genetic line somewhere, then it's, um, you might be in the middle class, and if you're one of the designated enemy, then you're in the lower classes, absolutely, it's all YOUR fault that… All the world is your fault. It's incredible how they've worked on people like that, eh? Nothing to do with you. Anymore than what the Romans did in ancient times has anything to do with you either. You're only responsible for yourselves, now, not what anybody did in the past.

But you see, this is warfare strategy. This is what Marxism is, is warfare strategy used by the richest folk on the planet who run the whole system and they run all sides at the top. So, you can go through your whole life just shaking your head on data, oh, my goodness, do you know what they're doing now? Do you believe what Trump said today? Do you really believe what Hillary is advocating if Trump doesn't leave office? and dut-dut-dut... You'll get this your entire life, this stuff. It's a big play, a big stage... Like Shakespeare said it, you know, the whole world is a stage and we are but the players. There's more truth to that than you'd imagine. Absolutely. No doubt at all about it.

As I say, when folk are left to try and vote between the lesser of two evils, you're not given choice at all then really. Then when you vote the one in that's the lesser of the two evils, you wonder what country is he serving, what is he serving, you know? You have to wonder at times, eh. He's good at putting proposals across but all the proposals, you know, go nowhere. But it's good for publicity. Like he was going to put down Antifa as a terrorist group. I thought they already were a terrorist group. Any group that [Alan chuckles.] advocates the complete overthrow of your governmental system and your Constitution is automatically a terrorist group. What part of that don't you understand? [Alan laughing.]

Again, as I mentioned it before even recently again, I mentioned, how come Karl Marx was allowed to live in London? He was financed and put up there. He was even giving grants occasionally from different people in the bureaucracies and the elite families in Britain while he was doing his whole thing on the [Communist] Manifesto. Don't forget too, he was not a person that drafted that darn thing up. But he's the front man again for that particular project. His name wasn't even on the original books, you know, the [Communist] Manifesto.

It's quite something, isn't it. Everything is really something else. Again, when you start talking or thinking, things come to you, you know. I was thinking about Karl Marx and how he did, he did telegraph Abraham Lincoln, the records are in the US congressional records, they have it, that he congratulated Lincoln for, you know, sticking it out with the war and keeping America unified. Centralization of authority, a plank of the manifesto. You see?

But also, I think it was in his second or third version, Karl Marx, he wanted to bring in Darwin into his book and mentioned Darwin and put his name in print. The book is a tribute to Darwin, that's what he said. I'm talking about Charles Darwin. But in reality, it was to try and give legitimacy to what was to become, or they hoped, a science, a social science, you see, through this idea of what later became known as communism, a kind of social science, a sociological science if you like. The more names he got put in print, that backed his book, that gave a kind word to his book he put in print. Even modern books do the same thing. Oh, it's a wonderful book by so-and-so, says so-and-so of the, and they'll name a paper or whatever it happens to be or institution. Well that's what he wanted.

Darwin did agree with it and then he pulled out eventually thinking that it might tarnish his reputation to be in any way associated with the idea of revolution. But the whole idea of eugenics was part of the revolutionary movement, for those who haven't figured it out. The revolutionary movement uses all sides. It creates sides. It will use them all in unison at times. At other times it will seem to have them affecting each other to get the changes through. Again, the dialectic process.

You'll find that Darwin's ideas which were plagiarized a lot of them from Wallace, hm, who did the actual real legwork living in jungles and things and studying and sending it back to Darwin, to the Royal Society. Actually, to Darwin and the Royal Society, but the Royal Society had agreed to promote Darwin up there because Darwin had the right genes. I really mean that, you know, eugenics was on the go before Darwin came along. His family were completely intermarried through generations just with, just with the Wedgewood family, that was it. Fathers, grandfathers and Darwin himself, they were selectively picking appropriate inbreeding, they thought, you know. So, you can go and really run with this stuff, this is all verifiable. There's nothing fake about it.

But yeah, legitimacy was to be given. The nobility grabbed it and said, well we always said that, that the peasant class were different, you know. They had all kinds of theories before the 20th century. Oh, it was bad blood, it was this, that and the other, and yada ya. But this gave a scientific, but yeah, it's because the genes pass on the same stupidity to the inferior classes, you see. They'd had it on the go since the days of Thomas Malthus, the same ideas of too many of the wrong people breeding would overcome, you know, the planet would basically just collapse with the weight of it all I suppose. That was the idea as it was put across there, again, with charts and graphs just like the Covid thing, Malthus tried to prove there's just too many folk and what would happen in 100 years' time, 200 years' time and that kind of stuff and so on.

Ftt, it never ends. It's the same agenda with different covers, you see. Those in control of this world in control over people are always petrified of the general public. They always have been. Because their whole basis for legitimacy of ruling over you is with a kind of consent by the general public to do so. Fraudulent though it might be and fake, and today definitely. But in the old days you had to, well, somebody has to, we need a titular head of some kind to give legitimacy and credence to law, etc. That's how monarchy got a foothold a long time ago.

Today it's massive think tanks that work on behalf of governments, and institutions as they like to call themselves, institutions, that you don't vote for once again. And government that really doesn't know much, as they say, from the politicians, eh, they don't know much. They're little shark characters themselves, men and women, with big ambitions for themselves. They all know they'll become awfully rich with a career serving the public. You know, not from your pension obviously. But this magic money that comes to, you get the right investments. I remember the Congress in America a few years ago gave themselves the right to use insider information for their own personal investments. That used to be illegal before. [Alan chuckles.] In other words, you can make policies knowing who's going to benefit, then you can make investments in those corporations. It's so corrupt, openly corrupt, eh. Although it's not corrupt anymore because it's legal, for them. [Alan laughing.]

We're living through such an amazing display of what I call conology. You're conned and conned and conned. And you must participate in the con, that's why you vote. You vote out of desperation really, and to get the one you voted in the last time out because you're so disgusted with them, that's why you vote the new bunch in. Only to find out nothing much changes, you know, the same agendas continue. The same agreements are countersigned and strengthened, like it used to be called the NAFTA deal, North American Free Trade Agreement. Now it's the US, Canada, Mexico agreements, USMCA I think they call it now. The same agreement though, just a fancy title change because folk, it was just too easy to say NAFTA, so many of the public understood it by then and so you just change the name of it. Oh, that's gone, NAFTA's gone. But it's the same agreement. Of course, it is.

It's fixing trade. You as a small company are going to have a hard time exporting anything without permission by the boards that are set up, these star chambers through the WTO as well, World Trade Organization. Because you're not authorized. You might have paid all the licenses, but they won't give you one for export perhaps, you see, if you're going to cut in or perhaps even remotely compete with even a big corporation. Which is silly to start with, little old you and a big corporation? And so, you won't get the business.

It's like postage in Canada, maybe the States is the same, I'm sure British Commonwealth countries are all the same with the postage. You can, if you were posting a few books every week, maybe about even two or three, maybe even a month, [Alan chuckles.] you won't get the deals that the corporations can get. For either flyers or these little newspapers they'll print up before pages, you know, free flyers and things, you won't get the deals, that are incredible, incredible deals that they're given per copy if they do so many hundreds per week. Well, you can't even get two or three a week, you're not going to get that kind of, so you'll pay maybe 10 times more for the same postage, to the same places.

There's nothing in this system that's there for the ordinary person. Really. Nothing at all. Except the propaganda that's laid. A lot of propaganda goes into creating you, [Alan chuckles.] and the mind that you have and the opinions you have. That's how it really is. We don't like to look at it and see it that way.

I remember giving talks in the 90s, I says, this system, especially the financial system, is probably, this whole system relies, at the top of it all, the head of this big serpent is the financial system. Well, I'll say that on the earthly plane, put it that way, but it's the financial system. Everything underneath it runs on the trickle-down theory of loot getting dished out to different organizations and politicians and so on, all the way down, you see. That's how it really works. It's loot.

That's why Rothschild quite openly said it in his own books and so on, about Rothschild in biographies, and the different Rothschilds. He said it, he said that, put him in charge of a nation's money, currency, and I don't care who you put in as government, Prime Minister. Because obviously, you see it throughout your life and Britain was more open with the Chancellor of the H checker or the Prime Minister would go to see the big lenders about borrowing money. And with every loan comes conditions. These conditions aren't all financial. They'll be null and void unless you change policies here, there. That's where… look at your governments giving money out to all these Third World countries, that can never pay it back. But don't worry, you as the taxpayer are put down by your nations as the guarantors if they fail to pay it back or write it off. You see, that's how it works. But along with these ones like the IMF, or the World Bank I should say, across the world, comes conditions about gender equality, which ends up being, really, an attack on marriage. The destruction. Don't forget the planks of the Communist Manifesto. The riches folk on the planet financed it all. Still do. The richest people. And the big club at the top, BIG club, as George Carlin said, and you're not a member. George Carlin.

So anyway, that's how it really works. It's all money and finances and conditions to every loan. I was shocked, it was something that Hillary Clinton when she was in the State Department said to some countries, that from now on we won't be giving any money out to any country, and she laid out a list of stipulations. The Africans were SHOCKED, some of the African countries, you know, they says, our women will end up like prostitutes if they go along with this, some of the leaders in the country said, they couldn't believe it. It was the right to, a lot, some of these countries have natural, there are natural cultural taboos on decency. Because they don't have the welfare systems to take care of unwanted children, so marriage is promoted. It's just amazing. This is parts of Africa we're talking about. They used to lambaste Africa as being backwards. WE are the backward countries now. Because a war has been waged upon you for a long time and you don't even know it. Everything you went along with was for the greater good, right, and progress. Look around you. But yeah, Hillary Clinton had all these different regulations laid out for the loan. It was just astonishing. That's how it's all done, you see. That's how it's done with your nations as well. Bailouts and so on, all with, but here's the caveats, and you have to this, that and yut-dut-dut-dut-dut. Yep. That's how it's done. That's how it's done.

When Japan came to America to get loans before World War I and met Baruch and different characters there, the loans stipulated, and this was found after World War II by the Marines when they went into Japan proper into Tokyo, they found the old agreements. That initially the American bankers, we'll say, agreed to finance the improvement and the modernization of Japan's navy and military. They had the conditions laid out that Japan then must attack Russia. [Alan laughing.] This all came out in history, this is not a conspiracy theory here, you know. Yep. In fact, I think the agreement is on display in a museum now in the States. It caused a little bit of a stink at the time; it was hushed over. But the fact is, it did come out that was part of, that was the agreement. And there was a reason for that too by Baruch and the other ones that had financed it.

You think about it, people can lend money out to get other nations to go and attack other nations.

You’re seeing the same thing with the funding of riots on your streets today.

How can you pretend you've got something called democracy, when the richest folk on the planet can finance revolutions anywhere in the world rather quickly by sending around the world, which they've done by the way, leaders of these particular terrorist organizations? Don't forget that a terrorist organization, if they overthrow a nation, which can happen, because the tactics are classic that are being used in America right now. Quite fascinating to watch it. Because they are classic. The fact is that they are well organized, well run. The idea is to terrorize the average American citizenry, that will do nothing.

That's what was in Fight Club, the movie Fight Club, the comedy where they set a group up for revolution, and they even experiment on Joe public. Passersby would pass gardens and things or fences or gates, and the folk in the gardens would just suddenly soak them with hoses, or chase them, or throw things at them. And the hardest thing, they said in the comedy, was to get folk to physically fight back. Because folk are decent law-abiding, yada yada. What chance do you have against terrorists? You see?

So psychologically the effect of the TV massive pounding would give you the impression of the whole of America was burning. That's the perception management task, you see, and that's why the media is all on board with it, still calling them peaceful protests as you see the buildings all burning down and cars on fire. And mobs chasing cars on the streets and smashing their windows in, like it happened with that Prius in California the other day too. Etc. I mean, it's just never ending. But this is all with the collusion of a big powerful organization that runs all media, obviously.

The deep state isn't some, something stuck in a back alley somewhere. It IS your system [Alan laughing.] that runs... You've been oblivious to it all thinking it was all individually owned and private, etc. and private businesses. No. These corporations are part of the whole system of revolution. You fund most of their enterprises with public-private partnerships. For the greater good, they say.

Yeah, so I gave talks as I say back in the 90s about the system, how corrupt and broken it was and how they kept trying to keep it, and being kind of semi-successful, and I likened it to the Tower of Babel. I said there's so many Band-Aids on it... Because it has swayed in the wind for so many, you know, thousands of years that it's broken, cracked, and it's got all these Band-Aids on it from countless defaults and bank crashes. All planned of course to loot the general public over and over, and how you always get them at least, at least twice a century, you know, at least two big crashes as they declare bankruptcy and loot you all. Then you all have to bail them out with loans your government takes from the same characters that caused them. They're giving you nothing back really except numbers on a paper or on a computer. Then they're telling you that's legitimate. And your government agrees because they're all part of the con, and they’re well-financed themselves. Then they put you down to pay back all the money that was lost.

But really stolen. Money doesn't disappear like that. It was stolen. Big crashes. So, you see, the big Tower of Babel, there's towers above you all. There's countless, there's even many books come out after 9/11, after, well, 9/11, sure, and all the wars that you're still paying for today. But also, with the crash of 2008, all the books and how the biggies all knew it was coming, they had moved all their own cash into secure places, etc., etc. And how they actually accelerated and helped it all to happen. And how the governments and the overseers of these big institutions that work for government, how they turned a blind eye right to the bitter end about the banks that were buying by the thousands per day mortgages, they were flipping mortgages like commodities until after the crash they're still trying to figure out who eventually actually owns a lot of these properties.

Utter corruption and collusion. Nobody was jailed for it. You had tent cities of folk who had all lost their homes. Generally, the poor folk that fell for all these, oh, no money necessary, this is government who backed these things up for you and yada, yada, ya. Poor souls. I mean, horror stories came out of it. Again, quickly forgotten again, eh, or hushed or quieted down. They planned it from then on, you know. They said that 2008 was only the FIRST wave of this massive collapse. Well, who said that? All the biggies at the CFR, you know, this quiet advisory government that you have. They are the advisors to government, we advise them on what to do, or else. The second one was still to go. Well, here you are with the second one. They've compounded it with a Covid idea. That's a good one, isn't it? We had more folk dying two years before with flu, but the world wasn't shut down with that.

That doesn't matter. This is a necessary thing for the big agenda, obviously. OBVIOUSLY. Since they're turning on the public with military precision, and military angst. Military angst is important. If you see, when the military has to go into and force an enemy to the death and face them to the death, you'll see the guys expressions. They call it RESOLUTE, you know, and with those who lead them. Because they're all on board with it and you've got to be resolute if you're facing an enemy, right. But you’re seeing the same thing turned on the public right now with absolutely glaring authoritarianism of resolution. They've all sworn to each other and the big organization that they all belong to, the real boss, not the public, to go through with this to the bitter end. To change the economy, and the system, and the culture, and what's left of the culture, and the whole system, way of living, from birth to death. Permanently. Using Covid.

Some of these things I might touch on tonight, but I don't want to overwhelm folk when there's too many details. They can look it up themselves. I can give you a lot of the links and so on. But it's overwhelmingly evident what's going on. There's nothing left to the imagination. It's your own unwillingness to believe it, that's what it is. They’re following it to the end, that letter to the end, this whole idea of a complete lockdown across the world. If they can get away with it. And using terror again. And bogus tests. You know, these PCR tests. These tests are so bogus, they're a joke! And so many of the doctors have come out and said the same thing. Lab workers have come out and said the same thing. But facts don't matter. It's a huge agenda.

Because before they gave you the idea of Covid, maybe even gave you Covid [Alan chuckles.] because it did come out of the lab supposedly, eh. It didn't develop by itself, not with the four inserts that it's got in it. Then obviously the darn thing was planned to begin with, before it got loose. Even the basis for the vaccine, this new type of vaccine, the basis for it was there, like a model, base model that they could adapt and add on to according to particular types of viruses, coronaviruses all set up and ready to go. Has been for a few years.

Then what happens to you? Well they don't know yet, they claim. They don't know yet. They just hope, cross fingers you know. We've already had folk paralyzed now within the test subjects, little inconveniences like that, you see. But they want to ram it through into your system regardless, eh? Well, I go back to Cuomo, Cuomo, the one-man disaster from New York City who like others, some other places, I think Scotland as well did the same thing, mandated that the infected should be put into old folks homes too, which were uninfected until they put in the infected patients. We saw what happened there and they've got the numbers skyrocketing of course. Both socialist of course, you know, ultra-socialist.

It gave credence again as the numbers went up and up and up of infected people and then deaths. But don't forget with the tests they're using, the swab tests, for the particles, that it shows particles of DEAD viruses. You don't even need to have or have had the darn thing to have the multiple particles in your nostrils or your sinuses or in your throat. They're all over the place around you and that's what it's picking up you know, dead particles. It's such an incredible scam. I remember years ago reading articles... I won't even go in there, it's just too in depth, because in any of these areas you can talk forever about it.

Hhhhhh, but yeah, it's a scam and it's planned that way. The World Economic Forum has come out, again, I'll put up the article once again, and said the same thing as the Club of Rome have said openly too, how they can achieve their whole agenda for sustainability by using Covid, and who can open up businesses and who cannot, if it's environmentally friendly or not, according to panels, secretive panels and star chambers, etc. Because there's no real legal system set up that you can go and protest against anything here. There's nothing. In your pretended democracies. [Alan chuckles.]

Now, once again folks I remind you to go into my website cuttingthroughthematrix.com. List all the sites I have there. Take the links and paste them somewhere securely so you can get them. Because if the .com site goes down again – which I might get attacked again, there's no doubt about it, or at least the ones, the servers I'm using to host that is, you know – then you can get the other sites hopefully. Again, when you're there remember you can buy the books and discs, or just straight donations you can send to me, by personal check or send cash, cash is fine, or Money Gram or PayPal and any other ways you can find to do it, just send it to me. Because I've got to tick along here too, and it costs a lot of money to do all these different things. Especially when I'm not selling anything else. I'm not selling you ideas of who to vote for.

Or I'm not selling you pure optimism either. I never came out initially to give you just optimism. The optimism is an understanding. It's its own optimism. Understanding the why's and wherefores' that will make it less fearful when you really understand why things are happening. You'll also see what's going to happen along the way and prepare perhaps for it. Mental preparedness stops a lot of anxiety. Never mind physical preparedness, but mental for sure. You don't fall for the next terror attack of psychological warfare put out by professionals. Meaning your own governmental agencies, the ones that run your government, or the CIA or MI6 or Mossad, and all the other organizations that all collude together.

And they DO collude together, they always did. Some of the top agents in Britain would meet in pubs in London, in MI5 and MI6, especially MI6, they'd meet their counterparts across in different countries, you know, they'd meet them all. They'd meet the Russian spies, agents, and they'd meet in bars, favorite places across capitals across the world. They'd all meet at different times and bump into each other. They would get pally, you know, and they would exchange a little, a little bit of superficial information to pass back to their... Oh, you wouldn't guess what I found out about what Russia's up to now, what they're up to... And, you know. Things like that, little trivia. But a lot of them get to know their counterparts because they're in the same business of collecting and supplying information to their masters.

Eventually they could see through, they'd often say in their memoirs that, and if you met any of them personally, they had no personal axes to grind. They weren't, it's not like the movie type thing where they did everything for patriotic duty. They did a bit of excitement. They got paid for it. They got a lot of good travel. They got investment tips like you wouldn't believe because so much of what they were trying to find out in different nations was investment money and where the future trends are going in big businesses, for their masters back home. A lot of it was like that. Most of them didn't do what they did for ideological purposes. Certain ones were sent into nations as operatives who really were on the line, the tight rope, that would get killed if they were found out. But the higher up type agents that went back and forth and they knew their counterparts in the different countries or agencies, they generally were okay. It was the real operatives that were sent in that got the chop often.

Kim Philby used to literally work for MI6. He was recruited like most of them were by Rothschilds. But the 'Cambridge Five', you know. The Cambridge spies anyway. That was [undecipherable] for The Fifth Man, although Blake came later. But as I say, you find that the Rothschild, you know, the Rothschild, THE Rothschilds, the banking family put them up, a lot of these as students, and recruited them. And because he gave the say that these are good chaps, you know, there was no background checks on some of them, you see, that's how it was done. Even Blake who came later who got the same kind of clearance. [Alan chuckles.] He was never checked out at all even though he was from Poland, you know, and communist. Interesting background, his uncle was, he owned, his uncle owned the Bank of Israel at that time. [Alan laughing.] But he himself was communist supposedly. As you know by now communism is a name, a front for a much bigger organization, I'd say.

But anyway, yeah, agents would tell you the system is vastly different than anything you'd imagine. Vastly different. But Philby, getting back to him before I get off that. He literally would get the information off operatives being sent into different Warsaw Pact countries. They'd land them in through parachutes and different techniques and so on and get them into the countries, some of them going across borders. They were all getting picked off. He would actually meet some of them and be sitting in an opera, then he'd go out the back door pretty well and signal his counterparts that they'd be arriving and so-and-so and... He was responsible for a lot of the folks' deaths. That's really how it was run.

You have to wonder, who… They all came from the upper crust, these spies, you know. A lot of titled families as well who worked as spies and double agents. It was actually harder to get that quality of spy or double agents from the working classes because the working classes were more patriotic, because the propaganda always worked better on them. They really believed it was their country and decent folk own it and run it and manage it for us. Of course, a lot of it comes from the fact that the ordinary folk have a much tighter bond with each other, I think, a more human bond to begin with anyway.

So, as I say before I go onto the next hour @cuttingthroughthematrix.com, send a few bucks my way and help me tick along. As I say, I don't have an axe to grind. I've walked between the raindrops for so many years on different shows and then on my own for a while too. But I'm still walking between the raindrops because really, you're not really authorized to play the big game here on behalf of maybe big operations, you know. Because most of the things out there are not quite what you think that they really are.

Now as I've said, the Tower of Babel really looks rather precarious at times with its Band-Aids, and it sways in the wind and creaks and groans. But don't think for a second that somehow the people at the top, who have run the world successfully for an awful long time, who knows how long actually, centuries at the very least, many centuries at least, [Alan chuckles.], stand back and just let it happen. They always plan ahead for the next system and the next system.

Now that it's all coming along into digital currency, they don't even have to print up banknotes of course. To say, well here's physical nothings, it represents nothing, but it's physical. Psychologically it seems more, it was tangible, you say, well, it's not gold or silver or whatever, but it's tangible. It's paper, pieces of it. You don't even have that now. You have blips that can come and go and go down the memory hole too if they ever want to wipe out your accounts, eh. Which will happen once you're on the total Universal Basic Income. It will start with that as the government withholds money because you've been bad or you said something naughty, you see, or one of the things that you shouldn't say, and as they keep adding to the list of things you mustn't say. Or even think for that matter. As you get trained to be compliant, be subservient and be a good parrot. That's the only way you'll survive at all. That's what Orwell showed you in 1984, a deadpan face in the movie, the one that John Hurt was in. Never show expressions of surprise or emotion or anything because it's all on camera, right.

So, you're living through it, and it's all planned. It's a massive plan. They said it at the WEF, the World Economic Forum... Don't forget the World Economic Forum was a private massive club that was never voted in by the general public anywhere. Just like the United Nations. [Alan chuckles.] Yeah, it's a massive club. It started up supposedly by one front man, Klaus Schwab. And ahhhhh, to do good for the world, you know, which enriches the ones who are already rich, etc. Well, you don't want them getting poorer, do you… You don't want to be ruled by poor bums, do you, you want rich bums. So yeah, it's a benevolent thing and the richest people on the planet belong to it. Governments are completely subservient to it even though it's never been written into law that they've got power over anybody.

It's astonishing how you live in a system where everyone's obeying and in obedience to these organizations, eh? That tells that what you think is your government isn't that way at all. It's a different institution. Obviously. But there's a big pretense, as I've said before, they don't give you a guy with a uniform on that comes out yelling in front of the camera. They give you people in business suits, and they prefer if you at least go through the semblance of voting them in. At least, you know. That way you'll turn around, oh this person's let us down so badly I'm not going to vote for them again. And it keeps that whole pretense up.

Rather than just strip it all away and say who's really running the show? I've said before, if you fire, if you could possibly fire all the politicians today, strangely enough the government would, your country would keep working. [Alan chuckles.] If that's what it is right now, I don't know if it's working or not. But it would keep going whether they're there or not. It would take a little bit of time before the real forces behind the scenes would come forward to start to dictate policies, you see.

But it's a good sham, it's good conology because the con is that you vote them in, and they're there to work for you on your behalf. M-hm. Then all you'll hear them talk about is special rights for different minorities, including new inventive, or inventions, [Alan chuckles.] and minorities, and classifications as time goes on all to suit the agenda and change society again. That's what it's really for. They don't give a darn about anybody having preferences or anything else. They'll use them all, but they don't care. Anymore than they care about the poor folk who are starving in some places. They don't care. These politicians are born liars.

The psychopathic group who become politicians, they smell the power out and they go for the power, they look for the power. And they find it. And they like to have praise from the public too and be looked up to and have their name in the papers like a star, you see. They love that acclaim and applause. Attention seeking type psychopaths.

Before I go into any topics or stories, to touch on again, why would your own country, what you think is your own country eh, be financing, and allowing the financing of revolutionary groups inside your countries, especially those who are dedicated to overthrowing the entire system? That tells you the system was overthrown a long time ago maybe, or else it was never the system you imagined it to be. It's a very malleable system, isn't it, where it can fight against certain things when it suits them and their corporate interests, and then after a certain time it just turns on its own public that might be at least verbally fighting the same system. But those who run your governments are all for allowing your cities to burn. I mean, it makes no sense until you realize that no, whatever runs your countries is not from you the people. And really it never really was.

Before they had to give more lip service to have any credence amongst the public, but they really don't have that anymore. They'll cater to it, what they say is… and that's what they've done. Rather than serve the general public and the supposed democracies, right, which means you fulfill agendas that you ran on in democratic systems, even the Democratic Republican systems, you still, meaning Democratic, you vote, you get to vote people in, that's the Democratic bit. But it doesn't really work that way because you don't really vote them in any way, they're put in. [Alan chuckles.]

But the idea is to keep the idea of democracy going to stop you realizing all the folk behind the curtain, you see. The ones that Benjamin Disraeli talked about in one of his novels, Coningsby I think, the novel where he's talking about government as a civil servant and he says that, government is, those who really rule the nation behind the curtain are vastly different people from the ones that you see. They give you lots of little clues and tips, don't they? But that's how it is.

You can figure that out for yourself anyway after doing enough study and even in your own lifetime, just study stuff in your lifetime that you've seen and look at all the promises made, then you see once they're in, rather than cater to the majority that supposedly elect them in, right, they'll say in democratic countries, well they're supposed to serve the majority but listen to the minorities and give the minorities little protections and so on. All they do is talk to minorities, that's taken over from the majority. It gives the impression that they're listening to people. They're not listening to the rest of the people. They're listening to selected groups that tell them what they want to hear, or to ask them even... Oh sure, we'll pass laws to do...

It's all to do with passing laws, isn't it? Everything that happens is pa.... People shouldn't talk about, don't pass a law until you're hamstrung, as they call it, with laws. That's the old communist technique, the Bolsheviks did that when they got in. They passed law after law after law, you couldn't speak, you couldn't do this, you couldn't talk about blah blah blah, until you were completely hamstrung. You were silenced, you see. Socialism always does the same technique. And when the same elite multibillionaires want socialism, they'll give you socialism. It's a faster way to do it.

When they want more from you or more compliance from you, more public spiritedness from you, they'll give you more freedoms for a while, as they still fleece you, you see. So they've got to let it be a little bit more free and easy, and always point to the other country, oh you wouldn't believe what they do in those countries to people who are convicted of this, you wouldn't believe what they do. Well, they don't bother with that so much now, do they? Because it's all happening in your own countries. [Alan chuckles.] Quietly too. [Alan chuckles.] Or maybe sometimes not so quietly. Ftt. But anyway, it's a farce, isn't it, but it's all to suit the masters at the top.

I read articles today just about the lockdowns coming again in England. I said at the beginning, listen to what they said, they're going to have you locked down for at least a year, maybe two, you know, now they're stretching to two years. They give you a little bit of a break in the summer, I said they'd do that, they'd just ease up a bit, make you smile and be happy a little bit rather than have you all rebelling. They don't want rebellion, you see. That's how they do it, they play it by ear.

By ear, meaning electronic ear because they've got the finger on the chat in real-time on the net, you see. Then they know exactly who's, through all the algorithms, precisely in real time, have pretty well accurate percentages of who's against this lockdown and all the rest of it and how to manage it and how to get around, how to break your resolve, etc. Or how to convince you by bigger scares, and what they need to do to make it happen. This is how it's played today. It's massive psychological warfare on the general public.

So, it's not going to help the way things are going right now. And there's no doubt about it, whatever is out there, whatever this thing is, definitely is hitting, yeah, we know it's elderly mainly. And it's maybe, maybe finishing off people that the flu would have finished off anyway. Because it's generally the flu or pneumonia that kills people eventually. Outside of cancers. Regardless, if it's a heart that's preconditioned to, or morbidity as they like to call it, or something else, you see, or again, diabetic, diabetic has got problems to with circulation and immune responses to things as well. Then you have people who are really obese, really obese in this day and age, they have blood pressure problems as well.

This thing almost, it's pretty well engineered, [Alan chuckles.] as far as I'm concerned, to hit specific targets. And I do wonder, I do wonder about, but most of the folk don't get it. And it doesn't matter what ethnicity either. Certain ethnicities, again if they've got the comorbidities of way overweight, maybe type II diabetes, high blood pressure, they're definitely at more risk of getting symptoms of it or illness or even death from it. But the younger folk who, or even folk of similar age who are in their 60s and 70s who are rather thin, or thinnish, and who don't have diabetes, and who don't have high blood pressure, they have more chance of pretty well going symptom-free. So, it's rather interesting that this thing actually will hit sometimes already overburdened, like blood pressure, and maybe pop up a little bit more, and that's all it takes perhaps, you know. I'm sure they've got it pretty well tapped exactly what this thing does. But the flu will do the same kind of thing as well with high fever and comorbidities make you a candidate for the grand finale. That's the way it is.

I remember too, as I said many times actually, I say things occasionally to repeat them to make you remember. But SARS 1, remember, the first SARS outbreak hit primarily the people from China, at least in Canada and Toronto when it hit here. It was often from people who had just been over to China and from the infected areas and back again. But primarily Chinese people it seemed. Once again, the elderly were hit there. But after it was all over, I remember it was so volatile, it was so deadly at the time I should say, it was so deadly at the time that I think one of the Chinese have their own funeral homes, and a whole bunch of morticians in the home had been killed as well just working on one or two bodies, it was so contagious and severe. It really hit them hard fast, you know.

So that was interesting. Then afterwards, I kept the hard articles from the newspapers at the time, because I knew that these things would disappear. They said at the time, China put a complaint into the West, America, and said this thing definitely has the hallmarks of ethnic specific virus, like, that are used for biowarfare. They put in and registered a complaint, made an official type of complaint. And getting back to the Porton Down article as I say, that was put out many years before that. It all ties in that way. I mean, you can't blame them for saying something that's going to hit a specific group. Obviously.

We know with the ACE 2 cells, you know, that they're more, in the lungs, some ethnic groups have a higher percentage of this particular cell in the epithelial tissue, so they’re more prone to getting it much more rapidly, maybe worse as well. The receptors definitely make it, this is the cell that you have that the little spikes that you see on these coronaviruses, these crown viruses, will empty through it's almost like a receptor type cell, it will empty its contents from the virus, its innards if you like, the cargo, is carrying it through into the host cells, epithelial cells in the lungs and in the nasal passages, etc., the sinuses and all that. So anyway, some groups definitely, will definitely seem, definitely seem to be more prone to it than others.

But there's no doubt about it, the obesity is a major factor in containing, and surviving, if you're really heavily obese. And even so, now that they're not just ramming these darned ventilator machines, putting tubes down their tracheas, which is an awful thing. It's an awful shock on the body being kept on a ventilator. They have to put you in almost a coma state to get it into you, or you'll fight it. Because it will stop you, you know, your own breathing rate itself, your own automatic breathing apparatus, your symptoms of the nervous system will have to be stopped and be taken over by an artificial system, your body will panic at times with that, you see. So hhhhh, but also it causes bruising inside the trachea, and you've got to have given, or you should put them on antibiotics too because then bacterial infections set in on top of the viral infections so the bacterium have to be contained and dealt with. Then after it's all over, they have to get them back breathing again, and your body will adapt so fast to having the ventilator do it all for you and your lungs rising and falling according to a machine, as opposed to your automatic system doing it. Then it takes a while before the people are able to breathe naturally on their own again, quite a time, it can take weeks sometimes.

So anyway, we're going through amazing times, and systems, and now that they've got other treatments, and they tried and used the old treatments which worked fine for the flus and things, they're having much better success rates. But there's much fewer, there's far, far fewer folk getting ill and going to hospitals with it. Even at the beginning, and at the worst of it too, we saw even a lot of hospitals in Britain like Bristol, and they had hospitals that were just pretty well empty and nothing happening. Even then. So, it was soo overblown, it was rather scary.

New York was interesting. But again, when you see the chaos, it was mainly in the elderly again in the chaos of putting infected folk into old folks' homes with the uninfected, until they are all infected. It was rather deliberate. It was a crime actually. It's...

We found already too with Italy, with the big crisis in Italy, that they'd already had a trial vaccine for the flu, you know, free of course, you know, last fall into the winter.

Coronavirus: Oxford University vaccine trial paused after participant falls ill - bbc.com / 9 sept 2020

It's possible that when you hit the coronavirus you had a massive overreaction; this is what's being speculated at the moment. Of course, you'll probably never get all the data because they have massive authorities above us will crush you all and anybody who's going to come out. They've already hit folk with license withdrawal for MDs and so on that have come out with their own conclusions on it. So much skullduggery it's disgusting when it comes to human life, as I say.

However, towards the, the big spike was pretty well over come May, definitely, even in April, what they called the spike. Not so much illnesses but the spike itself, of tested people, was pretty well over towards the end of April. I remember reading the articles too where in Britain one of the companies, vaccine companies said they were racing against time to try to get something developed before this virus disappeared. That was in the newspapers. I still got the articles here. From the laboratory, right, because it's dwindling so fast.

Second wave of Covid cases in Europe is not causing deaths to spike compared with the peak in spring - dailymail.co.uk / 19 Sept 2020

That's what happens, they don't stay the same type. They morph rather quickly into, turn into very, you know, non-contagious sometimes, or at least very mild, and some, and generally harmless types of viruses, that mutate, you see, that's what happens with them. Now of course they're already saying that this probably happened now, it's mutated into a much less severe thing.

And yeah, lots of folk, more folk will test as having had it, at least had, hhhch, with this terrible test that they're using for the swabs. Even if you did blood tests, you know, most folk are going to have antibodies already in their system for it. That's herd immunity without a vaccination. That's what normally happens. That's what happens with your cold every year and various flus and so on. That's what happens eh.

But facts don't matter when a big agenda's at play. As I say, this is a war strategy. What do you use? Well, global warming isn't working for them, they won't swallow it. They won't cut back and won't get out of their cars, they won't blah, blah, blah. Well, here you go, here's Covid, let's use Covid, we'll use that.

California, you probably noticed there too, they're cutting back on all car use altogether. Oh, it's much healthier for the, right out of the playbook, eh, they said that they wouldn't allow things to open up that weren't sustainable and environmentally friendly. The whole agenda, the agenda, the climate change agenda, sustainability. Climate change was hit upon by the Club of Rome when they were given the task to find something that we would believe and would agree to and give up certain rights and privileges and all the rest of it for the greater good, and they hit upon the idea of global warming, famine, drought and the like would fit the bill, that would fit the bill, that's what they said in one of their own books.

So hhhh, but the whole point is, there's too many people. Behind it all, they said that there's too many people. How many articles have come out too even again recently by the same culprits telling you, there's too many people, you know, it's inevitable it's going to get worse and worse, because there’s too many folk consuming, consuming. Even right down to too many folk breeding. Especially in the West where the birthrate has always been plummeting, except for massive migration with children, most migrants are the ones with the children, you see, to get the numbers UP. Otherwise it would be way, way down. Way, way down. Ftt. But again, facts don't matter. Agenda driven eh.

I'll touch on some of these articles now rather than just rush right through them. They are interesting some of them. Other ones are very repetitive. You know the agenda is for a lockdown over the winter, you know that. They keep churning out the stupid tests that will give you false positives even when you're not ill and most folk are not ill with it. I got all the graphs from the students; I couldn't believe it. I mean, Universities as I've said before, I got them last week the graphs of the testing, they’re testing all the youngsters that are going into college and so on. You see them, oh, yeah, the more testing we do the more we find. Well, isn't that a coincidence!

Well, these are particles of dead viruses. Your immune system kills them off even in your nose often [Alan chuckles.] before they get anywhere else, and you have lots of dead particles. That's why your system is meant to trap things first in your nose, and then your sinuses, is one of your first levels of containment, you catch it there and destroy things, you know. It's... You've got an amazing system. It truly is. People are walking miracles, eh. So is all life really, a walking miracle. It didn't just evolve out of some spontaneity, some amoeba thought well you know I think I'm going to be a horse one day you know. How about you? No, I want to be a giraffe, I want to be higher than anybody, any of you lot.

But that's how it goes. It's a fascinating system, we're born with amazing abilities. IF we're not tempered with and hammered with poisons or other things. Which are still poisons as far as I'm concerned, that hack your immune system, eh?! Then you've got an amazing response system. And if you've got enough nourishment, eh. You'll find most of the stuff up into the 20th century, most of the problems across Europe mainly in Britain, hhhch, where impoverishment and malnourishment that was causing problems. But if you're well-nourished and you're healthy you can fight off pretty well most things. But again, facts don't really matter, eh, big agendas.

I think it was interesting that Bill Gates I think said, oh, this might be lockdown, you know, lockdown and Covid with you for another couple of years, you know. The guy that as I say waves his hands a lot and can't look anybody in the eyeing and lock a gaze without shifting it. He's a shifty looking guy. That's my opinion anyway. And by the way, any opinions are going to be completely verboten now. They're moving into the next step in preparation for the complete lockdown again. This is stage five they're looking at. They want to get to five where it's a complete martial law system and they'll lock anybody up that speaks out against it. I mean, that's on the books, eh. So, they start off doing, no don't do that. Then they put out the other ones that are going to counter you, you know, the different groups that are set up to counter you, thousands of Internet employees that slow your speed, attack your sites if you won’t comply and go along with it and shut up. But the final stage eventually is to, or defame you is another way, defame some people. But the other way is also to eventually arrest people. That's what's on the books. Event 201.

I love how totalitarian systems, even the ones that are there to help you, the communist ones eh, the appointed people who are representatives of the people, they were representatives of the people, and they would set up their courts and say we are the representatives of the people, and they would then try and execute the people, on behalf of the people. [Alan laughing.] Same thing. It's the same thing. Tyranny is very easy to recognize, and if you're not completely in a slumber. It's very much like the American dream, you know, and I think it was George Carlin said about that too. He says, the American dream, the only time you can believe in it is when you're asleep and you're dreaming, you see, because it doesn't happen in reality, not for you anyway, because you're not in the big club.

Europe’s lockdown will kill more people worldwide than Covid-19 virus, German minister warns

rt.com / 24 Sept 2020

The grim prognosis was made by the German official in an interview (Alan: …and I'll put the links up.) with the Handelsblatt daily. The pandemic has already triggered "one of the biggest" hunger and poverty crises across the world, Muller said – and further damage will be done thanks to the measures taken to battle it.

…the further damage will be done thanks to the measures taken to battle it.

We expect an additional 400,000 deaths from malaria and HIV this year on the African continent alone, while half a million more will die from tuberculosis.

(A: By the way, a lot of them that were brought in, brought tuberculosis in too, it's in Canada now too, eh some of the migrants that were brought in without… Normally through straight application to migrate to countries you get tested, complete physicals before you can leave your own country to come into the country if you're applying to emigrate. But no with the supposed refugee thing. Even though they come from countries that are, where nothing much is happening to cause a refugee. But it makes no difference, they can have diseases, you see and they're getting in without even testing them. They have stipulations there not to harass them. Well, testing people is not harassment. It's trying to save the domestic population. Unless you want problems. Well, you make your mind up what you want because you know… They're not stupid, the folks that are doing all this, remember. Why do they want this to happen?)

The situation stems from the fact that the West, and the EU in particular, has funneled its relief efforts into battling the coronavirus at home instead of helping the impoverished elsewhere. The Covid-19 pandemic has somewhat blinded the West, which has lost sight of the mounting problems in the rest of the world, Muller argued.

"The supply of food and medication is no longer guaranteed," he said. "Many of the West's aid programs are not adequately funded."

There's a lot of folk can't get in to get treatments for other illnesses in your own countries. You know, empty hospitals, oh, you can't come in here. A minor operation, it's minor if we could treat it now, but it could be terribly deadly if we leave it. There you go. How many folk died already because of this nonsense, eh? Another article...

Lockdown 'could kill 75,000' over five years - that's the official projection of non-Covid deaths caused by missed (A: That's just missed…) cancer diagnoses, cancelled operations and health impacts of a recession. The virus death toll? 42,000

dailymail.co.uk / 25 Sept 2020

(A: The virus death toll? 42,000. Well again, that's very vague. What country are they talking about? Or is it the world, or whatever? Because I noticed that in some of the articles, and the Daily Mail is doing it too, it's got almost, something in the, they know which way the wind is blowing, the general public who have seen through a lot of the nonsense. But they'll then say the last line...)

The virus death toll? 42,000

(A: Well, 42,000 for which country? And from when to when? And is that caused by the virus or folk who have died with it? When most of us who've probably died today and have fragments, they say fragments of may be 80 coronavirus or that coronavirus inside you, but it's caused no problems there, you see, it's not a cause of death. I'm not going to go through it again. We all know the incredible scams when they were told to put down coronavirus death even when generally it isn't, right. Don't forget too, I keep telling folk in Britain, don't forget what Hancock said, the politician put in charge of health who has no experience as far as I know that he has. But that's what they do, they appoint them up there and they're mouthpieces. He said, he slipped out when he wasn't reading his script and he said, don't forget in England at least 10,000 people a month die anyway, that was normal. From all diseases. In any year. [Alan chuckles.] So, you take six months of it, right, say six months at the 10,000 that die normally anyway, there's 60,000 people. But if you tack on and just put them down as Covid deaths, well you start to get the picture how it works, eh.)

Nearly 75,000 people could die from non-Covid causes as a result of lockdown, according to devastating official figures buried in a 188-page document.

The startling research, presented to the Government's Scientific Advisory Group for Emergencies (Sage), will further increase pressure on Boris Johnson to hold back on introducing further coronavirus restrictions.

(A: Well, I don't think so. He'll do what he's told.)

It estimates a further 26,000 will lose their lives within a year (A: …within a year, this is in England right.) if people continue to stay away from A&E and the problems in social care persist.

… 16,000 people died as a result of the chaos in hospitals and care homes in March and April alone.

(A: Chaos, you see. Not Covid but chaos. M-hm.)

And I really hope people are taking note, and the ones who've got good Internet speed and so on are taking clips of all the videos of these cowardly cops across the world turning on their own people. The same cops, right, in say in the US, or England, or London even, stood by and did nothing when hordes of folk were hauling down, by design obviously, the government didn't need to tell any forces to tackle them, shouting revolution and all the rest of it and pulling statues down. These are the same cops that stood by and did nothing. But they can go for people like Ohio mom in the States... tased, she was tased...

Ohio Mom Tased and Arrested At Middle School Football Game For Not Wearing Mask - zerohedge.com / 24 Sept 2020

She was sitting on a bench, you know, nobody anywhere near her. [Alan chuckles.] On a nice day. The virus is very particular too, you know, if it's going to, this virus, it's just like the cops right now, it's politicized. But it's sensitive. You can eat somewhere and as long as you're eating, they won't club you or Taser you. It goes by some kind of Geneva Convention, you see, for humanity, it's a humane virus. But as soon as you're finished with the last chew, make sure you get that mask back on. That's what they do in the restaurants in Canada, and they're all told to do that, eh. Yep. So yeah, it won't infect you during the munching bit. So, if you don't want to get tased and stuff and don't want to wear a mask, just keep eating candies. Take a whole bunch of snacks with you and walk in the streets with them. Because they can't touch you if you're eating. You might blow up and gain weight like crazy, but hey at least, at least you can breathe without suffocating yourself. Hm.

But it's an intelligent virus. Well, it's the same thing with the police, you see. The police can pick on mums that are on their own, right, who weighed, she weighed probably 1/4, maybe less, of this cop. And he is hauling her and hauling her, and because she wasn't wearing a mask at a football game. But she was, fffffftt, probably about 15 feet away from anybody else, in any direction. I think, I don't know. So hopefully people are getting these videos because you must, if you ever get over any of this, you know, you might, and I'm not very optimistic by the way. But if you ever get over any of this you'd better remember what your institutions are now and what the cop services are now, when they literally, they're like robots, you know, they get told what to do and what not to do. And you'd better be, you'd better get organizations set up to watch them all like hawks. Because it's an internal Army now that are part, in Canada they actually say that they're paramilitary forces who will do what they're told no matter what it is. No matter what it is.

Just like in France and occupied countries in World War II when the Germans marched in, the police turned up for work the next day and says, well what's our orders? And a lot of them were used to gather people that were, could be hostile to the new regime, and the cops went along with it. That's what cops do, folks. So do the civil service. I've read lots of books on occupation strategies and psychology of operations and so on within nations. They use the histories of the past. A good chunk of the police initially on the periphery, as they call it the periphery, same with the civil service, start to work with the occupying forces and then they start to adapt and they go along with them until, and then it's normalized in no time at all, it's all completely integrated.

You've got to stop thinking of whatever runs your country, it's not yours. When you see that, really, it's not there to serve the people. What cops can go around beating people up with batons or tasers? for a scam virus like this? When the boxes that sell it, even the N95 masks tell you it won't stop coronavirus. On the box. So, the makers tell you it's not going to stop it, getting it or transmitting it. But it doesn't make any difference to policy. That's disgusting what's happening. I'll put this one up too and it says…

Ohio Mom Tased and Arrested At Middle School Football Game For Not Wearing Mask - zerohedge.com / 24 Sept 2020

A new incident in Ohio where a woman was outside at a middle school football game without a "required mask" resulted in the police tasing and arresting her.

Video of the arrest is now going viral precisely because it's an instance of police not showing common sense — again at an outdoor venue.

It's the same thing with these, what do they call it, these nighttime raids they're doing for drugs, with the woman, the latest one that's there, that are causing the riots again, where they shot people inside. Battering folks' whole doors down in the middle of the night, you know. No-knock-raids I think they call it, no-knock. Supposedly they're supposed to shout, we are the police. Well, in the middle of the night would you believe anybody saying they're the police? Would you? How on the earth are you going to know they're the cops, in the middle of the night? And at nighttime too folk are, if they come out of sleep, you're going to be hyper, you know, hhhch, like freaking out alert, you know, and you might grab anything that's handy to defend yourself. Because you don't know who that, who's outside there. Especially when you hear them battering with force. That's a war act, is violent force against your, your doors, that's what it is. I, can't they wait till the next day or something? What's going on?

You see, you've got all these policies that came out with the drug laws initially which gave, which turned the police into paramilitary forces. And big money being made from drug raids. Meanwhile you've got the CIA and all the other organizations working all through Latin America, over in Afghanistan, making sure that the drugs are flowing into the country. And they're still being sold to folk. What do you think the guns-for-drugs thing was all about with Oli North and the gangs back then in those days? The Iran-Contra scandal? Your own governments were making sure that heroin was being sold across the United States to children and teenagers. That's okay then, is it?

While you've got these battering ram groups of special forces ramming down doors and opening fire on people who are still half sleeping. I remember doing the same talks years ago on the radio show in detail. Because at that time there were so many of them getting shot as they battered folks' doors down in the middle of the night. And what was happening, so many of them, at that time what was astonishing was how many of them with the wrong addresses! And there was no apologies after they wrecked the place and shot people. Wrong address. What kind of system have you got where they get the wrong addresses, and you go in with lethal force? Something is wrong. Something is very, is it the IQ or whatever of the folk they've been putting, who, what is it?!? You don't make mistakes like that. Dressed up in combat gear, lethal force, in the middle of the night, and it's the wrong address? On many occasions. That's incredible. Absolutely incredible. N-n-n.

So, when your governments are depending on drug money you're definitely, your special agencies, intelligence agencies, are definitely running a lot of it. So many, there are books being churned out from across Latin America of the different agencies from all countries involved in drug cartels and so on. Never mind, I could go on and on about that too, about whose even training them, some of the hit squads for the cartels. The cartels have their own hit squads, and [Alan chuckles.] I can actually give you the names of some of the agencies that were training them. You've got to shake your head and say wait a minute here, so there's a war on drugs? Really? It doesn't make any sense, you either have a war on drugs where you go after the sources, and they could do if they wanted to.

Look at the contact tracing today, eh. As they try to get everybody who's anywhere near anybody who might have had a positive, who might have had a positive fake or not Covid test. And that person, through that computer says, oh they've infected probably at least 10 other people, says the computer, eh, the God the computer. So, they can inflate the numbers like crazy and that's what they're doing every way, by the way. If you went into a restaurant and there was one person eventually went afterwards to get tested or whatever and they came up with the positive or false positive or whatever it happened to be, positive result, they'd find out all the people in that restaurant and then they would contact trace them if they can, then add 10 more to every person in the restaurant, and that day, that's what they'd publish for the numbers, even though there might only be 11 people, you know. That's how it's done, add 10 for everyone that might have been there [Alan chuckles.] and up the numbers go. That's how they're doing it.

Getting back to the graph on the students, I couldn't believe it. When you see it, it's oh my, look at that spike, my goodness, all these students. And they had next to it ‘’illnesses and hospital admissions, all the way down, top to bottom, ZERO. Nobody was ill with it. No hospital admissions. But that doesn't matter, does it? This is a war scenario, they've picked the project, the project is to use a Covid illness for a complete globalization of the new system. Financial. Cultural. Economic. Social. A whole new system and you're going to be trained from birth to death, monitored from birth to death, tracked and traced all through your lives with all the 5G Internet of things everywhere tracking and tracing and doing it, watching everything that you do. For the, it's for the greater good you understand, not just for Covid, eh.

So, don't expect common sense during these times, amongst obviously the police departments. Rather than saying maybe we should back off a bit, we don't want more riots and burning cities and so on.

Let's go a bit quiet and tamp down these no-knock raids and so on in the middle of the night and just go for them during the day or something where it's aboveboard and less panic and all the rest of it. But nope. You'd think there'd be more common sense here, would you. Wouldn't you? Or again, grabbing some woman sitting alone on a bench watching a game. When the stupid masks do nothing except suffocate you. And the makers say it won't stop you getting it or transmitting it. Isn't that amazing. You'd think they'd back off there too and say wait a minute here, do I really want to be on video across the planet picking on some young woman? You know? Hhhhh.

Hhhhh. Now, this one is from, it's a letter…

Open Letter from Medical Doctors and Health Professionals (A: …in Belgium.) to All Belgian Authorities and All Belgian Media

aier.org / 20 Sept 2020

The following letter has made an impact on public health authorities not only in Belgium but around the world. The text could pertain to any case in which states locked down their citizens rather than allow people freedom and permit medical professionals to bear the primary job of disease mitigation.

So far it has been signed by 394 medical doctors, 1,340 medically trained health professionals, and 8,897 citizens. (A: It won’t matter.)

* * * * *

We, Belgian doctors and health professionals, wish to express our serious concern about the evolution of the situation in the recent months surrounding the outbreak of the SARS-CoV-2 virus. We call on politicians to be independently and critically informed in the decision-making process and in the compulsory implementation of corona-measures. We ask for an open debate, where all experts are represented without any form of censorship. After the initial panic surrounding covid-19, the objective facts now show a completely different picture – there is no medical justification for any emergency policy anymore.

The current crisis management has become totally disproportionate and causes more damage than it does any good.

We call for an end to all measures and ask for an immediate restoration of our normal democratic governance and legal structures and of all our civil liberties.

(A: Well, that’s what it’s all about, isn’t it? It goes on and on. I’ll put these links up for these articles.)

This is, you see this is a war agenda, and these front people that you think are your politicians are all agreed and sworn to a higher authority. I'm not meaning God either, at least not an earthly God. I mean not a heavenly God, put it that way. Maybe an earthly God, yeah, in their big, big cabal at the top here. But think about it, they're all sworn, and they all parrot exactly the same lines to the general population, don't they? Which means, if they're really a decent person there to serve you, they'd have to listen and maybe go along with you. But no, it doesn't happen. They're all on board, sworn to it, just like a war scenario. That's how they do it.

Europe is facing a double-dip recession as coronavirus second wave arrives (A: Hhhhh.)

cnbc.com / 24 Sept 2020

Economists predicted a rebound in the second half of 2020 but they are now questioning those forecasts.

Many governments are announcing new lockdown restrictions, or a slowing of reopenings, as they deal with a significant uptick in cases.

(A: Well, that’s your fake test kits again hey. Because no one’s sick with it, you see, they’re not dying of it, just yet. So, there’s your, they’re all getting bored with the same, this is the same mantra, right. So…)

Europe is now grappling with a second wave of coronavirus infections…

…it says here, but as I say, it's just, folk aren't getting it, or they aren't dying off with it like they were before. And you've got to see what happened before, was their response to it all.

And…

In Unprecedented Monetary Overhaul, The Fed Is Preparing To Deposit "Digital Dollars" Directly To

"Each American"

zerohedge.com / 24 Sept 2020

(A: This is what I talked about, Bertrand Russell talked about it, didn't he, about the future in The Impact Of Science On Society, and a few other books? He mentioned that eventually the government will give you tokens it will deposit into your bank account every month and they can cut it off eventually if you, basically what he meant was like politically incorrect, hhhch, or antisocial meaning you wouldn't obey the orders from the technocrats that would run you. These are old agendas, folks. So...)

…the Fed would continue injecting liquidity into the system. The second common theme is that despite sparking unprecedented asset price inflation, prices as measured across the broader economy - using the flawed CPI metric and certainly stagnant worker wages - would remain subdued (as a reminder, the Fed is desperate to ignite broad inflation as that is the only way the countless trillions of excess debt (A: I mean, this is countless trillions, that's true, added to what was there before.) can be eliminated and has so far failed to do so).

The Fed's failure to reach its inflation target - which prompted the US central bank to radically overhaul its monetary dogma last month and unveil Flexible Average Inflation Targeting (or FAIT) (A: [Alan chuckles.] I love the anachronisms they're using, FAIT, it's your fate, you see, to be poor.) whereby the Fed will allow inflation to run hot without hiking rates - has sparked broad criticism from the economic establishment, even though as we showed in June, deflation is now a direct function of the Fed's unconventional monetary policies as the lower yields slide, the lower the propensity to spend. In other words, the harder the Fed fights to stimulate inflation, the more deflation and more saving it spurs as a result … (A: …and so on and so on.)

Then it goes into the bubble theory, etc. But it's all a con anyway, I mean, the money's, it's backed by nothing. Nothing at all. That's what they have, you know, like Caroll Quigley who talked about, again, the conspiracy of the pyramid on the dollar bill, which folk laugh at. Isn't it amazing how you've been trained how to ridicule things, which you should be ridiculing? Because Quigley himself said this is a symbol used by societies for thousands of years ago, and he says why is that on the dollar bill? Why IS it on the dollar bill? Hm? Then above it, they always miss the part too, you know, In God We trust.

I remember too when the chairman of the banking systems, the Federal Reserve and so on during the little, hhhch, pretend inquiry that they had after the last crash in 2008. You can actually look it up and you'll see him talking about it. He says, why did you let things happen, even the big ones in the big banks that allowed these flipping's of mortgages to go on, like millions of them? Until they couldn't even keep track of them anymore. It was a free-for-all basically. He said, well, we're doing God's work. This is very, very relevant, you understand this, very relevant indeed when you're dealing with a society that you can't even figure, we're doing God's work. Really? Hm? But if you mentioned that you're a conspiracy theorist, eh. I guess he's just a religious guy, and somehow God says to him, you take care of the banking system for America.

Umph. Maybe that's what it's supposed to be, eh?

The signs and symbols and the language is all around you every day, if you realize. And folk can't even read it. Yeah, that's what was said all right. So, there's from Quigley saying that about, why is it on the dollar bill to one of the students, to again the head of the Federal Reserve saying the same kind of thing after the bank crash, doing God’s work. You have to ask, what God are they talking about here, eh? I mean, they’re obviously meaning something, right, which one are they talking about? Hm? Because the term God itself is very generic, is in it, you can apply it to any deity at all. That's probably the purpose of saying in God we trust, [Alan chuckles.] they don't want you to know who they're talking about.

Yeah, we live in a system, it's an amazing system. It's got nothing to do with democracy, or republicanism for that matter, apart from the fact that it rules over you and it's been on the go for an awful long time. I remember when the supposed Russia fell, it was quite interesting the way it was presented to the public. Oh, it's just, they just give up one day, just like A Blast From the Past at the end of the movie, where the actor says, oh the Russians just gave up. They had been living in an underground shelter for years, they didn't now, they thought it was all real, he thought a war had started and so he got locked down there with his wife and son. A comedy, a good comedy. But at the end the Dad says, oh they just gave up, did they? Yeah, that's what happened. Just like that, they just give up and went home? Yeah. Really?

Of course, it didn't happen just like that either, did it, when it just supposedly collapsed. You had to read the speeches given by Gorbachev to the Politburo and to the public, hhhch, that was published when it happened to get an idea of what was going on there. I remember in the newspapers afterwards apart from the scandals of the richest folk on the planet running out of Russia, they plundered it pretty well over a long period of time, 70 odd years. But the occult, stories of the occult came out, in the trends you know, and they said, oh we're fascinated. We always thought the Soviet Union was scientific and purely, purely, you know earthly basically, secular, and we're surprised to find that even amongst the officer class, and right up to the Politburo level or the, up to the top at the general level and so on, they and their families were often into occultic stuff.

It wasn't just reading fortunes, that was part of it. But literally into, and it was Kabbalah that they were into. It's quite fascinating. It was printed in different newspapers, and it became a topic of, one of these fleeting conversation type of things that folk dished out once in a while and then they all forget it. So even there they had their, if you want to call it their, what the Communists would have said, but also the rest of the world, their superstitions, if you touched on any kind of religion that they were doing themselves.

I'm not really surprised. Yeah, they had their same, don't forget that Trotsky was a great admirer, he became a Freemason. He was writing in his own memoirs, he was writing a tome, a compilation about masonry. He admired it so much for its ability to cut across laws and regulations. That's part of what Masons are taught, you know, whatever you need we can cut red tape and get things done, etc. When he was getting escorted out of Russia at that point when he eventually ended up in Mexico, I think it was, but he was escorted out of Russia across the border. He was just so impressed at the fact that the Russian guards didn't have to stop at any border checkpoints and show IDs or anything, they just give little signs and that was recognized by the other guards of the other countries on the way. It was all Freemasonry, that's what he realized. Very impressive, eh. That's in Trotsky's own book.

But again, facts don't really matter, does it, do they? Anyway, here we go, here's another little talk here. So, Quigley as I say mentioned and we should think of these things, it's awfully important really. And…

In Unprecedented Monetary Overhaul, The Fed Is Preparing To Deposit "Digital Dollars" Directly To "Each American" - zerohedge.com / 24 Sept 2020

Then also I'm putting other ones... YouTube in a minute or two. But before I do that, YouTube...

YouTube adds fact-check information panels above search results in the UK to stop the spread of misinformation on the video platform

dailymail.co.uk / 24 Sept 2020

(A: Total censorship across the board, eh. On a much bigger scale than Russia ever could have done it from the Bolshevik era onwards. Now you're seeing the real purpose of it now, you know, they give you 20 years of playing yourselves and getting addicted to it, then they start bringing all the regulations, until they train you, because most folk will stay on it, you see, they know that. So…)

UK users will see boxes above YouTube results when they search certain topics

These boxes will provide reputable and independently fact-checked information

(A: Really? Reputable, eh?)

Google-owned platform has increasingly been targeting bizarre misinformation

(A: Really? Wow, imagine that, eh. That’s the Daily Mail Online.)

This could include subjects that have recently been mired by damaging conspiracy theories, such as 5G, vaccinations (A: …oh, a conspiracy…) and the current coronavirus pandemic.

Panels will include fact checks from trusted organisations such as BBC Reality Check (A: There you go, the BBC, you can trust the BBC.), Full Fact (A: …is another one.), Ferret Fact Service and FactCheckNI.

Social media and wider internet platforms have been criticised over their approach to combating misinformation,

You see, even that’s not right. This is not misinformation. Often their answers to things are often the misinformation. It’s, you’re living in an amazing totalitarian tyranny right now. It’s just astonishing. Really astonishing. I’ve seen some of the other ones doing it in print media and the so-called authorized fact checkers that, they’ll take a topic, but they won’t answer it or counter it, they’ll just try to go around it and say that’s terrible, that’s wrong, but they won’t tell you why it’s wrong or how it’s wrong or anything else, or prove it. You see, it doesn’t matter. It’s a tyranny you're under. This is absolute tyranny. No doubt about it. I'll put that one up too.

Now another one too is, yeah...

YouTube, Facebook, Twitter adopt uniform ‘hate speech’ standards for censoring content

lifesitenews.com / 26 Sept 2020

(A: So, it's a uniform, so I guess it's one organization at the very top who decides what's right and wrong for them all, eh? There you go. It says…)

With the next presidential election less than two months away, the world’s largest internet and information companies have reached an agreement to adopt a single set of criteria for identifying and removing supposedly “hateful” or “bullying” content from their platforms.

(A: You understand this is, this is tyranny, folks.)

On Wednesday the World Federation of Advertisers (WFA) announced that the online giants "have agreed to adopt a common set of definitions for hate speech and other harmful content and to collaborate with a view to monitoring industry efforts to improve in this critical area."

The agreement, which follows months of advertisers pressuring …

Now this is what they've done in years gone by, I can remember where these certain organizations, very wealthy, would hammer away at newspapers if they printed anything they didn't agree with and didn't like. They would threaten to withdraw all advertising from them, that was what they did. It just shows you again, eh, that big money has the ability to decide what you're going to say and not say, or even get a say at all. Or what you're going to have any say about and not about. So, there you go, it's the standard technique that's been used from the 1920s actually. And here it's all across the Internet now as well.

And here's from someone who knows it all is Helena Handbasket, and that's where we'll end up. It says here that…

Covid Facts – The Inconvenient Truth – One bump too many?

theirishsentinel.com / Posted by Helena Handbasket / Sep 21, 2020

Ciaran O'Connor, writing for the Journal.ie, claims to be a researcher and investigator with the Institute for Strategic Dialogue,

(A: So, there's an important part of it, eh, the propaganda institution. The…)

Institute for Strategic Dialogue, (propaganda) a London-based think tank that works towards powering solutions to extremism, disinformation, and polarisation. (By lying about them) (A: [Alan chuckles.])

https://www.thejournal.ie/readme/misinformation-far-right-ireland-5206178-Sep2020/

He is, in fact, nothing more than a pathetic propagandist playing cover for mainstream media lies and deception over the Covid-19 hoax pandemic.

He does this by using the age-old technique of smearing anyone who believes in free speech, freedom and the right to make their own choices, right wing extremists. By that definition, he is therefore a right-wing extremist as he believes in wearing masks, social distancing and in general the stripping away of all rights which every human being has. He has the right to voice that opinion and has done so publically, in an online mainstream virtual rag, to propagandise fiction over facts, whilst clearly hypocritically claiming to seek truth in media reporting.

This creature is a coward, something endemic in so called ‘journalist’ circles of our era. They are pathetic mouthpieces for tyrants and liars to the public and themselves. They do not care one iota about factual information, even when that factual information comes from their own ‘authorised’ sources.

On the issue of masks, to give just a very simple example, it states in English on the packaging (A: …and it does too.) that these masks DO NOT protect the wearer from viruses and should not be used for that purpose. Where is the ambiguity in that? (A: That’s quite clear, right.) Where is the right wing extremist diatribe? Where is the lie? Where is the misinformation/disinformation?

Right now in Ireland, government psychopaths such as Stephen Donnelly, Minister for Health (A: And he’s got the ‘health’ scored out and called…) Death would have the nation believe that the mythical ‘second wave’ of Covid-19 is lurking around every corner and ‘wet’ bar in Ireland just waiting for unsuspecting human habitats to get too close for 15 minutes, at a distance of 2 meters, or 6‘ 8” in Imperial measurement, without a mask, because the virus knows what jurisdiction it’s in.

(A: It’s true, it does, doesn’t it?)

It can also tell the time and know what time certain stores open and close, and presumably what special foods people have eaten to see if they’re more prone to infection. Perhaps people need to carry bulbs of garlic to ward off this clever little creature known as Covid-19, which seems to be vastly more intelligent than the politicians and media supposedly hunting it down; certainly more so than the pathetic Ciaran O’Connor who it would appear would not know factual information if the elusive Covid-19 virus whispered it in his ear.

(A: Hm, there you go. It’s a…)

… pathological liar virus which permeates every mainstream rag in terms of broadcasting, publication in print and online in Ireland today, and across the world who have sold their souls to the evil of the World Economic Forum and others to do their bidding for them to bring about their promised green Utopia which, once it’s done with these useful idiots, will slaughter them without a modicum of regret and possibly use their remains as fertiliser.

(A: Which is no joke by the way, hhhch.)

What else would you do with manure?

There you go. I'll put these articles up. That's not a bad one, again, that's in the Irish Sentinel by Helena Handbasket. That's where we're all going. And this one here…

The Hard Road to World Order

foreignaffairs.com / 1 April 1974

(A: It's quite interesting. This is a while back. Its Volume 52, Number 3 I think it was, 1974 Foreign Affairs. That's the CFR Foreign Affairs magazine. It goes through again the world system and how folk are quite willing to give up their freedoms or their nationalities or sovereignties and nations and stuff. He talks about, you know...)

The willingness of U.N. members to risk their him short-term interests for the good of the community…

(A: So, you know, they have wonderful phrases like that. It's for the good of all.)

seems at the level of the frontier town in High Noon, where the citizens abandoned their lawman as soon as the outlaw was released from jail.

(A: Fft. That's what folk do once you're told to wear masks, or you'll get beaten up or tased, by your own governments eh. But this here goes on to talk about, the Hard Road to World Order. They're talking about a world system of government, or governing, right. 1974. It says...)

Nor are the world's him principal economic forums in much better shape. In contrast to him the accomplishments of happier days, nobody now takes a major issue to ECOSOC, UNCTAD,

(A: That's the UN again, these are all UN associations.)

GATT,

(A: …the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs, the International Monetary Fund…)

the IMF, or OECD,

(A: That's Overseas Economic Corporation Development, coalition for developments. That's your tax money that they throw out at Third World countries, but they're really [Alan chuckles.] to fund factories there from the well-known corporations and set them up.)

with much hope for a constructive result. Even the European Community threatens to unravel under current economic and political pressures.

In this unhappy state of affairs, few people retain much confidence in the more ambitious strategies for world order that had wide backing a generation ago—"world federalism," "charter review," and "world peace through world law." The consensus on basic values and willingness to entrust vital interests to community judgment clearly do not exist.

(A: For those who don't understand that the Federalist Society is still on the go and you know, Hillary Clinton is a member of it. So is I think, was it.... Dan Brokaw.... and some of the big ones are all members of it, for world federalism. That's the elimination of national sovereignty for those who don't quite know it. This is from the CFR I'm reading here, eh. It's the Hard Road to World Order and it goes on and on about all the problems. This is the article, if you read it, it will tell you that one of the biggest problems that they had to world order, or giving up nationality, especially for the US, was its Constitution. So, they talk about having to, the best way is to, rather than hit it head on, they talked about going around it and over it and just… In other words, ignoring it, hhhch, and passing laws that would replace it all, by just simply ignoring the Constitution and the Bill of Rights. But it does go into...)

It is instructive to ponder the institutional implications of the negotiations to which nations were already committed before the "energy crisis" preempted international attention in the fall of 1973.

Although some of these tasks of institution-building may be complicated or postponed by the energy problem, all are now continuing fixtures on the diplomatic agenda:

1. The non-Communist nations are embarked on a long-term negotiation for the reform of the international monetary system, aimed at developing a new system of reserves and settlements to replace the dollar standard and at improving the balance-of-payments adjustment process.

(A: …across the board I suppose really.)

The accomplishment of these objectives would almost surely require a revitalization of the International Monetary Fund, which would have unprecedented powers to create new international reserves and to influence national decisions on exchange rates

(A: Again, it's money, money, money. The same characters at the very, very top, the same secretive organizations eh, that were set… private organizations, running all countries, including the communist countries too [Alan chuckles.] by the way. Yeah, they've got their loans from the World Bank as well, and the IMF where the guys who came in with the stipulations and collected the payments, eh. I'll put up this article. It's quite interesting for anybody who's interested in reading it, you know. Most folk are not. I might or might not put it up if I can find a link for it. But I've got the actual articles here. They also go into...)

6. ... a World Food Conference

(A: ...for those who think it's all happening just now, you know, the prices, etc... Last week I mentioned the organization that was doing stress test on the world's food supply, interestingly. The Cargill Corporation was one of them, there are five big food agencies across the world, five major ones [Alan chuckles.] and the people they put in charge of it are awfully well known. Also…)

7. In the 1974 Law of the Sea Conference and beyond—in what may be several years of very difficult negotiations—there should eventually emerge a new international regime governing the world's oceans.

(A: So, they're going after everything. This is the same organization that came out of the Royal Institute of International Affairs, that came out of the Lord Alfred Milner group that was sworn to take over territory of the planet, bring in one system across the world based on what they called the British system, which wasn't for the people obviously, and take over all the world resources. And use it wisely, you see, they would decide that they would own it all and use it and they would use it wisely. Where you peasants couldn't use anything wisely, you see, you're too ignorant. And that's why they exist. So, it morphed into this and this and this, and then the CFR in the States side. They also have the group for the politicians in the EU European parliament, most of European parliamentarians are members of it too. That's the European Institute for International Affairs which is just a subsidiary of the RIIA, etc, etc, all the way to the Far Eastern group as well.)

9. At some point in the years ahead the world will move beyond U.S.-Soviet agreement on strategic weapons, and NATO Warsaw Pact agreement on some measure of force reduction, to a truly multilateral set of negotiations (comparable to the nonproliferation treaty) designed to limit conventional weapons. It seems inevitable that the United Nations and perhaps regional bodies will be given new responsibilities for the administration of these arms control and disarmament measures, including means of verification and enforcement.

(A: And so on and so on and so on. An...)

... International Court of Justice.

(A: Etc. All the stuff that they're still bringing in today.)

In the early days of the Second World War, Roosevelt and Churchill proclaimed an Atlantic Charter with the postwar objective of "access, on equal terms, to the trade and to the raw materials of the world." In three decades of negotiations since that time, our focus has been almost exclusively on access to markets. In the next decades, we will need to place new emphasis on arrangements to assure reasonable access to scarce resources.

(A: So, the big corporations.)

I'll put that up too, maybe, if I can find the link for it now. For those who care. Most folk really don't. Or other ones might just want to write books about it. [Alan chuckles.] Another one too is, I'll put up a YouTube on Australia and it's about the omnibus bill. It's interesting this massive omnibus bill they've passed there, a legal bill on the Covid laws, etc. etc. and lockdowns and yada, yada, yada. It's really martial law, basically. Well, it IS martial law. That's what it is. I won't say it's like, it is martial law. [Alan chuckles.] I'll put this one up for those that want to see it.

Pre-emptive and indefinite detention in the new Victorian Government Omnibus Bill - youtube.com / 20 Sept 2020

There's also another YouTube one on the same thing. I'll put them both up and you can see what you think about it.

Dan Andrews' new COVID Omnibus bill 'empowers the untrained with draconian abilities' - youtube.com / 22 Sept 2020

Also, this one here, it's quite interesting. Understand, I can remember the talks before you were given really the full Internet service that you have now. But back in the 90s it was still pretty primitive, for the general public that is. They had debates amongst themselves in academia at the top because those in higher academia work at MIT as well, of course, work for the big agencies that own the world. They talked about, oh, the problems of containing information from the public, because they might get dissent on a whole bunch of things. So, they'd have information warfare going on and they said, how do we contain it? And how do we deal with that?

Well, they've got massive organizations, not just the 77th Brigade in Britain that attack anybody. I mean, you've got thousands of, and I've given the articles out before where the commandant basically, the commander talks about the fact that they've got thousands on staff working full time and thousands more they can call up any day at all that they need them, to attack whatever they want to attack, and they'll close down or hack or whatever it happens to be. There's many other organizations that were set up who work in collusion with them, not just the BIT groups as well. You have Bellingcat is another one too.

Bellingcat

wikipedia.org

Bellingcat is an investigative journalism group that specialises in fact-checking

(A: That's another one, is it fake news or is it not fake news. So, they're the fact checkers, you see, just appeared when they were attacking Syria, hm. Their job initially was to try to show the public of the world that Syria had been using chemical weapons on its own people. Which of course other [Alan chuckles.] findings since then found out it was not. It was the attackers were using the darn stuff. But that's what it was found out to do, to convince the public we should go to war and demolish Syria, you see.)

Bellingcat began as an investigation into the use of weapons in the Syrian Civil War.

(A: Right.)

Its reports on the War in Donbas (including the downing of Malaysia Airlines Flight 17), the El Junquito raid, the Yemeni Civil War, the Skripal poisoning, and a mass killing by the Cameroon Armed Forces have attracted international attention.

(A: …all the things that are really very iffy, hhhch…)

(A: Really? Hm?)

Eliot Higgins started a blog under the pseudonym "Brown Moses", through which he published his research into video footage of the Syrian Civil War.

So right off the bat you've got the clue that this was set up as a propaganda outfit, but now they're also using them just like the Brigade 77 and many other groups, and Google now as well, to attack anybody who's has different opinions on what's going on. They've lots of them out there, lots and lots and lots of them out there. The elite don't sit back and let things happen, they plan in advance. Folk never really fathomed that out at all. They can't, you know. Then the media of course, the newspapers have got terrible names, will put out occasional stories that's taken off and could never be disproven, you see, so they'll carry a few of those ones, because everybody else is carrying them, to try to seem more legitimate again and folk fall right back into, it rather than just ignore them. You can't trust them.

Because how can you trust them? How can you trust them when they're lying? When do you trust liars? Hm? Who are known to lie to you, when do you start trusting them? NEVER is the answer to it. [Alan chuckles.] Never. Oh, don't you want this little bit of news, this is a good bit of news, you know?

It's like people, here's the thing too, you have no idea how intelligence agencies again set up Patriot Radio years ago in the 50s and 60s in America, as an example. Britain of course had lots of programs from, on the BBC Radio even during World War II, as I say George Orwell talked about it, and MI5 ran a lot of the organizations that he was on, and many of the other announcers as well.

But today you've got all the supposedly independent fact checkers you see, that have just got the credence for it. And who gives them the credence? Well, they're authorized by government. Well, we trust these people to give you good impartial advice on what's legitimate and what's not legitimate, you see. This is standard tyranny, isn't it? So standard it boggles the mind. It's put across in the same way as, well, these are reputable people, you know, we say so. [Alan chuckles.] And folk believe it.

You're living through incredible censored tyrannical times right now. It tells you too, it's so HUGE, this isn't just for Covid, folks. This is for your whole life long now, on the Internet and everything else, as you get monitored and tracked and traced and completely, utterly dissected and analyzed like you... phew. Most folk don't even know that, that they're being analyzed. They take it all for granted unfortunately.

But yeah, when do you trust a born liar? And folk don't know, as I say, the CIA set up the so-called alternate media to try to counter the Soviet propaganda. You can see the sense in it years ago, if you believe it's on the up and up, that you would put out counter propaganda. Because after all, it's always a battle for the minds, isn't it, from all sides? Believe us, we're the good guys.

But you have a legitimacy, you always think. And it's true, when you've obviously got a real tyranny on the go that's monitoring its people, but then in Britain they were doing the same thing in a quieter way, much quieter way. [Alan chuckles.] But as I say it's a battle for the minds by those that own you really, I don't care what era it is or what system or side you're on. But they did set up the counterbalance to communism. They used a lot of Christian organizations initially who could also bring people into the fold you might say the Christian fold by using Western propaganda to counter all the communistic/atheistical propaganda.

What is true too, is a lot of Christians across the Soviet bloc countries, and living in dangerous times because the communism, which is a front again for something else, that utterly hates Christianity, I mean utterly hates it. Communism was horribly atrocious to Christians when they caught them for anything at all, so much so that the horror stories are still valid and verifiable and HORRIBLE to this day, what happened with them. They HATED these people. It wasn't just killing them, it was utter, extreme, long drawn out torture for days, weeks and months at times. Utter hatred and contempt, demonic really, attack on them.

Folk literally had secret meetings in their home sometimes for special occasions and had children outside looking, watching for the people who would report them. They knew people in different areas that were all appointed to be there coming in as neighbors, new neighbors that would be really working for the government as spies. That was standard stuff. We have it here in the West too by the way. They pay civil servants who retire extra cash to live within certain areas. They start up little NGOs themselves, it could even be for pets or something, something like that. They get to know everybody and get the gossip. This is standard stuff.

Again, you find that Jacques Ellul the French philosopher, he's dead now, he talked about that in his books on Propaganda and Surveillance as well. In Surveillance he said that everybody had Cardex systems. That was the card system in these big rotating cards on a wheel type thing that they used to have. He said they've got all your data. This is from the 1950s on in the European countries. He gave France as an example, Britain had them too. Every single citizen, whether or not you had been in trouble, it made no difference, they had all the, they had gossip as well as all the data on you, or details, actual gossip added in. Which meant they had people throughout society collecting the gossip, folks. And you think you're free, eh? That's why you fight harder, you think you're free. In the Soviet system they couldn't even hide that so much, it was just so overt, you see.

So, here's an article to do with the Bay Area in California…

Bay Area says employees will be required to work from home three days a week after the pandemic to reduce greenhouse gas emissions

dailymail.co.uk / 26 Sept 2020

(A: There you go, you see, what did they say at the World Economic Forum and the Club of Rome? No one would be allowed to open up and go back to normal, they’ll have to fulfill criteria for sustainability, etc., and we can fulfill all of our climate control agendas through the Covid. Well, here you go. Here you go. N-n-n. You see, no one would have voluntarily closed for any reason. [Alan chuckles.] But you're mandated by law for Covid, and now you can't open up. It's... eeeeeeeeeeh, these guys had it all worked out, didn't they?)

A new proposal could require Californians to work remotely three days a week.

A number of Bay Area residents, including employees at large tech firms, were concerned over a new proposal approved by the Metropolitan Transportation Commission on Wednesday.

The controversial proposal would effectively ensure that sizable, office-based companies kept 60 per cent of their workers at home on any given workday to curb climate change.

(A: There you go. [Alan chuckles.].)

So it's a big stink about it because a lot of folk actually have said they have to get to workplaces to work because their homes are so tiny they can't even do it, a lot of people that have shared apartments and things like that. So, it's... N-n. Doesn't matter. This is the new system. This is the global reset, all part of it, austerity and so on. I give the talks on austerity years ago, how it would all come in. And here it's all here now.

Repressionomics: Get ready for the new permanent austerity

thelondoneconomic.com / 22 Aug 2020

AUSTERITY AND COVID: “A MATCH MADE IN HELL”

(A: There you go.)

Britain was the hardest hit of the G7 nations. The ex-hedge fund managing millionaire Chancellor, Rishi Sunak, claims that the UK tanked so badly because: “Social activities, like eating out, going to the cinema, shopping … comprise a much larger part of our economy than they do for most of our European comparative countries.”

(A: Then they go into the statistics thing about whose economy had fallen the most and so on. I'm very skeptical of statistics. It's like the virus, statistics are just like the virus, it's very political. [Alan chuckles.] Political statistics, eh. It's quite something. I'll put this article up though if you want to see it. So…)

PUSHING FOR A NEW AUSTERITY

In late-2019, the Institute for Fiscal Studies reported that “an awful lot” of austerity was “baked in” to the Tories’ (A: Conservatives.) supposedly generous manifesto. In April this year, millionaire Boris Johnson said: “I think this government will want to encourage that bounce back in all kinds of ways, but I’ve never particularly liked the term [austerity] and it’s certainly not part of our approach.” Notice that Johnson said he didn’t like the “term,” not the practice. (A: [Alan chuckles.])

I'll put these articles up. We're all going into austerity because that's what the UN wanted years ago. They put out lots of proclamations about the coming austerity in a post-consumerist society. Folk would laugh when I used to give the talks, oh, they couldn't make you be austere. Well, here you are folks, you're all broke. If you're not completely broke, you shortly will be. And even if you've got some money, you won't be buying anything without recommendation and permits, etc. Digital tracking, folks, eh, that's what it's all about.

Another Foreign Affairs one too...

The Future of the Liberal World Order

(A: Interesting article. 2011 this came out. It was about Internationalism AFTER America. Did you hear what I said? This is the big so-called advice think tank that advises governments, that's a boast that they have, they are the establishments' group, you see. It says…)

The Future of the Liberal World Order

Internationalism After America

foreignaffairs.com / May/June 2011 / G. JOHN IKENBERRY

(A: It goes on to say… and I love how they pad their… These characters love to impress you with their vocabulary so much, they'll pad it so much, you know just, maybe they get paid by the word, I don't know, or the line, I don't know.)

There is no longer any question: wealth and power are moving from the North and the West to the East and the South, and the old order dominated by the United States and Europe is giving way to one increasingly shared with non-Western rising states. But if the great wheel of power is turning, what kind of global political order will emerge in the aftermath?

(A: I'll just add to it, this character darn well knows that the West and the North funded all the other countries through the GATT treaties and the free-trade treaties. We funded them to come up. We gave all our factories, we paid for the factories to be shipped offshore from our country, uprooted lock, stock and barrel, we paid for it all for them to move, and the corporations too, to China and the Far East. Come on here. He won't mention that in this one, will he? Like it just happened by itself? No, it didn't. So now you don't have the work. You haven't had the work since then. [Alan chuckles.])

Some anxious observers argue that the world will not just look less American -- it will also look less liberal. Not only is the United States' preeminence passing away, they say, but so, too, is the open and rule-based international order that the country has championed since the 1940s. In this view, newly powerful states are beginning to advance their own ideas and agendas for global order, and a weakened United States will find it harder to defend the old system. The hallmarks of liberal internationalism-openness and rule-based relations enshrined in institutions such as the United Nations (A: Phew! [Alan chuckles.]) and norms such as multilateralism-could give way to a more contested and fragmented system of blocs, spheres of influence, mercantilist networks, and regional rivalries.

(A: So, there you are, this is all by the big think tanks that plan things. The same guys that draft up by the way the free-trade agreements to give all your factories abroad. And for you to fund the same factories and corporations for 15 years minimum every year to make up for any losses incurred because of the move to the Far East. It could be renewed again at the end of the 15 years. Isn't that wonderful for the big rich boys, eh, and gals. So here you are. What's interesting too, they give you the postwar settlements, they say…)

A succession of postwar settlements-Vienna in 1815, Versailles in 1919, Yalta and Potsdam in 1945, and the U.S., Soviet, and European negotiations that ended the Cold War and reunified Germany in the early 1990s-allowed the great powers to update the principles and practices of their relations. Through war and settlement, the great powers learned how to operate within a multipolar balance-of-power system. Over time, the order has remained a decentralized system in which major states compete and balance against one another. But it has also evolved. The great powers have developed principles and practices of restraint and accommodation that have served their interests.

(A: They're talking about them as though they're living entities, you know.)

The corporations rule over you, they have your whole life long. Big massive international corporations. Then you have all these huge... [Alan chuckles.] What would you call them actually? As I say, it's very much like the organizations that Blofeld was in in the James Bond movies, like Spector and so on that literally were set up, you know, they're massive cartel systems run by gangs, and they can raise countries up and dissipate... It's like George Soros said it when he put that article in the newspapers boasting about how he collapsed Britain's economy at one point by doing bets with two of his pals. I phoned them up, he says, and we made the deal and we did it, they did investments which literally broke the bank as they say. Britain had to borrow millions and millions of pounds to try to float the economy again.

There's no law against it apparently, you know. Really. Or is it because these same characters [Alan chuckles.] like Soros, they already own the system? Meaning that the legal system as well, since there's no laws to stop them from doing it. The same thing, I've noticed, how come after all these bank crashes no one gets arrested for what they've done? Each time it happens, still no laws. Still no laws. Still no laws. They keep saying, oh, we're putting new laws in. No, they don't. No, they don't, folks. We are run by a huge gang, aren't we?

Anyway, I'll put this one up too about The Liberal Order, etc. It's quite amazing. What you're really looking at when it comes to you giving these settlements from Vienna onwards all the way up to Potsdam and so on, in the Soviet Union as well, what they're telling you is, the big money boys of the planet make these new arrangements after the big wars, which they profit from massively, that allows them to do international gangsterism better as far as I can see. That's what it is. M-hm. There you go. I'll put that up for those that want to go through it.

Also, there is…

Moment Louisville gunman, 26, waves his gun around after firing fourteen shots at cops, (A: You can actually see it, eh.) injuring two, during first night of Breonna Taylor protests as BLM demonstrators take to the streets for a third night and claim sanctuary in church

dailymail.co.uk / 26 Sept 2020

That's the, it's almost a New Agey church, it's a Unitarian church, you know. It says you actually see the guy just pulling the… They've got the photographs of the guy and everything. He started firing off, I think a whole clip into the police directly. He hit two of them, at least two that we know of so far anyway. It's astonishing as folk are going just nuts thinking they've got the rights to start slaughtering people. Because somebody else gets hurt their answer is to just pick anybody of any other race and kill them. Apart from that too, you've got characters at the top that are giving these youngsters the ideas it's free reign on white people. It's terrible. I've got articles here, I don't even mention them, of white families getting bumped off, over the last month in fact. Even Mennonites, eh, who's vehicle broke down. They were changing the tire and... ftt. Because you know, they got robbed as well but the fact is, these gangsters eventually turned around eventually just kill them anyway. They had five kids there. Ftt. There you go.

This is a good article by the way and it's from May the 15th and Whitney Webb who does really good investigative journalism. This is says…

Head of the Hydra: The Rise of Robert Kadlec

mintpressnews.com / 15 May 2020

(A: Interesting name, Kadlec, not Cadillac but Kadlec. Very similar, eh? It says…)

Last Friday, a group of Democratic Senators "demanded" that the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) Assistant Secretary for Preparedness and Response (ASPR) (A: [Alan chuckles.] I like the name ASPR, the acronym ASPR, you know.) Robert Kadlec, "accurately disclose all his personal, financial and political ties in light of new reporting that he had failed to do so previously" after it was revealed that he had failed to note all "potential conflicts of interest" on his nomination paperwork.

(A: Right? So, he's, remember he is for…)

Health and Human Services (HHS) Assistant Secretary for Preparedness and Response

The report in question, published last Monday (A: That link is here too…) by The Washington Post, detailed the ties of Kadlec to a man named Fuad El-Hibri, the founder of a "life sciences" company first known as BioPort and now called Emergent Biosolutions. Kadlec had previously disclosed his ties to El-Hibri and Emergent Biosolutions for a separate nomination years prior, but had failed to do so when nominated to head ASPR.

Though The Post does note Kadlec's recent failure to disclose these connections, the article largely sanitizes Kadlec's earlier yet crucial history and even obfuscates the full extent of his ties to the BioPort founder, among other glaring omissions. In reality, Kadlec has much more than his ties to El-Hibri looming large as "potential conflict of interests," as his decades-long career in shaping U.S. "biodefense" policy was directly enabled by his deep ties to intelligence, (A: This is an interesting article if you can stick with it.)

…deep ties to intelligence, Big Pharma, the Pentagon and a host of corrupt yet powerful characters.

(A: Right.)

Thanks to a long and deliberate process to introduce biodefense policy, driven by Robert Kadlec and his sponsors, $7 billion dollars-worth of federally-owned vaccines, antidotes and medicines – held in strategically arranged repositories across the country in case of a health emergency (A: This is the emergency preparedness, folks.) – are now in the hands of one single individual. Those repositories, which compose the Strategic National Stockpile (SNS), are the exclusive domain of HHS' ASPR, a post created under Kadlec's watchful eye (A: So he helped rush it through.) and tailored over the years to meet his very specific requirements.

From this perch, Robert Kadlec has final say on where the stockpile's contents are sourced, as well as how, when and where they are deployed. He is the sole source procurer of medical material and pharmaceuticals, making him the best friend of Big Pharma and other healthcare industry giants who have been in his ear every step of the way.

(A: It's a good article actually. It just shows you how these characters can create organizations for what-if scenarios, then end up heading them, and then being the purchaser or decide who gets all the grants from, it's all taxpayers money, eh. And it goes on and on and it says…)

The story of how a former USAF flight surgeon… (A: It's true. I think there's two of them at the top. I remember reading bits of it before, there was two of them at the top, one of them was maybe a dentist or something, and they end up getting a position like Fauci, you know, kind of at that level, maybe even higher.)

The story of how a former USAF flight surgeon came to have the exclusive dealer license over the single biggest stash of drugs in the history of the world is as disturbing as it is significant in light of current events, particularly given that Kadlec now leads the coronavirus response for all of HHS. Yet, Kadlec's rise to power is not a case of an evil mastermind conquering a uniquely vulnerable point of the nation's resources. Instead, it is a case of a man deeply enmeshed in the world of intelligence, military intelligence and corporate corruption dutifully fulfilling the vision of his friends in high places and behind closed doors.

(A: …and it goes on and on and on. Hhmph. It says…)

In this third installment (A: …a good article.) of (A: The links are here of…) "Engineering Contagion: Amerithrax, Coronavirus and the Rise of the Biotech-Industrial Complex," Kadlec is shown to hail from a tight-knit group of "bioterror alarmists" in government and the private sector who gained prominence thanks to their penchant for imagining the most horrific, yet fictitious scenarios that inspired fear among Presidents, top politicians and the American public. Among those fictitious scenarios was the "Dark Winter" exercise discussed in Part I.

It is interesting. This is a good article. I'll put this up to for those that want to go through it. Because you don't realize, the media doesn't tell you this stuff, the general media, do they? They don't go through this kind of stuff to show you all these connections. And who's profiting off them. And who's got the power. And who's going to make more money. And who's connected to who, you know. It really is interesting, to me anyway, how things really work. I've always been interested in how things really work. Also…

London anti-lockdown protest turns violent with disturbing attacks on police

express.co.uk / 20 Sept 2020

(A: You've got to laugh at, this is from the Express. All the media in Britain is on board for a complete lockdown it seems. Absolutely, you know. So, anything that kicks back in any way is, oh, attacks on the police. Nobody I think was arrested when they went through there [Alan chuckles.] pulling down statues and so on. Because a lot of them were migrants who claim that they were victimized, and these characters, these statues represented, like victimized their ancestors or something like that, whatever it happened to be. The cops were nowhere to be seen. But they're allowed, they're turning on the rest of the public, eh? So, the people are kicking back. They're fed up with this nonsense, they know it's a scam, they know what's going on. And they know if you go through this, come whatever spring there'll be, whatever currency you have is going to be worth maybe 1/3 of what it is now. You know that don't you? You don't close down the entire economy and the food systems and all that. Whatever happens is planned to happen, folks, before you even start it. So...)

FOOTAGE from the anti-lockdown protest in London on Saturday shows clashes…

(A: It's amazing too, some papers say, oh there were thousands of them there, the other ones say there was a few hundred. You can't even get the general media to give you any honesty at all on anything.)

A Metropolitan Police statement condemned what they called “pockets of hostility and outbreaks of violence towards officers”.

They called the attacks on its officers "unacceptable" and said the protesters were “putting themselves and others at risk”.

(A: Well, from what? … what are they putting people at risk from?)

Footage from the scene shows some officers, with batons drawn, pushed back by crowds.

(A: Now they’ve got the horses set loose and the mounted police and so on. Stuff they use in the Middle Ages, eh, it’s the same old stuff. So, there’s a little video clip there too of course, but it doesn’t mean much, the video clips.)

(A: The folk are saying, and they have placards up now saying…)

…"this is now tyranny" and called COVID-19 a "hoax".

(A: Tyranny is exactly what it is, folks. With a well-thought-out plan obviously of tyranny. No doubt about it. Absolutely. Again, just like martial law. There used to be five, no more than five or six, it's the same stuff, that's why emergency powers is martial law.)

Prime Minister Boris Johnson has admitted that national guidance may have to go beyond the current "rule of six".

(A: You see, the virus can also count… Oh, wait a minute here, wait a minute. Oh no, it's okay, there's only 5 of them there, that's okay, I won't attack them. But there you go. Oh, make it four, because one of them's eating and he's got a sandwich in his hand.)

Another one too says…

Thousands at Trafalgar Square in furious lockdown protest and police arrest 32 - express.co.uk /1
9 September 2020

Funny how they always get the 32 or 33. M-hm. What d'you expect from people with chess boards going around their hats, eh. The tessellated floor. [Alan laughing.] They live between two worlds, the very naïve one and the real one that runs it all, the white and the black of it all. I'll put these ones up.

Then we've got this one. I mean, everything ties into eugenics like I said earlier in the talk. It's all, the whole idea of climate change was to fit the bill to get the public to start cutting back on consumption, your energy use. Because with energy use folk get healthier, with more energy and cleaner energy and better energy and heat in the winter and stuff like that, basic stuff, then they breed, and they have children. And they can't have children, you see.

That's austerity, it has to be brought in instead by having less children and a way to, you know, use climate change as an excuse not to even feed you properly and so on. Get you off meat and protein and start giving you basically, the big corporations, the five agribusinesses, their genetically modified vegetables and everything. You know, saturated with all their pesticides and herbicides and all the rest of it. That's okay though, they tell you that's wonderful. I'm sure all the true news, the true news group that they have there that go over all the different articles will agree with that, that that won't harm you at all. Experts have said that's not giving you cancers and things. No, no, no. Nope.

There you go, but anyway this is called…

The Eugenic Problem

Modern History Project

modernhistoryproject.org

(A: Stuff I’ve read before years ago. This article here was about the eugenic problem, it's called. It says…)

In a recent edition of his journal Global Future, Stephen Lewis, the United Nations Special Envoy for HIV/AIDS and former Deputy Director of UNICEF, asks the following question regarding the AIDS epidemic in Africa:

(A: He's a lifelong politician. He used to be with the NDP, you know, what they call the National Democratic Party that was a few degrees left of center, or left I should say of Trotsky, and maybe a few more left of Lenin even. They have a great income, a good career in it too. He says...)

"We've lost hundreds of thousands of children, probably millions of children during the last decade… How can it possibly be explained or justified?"

-- "The Ugly Truth of the AIDS Pandemic", in Global Future, vol 1, 2006

Come now, Mr. Lewis! It's hard to believe that a high-level U.N. official would even have to ask such a question.

First, this could be explained as the product of a covert but successful population reduction program -- a program which uses do-gooder organizations like UNICEF for political cover. The proponents of Darwinian eugenics programs, like the British Eugenics Society and the Club of Rome, have openly discussed such things for decades. For instance, here's a quote from Prince Philip, (A: I've mentioned before Prince Philip, is quite open, because he’s arrogant, a good arrogant psychopath. And often he's rather sozzled, you know, he likes to be fueled, ah, a good part of the day.) founder of the World Wildlife Fund (WWF), flagship of the modern "environmental" movement:

(A: Remember the Sierra Club too, I think it was up there with the... All these organizations that are all saying there's too many people, save the animals/kill the people, that's really what their con is here.)

"Human population growth is probably the single most serious long-term threat to survival. (A: This is from Prince Philip, right.) We're in for a major disaster if it isn't curbed... We have no option. If it isn't controlled voluntarily, it will be controlled involuntarily by an increase in disease, starvation and war."

-- HRH Prince Philip, interview "Vanishing Breeds Worry Prince Philip, But Not as Much as Overpopulation", People Magazine, Dec. 21, 1981

Second, this could be justified by the twisted logic of elitist eco-socialism, which says that such a "culling of the herd" is necessary and desirable, especially among inferior races. Again, from Prince Philip:

"The object of the WWF is to 'conserve' the system as a whole; not to prevent the killing of individual animals. Those who are concerned about the conservation of nature accept... that most species produce a surplus that is capable of being culled without in any way threatening the survival of the species as a whole."

-- HRH Prince Philip, founder of WWF, in the Chancellor's Lecture, Salford University, June 4, 1982.

At the 30th annual conference of the Global Health Council, Mr. Lewis said that Africa seems to be "under some kind of otherworldly curse". We note that Africans in particular are more susceptible to AIDS than other races -- almost as if someone had planned it that way.

"What is so intolerable about the continued funding crisis is not just the staggering loss of life, so much of it completely unnecessary, but what it says about us, the donor nations and our lamentable, incomprehensible behavior... We know what we are doing, but we do it anyway."

-- from speech at "Global Health Council conference", May 28, 2003

Just so! However, it isn't the "funding" or "climate change" or some other bugaboo that is the real source of the problem.

The alleged perpetrators of this genocide have the resources, the ideology and the track record of using "disease, starvation and war" to further their goals. This would explain why the AIDS epidemic has not been stopped after 25 years, despite untold billions of dollars spent on both medical research and the futile "humanitarian efforts" of the U.N.

Consider the words of humanist Sir Julian Huxley, (A: Remember one of the founders of UNESCO and Planned Parenthood, eh.) Vice-president of the British Eugenics Society (A: …as well, I didn't know that.), founding director of UNESCO, and co-founder of the WWF:

(A: There you go, you see.)

"The lowest strata... allegedly less well-endowed genetically... must not have too easy access to relief or hospital treatment lest the removal of the last check on natural selection should make it too easy for children to be produced or to survive..."

(A: For the hard of thinking I'll repeat that from Sir Julian Huxley.)

"The lowest strata... allegedly less well-endowed genetically... must not have too easy access to relief or hospital treatment lest the removal of the last check on natural selection should make it too easy for children to be produced or to survive..."

-- Julian Huxley, Galton Lecture at the Eugenics Society, 1936

"Thus, even though it is quite true that any radical eugenics policy of controlled human breeding will be for many years politically and psychologically impossible,

(A: I remember reading this from his actual book at the time, his speeches that he gave at UNESCO years ago, not this particular article, but he quotes selections from it.)

"Thus, even though it is quite true that any radical eugenics policy of controlled human breeding will be for many years politically and psychologically impossible, it will be important for UNESCO to see that the eugenic problem is examined with the greatest care..."

-- Julian Huxley, "UNESCO: Its Purpose and Its Philosophy", 1947

(A: You see, so... natural selection is also meaning the inferior types should die off. That's what it is. It's not just elite mating with an elite and so on. This, what they call natural selection, they're talking about all classes, all groups, right down to the bottom, eh, the poorest. There you go. It says…)

I'm sorry to say it Mr. Lewis, but it looks as though you've been sent on a fool's errand!

(A: [Alan chuckles.] ...why he's still asking questions as to why it's happening across Africa, all these different things and so on.)

A little research reveals that the International AIDS Vaccine Initiative (IAVI), of which Stephen Lewis is a director, was launched by none other than the Rockefeller Foundation (A: Oh, I'm surprised.) and heavily funded by the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, which has provided over $150 million dollars so far.

Both Stephen Lewis and Seth Berkley, the President of IAVI, are on the faculty of Columbia University in Manhattan, which is closely associated with nearby Rockefeller University. Joint programs include the center on "Sustainable Development" at Columbia's Earth Institute, headed by Jeffrey Sachs, who also directed the recent Millennium Project on sustainable development for the United Nations Development Program.

Are you starting to get the picture, folks? I mean, you can keep... [Alan chuckles.] falling over logs in your way along the path here until you figure out, why are all these logs here, what does it mean here? Well, you can go on and on, this is only part way through the article here, I could go on and on with it, but I have no time to do it all. I have done it all before anyway with my own articles actually years ago.

The Scottish National Party… Let's just call it the Socialist National Party from Scotland, SNPS, that's what they should call it…

SNP caves in: Nicola Sturgeon humiliated as party forced to row back on controversial bill

express.co.uk / 24 Sept 2020

(A: This is how they give you the lie, you see. It says…)

NICOLA STURGEON has been forced into an embarrassing u-turn over the controversial Hate Crime and Public Order Bill.

(A: No, they haven’t dropped it, you see, they just amended it a little bit. You see what I’m saying? Because they knew they would never get the whole thing passed initially, so they give it a little, okay, we’ll listen to you, we’ll amend it a little bit.)

The legislation was introduced in order to provide further protections against any hate crime relating to religion, sexual orientation or transgender identity. Initially, the bill would mean words or behaviour considered to be “abusive” or likely to stir up hatred would be considered an offence. The bill received a huge backlash, however, with critics arguing it would stifle free speech.

(A: Well of course, that’s the whole point of it. And it tends to get worse and worse and worse.)

Supposing an organization comes along, they are always on about Nazis, right, although Nazism is long gone because that was national socialism. But supposing in a sci-fi movie scenario and somebody came along, and you had this massive army just appear, right, and they passed a bill saying you can’t talk about them. You're done for... If you can’t talk about them, you're finished.

DON'T let these laws pass. You cannot let these laws pass. I don't care what excuse they give for it, it's a lie and a con, absolute con for a different purpose. Because you're eventually going to find out you've been overwhelmed with some other organization that's ruling your whole nation and your lives, folks. That's what it's for. That's exactly what it's for. It's also the communist tactic too that's been used over and over again as well, hate speech, until you can't, if you're stifled you can't say, if you can't say what the problem is you're done for. Not someone's opinion if you're telling the truth on the topic, no. If you can't mention the problem, you're done for, folks. Whatever the problem is. Of course, it's that way.

I mentioned earlier about these no-knock raids or whatever they call them in America, where they go in the middle of the night just like they did in the, just like the Soviets did in the KGB, and the squads too, they had the Stasi squads in East Germany. In the middle of the night, it's always in the middle of the night or early morning, the 3 o'clock in the morning. Somehow, I don't know why they like it but that's what they like. I'm sure there's reasons for it, you're more confused or whatever at that particular time, generally. But this says…

Anger over lack of charges in Breonna Taylor's death leads to widespread protests - thehill.com / 24 Sept 2020

But again, they've got the groups jumping on the riots regardless, and creating the riots actually. Riots are different than protests. Riots, burning places down is not protest. No. But again, I'm not going to go into the rights and wrongs of, of what they are actually, of the terminology. The fact is, you definitely have subversive groups, well-funded, to jump in on all of this for a different reason. And they are actually saying that, it says in maybe this article or other articles too, it says that this is a revolution, you see, is a revolution. And they'll use any spark or spike as they call it and jump on it to get the revolution on the go.

What do they think they're going to bring in, the people at the bottom? Hm? Widespread starvation? Do they really think they're going to get a job as some new type of Gestapo sort of thing over the general population, is that what they think they're going to get? So, they can do what they want and somehow get rewarded for it? Is that what they really think? Well, the followers don't know that the leaders know the big picture, [Alan chuckles.] what it's really all about. And you're going to wish forever that it never happened very shortly, I guarantee you. Where you'll have nowhere to live when you get your water shut off because, oh, this economy is for austerity. And you're going to, it's going to be hard to get any food supplies coming in. Hm. You wait and see.

But you've definitely got a revolution on the go, and at least on their signs and so on they're saying it, and their chants, that it's a revolution. It's a communist revolution. They think it's communism. [Alan laughing.] They're so ignorant they don't even know what happened in the Soviet Union, hhhhhhh, or the Soviet bloc countries, eh.

And back to Scotland…

Jason Leitch tells Scots students they can't move back in with mum and dad under current lockdown rules

dailyrecord.co.uk / 24 Sept 2020

(A: So, there you go, there's your freedom in the West. There's nothing left to save. You can't stand up and fight for countries where your leaders are doing this kind of thing to you, do you understand that? It says…)

Students who have already moved into university accommodation cannot return to live with their parents under current lockdown rules, Scotland's clinical director has confirmed.

Jason Leitch said that undergraduates living in shared flats or halls of residence now formed a single household.

(A: …that’s how they’re labeling you. Communal living folks, get used to it. It might be permanent. Communitarianism, eh, that's what they used to call it a while back. They're trying to call it, oh, it's not communism, it's communitarianism. Ftt. Here it all is. So, no matter if you're about five or six to an apartment, or a room, you'll be classified as a separate household, there you go.)

Fears are being raised about the rapid spread among younger people spilling over. It was also claimed the spread shows mistakes from care homes and cruise ships in the early days of the pandemic are being repeated.

(A: No, they’re not. Nope. Nope, they’re not getting ill, of the tests, not getting ill if they're testing positive. But facts have got nothing to do with agendas, eh.)

Now, these hate laws, which can be expanded, which they're already being expanded in countries that had them longer, to include whatever is the latest thing to be added to it. There's lots and lots of things they add all the time to it. That's what they're really for, is to retrain you into a whole new way of living and thinking, and not thinking. Conditioned responses basically, very Pavlovian. Here's an article here…

New Poll: 62% Say the Political Climate Prevents Them from Sharing Political Views

cato.org / 22 July 2020

50% of strong liberals support firing Trump donors, 36% of strong conservatives support firing Biden donors; 32% are worried about missing out on job opportunities because of their political opinions

62% agree "the political climate these days prevents me from saying things I believe because others might find them offensive"

(A: Well, this is the game they play with their hard-created armies, for every possible viewpoint they’ve got an army created. They’ll immediately stand up and say, I find that offensive. There you go. You see how it’s all done, though. You’re not going to… You’ve got planned chaos here, until you’re in a box. I don’t think you’ll even get to use sign language, you know. Or even if you use the inappropriate sign language, hhhch, they’ll probably say that’s offensive as well, maybe it is.)

A new Cato Institute/?YouGov national survey of 2,000 Americans finds that 62% of Americans say the political climate these days prevents them from saying things they believe because others might find them offensive. This is up from 2017 when 58% agreed with this statement.

Do you ever wonder why they do these polls and surveys? The same things? You know, everything, maybe it’s a one-off. No, no. They do them every year to see if it’s working, you see that’s why these things are done. I’ll put that one up as well.

Another article too, and you've probably heard about Hunter Biden and how he’s involved in some things he shouldn’t be involved in and so on. Big money. It’s just so corrupt, the whole system seems so corrupt. But again, if it’s legal, there’s no laws against it, I guess it’s not corrupt at all, eh.

Senate report links Hunter Biden to ‘prostitution or human trafficking ring’ - nypost.com / 23 Sept 2020

Senate GOP claims John Kerry falsely denied knowledge of Hunter Biden - NYPost.com / 23 September 2020

Hunter Biden get $3.5 million wire transfer from the Russian billionaire report reveals - nypost.com / 23 September 2020

GOP senators release explosive report on Hunter Biden, Burisma - nypost.com / 23 September 2020

I'll put this article up too for those who want to follow that kind of stuff. Nothing new in it of course. We do know to that actually parts of the Ukraine and Georgia and so on are really part of the CIA operative centers, that's why so much is going on there right now and has been for a while. Never mind the oil pipelines and the money involved in all the rest of it.

Last week I mentioned microchips, here's an article…

All the Rage in Sweden: Embedding Microchips Under Your Skin

futurism.com / 14 May 2018

RIP wallets, implanted microchips are here to stay.

Wallets are such a bother. They flop around your pocket or purse, swelling as they munch on rarely-used loyalty cards and superfluous receipts.

But we're living in the freakin' future now. Why do we still have to lug around several different credit cards, or keys for irritating doors to the car and the office, when technology has far surpassed the need for any of them?

(A: This is like a big ad for it all going about, wow, this is wonderful.)

Lots of people are moving to store these sorts of things in their smartphones, of course, using services like Apple Pay and smart locks. But phones can be lost and hacked.

… about 3,000 Swedes — are opting for something even more invasive … according to the Associated French Press.

The chip itself essentially acts as a digital keychain.

(A: They get it implanted in your hand generally.)

NFC (near-field communication) is a way of sending information wirelessly from a passive chip to a reader, but only when they are about 4 cm (1.6 in) apart (you might have heard of radio frequency identification, or RFID — NFC is a more sophisticated form of it).

(A: So, they also have active ones as well.)

A chip in the hand can help people do things like sign into the gym,

(A: It's just so much, it's just too much hassle signing in, you know.)

unlock doors to cars

(A: That’s just, putting a handout and turning a handle, it’s soo tiring.)

and offices and make credit card payments. Over time, as the technology progresses, the implant will be able to do even more.

(A: This is like a repetition of the stuff that that professor was doing in England at Warwick, was it, University. Or was his name Warwick, I can’t remember. But anyway, he was a big one to go put implants into his arms and it was all over the mainstream media because these are front man for the whole project. But here is Sweden doing it again and it’s got...)

… “implant parties,” often organized by larger companies, to hook themselves up. And the chips are similar to the ones veterinarians implant in dogs and cats so that their owners can find them in case they run away again.

(A: Hmph.)

But now, people who get the implant aren’t counterculture biohackers — they’re the everyman.

(A: There you go, that’s straight out of HG Wells, you call them ‘everyman’, you know.)

This is especially true in Sweden, where these chips are so mainstream that, since June 2017, people have been able to buy train tickets with their microchips.

So, there you go, this is how you’re getting tracked and traced and where it's supposed to go. The youngsters again will go, oh it's so trendy, and they'll say, oh this film star or this rock musician, yep, they got it done, yeah, yeah. They’re also eating crickets in sandwiches now, you now, insects and things. [Alan chuckles.]

This other article too is the Daily Mail Online.

Thousands of Swedes are getting microchip IDs inserted into their hands to swipe into homes, offices, concerts and even to access social media - dailymail.co.uk / 23 Oct 2018

There you go, the same thing. And let's see…

The Surveillance Economy - irlpodcast.org / 4 Feb 2019

A good article, again. Very good article. It's a good little article. Yeah, you're all getting your behavior shaped, again, and managed. Now you'll get all kinds of monitoring. Everything you utter now is going to get monitored. And rectified. Oh, we're rectifying your speech, you didn't realize what you said there, did you? We hope you didn't realize what you said. There could be a fine if you did know what you said. Hhhhhhhhh.

UK's chief scientific adviser has £600k shareholding in firm contracted to develop vaccines

thelondoneconomic.com / 24 sept 2020

(A: Oh, there's no conflict there for goodness sake, eh. So…)

A senior Tory MP and former cabinet minister said he should have disclosed his interest.

(A: Ttt. There ya go.)

The UK's chief scientific adviser Sir Patrick Vallance has a £600,000 shareholding in a drugs giant contracted to develop a Covid-19 vaccine for the Government, (A: That's in the Telegraph, the daily Telegraph I guess, has revealed. The links are here.) The Telegraph has revealed.

In July, GlaxoSmithKline (GSK) and drugs multinational Sanofi agreed a deal with the UK Government to supply it with up to 60 million doses of Covid-19 vaccine, subject to final contract.

It has a similar deal with the US Government for an initial 100 million doses.

But according to an investigation published today, Sir Patrick, who also chairs the Government's expert advisory panel on vaccines, holds a deferred bonus of 43,111 shares in GSK worth £600,000 from his time as president of the multinational drug company.

(A: [Alan laughing.] Bachhhhh, that's just, that's an oversight for goodness sake, anybody can forget these things.)

This other one too, I'll put them both up maybe. We'll see.

Sir Patrick Vallance has £600,000 shareholding in firm contracted to develop vaccines - telegraph.co.uk / 23 Sept 2020

Remember folks before I finish off with these articles, I'm not finished quite yet though. Go into cuttingthroughthematrix.com, list my official sites which are all on cuttingthroughthematrix.com. If you can't download my talk one day, try one of the other sites because there is definitely things happening now as they step up their program to deal with folk who tell you untruths, as they say, or false news, eh, or stuff you thought you shouldn't say anyway, you know, like truth, you know. [Alan chuckles.] That is forbidden. You can't have truth. And it all depends who says the truth, isn't it? They can use the same exact, the same exact, I could use the same language, the same sentencing, the same word for word stuff, if I say it it might be called false truth, you see, it's like-a truth, only the people that's authorized can give you the real truth. If you said the same thing, and even read their stuff, it could be like-a truth but not true. Ftt.

It's almost like the intelligence nerds, as they say, there's known unknowns, and unknown knowns, and unknown unknowns, and known knowns. That's what they came out with years ago, remember that one? And you're all left scratching their heads saying what's that? Oh, I don't know. I guess that's an unknown, eh? So, it's the same kind of thing here too, of who can say what, and who's authorized to say anything. And what a state of affairs and tyranny eh when they're going to authorize people to give you information, and anybody else who isn't authorized is going to be put in prison? …because you said something? Hhhhhhhhhh. [Alan whispers.] They said something. Oooo. Wow. There ya go.

So, remember make a list of my sites. When you're there you can buy a disk or book from me, my talks. Or donate to me, straight donations are awfully welcome. PayPal, straight cash, you can send cash, that always gets by regular post by the way. Don't register anything, it will just get here by regular. And Money Gram you can send or personal check and any other way you can think of. Help me tick along.

I’d like to remind folk too that I am on with Neil Foster on Reality Bytes radio on Wednesday, 30 September, 1 PM Eastern standard time. So, 1 PM Eastern standard Time Wednesday, 30 September Reality Bytes Radio with Neil Foster and you’ll hear two Scots guys giving a good chat about the state of the world, life and the universe and everything, etc.

So now I’ll get onto these other ones, just a couple of articles I think left here. I’ll also put up an article from last week, I think it was the week before, a Whitney Webb interview.

Whitney Webb Interview – 2020 Election Chaos Being Used To Set Stage For The Final Technocratic Push - thelastamericanvagabond.com / 4 Sept 2020

“Bipartisan” Washington Insiders Reveal Their Plan for Chaos if Trump Wins the Election - unlimitedhangout.com / 3 Sept 2020

Good article. Because we're certainly going through it, right, aren't we, the whole agenda. Technocracy efficiency to tyranny under the guise of a just society where you can't say anything that's going to offend any group that's said to be offended. I mean, they create groups to be offended, d'you understand that? Down the road eventually people will have to complain about the fact they can’t get, they can't buy two socks, a pair of socks at a time because of austerity. So, they're only going to get one sock, so we better get the one-sock coalition together who are offended if the public demand two socks. What's wrong with one sock? We like one sock, you know, you're hateful if you demand a pair of socks, you know. They could make anything normal, any bizarre thing normal. As you probably noticed. Hm? Just by repetition and passing laws and penalizing you. If you notice it. If you have an opinion on something. What, you've got an opinion on that? Oh no, that's not the opinion that's been authorized, you know.

I don't know if you ever saw the old Monty Python clip. I wasn't really into Monty Python but occasionally they did a good little sketch on something, a good skit. One of them was the government Department for Arguments. The guy comes into get an argument and he says, is this the Department of Arguments? No, it's not, says the guy behind the desk, you see. Well it says it on your door. The guy behind the desk, are you arguing with me? And before you know it, they're arguing the whole thing. And that's how it goes, you know, the Department of Arguments. And that's what you're living in.

It's like gaslighting, you see, it's all gaslighting. Your common sense and rationale is under attack. Your sensibilities are under attack. Enormously so. To create a form of mental illness on you. Because when you're not allowed to use your own logic and observations, then you truly have a master, a master above you that's dominating you. And who is tyrannical, no doubt about it, definitely tyrannical. You can't think that. You can't say that. You can't even, even mistakenly come to a conclusion, [Alan chuckles.] the wrong conclusion.

You see, this is complete intolerance. This is not democracy. This is not freedom of any kind. This is conquering, it's to CONQUER the people by another group who know what they're doing. You know that don't you?

Anyway, for myself Alan Watt from Ontario Canada, where I've had lots of rain recently, it's good night and may your God or your gods go with you.

Topics of show covered in following links:

Europe’s lockdown will kill more people worldwide than Covid-19 virus, German minister warns

rt.com / 24 Sept 2020

Lockdown 'may kill 75,000' - that's the official projection of the deadly toll of Covid restrictions including missed cancer diagnoses, cancelled operations and health impacts of a recession. The virus death toll? 42,000

dailymail.co.uk / 25 Sept 2020

Middle School Football Game For Not Wearing Mask

zerohedge.com / 24 Sept 2020

Open Letter from Medical Doctors and Health Professionals to All Belgian Authorities and All Belgian Media

aier.org / 20 Sept 2020

Europe is facing a double-dip recession as coronavirus second wave arrives

cnbc.com / 24 Sept 2020

Deposit &quot;Digital Dollars&quot; Directly To &quot;Each American&quot;

zerohedge.com / 24 Sept 2020

YouTube adds fact-check information panels above search results in the UK to stop the spread of misinformation on the video platform

dailymail.co.uk / 24 Sept 2020

YouTube, Facebook, Twitter adopt uniform ‘hate speech’ standards for censoring content

lifesitenews.com / 26 Sept 2020

Covid Facts – The Inconvenient Truth – One bump too many?

theirishsentinel.com / Posted by Helena Handbasket / Sep 21, 2020

Pre-emptive and indefinite detention in the new Victorian Government Omnibus Bill

youtube.com / 20 Sept 2020

Dan Andrews' new COVID Omnibus bill 'empowers the untrained with draconian abilities'

youtube.com / 22 Sept 2020

Bay Area says employees will be required to work from home three days a week after the pandemic to reduce greenhouse gas emissions

dailymail.co.uk / 26 Sept 2020

: Get ready for the new permanent austerity

thelondoneconomic.com / 22 Aug 2020

The Future of the Liberal World Order

foreignaffairs.com / May/June 2011

Moment Louisville gunman, 26, waves his gun around after firing fourteen shots at cops

dailymail.co.uk / 26 Sept 2020

London anti-lockdown protest turns violent with disturbing attacks on police

express.co.uk / 20 Sept 2020

Nicola Sturgeon humiliated as party forced to row back on controversial bill

express.co.uk / 24 Sept 2020

Anger over lack of charges in Breonna Taylor's death leads to widespread protests

thehill.com / 24 Sept 2020

Jason Leitch tells Scots students they can't move back in with mum and dad under current lockdown rules

dailyrecord.co.uk / 24 Sept 2020

Second wave of Covid cases in Europe is not causing deaths to spike compared with the peak in spring

dailymail.co.uk / 19 Sept 2020

New Poll: 62% Say the Political Climate Prevents Them from Sharing Political Views

cato.org / 22 July 2020

Senate report links Hunter Biden to ‘prostitution or human trafficking ring’

nypost.com / 23 Sept 2020

All the Rage in Sweden: Embedding Microchips Under Your Skin

futurism.com / 14 May 2018

Thousands of Swedes are getting microchip IDs inserted into their hands to swipe into homes, offices, concerts and even to access social media

dailymail.co.uk / 23 Oct 2018

The Surveillance Economy

irlpodcast.org / 4 Feb 2019

UK’s chief scientific adviser has £600k shareholding in firm contracted to develop vaccines

thelondoneconomic.com / 24 sept 2020

Sir Patrick Vallance has £600,000 shareholding in firm contracted to develop vaccines

telegraph.co.uk / 23 Sept 2020

Set Stage For The Final Technocratic Push

thelastamericanvagabond.com / 4 Sept 2020

“Bipartisan” Washington Insiders Reveal Their Plan for Chaos if Trump Wins the Election

unlimitedhangout.com / 3 Sept 2020

Head of the Hydra: The Rise of Robert Kadlec

mintpressnews.com / 15 May 2020

Coronavirus: Oxford University vaccine trial paused after participant falls ill

bbc.com / 9 sept 2020

Oct. 4, 2020 (#1797)

"

Hi folks, I'm Alan Watt and this is Cutting Through The Matrix on October 4, 2020. I'm sure you're all a bit concerned, [Alan chuckles.] I suppose concerned is a rather weak for it all isn't it? But I suppose everyone's getting the feeling of something, again, coming, something wicked and that coming our way. Because we're managed so well, aren't we? We're managed like children. For me it's just repetition in a sense because I gave talks many, many years ago about how we're living through scripts basically and how we're managed through the scripts without even being aware there are scripts, or how we're coming into new ways of doing things or accepting things socially, legally, in a whole bunch of different ways in fact. We're guided to having conclusions that are already preordained basically by those who rule us. And we are ruled. Bernays talked about it. Long before Bernays too you had Benjamin Disraeli in Britain who was a bit more open, in his lucid moments, [Alan chuckles.] or sober moments maybe, about the way things really ran. And we are managed very, very carefully but overwhelmingly now with mass media techniques in television and entertainment all combined working together.

At the EU meeting they had, I've put up the links before, where they're all for vaccination, you know, it's about vaccination and they had all the big players in it as well. They said that they'd put a lot of money into entertainment to embed the suggestions, as they like to say it, about the coming vaccinations, etc. and how they would prepare people's minds in such a way that they don't even know what's happening to them. They really do believe they're coming to their own conclusions, bits and bytes of information repeated for ages until it becomes their thoughts, you see. And that's how you perceive it as, oh it's my thought so I came to that conclusion myself.

I used to talk about the politicians and how I never listen much to politicians because they go by rote. At election time it's just a sequence of topics which all parties will go through, the same topics and promise it to the… peasants, you see, the cattle as they call them. All kinds of nasty ways of talking about the people. But it is the way it is. They talk about, you know, education, employment and so on, unemployment as well, unemployment money and benefits, etc., etc., childcare, all these kind of things. All the socialistic programs that were introduced into a form of socialism, which they've been trained, the public, this is quite normal, as they make you utterly dependent on government. And government, remember, is your biggest problem. Because the reason you are so poor is because they tax you into the ground to pay for the programs, but also to fill their own personal buckets, their take-home buckets, you know, using your cash. Because those who serve the big system live much, much better than the general population that pays it all.

That's how it really is. We're managed by tyrants. Of course it's tyrants and they're benevolent tyrants, they always smile at you, you know. Most of the old tyrants used to just show their teeth or their nasty, nasty grimace. But other ones, they smile at you because they're good psychopaths, you see. Not very bright some of them, but they're all on board together. And they're very resolute. I mentioned this word in a talk with Neil Foster, how the Army has it, you know if you ever, soldiers will know this when going into battle, there's the stage you get to where you're resolute. And for first timers and so on, and it doesn't matter how many times you've been in battle before, it's all or nothing. And they all know it. Suddenly it really strikes home to them, this is real, you know. It isn't little boys playing in the woods with toy guns. It's all real now, and some of them won't come out of this alive, you know, other ones will be maimed. So they're resolute though, in their obedience, because you're trained to obey orders and that's what they do. And if there's a weak link in the chain, then if you like go down basically or just freeze, someone else might suffer next to you and so on. So everyone is resolute and doing what they're supposed to do.

Those who use the police forces, all the politicians behind the police forces, they're all in cahoots together as you know. Why bother having so many politicians when they all repeat the same phrases, you know, the coming lockdowns that's necessary, and vaccinations necessary, etc. etc., and they just parrot. Why not just have one person parroting it and then you can always point, there's the tyrant, you see. But they give you this appearance of having choices, eh, and different voices saying the same thing. Well, maybe they're a bit different, he's not quite the same as that one over there. But they are in reality. They're bought and paid for. They all belong to the same clubs, put it that way, you can say clubs or lodges, it doesn't make any difference really does it. Because they're sworn to organizations which selected them before the public select them or think that they select them.

I used to say years ago the only way to stop it all, at least that part of it, would be to at least demand and have, and everything is so corrupt I don't think you could even do it. But you would need independent groups that were really honest, which would be impossible in this day and age, I think, to check on those running for politics and to find out where they have given allegiance to already, what organizations, like the CFR for instance, or the Trilateral Commission because they obviously put their own members into politics occasionally too, the CFR more so. Even if they're not elected, you'll find a big, big chunk of your civil service, the higher members of them, in different departments, they are members of the CFR as well, strategically placed.

That's a lot of people. Especially when you take what used to be a British Empire system, or too, Australia, New Zealand, any country that still has the solicitor General assigned by the crown, and Canada's still got one yet and so did the rest of them. Then you're really under the same system, this strange democracy, but at the very top you've got a monarchy, you see, who has to okay everything and introduce a lot of things themselves at the time, and denial of things that come from those that you think are elected. So you're living in a fantasy really.

What you've got too is what you think is, um, stable society, kind of semi-stable societies, at times, which again is a very thin veneer. Because really, society is very turbulent, and if you could see the turbulence, if you just got back from a nice sunny day and all the smiling folk eating ice cream, in the old days, you know, before you had the open tyranny. But underneath it all it wouldn't take much to spark off trouble between different peoples, religions, ethnic groups, political groups, ideological groups, you know, from communism, Marxism, socialism, all the brands of the same thing really. It's like cigarettes that are tipped and unfiltered and plain, all verses each other. So it doesn't take much to really spark it off.

I’ve always said this, everything will work even in the massive open, open, this open society, you know, you hear the term so many times, the Trilaterals use it all the time. Because their job is to bring in a borderless world eventually. But dominate it, their own members would dominate it, more openly. Trilateral’s themselves are real technocrats, they’re part of the big technocracy where they would get things done without being elected, you see. They all came out in force with Jimmy Carter many years ago, he had more Trilateral’s than ever, that’s really when they came out. They’re really associated, they’ve all been members of the CFR and then they’re selected for their higher purposes.

Because you’re run by, don’t think you run by your governments. [Alan chuckles.] Really, don’t think that at all. Even before World War II they had these organizations, different names for them all, running the system, even the old British Empire. Because they didn’t trust politics or politicians, or the people for that matter so they made sure they’ve always had, there’s always the deep state there, of course there is. The problem in the US is they were completely overtaken by what used to be radical, the radical revolutionary groups and some of them are foreign in a sense, that really run everything and turn everything upside down. So your official organizations in the States, even the FBI, is beyond compromised by the very people that the FBI was there to investigate. [Alan chuckles.] They are run by them now. It’s quite interesting to see who advises the FBI. It truly is, you know, in this day and age. I won’t go into it into much detail because it’s boring, really. But yeah, things are rather out in the open today as to who even Antifa is. [Alan chuckles.] Even their own parent organizations are out boasting about it, of who started it up and who still runs it today.

But yeah, you’re living in a make-believe system where you think that your country is still a John Wayne type system, you know. Again, Hollywood gave you in America, and the world, the Western world to an extent during the Cold War, but they gave you sometimes, not all the time, they gave you both sides of it. Before World War II and during World War II Hollywood was turning out communist movies, for those who didn’t know it, because suddenly you’re supposed to be pally with Uncle Joe Stalin. The big bad bear was a happy guy now, he was a jolly bear, you know. Eventually they turned it back again. But during the war years they had the propaganda movies out there, with the tractors, the usual stuff, you know, that con game [Alan chuckles.] of people, you know, working happily on the farms for the good of all, etc., you know. Uuuuh, I won’t go too far into it because it wasn’t all in the Soviet Union. But anyway, they churned these things out and got away with it. And they could get away with all the bad capitalists and so on. It's so comical really because it's a joke because the top capitalists were the ones who fund the communist, still are funding communism. Because communism is a front to be, for a domination of the planet by another group, you see. That's… Of course it is. Of course it is.

There's never been a time where people have brought in a system, financed it all, planned it all, like revolution, and then given it to you and then walked away and left it to you to manage. It's never happened. It's a joke. It's never happened. It never will happen. Those who finance it have always had the idea of dominating the planet themselves. And its much, much deeper than that too. Some claim it's religious to an extent, without, but a bit different from the religions that you think of. Remember, religions can also simply mean belief systems. Some people, Marxism is religion. You need a lot of faith to believe in it, that it would work. And communism too. Because it's always making promises to make the human condition itself content. Which cannot happen.

In society, in the human being, in everybody, for those who can remember, even those that are going through it right now too, when you're teenagers and into your 20s, maybe even into your 30s, you definitely, um, are going through ups and downs like crazy through life. Most people are not completely stable in that respect. Because you're experiencing lots of different, they call it the milestones in psychodynamics, you'll go through. Which is simple observation by behaviorists, and it's very true what they tell you about the different ages and different things that you'll do, and what you'll think, the drives that will kick in, even hormonal drives and so on, and what that makes you, what it does to you and what it will do and so on.

But the thing is, you've got experts way above that can manage it all, you see, for their own benefits. That's why they always pick the young for rebelling. Don't think when you look at the ones who are rebelling today, it's just spontaneous. They're getting pumped up to do it by social media where the leaders of course of it all are trained, they're actually trained revolutionaries, and financed, very well-financed and well-paid. They will retire with pensions too.

So you're living in a kind of make-believe world all the time. Much like, getting back to World War II and after World War II when they were churning out propaganda movies. They gave you an idea of a wonderful clean society, very clean, you know. That's what really got people in Europe and across the world looking at the movies, and they'd say, for goodness sakes, people in America have big cars. Most folk in Britain didn't have cars, you see. It was even astonishing to see them all having in the movies, it didn't matter who they were, having phones. This is the impression they gave you, and my, they've all got phones. It was so expensive in Britain to have a phone, you know, personal phone. Doctors would have phones, you know, people who are important, you see, in society and the community. But most folk didn't have phones. Because they were expensive. Just making local calls was expensive, nevermind long distance calls. So they didn't so much have cars, and they didn't have phones, most folk. That's what you see, these British phone boxes all over the place in the movies. They existed right up into the 1970s and 80s and started dwindling with the cell phones in the 90s. But they were all over the place in Britain and in Europe too. But people would see these movies from Hollywood and think, my goodness, these people are so rich, even the working class is rich! That's how it seemed to be, you see. But it was all make-believe and it was propaganda. It was put out not just for people abroad but also people in America too, to give them the impression that even if they're on the bottom rungs of society financially they were part of something bigger and better, and clean and decent, it gave that kind of optimistic feeling.

At that time too there was more optimism because there was a lot of work. The war brought in a lot of industry, an awful lot of industry mainly for the war effort, you see, unlimited financing. That's why the crisis, you see, whether it's pandemics or wars of other kinds, when there's just, oh, billions of tax money getting tossed all over the place in the pockets, then they can also use some of it, you know. You know it's supposed to all go to war making factories or whatever it happens to be, or vaccines, it makes all the same kind of stuff. It's very Orwellian, you know, how many tanks will be churned out today? We've got 2000 more tanks than we thought we'd get this week, and we've broken our quota, and they'll do a big hooray, etc. Now it's going to be, how many vaccinations can give out, how many tests they can do for Covid. The same techniques being used.

But again, in America that was the impression that they gave generations. There were people whose mums, well they thought it was, especially women, they thought it was all real. They'd come home and they'd look at their husbands, and the husbands were, often had, you know, they were miners for instance, or they worked in factories and things like that, [Alan chuckles.] when there was factories to work in. But none of them were dressed in the suits and tie, the working class, you see. They didn't have cars. They didn't take their wives out ballroom dancing like Fred Astaire would do. So the women were bored stiff, and they all thought that they should have that kind of life, like flappers in a sense and have a great time with these very wealthy people. That were all on celluloid, it was all movies, it was all fiction. But it helped disrupt society to an extent because people who are not happy with reality will try and act it out in other ways. A lot of them did, and of course marriages started to break up. In probably the 60s, and definitely in the 70s, it was pretty, getting more common, especially with the young people.

So folk have no idea that you're living through fiction most of the time. You follow the fiction, including the reactions to what you're supposed to do, as they're destroying society and destroying marriage. [Alan chuckles.] You'll actually, oh, why don't we just get a divorce then, you can't work through this. Of course you had massive promiscuity with the pill, as I say, throughout Europe and so on. Even then you had a lot of fallout from unwanted pregnancies as they like to call it now. But the state stepped in immediately in this socialist system and took care of that of course. Until we're at the mercy of the state in so many ways, right down to, should we, just like...

You know, you find the founders, some of the founders of the Fabian Society, you know, for world socialism, some of the founders like George Bernard Shaw saying, that you'll come to us, he says, you think we're going to give the workingman a good life, and no, he says, you're not going to have a wife to come home to, we want her out there working as well. This is what they're telling you what socialism really means. It's not... Most of the people, they would get to people to rile them up and follow them initially just for having a decent working wage and more guarantee of having the work, as opposed to being laid off every other week sort of thing or months. But no, they have other ideas what it's all about. They want to double the tax base, destroy marriage altogether, and then rule over you. And here we are today, and he said that, you'll come to us and we will decide, you have to tell us why we should keep you alive. It was really quite fascinating.

In the 80s and the 90s to the present the same technique was used when they brought out, oh my goodness, you know, people are going to get laid off before they're 40 now. And they were talking about in CEO jobs, sort of upper management jobs. And you'll never have a lifelong job for the rest of your life ever again, that's a thing of the past and so on. But they'd actually put forms out, and it was all borrowed from socialism. Because you understand, those who own the big, big businesses [Alan chuckles.], their bosses at the very, very top, a lot of the top government shareholders are the same characters they give you communism. So they would hand out to their employees when they were downsizing, forms with questionnaires with, why should we keep you here, what is your contribution to the factory? And you had to decide and to fill it in yourself, you see, and put yourself out of work. The same thing.

You have to start seeing how things are connected in life before you'll ever really figure things out in any other way, personally for your own benefit and what's happening to you. And when you're having your little rebellions in adolescence, and you won't know what you're rebelling about really half the time, you're just uncomfortable with everything and think things aren't the way it should be, or in your own personal lives, and some folk will blame the whole of society for it, you see. So you are easy to get picked up, and you’re meat, really, to be used by those who want to use you for other purposes.

So yeah, you're not completely stable all through your life. Even with your own relationships at times as well. Because you're fighting different instincts, and instincts are to bond, whether you like it or not, you know, with sexual mates. And where the whole agenda has been for an awful long time is to separate the bonding process and intimacy from the sexual act. That's what the Frankfurt School spelled out quite literally, like that, and other groups too. So you’re left with the big, a big kind of chasm in your life at times as well, when you want something that's just not going to be, you know, be there.

Remember too Brave New World, they made, had this, again they always show you utopias, eh? There's always a scientific utopia for Brave New World where the scientific groups would run your lives. They'd actually breed you for a task for keeping the city going. Those instincts that were still human were catered to as well. But you had to have sex all the time, but never with the same partner, I think, twice in a week. They would watch for that, to make sure you didn't bond. And you would get someone that would interfere and warn you if they noticed you starting to get, you know, seeing the same person more often and starting to bond, it was a taboo.

These stories weren't written just for the fun of it. They were written by people who were in the deep state of the era and the scientific groups. Scientific groups weren’t just a hodgepodge of independent scientists looking for work at times and scraping for work. They were the top managers. The governments had always, especially in Britain, they really had developed a system of behaviorists and psychologists, even before the psychologists got the real term as professionals. Because Britain at one time ruled a good part of the world. I hate calling it Britain, I mean, it was London that owned it all. And folk who lived in the City of London owned it all and they owned the resources, that's what they were after. It was only a few thousand families really ran and really owned the whole empire.

But they had to keep a form, a semblance of order over the people. It's far better having them complying by altering and changing and even giving them a new culture, which they'll still think is their own, you see, when they'll see officials dressed in the same national garbs as themselves at the top and things like that. They don't realize, no, they're bringing in a new system regardless of the flags. I've mentioned this so many times, your national anthems and things, that's how even in the States they don't even know, when they see the same formats every few years of presidents getting sworn in, and how people getting sworn in, and people draping the flag around them, you know, and saying the same old things, and the national anthems and brass bands and that. They don't realize they are 180° of where they used to be facing. They don't know.

That was the same with the old British Empire. Different parts of India, there were so many different nationalities within, ethnic nationalities within India, and hundreds of languages, that Britain tried to make it more uniform. They put these satrapies all over the place and people in charge of them. But it wasn't just a commissar and so on, they'd have whole big staffs of people who worked and lived amongst the people, as the people, and kept tabs on everything. A spy mechanism, but massive. That's how you kept tabs on things. Then you can, anybody who is a bit brighter than the rest maybe, and could communicate better, and who knew what was happening, and could really pass on what he understood, and he could communicate it to others, he could be a future risk down the road because of his abilities, so they'd either try and him recruit him, buy him over, which was often generally successful, or else they have to liquidate them.

Exactly what Bertrand Russell said in his own books on it, that the elite have always use this technique. He's talking about Britain as well, that they could have scholarships out there for the brighter ones, and bring them into the hallowed halls of the, basically the granite building, you know, the old, old buildings, and they'd be overwhelmed at the honor of getting into these places where all, every famous person in British history had gone before them. Then they'd bring them into little societies, little clubs, and before you know it you win them over. But he said, they'd have to, that they get such people from the working classes, of the lower classes, would have to give up their affiliations to their own family background, and their people, and their area, you know, working-class area. But he says, if we can't bring them over to us and buy them off basically, he said, we'd have to annihilate them. You know, eliminate them. Physically.

That's how things really are. That's how it's always been. They'd already, Britain had already been using it across the world for years, that technique, you see. I'm sure other people, other nations before that had empires did the same kind of thing. Knowledge is generally very old, and why relearn it? It's like reinventing the wheel. They keep incredible archives of how to do these things down through time.

For the elite too, there's an elite money class too going way back thousands of years that always moved out of nations when the trouble was, when the barbarians were moving in, put it that way, and when everything was so debauched, and cities were collapsing like Rome, the Roman empire. They move out with their money, and they see it all coming, you know, the brighter ones, and they'd have their own communication ability through the old caravan trails and commerce and sea. They'd prepare for it and move out and take the money with them. When they did that, then they'd, that's why you'd see suddenly an Empire would start off in another country. Because people had moved in with money. That happened in Holland as an example.

So there are different factions of societies all involved in this big thing we call humanity and the human species. But today for world domination, which again the Trilaterals remember are a part of, they were set up to bring in world domination. A specialized branch really of the higher CFR, or what was the Lord Alfred Milner group, that again was for world domination. You can tie them in with the Rockefellers, who was a part of the groups as well, you see. Because Rockefeller was open about it too, he says, competition is a sin. Odd thing coming from a top capitalist, eh? Or is it?

You've got to get out of your head what you think these folk are, [Alan chuckles.] and don't get confused by their words and so on. They want order in society. Competition is a sin. The old Alfred Milner group not only use the British Army to take over and police these nations on behalf of their group, their clique basically, but they also had to manage the minds of all the different peoples and the different cultures and so on. They wanted a society where everything was ordered, and the right people should look after resources, which was themselves, you see, the people who ruled, the Milner group, they had the right to take over. That's what Rockefeller was talking, he belonged to the same organization, you see, world domination. Different names that would, they would morph their names across the world at times until folk couldn't really figure out it was the same group. Nothing has changed.

Now remember folks you can help me out too, by buying a book or discs @cuttingthroughthematrix.com. Or donating to me, straight donations are really, really welcome. You can send cash, you can send a check, you can use PayPal, Money Gram, and there's other methods to get the cash to me. Because it's important that I just come through all this and talk to people on the way. Because we need each other. We've got to have, I've got no ax to grind, I've got no backing from any political party. I don't bother with politics. All the world's a stage, as they say, to an extent. Or as I say, all the world's a tax base and we are but the payers. You could help me tick a long by, again, sending some cash my way @cuttingthroughthematrix.com and you'll see how to do it.

There was something that was put out not long ago by the Trilaterals, again. And don't forget, Kissinger and these characters are all part of the Trilateral organization that set themselves up ruling over three parts of the world, you see, tri-lateral. They brought in, again with the CFR group, that they are really a higher branch of, or a specialized department of really, they would divvy up the world and look after its resources. They gave you the European Union. They gave you what was to be the North American Union, eh, NAFTA. Then they change the name of it to make you think that Trump canceled it. But no, he didn't cancel it, they just changed it, literally changed the name of it but it's the same organization. Now it morphed into the USMCA. The same organization. Nothing really changed except the name. The same with the Transpacific relationship pact, etc. It's the same one that Obama, that was started under Obama and continued through Trump's reign as well.

So we're still being conned all the time. And it doesn't bother me, because I didn't expect it to be any different, ever, because we are always conned. I think every generation is conned and managed. Again, under this massive world system of dominance by those who know.

Yeah, Britain eventually handed the baton over to the US at the end of World War II. Some say World War I, you know. Rudyard Kipling in fact attended the US and gave a talk, one of the few people to give a talk to the Senate, you know, on the Senate floor about "handing the torch over to you." When he found out that Britain was going to get scratched pretty well out of it, Kipling lost it to an extent. He still thought that they'd be shared partners and Britain would still have a role to play, as the dominant partner as well. No, it was the other way around and he didn't know that. Although Britain, London... Let's... Let's... The names are awful, aren't they? We always say the British folk. But no, it's not the British people do anything. It's a little place in, it's called the City of London decides the fates of the whole of the UK pretty well, and also the fate of a good part of the world financially, still to this day.

But the techniques aren't tossed, as I say, they're kept in archives, special archives on how to rule. Those who move from place to place as empires rise and fall take the knowledge with them. Why, as I say, why keep reinventing the wheel? They don't do that. We find the same kind of things going on with Machiavelli, he was pretty good at telling us what, how to do and manage the system, and how to manage the people. That's what it's all about is managing the people and keeping them... You give them… You try give the people of all cultures basic stabilities, and basic work. If you interfere too much in the work it will fall apart and they'll turn on you, you see. So you want to keep them working, prefer, and mainly making them think that they were still working for themselves, even the small tradesmen and so on. That's a good ploy that, is make them still think they're working for themselves as you gradually increase the taxes.

Today we're going through amazing, amazing times because they published everything they wanted to do years and years ago. Using different crisis, hm, from the Cold War, that was one of them. Then you had the 2008 crash, 2007/8 crash. Before that you had 9/11, again, you lost all your privacy. You gave it up for the common good. Oh well, you know, we're all under threat so yeah, we better give it up for the common good. That's how things are really run, isn't it? You know you never, once it starts you never get away from it. So everybody quite happily holds their pants up in the airports, etc. with their shoes off looking like a real fool. Now I guess you've got a mask on to prove that you really are a fool.

But yeah, this is how it's done. You change society by changing the VISUAL aspect of so much of it. It's interesting, very interesting if you get into the mind and the communication systems of people who are blind. Because they're not so trapped [Alan chuckles.] by the visual aspects which really affects the way that you perceive things. They'll ask waay more questions, well why do you have to do that, why do you have to do this, what does it look like when you're, you know, to use a person who is sighted when you see these folks holding up their pants and they've got their shoes off, and again, x-rayed at the airports, and but now they've got masks on and things like that, you know. It's quite comical to realize that they're asking the questions that everybody else should be asking. But it doesn't take you long if you're visual, if you've got the visual abilities to adapt into the system and think it's all quite normal. Really, eh.

It really is amazing what we live through isn't it. And how you constantly adapt and adapt and adapt into utter ridiculous scenarios. I mean, honestly, if I had the money to do a comedy show I'd be doing it right now. The skits are endless... endless comedies. You could dream up about 25 skits a day quite easily. And it's the best way really just to show people how silly they are [Alan chuckles.], make them laugh at themselves and the system they're in which they've adapted into, is through comedy and satire.

And they're not finished yet. They're not finished yet with it. As I've said before, I used to kind of look at Britain... It's a strange way of looking at it. Because they would churn out Fahrenheit 451 the movie, you know. Even when I was a child and I saw and I thought, this is kind of, it was antiquated. I didn't know why it was. I guess it was the setting, the way they, things in Britain seemed to be done on a small scale. The cars were generally smaller as an example, you know, for when eventually folk could buy, ha, used cars. Seldom did you see new ones anywhere. I often wondered if they ever had new cars in Britain at one point, one small phase, you know. Because most of them really, if they ever collided with anything would just go into a puffball of brown rust, you know, booff. That's what I saw in Britain for cars, secondhand ones. Once they give them credit cards in the 80s and in the 90s, they could get in good debt, you see, and buy a new ones and pay them off.

But Britain, yeah, Fahrenheit 451, it gave you the impression of kind of... almost of nostalgia built into the sci-fi, eh, of people being cozy, a kind of cozy community type, that's the idea, a cozy community kind of thing. So you'd see a town, a small town, and you’d see the fire trucks going through it with the big Tannoys shouting for everybody to come out into their gardens, men, women and children. Which they had to do by law, you see, because it was a socialistic type system. Now, you could call it fascistic/socialistic, it's all the same thing. Same thing, exactly the same thing as far as I'm concerned. The same techniques are used for everything, and paperwork for everything too, and permits and yada ya. So the folk, you'd see the families going to the gardens there as these things go past them to check them all, they're looking for a fugitive. It just seems so silly, small townish. And the fact too, they didn't have the money in Britain to churn out a lot of special-effects in those days, you know. They were always broke after I guess World War II, and never recovered from World War I really.

But then when you found out, when you look at even the old Doctor Who scenarios, you know, that was the World Health Organization I suppose. But Doctor Who and his time machine, time Lord of course, different story behind that, what time Lord's are actually. But they showed you again the small town scenarios, the settings here and there in villages and towns, a little bit of special-effects and so on, but it still seemed that kind of quaintness that they always seem to put in to their productions, the quaintness. And I thought, really, it's a great way to introduce that which is new, isn't it, under the guise of we're so quaint, we're still small. Even though you're not, the impression that you're still small, small towns, small villages, small communities, this idea of what used to be, and bring in the new totalitarian regimes gradually until it is the normal, you're in the sci-fi movie. The things that you used to say, that could never happen, you know, you're actually IN it. You are hearing the same phrases as they introduce different parts of the silly agenda being used for the public. Again, never mind the slogans that we’re all in it together and so on.

Then you realize the things that you used to laugh at when, you know, these old things in Britain, they are actually here. I think you could probably do it faster in Britain than any other country really, bring in these techniques. When you see the things that they're forcing them to do. The total, never mind the fact they finished what Britain used to be completely. It was all deliberate. It's not happenstance. It wasn't just being nice to mass migration. It's been planned this way, hm, for years, eh. And then mass unemployment over, I don't care about statistics, it's all nonsense about job statistics, it's absolute rubbish, in every country.

Right down to folk getting a universal basic income to stay at home, just like they do in the States and other countries too, and Canada, I think some businesses in Canada can claim it as well. So the employees get locked down and they get paid by the state, right out of Bertrand Russell, for goodness sake. And the state has your social credit system, the same as China. China was always the test base for it all. And the companies that are doing it here all worked with them in China to make it all work, to see how it would happen. I remember [unintelligible] was in there big-time doing programs like this, and then Google of course too, and they give it to you, you see, call it something else for a different reason but it's the same thing.

Bertrand Russell said, the state will give you credits to your bank account. In the 1940s he said this, not because he had a crystal ball. It's because he sat with the big think tanks, he sat with the groups that also knew the Huxley's and worked with them, the scientific type groups that also had lots of people in sociology and psychology and anthropology involved in it too, and the behaviorists. He said, yeah, the state will dish out so many credits every month or week or whatever, and he said that if you became labeled as antisocial, meaning you disobeyed a group concept put out for you, you all had to obey it the same, you'd be as antisocial and you'd get punished by withdrawing the credits or withholding them. And you couldn't use these credits, I mean, you couldn't save them up like a normal money thing would do if you didn't use them. It would start off at the same amount in that bank account every week, you see. And he gave the impression that it would be kind of electronic.

Here you are seeing it done. There's articles now in Britain, I noticed there where there was a woman, a young woman and a guy who they knew each other through an organization, again a political organization, I'm not sure what it was. But she just had her bank account closed by the people who owned the banks. No excuse given, couldn't get an excuse. But she eventually worked it out, it's because of maybe her political affiliations or points of view, bang, that's it. You see, they're DOing it all, all the stuff he talked about in the groups that Bertrand Russell belonged to back then.

They were given authority, Truman gave them authority, President Truman and others as well, to create a post-World War II culture for the West. Non static culture, but step-by-step alterations of the culture right to where we are today. Quite fascinating, with a massive, massive bureaucracy, like a huge, huge think tank working out all the details and how to implement it. It would be a Fabian type thing where it would take years to implement, maybe a generation, but here you are, hm. Hmph. And folks think they're just, they got their own minds, and they think they make their own decisions as they go through it. They have no idea it's all laid out before them, everything that's happening today laid out. Laid out.

And the beauty of it is, it's Fabian, Fabian after the general in Rome. You just keep dragging it out and dragging it out, don't do things quickly. Because most folk are short-term thinkers. You want to get it done in your lifetime, don't you, most things when you plan when you're young, I want to get that done in my lifetime. But if you wanted to take over the world, for instance, you might get a lot of pushback if you just said I want to take it over now, and people start fighting you. You know, just do it in a gradual way. Plan that maybe you'll be dead, you might start off the foundation that will be doing it all, and you might have gone. But down the road successors that work for the same foundation will make sure it's all implemented. Because you change society gradually, incrementally. Gradualism is the key to everything. Step-by-step and people adapt into it.

I never forget the examples you had of, from a society that was paranoid at one time about governments. They never trusted governments in Britain at one time, when I was small. I was small, or I should say wee, Scotsmen are never small, they're always wee. I used to listen to the people who, even the common miners, the working-class people were well educated. Well, actually better than they are today I think, [Alan chuckles.] because they read, a lot of them read like crazy. It was fascinating to see some of the books that they actually read. They were inquisitive. Their minds were much better. I think something has happened to our brains, I really do. And there's evidence. They actually say at the United Nations the IQ tests showing where IQ is dropping every few years, eh.

But back then they knew who owned the newspapers. They knew who owned the TV stations. They know who all the Lord's were in the House of Lords, and all the people who are merchants and bankers, and very rich people. They knew who they were, and who they were before they got the title and name, because a lot of them hide behind the title names, eh, it's good camouflage that. But they would remember, they would keep tabs of things. But they were paranoid of governments because governments were never there to really help you. They knew that much. That was awfully... They had that...

You've got to remember that prior to World War II they had the huge marches from the Great Depression onwards, they had great marches going through down to London to hand in... Back then they didn't just burn and loot their way down, you know, the working classes people, you know. They were pretty peaceful, and they would have, they would be helped along the way by folk in different towns that would bring food out to them and tea, etc. But the idea was to bring in petitions to make the point that something had to be done about the mass unemployment in Britain at one point.

That's what really stirred people like George Orwell and many others of his ilk as well, who belonged to a different class, you know. They saw the terrible conditions that the people, who didn't have healthcare, that didn't have unemployment benefits generally or welfare. Welfare was something you had to get on your knees and beg for, and it came with conditions. It's still how poorhouses, remember, under different guises but they were still poorhouses. This was Great Britain at the HEIGHT of its empire. You see, the Empire was for the few, again, in the City of London, and a few thousand families outside of it too who lived in big estates. Folk don't realize that. They really don't realize that.

I can remember I think it was the Sherlock Holmes series from the 1980s, with, was it Jeremy, Jeremy, I can't remember if it was Irons or what his name was. But anyway it was a good series. They showed you these big mansions, which were actually owned by the elite of the period. There was MASSIVE estates, you know, and the buildings they had there with huge pillars, and it sat out in the country. These folk, some of them went to the 1700s, some into the 1600s when they were appointing folk to be in charge of treasuries, and the early Bank of England for instance, and taxation systems. Incredibly wealthy people.

But at least as they say in Britain a lot of folk had the remembrance of all of that. It only took may be the years from 1980s onwards for folk to start to forget that you've got to watch these characters and your government like hawks, all the time. ALL the time, you know, the people who bring in the wars. And don't forget though, you've got people like Tony Blair, I was quite fascinated to see how many wars Britain had been involved with, with what people thought was a liberal type government, and then Labour governments. It was astonishing, under Blair, who was supposedly, people think, well, he's for Labour, you know. The man had never worked in his life, for goodness sake, eh. He's for labor? You're kidding me. The guy was...

Socialism is a tool of the elites. Communism is a tool of the elites. Socialism is just a slower form of that, you see, to get you there. And it makes perfect sense. I kept saying, wait a minute here. Tony Blair, I knew Tony Blair, his mentor was Isaiah Berlin, you know. He used to go to him for advice on policies over the public. Like positive freedom and negative freedom, he went to ask him at one point, is it possible to have the two working together in a certain semblance, of positive and negative freedom at the same time? But then Tony Blair was like a one-man band, he had a few around him that were just as supposedly far left as him who also, they all end up incredibly fabulously wealthy, because they're owned by masters, you see.

But you see, the philosophy of socialism, international socialism, the borderless world, eh, mass migration. Tony Blair was responsible for using the British Army along with America, for the Middle Eastern wars, you know. It didn't benefit the average person in Britain or America at all, and you're left with the tab actually, and the fallout, including mass migration. It was all factored into it before they started. Because Tony Blair wanted to destroy the remnants, his left hand, his right, or probably left-wing, left-hand man said it, the guy next to him who was his deputy said that a few years later and I read the articles on the air at the time. Tony Blair's policy was to eradicate basically the British, you know, the white British people in Britain itself, that's what his deputy said. It was published in the papers it's time.

And you say, well wait a minute, what does this factor into representing Britain? Well you've got to understand what their concept of Britain is. You've got to also see with their concept of going across the Middle East and financing terrorist organizations, even starting them up. They were just mercenary organizations most of them, to attack other countries. Well, we know there's a pact, put it that way, there's a pact involved here. We all know this, and we can't go any deeper than a pact. But also it fulfills socialism's agenda by getting rid of what they claim is secular governments. Even the one in Egypt, when they voted the guy in Egypt, they said it wasn't secular enough, so they had to dethrone him as well. Well, who is THEY, you know? Did the people in Britain get it? No. Or the US? No. We're as ignorant as ever about it all, of course we are.

But there's always a THEY there. They said in the papers that the authorities, the authorities, who’s authorities, said that they wanted secular governments in. Because they're easier to rule, you see. People who stick to their religious beliefs will stand up for themselves collectively and be a problem. You do away with that and folk can't stand up much for anything at all. In Canada I can remember years ago when they were deregulating the telecommunications industry. You had BIG cable networks in the cities, and under, when they were deregulating them to supposedly get more competition. Which is a joke because Canada is nothing but monopolies and cartels working with government. But they said, all the snowbirds, the retirees are going to have to start paying the higher prices now, because before they got some kind of subsidy or something or discount. That was the only time I remember, and they said this in all the media at the time, that Ottawa, the parliament was overwhelmed with the letters and complaints and phone calls from people demanding that the people, the snowbirds get their same discounts, and so's they could get their entertainment. Because you see, that's your propaganda thing, the folk are hooked on. That's the only time. Did they stand up for anything? No. Did they stand up against the wars across the Middle East? No. But they stood up when they take their TV off them and they're ready to march to Ottawa, crutches and all. I mean, it's astonishing to see how things really are.

And before I get off that part of the topic because I'm rambling a bit, is to do with socialism itself. I can remember, getting back to the people in Britain and elsewhere who knew what socialism was. Nothing is for free. That's what they all knew. When something's for free you know there's conditions. As you depend on a system or parts of the system that are going to demand more from you, and more, and more compliance in ways that you'd be, it's not good for you. Like taking vaccinations is one of them. That's already written into a lot of these handouts they're giving you, if you haven't noticed them, eh, have you read the small print everywhere.? [Alan chuckles.] Nothing is for free. You sign away every right. To even say no, if you signed it, now you're going to have a problem getting out of it, aren't you? Everything is contractual, legalities, eh, the law of the sea, maritime law and all the rest of it. It's so true, isn't it, all of that stuff.

But people really, they don't know, they think they're living in a real system. And almost like a small time, even if you're living in a city now the people watch television often, you'd think you're living in a small town rural area [Alan chuckles.] as they give the nonsensical nostalgic drama series and so on. Unless they're giving you the hypersexualized dramas the folk are completely addicted to. Game of Thrones and all the rest of it. Then you worship the portrayal of sadomasochistic psychopaths as they battle with each other for supremacy. It's quite interesting to see what they've done [Alan chuckles.] and what they've made appealing to the public. At the same time, remember, as selected psychologists and behaviorists are given big money to put out, and with, in collusion with BBC and other TV organizations to put out shows on, you know, under the like pseudo-documentaries... Maybe it's a natural thing for psychopaths to rule over us, maybe we need them [Alan chuckles.] because they can make the decisions. No kidding, eh. They can make the decisions, eh?

There's nothing out there by chance. Nothing. Everything is vetted and for a purpose. And the purpose generally is to get inside your skull and do a bit of tampering, implant itself and down the road they'll say, you'll be saying, you know, maybe we need a psychopathic to be a strong man to get us out of this, hm. Yeah, yeah, I saw the program too, it seemed quite interesting, y'know. M-hm, it's too easy, isn't it? It really is too easy. That was it, Dexter. I never saw it, but people made a big deal and sent me lots of articles about Dexter. It was about a psychopath who is portrayed as the good guy in some TV drama series. Where he'd eliminate the bad guy guys, like the vigilante type thing, using his cunning and his reasoning and ability to get away from them. But he had no personal stake in it. He was a psychopath, you see.

I saw recently that two women used that in their defense. Because they had a relationship together, these two women, right. But one of them had been married I think it was… No, no, they wanted to get money in, so they decided to use men, they'd lure men in, you see. They had this one young guy who lived in the same apartment building, I don't know if they give him drugs or what they did, but eventually they chopped them up, like mincemeat, and get rid of parts of his body and the whole thing. They used his cell phone, and they texted his friend. They got to know him well enough to know what his routine was. He always texted his friend at a certain, so they did that for two or three days so they'd think he was still alive, you see, and things were normal and wouldn't come looking. And a whole bunch of things that they said they got it all from watching that Dexter. Then used his money, his bank account and that and the whole thing and yada, yada, ya. They could use the app, his app his phone for it, you see. But everybody else would never have a clue he was gone because he was still texting them apparently and, oh, I'm fine, and they knew what he would say to his pals and how he would joke a certain way, all from watching that psychopathic series. Interesting, you know. They used to say years ago, monkey see, monkey do, eh. And it's a sad truth, isn't it? Sad, terribly sad truth.

Portuguese lesbian lovers ‘murdered and beheaded hotel worker before chopping off his fingers to get into phone banking app’ after being inspired by episode of TV show Dexter - dailymail.co.uk / 28 Sept 2020

Humans are just too easy to manipulate. It's not new, it's an old thing that we're, they're easy to manipulate. And our fashions are part of it. In fact, fashion can be, you know, physical fashion that you wear, clothing, it can also be your behavior, the gesticulations you use when you're chatting or standing, and it can be deportment in other words. I mean, deportment for the wealthier classes. I don't know if they still teach it. They used to teach it in finishing schools for women, but they had ones for guys too where they even had, there's a certain way to sit down with grace, you see, and be confident and graceful. Actors used to get taught this kind of thing too, how to do it all.

But their accent, that's why you get the posh accent, that honestly is so... If you take English, English is the common accent, [Alan chuckles.] that's real English. They had different dialects throughout England and in Scotland too. In Scotland you would go down the coast you could hear, whoah, the different dialects would be astonishing. Even though towns, you've got to remember towns even 2 or 3 miles apart could have big differences in what terminology they used too, and words, and old words, and the era of the words they still used, eh. The same all through England. It was quite fascinating. Unfortunately TV is destroying most of that and making it all uniform.

But the upper crust accents really to an extent were affect, you call it affected. Because they didn't want to sound like the common folk, so they kept adopting new ways of speaking to differentiate themselves from the people, the common people. Until you ended up with absurdities before World War II. They had that short clipped, they call it a clipped accent. I mentioned it before, certain words had to be pronounced exactly the right way. You couldn't say happy anymore, you'd say heppy, they were heppy. You'd think it was an h-e, you see. Then you had the physical gesticulations they would use in their deportment as they were chatting to differentiate themselves from ordinary people as well. It's absurdity.

Humans are pretty laughable, I mean, as a species, aren't we, you know. When you look at the French revolutions, and you look too at the precursor, how it led up to it, and the debauchery in France as well. You had people like Benjamin Franklin over there as the ambassador for America, or the US to France. Because France was funneling, it was there to gather loans to keep the revolution going, you see. He eventually, by the way, was kind of, had a Masonic trial when he got back to the States because he'd been embezzling a lot of it and that came out as well. That's why his son couldn't get put in as a kind of high-level civil servant or whatever when it happened like that, it's because of that.

